LOWELL—A change in policy will mark this year's schedule at the Organ Institute of Andover with the regular weekly series of recitals given on Thursday and Friday evenings. Previous to this Friday and Saturday were reserved for the series.

The opening concert this year will be played on Thursday evening, Aug. 2. There has been no official announcement, but it is certain that a program played on another instrument will be listed.

For the first time since the series was inaugurated, Arthur Howes, director of the Institute, will not appear in the artist series. His activities as a teacher and adviser will force him to be absent during the week - ends listed.

Largest Enrollment

There is much interest on the part of students in regards to the Institute this year. Possibly the largest enrollment yet recorded in the daily classes has been announced.

Possibly the interest in organ is growing and it could also be that the directing committee and faculty have made this possible. Aside from the large scale summer festivals, the Organ Institute has shown the largest growth.

One of the finest chamber music programs yet recorded in the history of the Berkshire festival was given at last Wednesday evening program. The Boston Symphony quartet conducted by the orchestra's concert master, Richard Burgin, marked the occasion.

The final movement of Haydn's "Quartet in E flat major" brought much sincere humor to those present. It seemed that this final expression on the part of the group more than sufficed for a not too interesting opening.

The evening's highlight occurred when the celebrated clarinetist, Benny Goodman, joined the group in a performance of Mozart's "Clarinet Quintet in A major."

Benny Goodman is one of the few who finds interest in both the long and short of it all. Basically, he is more at home in the lighter vein. However, in full credit to this fine musician, it is safe to say that if he did nothing else but play simple-styled scales, his knowledge of his chosen instrument is such that he musically speaks with great authority.

Tomorrow evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire festival concerts in the giant music shed at Tanglewood. For this program, Dr. Munch has chosen Berlioz' overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahm's Second Symphony.

Saturday evening, Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hundling; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphonique."

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteaux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossni, Bartok and Schubert.

AMUSEMENTS CALENDAR

July 23 - 28—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Heartbreak House, 8:45 p.m. Sat. Mat. 2:30 p.m. Next week, Roomful of Roses.
July 24 - 28—Sharon Playhouse, Heartbreak House, 8:40 p.m. Wed. Mat. 2:30 p.m. Next week, Harvey.
July 27 - 28—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 4 and 9 p.m. San Francisco Ballet.
July 27 - 29—Tanglewood Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Beethoven, Petrassi, Tchaikovsky.
Saturday, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Hanson, Echumann, Honegger. Rudolf Serkin, soloist.
Sunday, 2:30 p.m. Richard Burgin conducting Handel, Hindemith, Mahler. Ruth Posselt, soloist.
July 29—Music Mountain, 4 p.m. Berkshire Quartet. Benny Goodman, guest artist. Mozart, Rahmer, Brahms.
July 31 - Aug. 1—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 9 p.m. Aug. 2, 4 p.m. San Francisco Ballet.
Aug. 1—Norfolk Music School, 3:30 p.m. Ensemble Program.
Aug. 1—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, 4 p.m. Scoville Library.
Aug. 1—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Rudolf Serkin and woodwind quartet playing Schumann and Mozart.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 20
By A. C. S.

Charles Munch exhibits a spontaneity in conducting where every performance seems a new experience, where contours of sound and rhythm are freshly molded and no work appears hackneyed. Three old friends were revisited Friday evening. Berlioz was represented by his Roman Carnival Overture, Debussy by the Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, and Ravel by the second the Bela Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, written for the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in 1943. It is not an easy work for the layman to assimilate on first hearing, even with copious program notes. However, Mr. Monteaux gave a reading of incredible clarity, understanding, and exuberance to which the audience was most responsive.

quantity; he has not yet fully arrived as a "helden tenor" but is definitely on the way. James Pease is a notable bass with fullness and clarity in the entire compass of the voice. A vibrant orchestral performance and an inspired reading by Mr. Munch produced a memorable presentation.

Two contemporary works opened the program: Barber's Adagio for Strings, and Fantasies Symphoniques by Martinu. The latter is a piece of extraordinary interest which was written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. It is filled with wonderful sounds and a fascinating use of instrumental techniques. The New York Music Critics Circle called it the "best new orchestral work" presented in that city in 1955. The choice is understandable.

Pierre Monteux, eighty-one years young, gave ample evidence of his youthful approach to music at the Sunday afternoon concert where he appeared as guest conductor. Schubert's Seventh Symphony was directed with warmth and vitality. A lilting performance of the overture to Italiana in Algeri, by Rossini, opened the program.

The most interesting selection was

COMING PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood are: Saturday evening, July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor—Soloist: Rudolf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; De-

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258
JUN 20 1956

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
FORT WORTH, TEX.
STAR-TELEGRAM
Circ. D. 115,441 - S. 225,325
JUN 21 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—This famous enterprise of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Mass., for six weeks from July 4 to Aug. 12. There will be concerts on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Chamber music groups will appear on Wednesday nights. Assisting Charles Munch as conductor will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazer de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein.

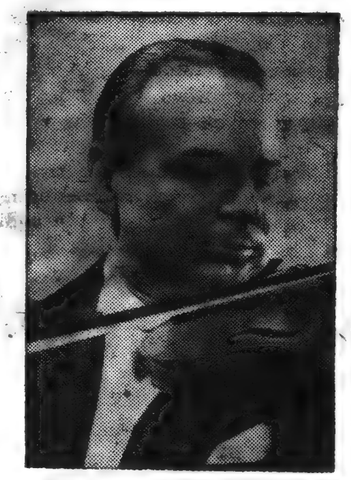
Boston Symphony Plans Banner Year At Tang'ewood

LENOX, Mass. — The 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be celebrated this summer at Tanglewood with the conducting of Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin.

The season, which begins July fourth, will feature works by Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland. Two Wagner programs will also be presented with Metropolitan stars Margaret Harshaw and Albert Da Costa.

Among the season's eminent soloists will be jazz musician Benny Goodman playing Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet. Other groups performing will be the Yale Glee Club, duo pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan and James Joyce.

Preceding the Shed series are two concerts by the chamber section of the symphony. They will play the "Bach-Mozart" concerts conducted by Charles Munch, Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky.



EMINENT VIOLINIST . . . Zino Francescatti who will return to Tanglewood as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto on Sunday, August 5.

bussy: "La Mer"—Charles Munch, Conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto—Solist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major—Richard Burgin, Conductor.

Next week the Berkshire Festival moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate assoloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Echumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premeire of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

Grace Notes

(Continued from Page Twelve)

faculty members of the Norfolk Music School of Yale University, and played on Wednesday afternoon, July eighteenth, at Battel House in Norfolk. The list of works chosen for the recital was a rather formidable one, in the technical and interpretive problems it presented to the musicians.

Clyde Duncan's Sonatina for clarinet and piano, in three movements, was the first piece. Mr. Duncan is an American composer, clarinetist, and teacher; his sonatina is a prize winning one. Its pretentions are small, its idiom chromatic, and the form skilfully developed. Although the slow movement is sombre, the piece as a whole is light and engaging. The material offered was shown off to the best possible advantage by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Simonds, in their handling of the complex rythms, their subtle nuances of color, and by freshness of style.

Goffredo Petrassi, a Roman born and trained musician, has composed choral, orchestral, and chamber works, and is this summer at Tanglewood. Luigi Silva and Bruce Simonds played his Prelude, Aria, and Finale for violoncello and piano. This work also employs chromatic means, but is much more serious and broad in scope than the first offering on the program. The three parts are widely contrasted, the prelude intelligently conceived, the Aria having emotionally expressive long lines of melody, while the last part sets a mood of forcefulness and strong colors. Here again the artists revealed the composer's message with unusual insight and prowess, the high level of interpretation presenting the music to its best advantage. Mr. Silva handled a variety of bravura effects with deftness, and should be commended for the beauty of his tone and phrasing, especially in the Aria, and in the cadenza-like passage of the Prelude.

Brahms' superb Trio. Opus 114, for clarinet, violoncello, and piano, balanced the program by concluding on familiar ground. The ensemble playing had a smooth "give and take," each instrumentalist contributed to the lyric richness of the combined tone. There was authority in the interpretation of each movement; the introspection of the Adagio, the grace of the Andantino, and the warmth of the whole. One left the concert hall with the feeling of something having been added to one's musical understanding.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.
TIMES
Circ. D. 412,167 - S. 808,669
JUN 24 1956

Foss Opera to Get Stage Premiere

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The opera, which will be performed Aug. 6-7, will be conducted by the composer, who is also a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the school. Foss is a member of the UCLA music faculty.

[119]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751
JUL 1 1956

WHEELS, KEELS & WINGS

TRAVEL AND RESORTS

By JOHN HUGHES

Pittsfield, Mass., June 30.—Unusual resorts, scores of historical sites, 15 golf courses, miles of bridle trails, rolling tree-covered landscapes and lakes and ponds galore are among the attractions on tap for vacationists to the Berkshire Hills. For the culturally inclined there are two playhouses, weekly chamber music concerts, Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow in Lee, the famed Tanglewood Music Festival featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra and several art exhibits and flower shows.

This is one of the few remaining areas in the country where polo still flourishes. Teams sponsored by local business and civic organizations engage in weekly matches which are open to the public.

151 Miles From N. Y.

I drove up here leisurely over the Hutchinson River and Merrit Parkways and Route 7 which winds through Connecticut and Massachusetts close to the New York State line. This clocked at 151 miles on the speedometer and made for a most scenic drive.

Pittsfield is a fine little city with a countryfied air. It houses the Berkshire Museum, one of the finest museums of art and natural history in the country, and a collection of the works, personal effects and pictures of Herman Melville, author of Moby Dick, in the Berkshire Athenaeum (Pittsfield's library).

It also has the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel which invites families to "come as you are and enjoy yourself." To encourage Mom and Dad to bring the children along there is no charge at the hotel for those under 14, no charge for cribs, there are special menus with selections from 35 cents and baby sitter service is available.

I stayed there the first night. Like all the rooms mine had both television and radio and private bath with tub and shower. Next morning I looked over the facilities. The Towne Room is the main dining room featuring excellent cuisine. Those seeking lighter fare will find it in the Cup 'n Saucer, a combination coffee shop and soda fountain.

Moderate Prices

The Wendell Lounge features afternoon cocktails and evening entertainment and you don't have to dress up. Prices here are moderate. My room cost me $5.50 for one night.

From the Wendell-Sherwood I drove to the 15,000-acre Eastover at Lenox. This is a former estate which has been converted into a top-flight resort.

The Eastover has an outdoor and indoor pool, a choice of riding trails, canoeing and fishing in a private lake, tea dancing in the afternoon, softball, Sunday night buffets, hayrides, tennis, water shows, archery, ping pong, shuffleboard, volleyball, a chip-and-putt golf course, masquerade parties, movies, talent shows and many other forms of entertainment.

Bring Your Own

Eastover accommodates 380 guests. The principal accommodations are the Mansion, Plantation, Ranch House, the Lodge, Tally Ho and several cottages. While there are no bars at the resort you can bring your own liquor. There are setups available at many spots around the premises. The guest takes these as needed—on the honor system—and pays for them when leaving.

The management caters mainly to young single people and if you play a musical instrument bring it along and join one of the jam sessions which are popular here.

Dress is very informal at Eastover—slacks, jeans, sports shirts are the order of the day. One place you're bound to enjoy is Tally Ho Barn. Once a stable for thoroughbred horses, the stalls are now fixed up with tables and benches and you can enjoy the company of other guests in hangouts marked "Nantucket," "Man O'War," etc.

Rates at Eastover run from $10.75 daily and $71.75 weekly and include three meals a day, all sports equipment and entertainment. The only extra is horseback riding which is $2 an hour.

Golf at Premium

A few miles away at South Lee is the Oak n' Spruce which also caters to the younger set. Oak n' Spruce has 366 acres and nestles alongside 8,000-acre Beartown State Forest. The resort features a golf course, heated swimming pool, streams and ponds, tennis, softball, volleyball, badminton, skeet field and rifle range, cocktail bar, dancing, movies, planned recreation, water games, treasure hunts, basketball, archery, croquet, bicycle trips and many other sports and games both outdoors and indoors.

The accommodations here are available with twin or double beds for two, three or four in a room. All rooms have either a private or connecting shower bath.

There's a new outdoor patio bedecked with tables and colorful umbrellas where you can dine and dance. In the evening it's lit with soft lights. There is also a new five-acre fishing pond which is well stocked with a variety of panfish. You can take part in the weekly fishing derby with prizes for all.

Rates Daily, Weekly

Rooms with connecting bath start at $10.50 daily and $66.50 weekly per person, two in a room. You can also get a roomette which starts at $9.50 daily or $59.50 weekly. This rate is based on two in a room.

Next I visited Jug End Barn, a resort with a definite "family" atmosphere. Many of the sleeping quarters are in barns and a silo. It was originally built as an ultra-modern stock barn, and owner Lewis Crafts has converted it into a unique sports resort.

The main barn is "L" shaped and on the main floor houses a huge lounge, front office, snack bar and dining room. There are rooms on the second and third floors including a dormitory section for girls which is labeled the "Cow Pen."

Popular for Young Set

Jug End Barn is also for the young at heart and has a large pool, tennis, bicycling, basketball, volleyball, shuffleboard, archery, croquet, softball, horseball, horseshoe pitching, horseback riding ($2 an hour), fishing and boating, dancing, badminton and dozens of other sports.

The home-style food is very good, sports clothes are always in order and setups are available in many of the buildings (you bring your own liquor—setups are supplied on the honor system). Jug End Barn is in South Egremont, Mass.

In addition to the rooms in the barn and adjoining silo there are also several cottages. Rates start at $9 daily, $59.50 weekly for bunk rooms. The resort holds 320 guests.

For full information on the above and other resorts in the Berkshires write John Dowling, Berkshire Hills Conference, 50 South St., Pittsfield, Mass.

Airview of Jug End Barn in the Berkshire Hills at South Egremont, Mass. The barn (upper right) which once housed cows now shelters summer vacationers.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254
JUN 24 1956

Berkshire Seat Demand Is Brisk

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is reported by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager. The six-week season of 24 concerts from July 4 to Aug. 12 anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

Music Notes

Famous Festivals For Vacationists

By WELDON WALLACE

IN planning their vacations, music-loving Baltimoreans might wish to include one of the big festivals on their itinerary. In this country several such events offer the prospect of pleasant summer concert-going.

New England is the setting for two major festivals—one devoted to music; the other to dance.

At Tanglewood, a magnificent estate in the Berkshire of Massachusetts, the Boston Symphony again will give its series of concerts on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, beginning July 20 and extending through August 12.

Other Programs Set

Two other series are scheduled at Tangelwood in advance of the main symphony programs.

A chamber orchestra made up of Boston Symphony members is to give a cycle of programs devoted principally to the music of Mozart and Bach. These are to be held on July 6, 7 and 8, and 13, 14 and 15. Beginning on July 4 there will be a series of six Wednesday concerts featuring various chamber-music organizations.

The chief conductor at Tanglewood is to be Charles Munch. Other directors include Leonard Bernstein, Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Boris Goldovsky.

Dance Festival Listed

Not far from Tanglewood and near Lee, Mass., the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival will offer the vacation public performances by some of the leading stars in the ballet world. Matinee or evening programs are scheduled five days a week, beginning this Friday afternoon and ending on September 1. The opening bill lists Mia Slavenska and Robert Morrow in classic dances; selection by Sokomi Tachibana, classic Japanese dancer, and a modern-dance group from the Texas State College for Women.

A special feature at Jacob's Pillow this season will be a three-week engagement by the San Francisco Ballet, beginning July 24, a date that marks the East-Coast debut of that company.

For many years, Jacob's Pillow has been the summer headquarters of Ted Shawn, the first prominent American male dancer. Mr. Shawn is to appear in a lecture-recital on August 5.

He operates a summer school in connection with the festival. Carol Lynn, dance director of the Peabody Conservatory, is associate director of the school.

Aspen Musical Event

Out in the West, the Aspen Musical Festival is a musical event that offers noted concert artists in performances given in a magnificent mountain setting.

The eighth annual festival at Aspen, Col., is to open Wednesday and will continue until September 2. Special attention is to be given to Mozart's music this year. Well-known artists will present symphonic, chamber and operatic music in a tent amphitheater.

Turning attention to the West Coast, we find the nineteenth annual Bach festival scheduled at Carmel-by-the-Sea, in California.

This runs for one week, from July 16 through July 22. Despite the name of this festival, music by Mozart will also be featured this year, as well as a few works by other masters. Choral, orchestral, chamber-ensemble and solo performances are listed.

[120]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2 109.601 - S. 3.776.751
JUL 1 1956

WHEELS, KEELS & WINGS

TRAVEL AND RESORTS

By JOHN HUGHES

Pittsfield, Mass., June 30.—Unusual resorts, scores of historical sites, 15 golf courses, miles of bridle trails, rolling tree-covered landscapes and lakes and ponds galore are among the attractions on tap for vacationists to the Berkshire Hills. For the culturally inclined there are two playhouses, weekly chamber music concerts, Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow in Lee, the famed Tanglewood Music Festival featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra and several art exhibits and flower shows.

This is one of the few remaining areas in the country where polo still flourishes. Teams sponsored by local business and civic organizations engage in weekly matches which are open to the public.

151 Miles From N. Y.

I drove up here leisurely over the Hutchinson River and Merrit Parkways and Route 7 which winds through Connecticut and Massachusetts close to the New York State line. This clocked at 151 miles on the speedometer and made for a most scenic drive.

Pittsfield is a fine little city with a countryfied air. It houses the Berkshire Museum, one of the finest museums of art and natural history in the country, and a collection of the works, personal effects and pictures of Herman Melville, author of Moby Dick, in the Berkshire Athenaeum (Pittsfield's library).

It also has the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel which invites families to "come as you are and enjoy yourself." To encourage Mom and Dad to bring the children along there is no charge at the hotel for those under 14, no charge for cribs, there are special menus with selections from 35 cents and baby sitter service is available.

I stayed here the first night. Like all the rooms mine had both television and radio and private bath with tub and shower. Next morning I looked over the facilities. The Towne Room is the main dining room featuring excellent cuisine. Those seeking lighter fare will find it in the Cup 'n Saucer, a combination coffee shop and soda fountain.

Moderate Prices

The Wendell Lounge features afternoon cocktails and evening entertainment and you don't have to dress up. Prices here are moderate. My room cost me $5.50 for the night.

From the Wendell-Sherwood I drove to the 15,000-acre Eastover estate, at 1,400-feet above sea level which has been converted into a top-flight resort.

The Eastover has an outdoor and indoor pool, a choice of riding trails, canoeing and fishing in a private lake, tea dancing in the afternoon, softball, Sunday night buffets, hayrides, tennis, water shows, archery, ping pong, shuffleboard, volleyball, a chip-and-putt golf course, masquerade parties, movies, talent shows and many other forms of entertainment.

Airview of Jug End Barn in the Berkshire Hills at South Egremont, Mass. The barn (upper right) which once housed cows now shelters summer vacationers.

Bring Your Own

Eastover accommodates 380 guests. The principal accommodations are the Mansion, Plantation, Ranch House, the Lodge, Tally Ho and several cottages. While there are no bars at the resort you can bring your own liquor. There are setups available at many spots around the premises. The guest takes these as needed—on the honor system—and pays for them when leaving.

The management caters mainly to young single people and if you play a musical instrument bring it along and join one of the jam sessions which are popular here.

Dress is very informal at Eastover—slacks, jeans, sports shirts are the order of the day. One place you're bound to enjoy is Tally Ho Barn. Once a stable for thoroughbred horses, the stalls are now fixed up with tables and benches and you can enjoy the company of other guests in hangouts marked "Nashua, Man O'War," etc.

Rates at Eastover run from $10.75 daily and $71.75 weekly and include three meals a day, all sports equipment and entertainment. The only extra is horseback riding which is $2 an hour.

Golf on Premises

A few miles away at South Lee is the Oak 'n' Spruce which also caters to the younger set. Oak 'n' Spruce has 366 acres and nestles alongside 8,000-acre Beartown State Forest. The resort features a golf course, large swimming pool, streams and ponds, tennis, softball, volleyball, badminton, skeet field and rifle range, cocktail bar, dancing, movies, planned recreation, water games, treasure hunts, basketball, archery, croquet, bicycle trips and many other sports and games both outdoors and indoors.

The accommodations here are available with twin or double beds for two, three or four in a room. All rooms have either a private or connecting shower bath.

There's a new outdoor patio bedecked with tables and colorful umbrellas where you can dine and dance. In the evening it's lit with soft lights. There is also a new fifty-acre fishing pond which is well stocked with a variety of panfish. You can take part in the weekly fishing derby with prizes for all.

Rates Daily, Weekly

Rooms with connecting bath start at $10.50 daily and $66.50 weekly per person, two in a room. You can also get a roomette which starts at $9.50 daily or $59.50 weekly. This rate is based on two in a room.

Next I visited Jug End Barn, a resort with a definite "family" atmosphere. Many of the sleeping quarters are in barns and a silo. It was originally built as an ultra-modern stock barn, and owner Lewis Crafts has converted it into a unique sports resort.

The main barn is "L" shaped and on the main floor houses a huge lounge, front office, snack bar and dining room. There are rooms on the second and third floors including a dormitory section for girls which is labeled the "Cow Pen."

Popular for Young Set

Jug End Barn is also for the young at heart and has a large pool, tennis, bicycling, basketball, volleyball, shuffleboard, archery, croquet, softball, handball, horseshoe pitching, horseback riding ($2 an hour), fishing and boating, dancing, badminton and scores of other sports.

The home-style food is very good, sports clothes are always in order and setups are available in many of the buildings (you bring your own liquor—setups are supplied on the honor system). Jug End Barn is in South Egremont, Mass.

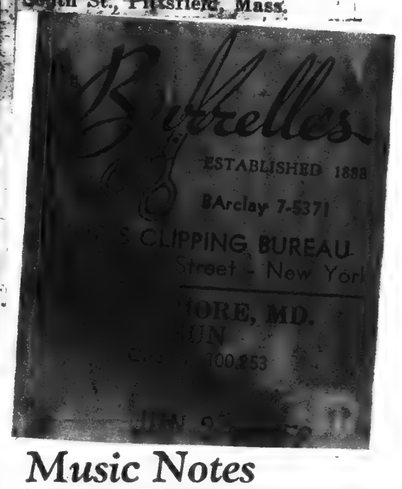
In addition to the rooms in the barn and adjoining silo there are also several cottages. Rates start at $9 daily, $59.50 weekly for bunk rooms. The resort holds 320 guests.

For full information on the above and other resorts in the Berkshires write John Dowling, Berkshire Hills Conference, 50 South St., Pittsfield, Mass.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254
JUN 24 1956

Berkshire Seat Demand Is Brisk

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is reported by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager. The six-week season of 24 concerts from July 4 to Aug. 12 anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.



Music Notes

Famous Festivals For Vacationists

By WELDON WALLACE

IN planning their vacations, music-loving Baltimoreans might wish to include one of the big festivals on their itinerary. In this country several such events offer the prospect of pleasant summer concert-going.

New England is the setting for two major festivals—one devoted to music; the other to dance.

At Tanglewood, a magnificent estate in the Berkshire of Massachusetts, the Boston Symphony again will give its series of concerts on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, beginning July 20 and extending through August 12.

Other Programs Set

Two other series are scheduled at Tangelwood in advance of the main symphony programs.

A chamber orchestra made up of Boston Symphony members is to give a cycle of programs devoted principally to the music of Mozart and Bach. These are to be held on July 6, 7 and 8, and 13, 14 and 15. Beginning on July 4 there will be a series of six Wednesday concerts featuring various chamber-music organizations.

The chief conductor at Tanglewood is to be Charles Munch. Other directors include Leonard Bernstein, Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Boris Goldovsky.

Dance Festival Listed

Not far from Tanglewood and near Lee, Mass., the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival will offer the vacation public performances by some of the leading stars in the ballet world. Matinee or evening programs are scheduled five days a week, beginning this Friday afternoon and ending on September 1. The opening bill lists Mia Slavenska and Robert Morrow in classic dances; selection by Sohomi Tachibana, classic Japanese dancer, and a modern-dance group from the Texas State College for Women.

A special feature at Jacob's Pillow this season will be a three-week engagement by the San Francisco Ballet, beginning July 24, a date that marks the East-Coast debut of that company.

For many years, Jacob's Pillow has been the summer headquarters of Ted Shawn, the first prominent American male dancer. Mr. Shawn is to appear in a lecture-recital on August 5.

He operates a summer school in connection with the festival. Carol Lynn, dance director of the Peabody Conservatory, is associate director of the school.

Aspen Musical Event

Out in the West, the Aspen Musical Festival is a musical event that offers noted concert artists in performances given in a magnificent mountain setting.

The eighth annual festival at Aspen, Col., is to open Wednesday and will continue until September 2. Special attention is to be given to Mozart's music this year. Well-known artists will present symphonic, chamber and operatic music in a tent amphitheater.

Turning attention to the West Coast, we find the nineteenth annual Bach festival scheduled at Carmel-by-the-Sea, in California.

This runs for one week, from July 16 through July 22. Despite the name of this festival, music by Mozart will also be featured this year, as well as a few works by other masters. Choral, orchestral, chamber-ensemble and solo performances are listed.

[120]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 1 1956

Shawn's Silver Anniversary at Pillow

By MILES KASTENDIECK

THIS weekend marks the opening of the 15th annual dance festival at Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass., now until Sept. 1 p[illegible] o'clock to the Ted [illegible]re for performances [illegible] traditionally combine ballet, ethnic, and modern dance. By way of celebration the San Francisco Ballet will take over for three weeks beginning July 24 in its East Coast debut.

It's Unique

Actually, it is almost a quarter century since Ted Shawn began giving dress rehearsals for his neighbors of works to be performed by his famous Men's Group the following season. Since 1942 the festival has grown into both the largest dance event of the Summer and a unique institution, combining the festival programs with a "University of the Dance" and a special dance appreciation course.

Today a trip to Jacob's Pillow is more than an event on the schedule for Summer visitors in the Berkshires. People come from all over the world.

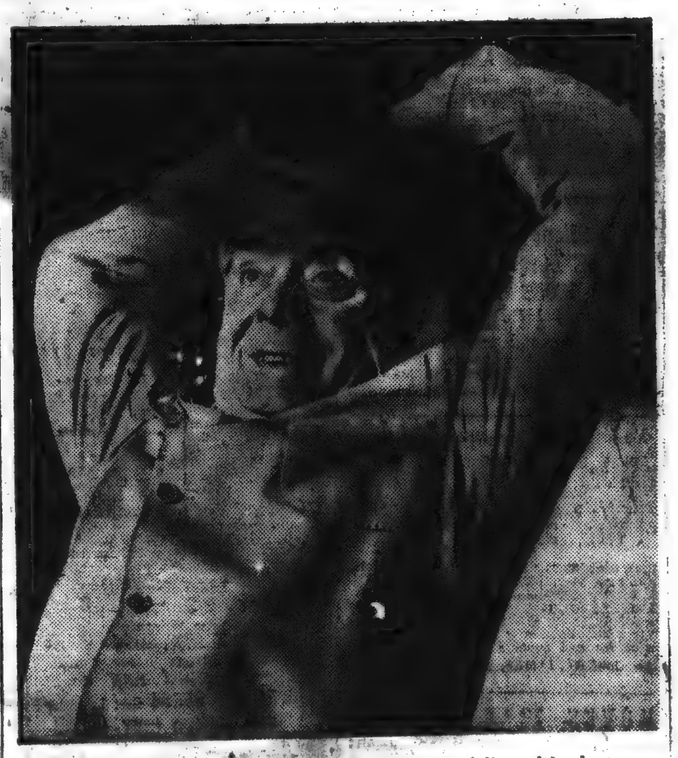
What they see is not only the performances themselves but also the only theatre in this country both designed and used exclusively for dance. Seldom do they know the story of how Ted Shawn and his men transformed the 18th Century farm into an international dance festival.

When he bought the farm with its own boulder known as "Jacob's Pillow," it was intended for a retreat after two decades of world tours as "America's First Male Dancer." It became a proving ground with audiences jamming the barn studios. Then with the building of the theatre it blossomed into the scene for a "true" dance festival.

Now a Legend

The Men's Group which toured the U. S. A. and Europe is now a legend. Those who saw its performances will never forget them and how through them Shawn brought a new dignity to male dancing. Just as Denishawn made a special contribution, so did this male group. Scores of present-day dancers owe their training to these origins.

It happens that Shawn himself made his debut in 1911 in Denver just 45 years ago. His advent has become historical in the dance world. With the festival observing its 15th season, this year carries several anniversary connotations. Unofficially the festival becomes its own special tribute to Shawn, thus focusing all the more interest on what goes on at Jacob's Pillow this summer.



WINDING UP . . . The gentleman wielding his baton so strenuously is Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony. He conducts the orchestra at annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood beginning Wednesday

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894
JUN 12 1956

MUSICAL ENVOYS

The U.S. State Department has been exporting ever greater quantities of music to show the folk of other lands that Americans may not be so material as they have been painted.

The Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra and the U.S. Air Force Band have been playing engagements in the Far East this Spring. Plans have been completed for diverting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, during its own European tour this Summer, to the Soviet Union, which will enable Muscovites to hear their Shostakovich played by visitors known for their excellent interpretation of Russian composers.

It hasn't all been smooth sailing for the musical envoys. Last year, the State Department sent a symphonic group to the Far East without adequately checking the ideological background of its members. A good part of them displayed such pro-Communist feelings, once overseas, that there were several embarrassing incidents and, on return, the "loyal" nucleus resigned. This ill-fated tour cost the taxpayers more than $1,000,000.

There has also been a question of whether a symphonic orchestra is the best emissary to, for instance, Malaya. Recently, by poor planning, both the Air Force and Los Angeles groups were in Singapore on the same night. The latter orchestra played to a select but sparse audience while down the street a five-man local combination played jazz before twice as many listeners.

Fresh in memory is the triumph scored by veteran Louis Armstrong, exponent of jazz. "Satchmo" is reported to have charmed Britons, including Queen Elizabeth, with his musical style and unfettered personality, and he very nearly set all of West Africa to stomping while he was there.

All kinds of music get an ear in the United States and it would seem foolish to pretend otherwise. Fortunately, the lighter melodies and rhythms at which we excel have a vast and appreciative audience among other peoples.

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Sunday at Music Mountain

FALLS VILLAGE, Conn.—Benny Goodman, noted clarinetist in the fields of jazz and classical music, will be featured guest artist in a chamber music concert at 4 Sunday afternoon at Music Mountain.

Mr. Goodman, who appeared twice at Tanglewood earlier this month, will join members of the Berkshire Quartet in the Brahms Quintet for Clarinet and Strings in B minor. Also on the program will be the Quartet in B flat major by Mozart and the Quartet by Priaulx Rainier.

Sunday will mark a return appearance at Music Mountain for Mr. Goodman, who made his Eastern debut in the chamber music field there in 1950. A foremost dance band leader for more than two decades, he now is rated among the nation's finest clarinet interpreters.

Berkshire Quartet members are Urico Rossi, first violin; Albert Lagan, second violin; David Dawson, viola; and Fritz Magg, cello.

Natasha Magg, who was scheduled to appear with her husband, Fritz Magg, on Sunday, will be presented on Sunday, Aug. 19, in Chopin's Sonata for Cello and Piano in G minor. Chamber music concerts will continue each Sunday at 4 through Sept. 2 in Gordon Hall at Music Mountain.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
FRI., July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT., July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolph Serkin, Piano
SUN., July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 606
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. at 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1.00

Opera Student Soloist Sunday

DALTON—Miss Nancy Lee Williams, a student in the opera department at Tanglewood, will be the soloist at the First Congregational Church this coming Sunday. Miss Williams, a mezzo soprano, is a native of Pittsburgh, where she is soloist at the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. She is a graduate of Chatham College, where she majored in music. Miss Williams has been guest soloist on several occasions with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra as well as with the Wheeling Symphonic Group. She has also made several guest appearances on TV programs. Last Tuesday she appeared in two of the Mozart opera excerpt programs at "Tanglewood, play-

Service Planned In Memory of Dr. Koussevitzky

LENOX — The fifth anniversary of the death of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, late director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be observed at Sunday's 11 a.m. service at the Church-on-the-Hill.

The Tanglewood chorus, accompanied by strings and organ, will furnish music for the service. Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's choral department, will direct the chorus.

The sermon by the Rev. Dr. Harry Trust, pastor, will be "Songs in the Night." Miss Florence Dunn will be guest organist, playing the Baldwin organ given the church by Madame Koussevitzky in her husband's memory. Dr. Koussevitzky is buried in the Cemetery-on-the-Hill.

The chorus will sing "Apertite Mihi Portas," a cantata by Buxtehude, scored for the three soloists, two violins and organ; and two numbers from Bach's "Passion According to St. John."

Tanglewood Tales

Opening selection on the Berkshire Festival program of Sunday afternoon is Prokofieff's Suite No. 2, from the ballet "Romeo and Juliet." By coincidence, the Little Cinema in the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, will commence a week's engagement that same evening of the handsome, color film version of "The Ballet of Romeo and Juliet," made in the U.S.S.R. employing the full Prokofieff score and featuring Galina Ulanova and the Bolshoi Theater dancers who will make an American tour next fall.

Prokofieff wrote the ballet score in 1935 for the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow, and the film was made with its present dancers and corps de ballet in 1955. The Boston Symphony concert, which concertmaster Richard Burgin will conduct, will play the following movements from the ballet: Montagues and Capulets; Juliet, the Maiden Dance; Romeo at Juliet's Grave.

* * *

Tomorrow morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund will find Charles Munch on the podium at Tanglewood's Music Shed at 10 a.m. rehearsing the Berkshire Festival concert for that evening, with piano virtuoso Rudolf Serkin playing the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, programmed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Mr. Serkin will be driving to Tanglewood from his year-round home in Marlboro, Vermont, where he directs the Marlboro School of Music. The chamber music concert he will play next Wednesday with the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, he is donating to the Berkshire Music Center's revolving scholarship fund.

SERKIN, BERNSTEIN ON LENOX SCHEDULE

The next to the last week of the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., will open Wednesday with a chamber-music recital by Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first of the three week-end concerts of symphonic music in the Shed. His program Friday evening will introduce to America the Brazilian pianist Jocy de Oliveira. She will play the Raval Concerto in G.

The Saturday evening program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony and Mozart's Mass in C minor will be performed. Soloists in the latter will be Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Charles Munch will conduct the final week-end program on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5. He will observe the centenary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of the composer's Second Symphony. Zino Francescatti will be violin soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto, and the program will also include Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

[12]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 1 1956

Shawn's Silver Anniversary at Pillow

By MILES KASTENDIECK

THIS weekend marks the opening of the 15th annual dance festival at Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass., now until Sept. 1 p[illegible] o'clock to the Ted [illegible]atre for performan[illegible] traditionally combine ballet, ethnic, and modern dance. By way of celebration the San Francisco Ballet will take over for three weeks beginning July 24 in its East Coast debut.

It's Unique

Actually, it is almost a quarter century since Ted Shawn began giving dress rehearsals for his neighbors of works to be performed by his famous Men's Group the following season. Since 1942 the festival has grown into both the largest dance event of the Summer and a unique institution, combining the festival programs with a "University of the Dance" and a special dance appreciation course.

Today a trip to Jacob's Pillow is more than an event on the schedule for Summer visitors in the Berkshires. People come from all over the world.

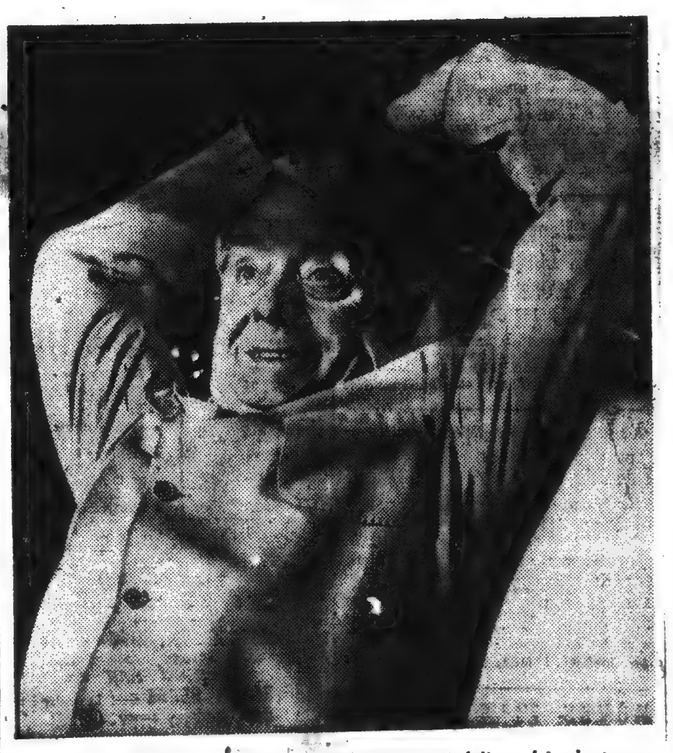
What they see is not only the performances themselves but also the only theatre in this country both designed and used exclusively for dance. Seldom do they know the story of how Ted Shawn and his men transformed the 18th Century farm into an international dance festival.

When he bought the farm with its own boulder known as "Jacob's Pillow," it was intended for a retreat after two decades of world tours as "America's First Male Dancer." It became a proving ground with audiences jamming the barn studios. Then with the building of the theatre it blossomed into the scene for a "true" dance festival.

Now a Legend

The Men's Group which toured the U. S. A. and Europe is now a legend. Those who saw its performances will never forget them and how through them Shawn brought a new dignity to male dancing. Just as Denishawn made a special contribution, so did this male group. Scores of present-day dancers owe their training to these origins.

It happens that Shawn himself made his debut in 1911 in Denver just 45 years ago. His advent has become historical in the dance world. With the festival observing its 15th season, this year carries several anniversary connotations. Unofficially the festival becomes its own special tribute to Shawn, thus focusing all the more interest on what goes on at Jacob's Pillow this summer.



WINDING UP . . . The gentleman wielding his baton so strenuously is Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony. He conducts the orchestra at annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood beginning Wednesday

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894
JUN 12 1956

MUSICAL ENVOYS

The U.S. State Department has been exporting ever greater quantities of music to show the folk of other lands that Americans may not be so material as they have been painted.

The Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra and the U.S. Air Force Band have been playing engagements in the Far East this Spring. Plans have been completed for diverting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, during its own European tour this Summer, to the Soviet Union, which will enable Muscovites to hear their Shostakovich played by visitors known for their excellent interpretation of Russian composers.

It hasn't all been smooth sailing for the musical envoys. Last year, the State Department sent a symphonic group to the Far East without adequately checking the ideological background of its members. A good part of them displayed such pro-Communist feelings, once overseas, that there were several embarrassing incidents and, on return, the "loyal" nucleus resigned. This ill-fated tour cost the taxpayers more than $1,000,000.

There has also been a question of whether a symphonic orchestra is the best emissary to, for instance, Malaya. Recently, by poor planning, both the Air Force and Los Angeles groups were in Singapore on the same night. The latter orchestra played to a select but sparse audience while down the street a five-man local combination played jazz before twice as many listeners.

Fresh in memory is the triumph scored by veteran Louis Armstrong, exponent of jazz. "Satchmo" is reported to have charmed Britons, including Queen Elizabeth, with his musical style and unlettered personality, and he very nearly set all of West Africa to stomping while he was there.

All kinds of music get an ear in the United States and it would seem foolish to pretend otherwise. Fortunately, the lighter melodies and rhythms at which we excel have a vast and appreciative audience among other peoples.

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Sunday at Music Mountain

FALLS VILLAGE, Conn.—Benny Goodman, noted clarinetist in the fields of jazz and classical music, will be featured guest artist in a chamber music concert at 4 Sunday afternoon at Music Mountain.

Mr. Goodman, who appeared twice at Tanglewood earlier this month, will join members of the Berkshire Quartet in the Brahms Quintet for Clarinet and Strings in B minor. Also on the program will be the Quartet in B flat major by Mozart and the Quartet by Priaulx Rainier.

Sunday will mark a return appearance at Music Mountain for Mr. Goodman, who made his Eastern debut in the chamber music field there in 1950. A foremost dance band leader for more than two decades, he now is rated among the nation's finest clarinet interpreters.

Berkshire Quartet members are Urico Rossi, first violin; Albert Lagan, second violin; David Dawson, viola; and Fritz Magg, cello.

Natasha Magg, who was scheduled to appear with her husband, Fritz Magg, on Sunday, will be presented on Sunday, Aug. 19, in Chopin's Sonata for Cello and Piano in G minor. Chamber music concerts will continue each Sunday at 4 through Sept. 2 in Gordon Hall at Music Mountain.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH. Music Director
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT., July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolph Serkin, Piano
SUN., July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. at 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1.00

Opera Student Soloist Sunday

DALTON—Miss Nancy Lee Williams, a student in the opera department at Tanglewood, will be the soloist at the First Congregational Church this coming Sunday. Miss Williams, a mezzo soprano, is a native of Pittsburgh, where she is soloist at the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. She is a graduate of Chatham College, where she majored in music. Miss Williams has been guest soloist on several occasions with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra as well as with the Wheeling Symphonic Group. She has also made several guest appearances on TV programs. Last Tuesday she appeared in two of the Mozart opera excerpt programs at "Tanglewood, play-

Service Planned In Memory of Dr. Koussevitzky

LENOX — The fifth anniversary of the death of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, late director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be observed at Sunday's 11 a.m. service at the Church-on-the-Hill.

The Tanglewood chorus, accompanied by strings and organ, will furnish music for the service. Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's choral department, will direct the chorus.

The sermon by the Rev. Dr. Harry Trust, pastor, will be "Songs in the Night." Miss Florence Dunn will be guest organist, playing the Baldwin organ given the church by Madame Koussevitzky in her husband's memory. Dr. Koussevitzky is buried in the Cemetery-on-the-Hill.

The chorus will sing "Apertite Mihi Portas," a cantata by Buxtehude, scored for the three soloists, two violins and organ; and two numbers from Bach's "Passion According to St. John."

Tanglewood Tales

Opening selection on the Berkshire Festival program of Sunday afternoon is Prokofieff's Suite No. 2, from the ballet "Romeo and Juliet." By coincidence, the Little Cinema in the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, will commence a week's engagement that same evening of the handsome, color film version of "The Ballet of Romeo and Juliet," made in the U.S.S.R. employing the full Prokofieff score and featuring Galina Ulanova and the Bolshoi Theater dancers who will make an American tour next fall.

Prokofieff wrote the ballet score in 1935 for the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow, and the film was made with its present dancers and corps de ballet in 1955. The Boston Symphony concert, which concertmaster Richard Burgin will conduct, will play the following movements from the ballet: Montagues and Capulets; Juliet, the Maiden Dance; Romeo at Juliet's Grave.

* * *

Tomorrow morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund will find Charles Munch on the podium at Tanglewood's Music Shed at 10 a.m. rehearsing the Berkshire Festival concert for that evening, with piano virtuoso Rudolf Serkin playing the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, programmed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Mr. Serkin will be driving to Tanglewood from his year-round home in Marlboro, Vermont, where he directs the Marlboro School of Music. The chamber music concert he will play next Wednesday with the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, he is donating to the Berkshire Music Center's revolving scholarship fund.

SERKIN, BERNSTEIN ON LENOX SCHEDULE

The next to the last week of the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., will open Wednesday with a chamber-music recital by Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first of the three weekend concerts of symphonic music in the Shed. His program Friday evening will introduce to America the Brazilian pianist Jocy de Oliveira. She will play the Raval Concerto in G.

The Saturday evening program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony and Mozart's Mass in C minor will be performed. Soloists in the latter will be Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Charles Munch will conduct the final week-end program on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5. He will observe the centenary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of the composer's Second Symphony. Zino Francescatti will be violin soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto, and the program will also include Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

[12]

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 27,

Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra To Have Tanglewood Premiere Tonight

Rudolf Serkin Soloist in Shed Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch will conduct tonight the Tanglewood premiere of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer Goffredo Petrassi as the second weekend of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA Victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the orchestra.

100th Anniversary

Mr. Petrassi, who composed his Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Charles Munch conducted the world premiere of the work at a pair of Boston Symphony concerts last December, and then conducted it in New York and various other eastern cities. It is in two contrasting movements, the first a Presto, the second an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy.

Burgin To Conduct

Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a.m. tomorrow morning. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Remaining tickets for tonight's corncert, as well as all those remaining in the Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug. 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Piano soloist, Rudolf Serkin, right, at tomorrow night's Music Shed concert at Tanglewood, takes time out from rehearsals to visit with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last season when Serkin made his debut at Tanglewood, his concert with the BSO drew more than 15,000.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 28, 195

Serkin to Play At Berkshire Fete

Rudolf Serkin, who attracted an overflow crowd of more than 15,000 when he made his Tanglewood debut at last summer's Berkshire Festival, returns tonight to perform in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Serkin will play the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856.

Tomorrow afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will also feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the violin Concerto by Hindemith. The second suite from Prokofieff's Ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1956

TANGLEWOOD SHED CONCERT ATTRACTS 6256

Novelty On Program 'Fifth Concerto for Orchestra' By Petrassi

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 27—The opening concert of the second week of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed drew an audience of 6256 people. The inclement weather has held audiences down to almost a minimum this season, which, aside from the financial loss, is unfortunate because not for many seasons have there been finer performances of the great music in the orchestral literature.

Commissioned Work

Tonight, the novelty on the program was the "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" by Goffredo Petrassi. This work was commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary and it had its first performance in Boston in Dec., 1955. Mr. Petrassi is an artful craftsman who knows his orchestra and how to expose it to advantage. Unfortunately the present work seems to have no form or focus. Just when one expects the work to get some place, off goes the composer on another tangent. There are moments of charming melodies, but these are fragmentary. The orchestra is given ample opportunity to show what can be accomplished by a group of virtuosi. Perhaps, had we not heard so recently the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra," this work of Mr. Petrassi might have assumed a greater interest. As it was, it seemed to bear out our thought that inspiration and commissions do not necessarily go hand in hand. Mr. Munch labored mightily on this work and it was probably given the finest performance it will ever have.

The program opened with a magnificent performance of the "Leonore" Overture No. 2. Heard less often than the No. 3, it has the same soulful and grave introduction based on the air of Florestan. There is not quite the sustained excitement one finds in the third "Leonore" Overture, but there is within the second a wonderful building of climax and extraordinarily fine contrasts. Mr. Munch was at his most communicative.

Passages Almost New

The concert concluded with a scintillating performance of "Symphony No. 4 in F Minor" by Tschaikowsky. The playing of the last symphonies of Tschaikowsky have practically become a tradition here at Tanglewood. They were the sure-fire portion of a Koussevitzky program, year after year. Mr. Munch's approach to these symphonies is less vehement than Mr. Koussevitzky. In fact, his readings are so beautifully detailed that at times one hears passages which seem almost new, so seldom were they heard in the welter of noise that is the sum total of what many conductors feel is the tradition of Tschaikowsky interpretation.

The performance tonight was very fine. So was the audience reaction.

Tonight's Program

Tomorrow night Mr. Munch will open the program with an "Elegy In Memory of Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson. This was another work composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. Rudolf Serkin, the most popular pianist to come to Tanglewood, will play the Schumann "Concerto in A Minor" and this will be followed by Honegger's "Symphony No. 5." The program will close with one of the great interpretive triumphs of Mr. Munch, "La Mer" by Debussy.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, will conduct the program Sunday afternoon at 2.30 and will have as soloist his wife, Ruth Posselt, who will play Hindemith's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra." The program will open with Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, Second Suite, and conclude with Mahler's "Symphony No. 1 in D Major."

CATSKILL DAILY MAIL FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1956

MUSIC

(Boston Symphony Orchestra)

Another weekend of music has passed at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony, and in retrospect, it has been one of the most rewarding to date. Contrary to what Jay S. Harrison, music critic for the New York Herald Tribune, had to say about the Friday evening concert, it was good to hear some of the "old chestnuts" once more. Mr. Harrison apparently was upset because another program of popular appeal was performed at Tanglewood, with the assumption that the works performed were available on phonograph recordings, with the premise, "Why play them in live performance?"

It might be noteworthy to say that phonograph records will never replace a live performance, regardless of what the composition might be. No one can deny the zest of the "Roman Carnival" Overture by Berlioz, the suave gentility of Debussy's "Afternoon of A Faun," or the sensuous sonorities of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

It's quite true that Brahms has been played at Tanglewood many times, and it's also quite true that Mr. Munch's performance did not measure up to some of his memorable performances of the past But that is no reason to criticize the Boston Symphony for performing some of our more outstanding works in the permanent repetoire. One gains a different "feel" for music in the concert hall than by recording. Mr. Harrison also stated that if this method of programming continues, Tanglewood will be a thing of the past.

It might be well to remember that it isn't Aaron Copland, Paul Hindemith or Bohuslav Martinu that is bringing the money into the box office at Tanglewood. I'm sure that if one were to look into the financial figures of the BSO for individual concerts that the capacity crowds were for performances of Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart, Bach or Tschaikowsky.

To offset programs of less popular appeal, programs that are sure-fire winners must be presented. If money is reaped from performances of compositions by permanent composers, I'm sure that the programming committee would be the most happy to let us hear some of the efforts of some of our con (temporary) composers as well. One must, in some shape or fashion, offset the other.

As for Tanglewood disappearing from the face of the earth, this seems quite doubtful. Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at this point, seem to be quite an American institution. If it isn't, why do several hundred thousand people make the trek there from all over our vast country each year? I'm sure that it will be there long after Mr. Harrison and myself have gone to our heavenly rewards. Who knows? We might meet Beethoven or Brahms there, and we could argue the whole situation out with them up above.

For the innocent, however, and looking forward to the next three weeks at Tanglewood, it looks as though things are pretty evened up with the boys, and with the new ones, who patiently (in some instances) crank out our modern modes in music.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 19 1956

Tanglewood Hears Boston Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The usual connotation of "chamber music" hardly suggests the supercharged excitement and musical resplendence of last night's concert at Tanglewood, the third event in the Wednesday evening series.

At first consideration the dramatic soprano of Margaret Harshaw and a brass ensemble from the Boston Symphony would seem an improbable combination on the same program but they proved a refreshing novelty and a source of aesthetic pleasure for the large crowd in the Theater-Concert Hall last night. Both Miss Harshaw and the Brass Ensemble were in superb form.

* * *

THE BRASS CHOIR of the Boston orchestra is tops in the symphonic field and it came as no surprise that these players gave magnificent utterance to the music of Giovanni Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc, and Berezowsky. Our own predilection was for the grandiloquent fanfares that Gabrieli and Bonelli composed for antiphonal brass groups. Led by Roger Voison, one quartet of brass players faced another across the stage and gave a fleeting idea of how gloriously this music must have sounded in Gabrieli's day at San Marco's in Venice.

In the 20th Century music of Poulenc and Berezowsky there was a studied indifference to orotund and stately expression but both pieces were gay, witty, and devilishly tricky to play. The consummate skill of these players was fortunately not wasted on an unappreciative audience. Enthusiasm was warm and deservedly prolonged.

Miss Harshaw is one of the great practitioners in the operatic field today and it was a surpassing joy to hear her in Strauss and Wagner songs last night. Her status as a recitalist will have to be decided when her programs encompass a wider selection but all can rejoice in her voluminous voice, immaculate musicianship, and expressive power. These qualities inhered to everything she attempted last night.

* * *

IN THE PRELIMINARY sketches for Tristan she found her most congenial milieu. These settings have a wide emotional gamut, all of whose facets Miss Harshaw understands and can project. She was particularly moving in "Schmerzen" and "Im Treibhaus" and it was worth a long trip to hear her interpretations of these five songs.

Ralph Berkowitz was Miss Harshaw's accompanist, whose pianism was clean and assured but rather lacking in nuance and coloration.

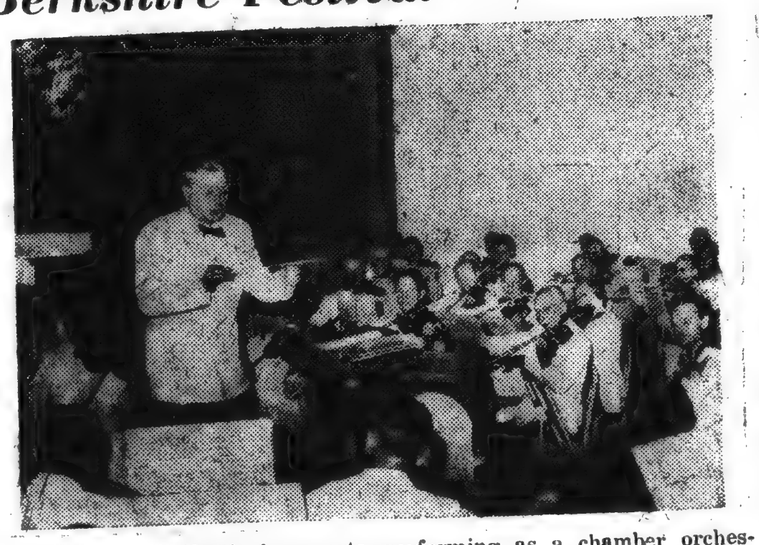
PLAINVILLE

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Farmington Valley Herald
COLLINSVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,126

JUL 19 1956

Berkshire Festival



The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., moved into high gear this week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembled at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they completed their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Bost Symphony moved to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so that music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758

JUL 19 1956

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's tree concerts in the Music Shed, on Friday July 27 and Saturday July 28 evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concert-master, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon July 29.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, N. Y.

Rudolf Serkin, the concert pianist, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt (Mrs. Burgin) as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Cape Codder
ORLEANS, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,733

JUL 19 1956

ProvincetownSymphony Starts Sun. July 29

More than 10 nationally known symphonic groups are represented by the personnel of the Provincetown Symphony Orchestra which will present the opening concert of the 1956 season Sunday evening, July 29 at Provincetown Town Hall.

The musicians who will present the concerts are from such famous orchestras as the Boston Symphony, St. Louis Symphony, Cleveland Symphony, Minneapolis Symphony and the Symphony of the Air. The musical background of the group includes the American Chamber Orchestra, The Boston Pops, the Florida Symphony and the Contemporary Woodwind Quintet.

Herbert Sorkin, who was concert master for the 1955 Provincetown concert, will likewise be concert master of this season's orchestra and will be soloist for the first concert. A pupil of Louis Persinger and Ivan Galamian, he has appeared in recital in Town Hall, Carnegie Hall and in major cities throughout the country. He is at present on the staff of the American Broadcasting Company in New York.

Theodore Takaroff, first violinist, has played first violin in the Boston Pops Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony, Radio City Music Hall and the Chattanooga Symphony.

Richard Hagopian, who plays second violin, played the Tanglewood series in 1941 under Dr. Serge Koussevitsky. He is now a staff member of the Mutual Network Orchestra.

Clifford McAvoy, viola, has studied at the Juillard and Manhattan Schools of Music with Bernard Greenhouse, who has summered in Wellfleet for many years. Former chief cellist with the Robert Shaw Chorale and Orchestra, he toured more than 20 countries with that group and played with the George Gershwin Concert Orchestra on its nationwide tour in 1954.

The woodwind section will offer, among others, Philip Dunigan, flute; Robert Roseman, oboe; Robert Listokin, clarinet; Herman Gersten, bassoon, and Paul Ingram, horn, who are all members of the Contemporary Woodwind Quintet of New York. Critics have given this group wide acclaim and the New York Times this spring, declared "its color shines with warmth, glows with radiance and its interpretive work is bathed in joyous spirit."

Some of the musicians are already on the Cape. By tomorrow the orchestra will be here in full force.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Commercial (e)
BANGOR, Me.
Independent
Circ. 12,000

JUL 19 1956

Berkshire Music Festival Inspiring

LENOX, Mas., — Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills — all this, and more, is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20th.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, acording to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Bring the entire family along for a memorable weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating, picknicking and recreational facilities galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 20 1956

Changes In Festival Programs Announced

Boston Symphony To Play New Composition

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, August 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuil Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Sympthony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture, " Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act 1 of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 20 1956

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Music

Marion Anderson, celebrated contralto, will be presented in a group of songs on July 20 in the Summer Pops concert of the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra at Fairfield University Stadium Bowl, Fairfield, with Evan Whallon conducting. Ticket information at Bridgeport FOrest 8-2586.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 20 and 21, at 8:30 o'clock. Friday's program will include works by Berlioz, DeBussy, Ravel and Brahms; Saturday's w... present compositions by Barber, Martinu and Wagner. Pierre Mon... teux will conduct the orchestra on Sunday July 22 at 2:30 p.m. ... in tonight by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert. On Wednesday, July 25, chamber music by Mendelssohn; Ravel and Brahms will be presented by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in the Music Shed. Friday and Saturday, July 27 and 28, at 8:30 p.m. The program for Friday comprises music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and Petrassi. On Saturday, works by Schumann, Honegger, DeBussy and Hanson will be presented. Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will conduct music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

[123]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Concert Will Present Serkin

Program For Next Week Includes Concerto

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28) evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Koussevitsky Elegy

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night, and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening, were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr Burgin, with William Krall, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8:30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturday, and the Sunday afternoon concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 28), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 20 1956

Berkshire Festival-goers are invited to a free concert, on a non-reserved seat basis, of contemporary chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, which will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Monday, July 23, at 8:30 p.m. Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will participate, assisted by guest artists Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichord; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter, in works by Manuel de Falla, Leland Smith, Julian Orbon, Goffredo Petrassi, Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 20 1956

Draws Crowds

Rudolf Serkin, drew an audience of 15,624 when the eminent pianist appeared for the first time with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a Berkshire Festival soloist at a Tanglewood concert at Lenox, Mass. Mr Serkin will perform Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at this year's Festival concert of Saturday, July 28 (8:30 p.m., Music Shed). The noted musician is also donating his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer music school, in a program of Mozart and Schumann on Wednesday, August 1 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Parade Program Aug. 9

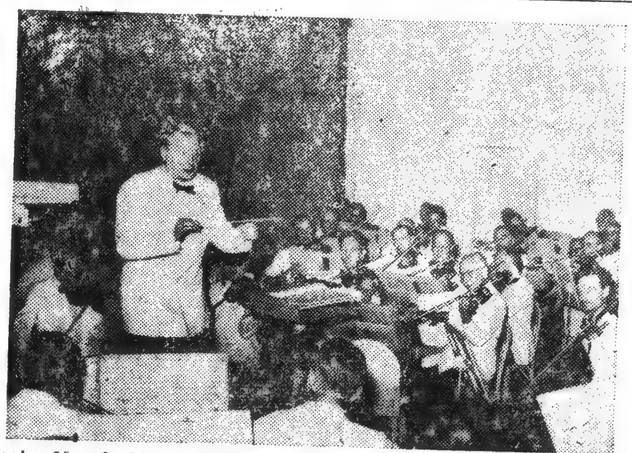
The program details are announced today for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday evening, Aug. 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos—the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 20 1956

Munch Conducts At Festival



Charles Munch, Music Director for the past seven years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the Symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts at Tanglewood, Lenox, during the six-week season, July 4-August 12, 1956. Mr Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its fourteenth session.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 20 1956

First Shed Concert Tonight Of Berkshire Music Festival

The first shed concert of the Berkshire Music Festival is scheduled tonight at Tanglewood. The 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra will be under the direction of Charles Munch, its music director.

First of 12 Concerts

Tonight's program, first of the 12 major concerts of the festival, will include the Overture to "The Roman Carnival," by Berlioz; the prelude to "The Afternoon of a Faun," by Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, by Ravel, and the Symphony No. 2, in D Major by Brahms.

Saturday evening, also at 8.30 o'clock, Dr. Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera company, and James Pease, basso.

The program tomorrow will also include two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martino's Symphonic Fantasies.

Monteux Back Sunday

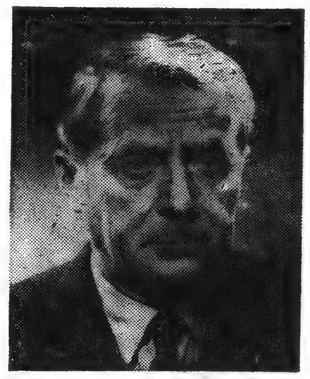
On Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Pierre Monteux returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year he has been a guest conductor at the festival. To be heard on that program will be Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiani in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra and Schubert's Symphony No. 7, in C major.

The shed concerts last year attracted a total of 108,336 persons, or an average attendance of 9,028.

The list of area boxholders for the festival concerts, announced today, included only one North Berkshire resident, James P. Baxter, 3rd, president of Williams college.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 20 1956

Music Director



Charles Munch

Currently conducting concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. is Charles Munch, music director of the Boston group for the past seven years. The annual Berkshire Festival began on July 4th and will continue until August 12. Mr Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the festival, which is now in its 14th session.

[124]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,916

JUL 21 1956

Festivals of Music and the Dance Now at Mid-Point of Summer Season

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at [illegible], Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed next Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 29.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening, were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8:30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 28, for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

San Francisco Ballet

On Tuesday night at 9 o'clock the San Francisco Ballet, this season's highlight attraction at Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass., will unveil its first program for the appraisal of eastern audiences. Following his custom of presenting a major company as the dominant attraction of each festival season (in 1955 it was the Ten Leading Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet), director Ted Shawn has scored another "first" with this west coast organization.

The opening program, to be repeated Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and matinees at 4 Thursday, Friday and Saturday, features two ballets by the company's director and principal choreographer, Lew Christensen: the world premiere of "The Dryad" and "Con Amore". "Concerto Barocco" will be danced by permission of the New York City Ballet with which the company maintains an exchange policy.

The leading dancers and soloists are Nancy Johnson, Sally Bailey, Christiane Bering, Fiona Fuerstner, Virginia Johnson, Bene Arnold, Constance Coler, Louise Lawlor, Gloria Cancilla, Conrad Ludlow and Richard Carter. A corps de ballet will supplement. Raylene Pierce and Dorothy Franklin, duo-pianists, will supply the musical backgrounds.

Fairfield Jazz Festival

Bach and Beethoven will step aside to make way for jazz at the Fairfield University stadium bowl next Saturday night when Duke Ellington and his orchestra will be starred in a special benefit performance for the Connecticut Symphony society.

The event, one of the summer "pops" series of the Symphony society, is described by its sponsors as the first major jazz festival to take place in Connecticut. Emceeing the festival with Ellington will be Sidney Gross, disc jockey and jazz expert, currently heard over the ABC network.

Among the many famous jazz artists appearing on this program will be the Chico Hamilton Quintet, now on their first eastern tour from the West Coast. An innovation on this program will be an original presentation written and staged by Mr. Gross, featuring all the participating artists, and covering the historic milestones of jazz.

John Raitt at Yale Bowl

John Raitt, star of the Broadway musical "Pajama game", swapping dates with Eileen Farrell, will be the soloist with the New Haven Symphony orchestra presenting its third Pops concert of 1956 in the Yale Bowl Tuesday. Miss Farrell, soprano of the Metropolitan opera company, will appear on July 31. Mr. Raitt, originally booked for July 31, will be taking a screen test in Hollywood on that date, trying for the lead role in the projected film version of "Pajama Game."

The Broadway star will sing three songs from his soon to be released album "Mediterranean Magic" and three songs from the Broadway shows "Pajama Game", "Kiss Me, Kate" and "Carousel".

Harry Berman will conduct the orchestra in the Glazounoff arrangement of Chopin's so-called Military Polonaise; the Overature to "Colas Breugnon" by Kabalevsky, the "Merry Widow" overture, "Pops Polka" by Jack Mason, and selections from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

Harpsichordist as Soloist

The fourth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the 27th Music Mountain season at Falls Village will be presented tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Berkshire Quartet with Marie Zorn, harpsichordist, as the assisting artist.

The program will consist of the Quartet in C major (K. 465) by Mozart; the Italian Concerto for Harpsichord by Bach; the Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings in G Minor by Bach; and the Quartet in A Major, Opus 41, No. 3 by Schumann. Marie Zorn, who has studied the harpsichord with Wanda Landowska, will play the Bach Italian Concerto, a work for solo instrument, and will join the Berkshire Quartet as assisting artist in the Bach Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings.

Uninaky Festival Pianist

The second of two Saturday night concerts scheduled by the Connecticut Valley Music Festival for July, will bring to Deep River next week Alexander Uninsky, the brilliant young pianist fresh from a solo appearance with the New York Philharmonic at Lewisohn Stadium. His program will include numbers by Chopin, Scarlatti and Moussorgsky.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 20 1956

Shed Concerts at Lenox Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (July 20) from the intimate Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30.

Charles Munch will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahm's Second Symphony which his just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 21 1956

Berkshire Festival Opened Last Night With 6203 On Hand

The Berkshire Music festival held its opening concert under its 6000-seat shed and pleasant skies last night and there were 6203 music lovers on hand as the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch directing played.

The program was divided into two parts, the first devoted to the works of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, and the latter part to Brahms, "Symphony No. 3 in D Major."

Tonight's program gets underway at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon's program starts at 2:30. Both will be in the big shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 20 1956

To Play Concerto

Ruth Posselt, concert violinist, who made her first appearance at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1954, returns to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this summer to perform the Hindemith Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting, on Sunday, July 29, (2:30 p.m., Music Shed). Miss Posselt is an instructor in chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 20 1956

To Make Debut

Albert Da Costa, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, sings for the first time at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in two Berkshire Festival concerts this summer by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducing. On Saturday, July 21 (8:30 p.m., Music Shed), the tenor participates in a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure", on an all-Wagner program. On Sunday, August 12 (2:30 p.m., Music Shed), Mr Da Costa wil lsing the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger", on an all-Wagner program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200

JUL 21 1956

Ground Breaking Ceremonies at Tanglewood

The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Tanglewood-for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonies marking the ground-breaking of the Shadowbrook Novitiate on July 1.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., Provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old Novitiate on March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

The thousands of persons expected to attend will proceed from Tanglewood to the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old for the actual ground breaking by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of the Springfield Diocese. Memorial services for the four Jesuits who perished in the fire will be held at the cemetery adjacent to the ruins.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the appeal for $3-million to rebuild the Novitiate, announced today that $2,045,000 has been donated to date.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union Leader (m) & (e)
MANCHESTER, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 45,622

JUL 21 1956

Novitiate Ceremony On July 31

BOSTON — The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood, for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook novitiate, July 31.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, SJ, provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old novitiate March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Tanglewood music festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic hierarchy of New England. The buildings of the Berkshire festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra when the need became known.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild the novitiate, announced today that $2,045,000 has been donated to date.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,916

JUL 21 1956

Festivals of Music and the Dance Now at Mid-Point of Summer Season

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at [illegible], Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, music direector of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed next Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 29.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8:30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 28, for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

San Francisco Ballet

On Tuesday night at 9 o'clock the San Francisco Ballet, this season's highlight attraction at Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass., will unveil its first program for the appraisal of eastern audiences. Following his custom of presenting a major company as the deminant attraction of each festival season (in 1955 it was the Ten Leading Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet), director Ted Shawn has scored another "first" with this west coast organization.

The opening program, to be repeated Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and matinees at 4 Thursday, Friday and Saturday, features two ballets by the company's director and principal choreographer, Lew Christensen: the world premiere of "The Dryad" and "Con Amoro". "Concerto Barocco" will be danced by permission of the New York City Ballet with which the company maintains an exchange policy.

The leading dancers and soloists are Nancy Johnson, Sally Bailey, Christiane Bering, Fiona Fuerstner, Virginia Johnson, Bene Arnold, Constance Coler, Louise Lawlor, Gloria Cancilla, Conrad Ludlow and Richard Carter. A corps de ballet will supplement. Raylene Pierce and Dorothy Franklin, duo-pianists, will supply the musical backgrounds.

Fairfield Jazz Festival

Bach and Beethoven will step aside to make way for jazz at the Fairfield University stadium bowl next Saturday night when Duke Ellington and his orchestra will be starred in a special benefit performance for the Connecticut Symphony society.

The event, one of the summer "pops" series of the Symphony society, is described by its sponsors as the first major jazz festival to take place in Connecticut. Emceeing the festival with Ellington will be Sidney Gross, disc jockey and jazz expert, currently heard over the ABC network.

Among the many famous jazz artists appearing on this program will be the Chico Hamilton Quintet, now on their first eastern tour from the West Coast. An innovation on this program will be an original presentation written and staged by Mr. Gross, featuring all the participating artists, and covering the historic milestones of jazz.

John Raitt at Yale Bowl

John Raitt, star of the Broadway musical "Pajama game", swapping dates with Eileen Farrell, will be the soloist with the New Haven Symphony orchestra presenting its third Pops concert of 1956 in the Yale Bowl Tuesday. Miss Farrell, soprano of the Metropolitan opera company, will appear on July 31. Mr. Raitt, originally booked for July 31, will be taking a screen test in Hollywood on that date, trying for the lead role in the projected film version of "Pajama Game."

The Broadway star will sing three songs from his soon to be released album "Mediterranean Magic" and three songs from the Broadway shows "Pajama Game", "Kiss Me, Kate" and "Carousel".

Harry Berman will conduct the orchestra in the Glazounoff arrangement of Chopin's so-called Military Polonaise; the Overature to "Colas Breugnon" by Kabalevsky, the "Merry Widow" overture, "Pops Polka" by Jack Mason, and selections from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

Harpsichordist as Soloist

The fourth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the 27th Music Mountain season at Falls Village will be presented tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Berkshire Quartet with Marie Zorn, harpsichordist, as the assisting artist.

The program will consist of the Quartet in C major (K. 465) by Mozart; the Italian Concerto for Harpsichord by Bach; the Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings in G Minor by Bach; and the Quartet in A Major, Opus 41, No. 3 by Schumann. Marie Zorn, who has studied the harpsichord with Wanda Landowska, will play the Bach Italian Concerto, a work for solo instrument, and will join the Berkshire Quartet as assisting artist in the Bach Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings.

Uninsky Festival Pianist

The second of two Saturday night concerts scheduled by the Connecticut Valley Music Festival for July, will bring to Deep River next week Alexander Uninsky, the brilliant young pianist, fresh from a solo appearance with the New York Philharmonic at Lewisohn Stadium. His program will include numbers by Chopin, Scarlatti and Moussorgsky.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 20 1956

Shed Concerts at Lenox Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (July 20) from the intimate Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30.

Charles Munch will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahm's Second Symphony, which his just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 21 1956

Berkshire Festival Opened Last Night With 6203 On Hand

The Berkshire Music festival held its opening concert under its 6000-seat shed and pleasant skies last night and there were 6203 music lovers on hand as the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch directing played.

The program was divided into two parts, the first devoted to the works of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, and the latter part to Brahms, "Symphony No. 2 in D Major."

Tonight's program gets underway at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon's program starts at 2.30. Both will be in the big shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 20 1956

To Play Concerto

Ruth Posselt, concert violinist, who made her first appearance at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1954, returns to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this summer to perform the Hindemith Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting, on Sunday, July 29, (2:30 p.m., Music Shed). Miss Posselt is an instructor in chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 20 1956

To Make Debut

Aibert Da Costa, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, sings for the first time at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in two Berkshire Festival concerts this summer by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducing. On Saturday, July 21 (8:30 p.m., Music Shed), the tenor participates in a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure", on all all-Wagner program. On Sunday, August 12 (2:30 p.m., Music Shed), Mr Da-Costa wil lsing the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger", on an all-Wagner program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200

JUL 21 1956

Ground Breaking Ceremonies at Tanglewood

The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Tanglewood-for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonies marking the ground-breaking of the Shadowbrook Novitiate on July 1.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., Provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old Novitiate on March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

The thousands of persons expected to attend will proceed from Tanglewood to the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old for the actual ground breaking by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of the Springfield Diocese. Memorial services for the four Jesuits who perished in the fire will be held at the cemetery adjacent to the ruins.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the appeal for $3-million to rebuild the Novitiate, announced today that $2,045,000 has been donated to date.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union Leader (m) & (e)
MANCHESTER, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 45,622

JUL 21 1956

Novitiate Ceremony On July 31

BOSTON — The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood, for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook novitiate, July 31.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, SJ, provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old novitiate March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Tanglewood music festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic hierarchy of New England. The buildings of the Berkshire festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra when the need became known.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild the novitiate, announced today that $2,045,000 has been donated to date.

[125]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950
JUL 21 1956

TALK ABOUT CAREERS

Secretaries Taking Part In Experiment at Vassar

By TRUDY HOWARD

Twenty-five certified professional secretaries are attending Vassar College free this summer to participate in one of the most unique adult education experiences ever offered in the United States to working women. The program was announced recently by Peter Siegle, of the Center for the Study of Liberal Education for Adults (CSLEA), in a speech at a workshop conducted by the local chapter of the Nattional Secretaries Assn.

The program will be called the Humanistic Institute for Women in Business.

The CSLEA is a nonprofit, independent corporation established in 1951 by a grant from the Fund for Adult Education. Among other things, it is concerned with the education of adults who have already had considerable vocational or professional training and experience, and thus do not need to think in terms of furthering their education in order to rate a raise or promotion, or to achieve professional status or recognition in their field.

Pilot programs are already in the works for teachers, journalists and labor leaders interested in learning for learning's sake rather than "boning up" in specific subject matter to be used on their 9-to-5 job trick.

Masterminded Program

Peter Siegle, a social psychologist educated at Harvard and the Universities of North Carolina and Chicago, masterminded the program for secretaries into action. He told us that his organization was concerned about the lack of recognition for the increasingly important role being played by women in our business society, and the dearth of programs for executive women in either managerial training or liberal education.

Why did the CSLEA select the National Secretaries' Assn. as co-sponsors of the new project? In brief, because the NSA is a large, extremely well-organized, active, energetic, national group of professional women whose members already have developed their own institute for certifying professional secretaries. It now has certified 772 secretaries. The NSA has been working in close co-operation with several adult education programs and members have shown that they are ready "to tap their highly specialized skills with the broader humanistic and social study experiences" essential for a full professional or personal life.

What will girls learn at this Humanistic Institute for Women in Business? A few articulate CPS holders have a lot to say about this and , according to Mr. Siegle, the program will be live with new ideas coming from the participants while the institute is in session.

The curriculum will cover three broad subject areas: public issues, human behavior and the creative arts. Class hours? Day and night, around the clock, in the true spirit of the residential school. The women will eat,sleep and discuss new ideas before, during and, after breakfast. They might take a trip to the Tanglewood music festival in the morning, drop in on someone like Eleanor Roosevelt another day for tea, or spend a few evenings listening to and talking with one of our best known American poets. They might corner some visiting public officials for an honest-to-goodness discussion about some big front page news of the day.

All of this will take place in a relaxed, friendly, adult atmosphere under the leadership of an inspiring teaching staff paid by the CSLEA and gathered from all over the country. No strict assignments will be given, but everyone will be expected to participate fully in all discussions — whether they are held in the cafeteria over Dagwood sandwiches at midnight or in a bus en route to visit an American artist at work.

Program Philosophy

What is the purpose of the project? To introduce a new concept in adult education, on the premise that knowing the occupational skills of any particular profession is not sufficient for a well-rounded enjoyment of a full life. In other words, you can be a whiz at typing, but that isn't good enough—you need to know and care enough to go on learning more about art, literature, poetry, government, philosophy and religion if your life is to be truly meaningful.

The two-week program will be conducted at Vassar from Aug. 5 to 19. Its authors expect to find out just how much "worthwhile exposure to liberal arts" can be packed into a two-week period when working women are away from the day-to-day routines of their jobs.

The CSLEA will pay teacher salaries and programming costs. Each secretary's company will be asked to co-sign the application blank and pay $150.00 for the secretary's room and board. Her firm also will pay her salary while at the institute, since the time spent there is not to be charged as vacation.

Local chapters of the NSA will receive full details of the program shortly. Since it is a pilot project, only certified CPS holders will be invited to file applications. Every effort will be made to choose a varied group of women. A few scholarships will be available for secretaries who work for employers not in a position to pay their expenses, such as government offices.

All those interested in the welfare and education of women in our time surely will follow this project with keen interest. It can conceivably mark the birth of a new pattern of liberal education for professional women in our time.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
JUL 21 1956

Motels Busy

Western Massachusetts resort areas must be doing a little better business than usual this year, if the reports of motels are an indication.

Greater Springfield motels report trade is slightly above last year and spokesmen said some of the visitors have asked directions to Western Massachusetts places, particularly in the Berkshires.

The Berkshire Music eFstival at Tanglewood in Lenox is a big attraction.

Some people, apparently on nonscheduled vacation tours, inquire about state parks, said motel spokesmen.

Business is continuing heavy and fairly steady all week long, motel men report. This is a welcome break to the motel operators who do much of their business on week ends and holidays during several months of the year.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 21 1956

Tanglewood Shed Opens

MARGARET HARSHAW, Met soprano, teams with tenor Albert da Costa and basso James Pease in concert version of first act of "Die Walkure" on all-Wagner program tonight in Berkshire Festival's first 1956 weekend of concerts in big Tanglewood shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 21 1956

Five Major Firms Submit Bids To Prepare Shadowbrook Site

Five major construction companies have submitted bids to grade and prepare the site for the new Jesuit novitiate at Shadowbrook in Lenox, it was revealed today.

B. Perini & Sons of Framingham, John Bowen of Boston, C. J. Maney of Lexington, and Daniel O'Connell & Sons of Holyoke, and the S. Addario Construction Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., have submitted bids to prepare the site for construction of a novitiate to replace the original Shadowbrook structure which was destroyed by fire March 10.

Bids for this phase of the work will close July 30, according to J. Gerald Phelan, architect in charge.

The nationwide drive for funds to rebuild the novitiate has reached the $2,045,000 mark in the three million dollar goal, according to Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman.

Ceremony at Tanglewood

Ground breaking for the new building will be held July 31 with ceremonies to be held at Tanglewood with the main address to be presented by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, S.J., Provincial, today lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire and disclosed that "again today our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs.

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

The Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of Springfield, will officiate at the actual groundbreaking on the site of the new novitiate. Memorial services for the four Jesuits who perished in the fire will be held at the cemetery adjacent to the ruins.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 20 1956

Guest Conductor

Pierre Monteux, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919-1924, is returning to the orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. for the fifth consecutive summer, to conduct two concerts in the Music Shed. On Sunday, July 22 at 2:30 p.m., Mr Monteux conducts an orchestral program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert. On Saturday, August 11 at 8:30 p.m., Mr Monteux leads a program of works by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

JUL 21 1956

6,000 Attend Tanglewood Program

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 20—The program said, "Afternoon of a Faun," but it might have read "To a Waterfowl," as an intermittent drizzle fell on the Berkshire Music Festival here tonight.

More than 6,000 persons turned out to welcome Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra as they opened the main concert series of the season in Ellie Saarinen's big music shed. Plastic raincoats and herchiefs comprised the haut couture. The elite sat in their customary boxes in simple cotton prints. Not a mink spenser among them, nor a tiara. Things have been slowly going down hill socially since the concerts left the Westinghouse estate.

There was simple but hearty fare for the troops tonight. It included Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony.

I don't know why Debussy and Ravel back to back; it is rather like two sides of the same oboe. But in any event, longhaired "Pops" generally sums the thing up.

From Bandbox Shining New

Familiar as all the works are, it is to Mr. Munch's continuing credit that he brought them all shining new out of the bandbox. Nothing routine about his readings, but verve and freshness for every piece. It was an evening full of brilliant pages. Not that there were any spectal departures from the accepted versions of these items. It was just that Mr. Munch returned them to their original gleam, and furnished them up at every turn, no effect missed, no detail given but with a point, and the whole score vibrating with intense musical life.

The performance by the 100 men and a girl of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was practically what the doctor ordered. Naturally, it being the first major concert of the season, they had to fall all over themselves in the initial Berlioz overture. It was packed with enthusiasm and done in high style, but most of the corners were taken on two wheels and the enthusiasm outdid the accuracy.

All this was redeemed in the Debussy "Prelude," however, which was impeccable in performance down to the last ping of the crotala. The same crystal-clear reading that Mr. Munch found for the Berlioz he also brought to the Debussy. Some people might like the whole effect a little more veiled. As a matter of fact, I would join their number. Atmosphere is the soul of this piece. Still, given Mr. Munch's more open statement of it, it was elegant temper, beautifully designed and handsomely performed.

Antiquity's Cruder View

"Daphnis and Chloe" is anybody's highjinks, a cruder view of antiquity than Debussy's, but a brilliant score and so it was delivered up tonight. Mr. Munch gave it a sumptuous opening, lifting the sun up over the horizon with grandeur, and he closed it with a general hoe-down of such puissance that it must have been heard in Hartford. Not since the late great Dr. Serge Koussevitzky vied one turbulent night with a thunderstorm while playing "Scheherazade," has there been such a wonderful din beating against the roof of the shed. The playing was distinguished, as it had been in the Debussy.

The Brahms that brought the concert to a close was typically after the manner of Munch. It was lucid in the French style rather than melded in the German. I do not think it reached quite the Olympian heights of Koussevitzky's Brahms, being more thoughtful than emotional, more contained than surging. But each to his taste. And the prolonged applause of the house indicated that both the reading and the playing was ninety nine and forty-four hundredths every bo[illegible] dish.

T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 21 1956

Boston Symphony Heard At Best Led By Munch

Last evening the full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was heard for the first time this season when it performed in the vast music shed at Tanglewood with its director, Charles Munch.

The audience welcomed Mr. Munch and the orchestra with prolonged applause which they acknowledged by standing quietly for a few minutes.

Then Mr. Munch turned, the players were seated, and off at an incredible tempo went the musicians, swift and flawless in the salterello of Berlioz' Roman Carnival Overture. Berlioz would have been well pleased with this performance and its pace since it is well known that he had difficulty finding the conductor who would give it the correct rollicking beat. The English horn solo was hauntingly beautiful and again the same theme in the bassoons against the salterello in the second violins, the whole tempered by Mr. Munch's good taste and the orchestra's impeccable musicianship.

Debussy's Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun brought sighs and a long hush at its close when Doriot Dwyer shared applause with Mr. Munch. The mood seemed a little heavy and too mortal, but it may have been the weather, the skies being heavy with unshed rain.

For a balmy moonlight evening the next number would have been quite correct, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe"; the aquatic beginning of "Daybreak" was a little too suggestive for the unwanted but imminent weather and one wished for the originally scheduled "Rhapsodie Espagnol", the effect was musically satisfying in every way, ending on a high note of jubilation from the full orchestra.

Brahms' second symphony in D major was the final offering; the allegro a little fidgety in starting but settling into the proper tempo; the adagio pleading and portentous, with its melodies and counter melodies weaving endlessly throughout; the minuet-like grace of the allegretto and its colorful treatment of the first theme and the final allegro, starting with strings sotto voce, such as only the Boston Symphony strings can evoke, gradually building to great heights for full orchestra, again a softer mood, much development, all so ingenious as Brahms ever was, and handled with superb skill by Mr. Munch; each change accentuated by his subtle and again marked directions.

This symphony, although not one of Brahms' massive works, is not the less appealing for that reason; it fitted well with the mood of the whole evening, one of pleasant relaxed enjoyment. The comparatively small audience, no doubt because of the threatening weather, was well rewarded for facing whatever the elements might bring.

Saturday's concert at 8:30 will include the Tanglewood premiere of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert daCosta and James Pease, directed by Mr. Munch. Sunday's concert will be Rossini, Bartok concerto for orchestra and the seldom heard Schubert seventh symphony, conducted by 81-year-old Pierre Monteux.—M. deP. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 21 1956

Engage Boxes for Boston Symphony Berkshire Series

Western Mass. Residents To Attend Concerts in Tanglewood Shed

Boxholders for the Shed series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, director, at Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, have been announced. Included are residents of this city, Chicopee, South Hadley, Blandford, and many other areas in Western Massachusetts.

Boxes have been taken by Eldon V. Johnson of Springfield, Samuel Black of West Springfield, Mrs. William F. Barrett of Great Barrington, Pres. James P. Baxter, 3d, of Williams College in Williamstown, Frederick W. Benecke of New York and Great Barrington, Alan Blau of Pittsfield, Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton, Mrs. Winthrop Crane, Jr., of Dalton and E. V. Dillon of Pittsfield.

A box has been engaged by the Industrial Building Corporation of Chicopee. Others in the box holder list are Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Gail Rector, and Miss Gertrude R. Smith, all of New York and Stockbridge; David R. Shoales of Blandford, John L. Senior of New York and Lenox, Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of New Orleans, La., and Lenox, Dr. Walter VonHorst of Rego Park, N. Y., and Housatonic, Robert [illegible] Wheeler of Great Barrington, Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky of Lenox, Robert B. Anderson of Housatonic, Carson Feinstein of South Hadley, C. H. Moore of Stafford Springs, Conn., and Mrs. William Whittlesey of Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506

JUL 22 1956

Programs Slated This Week At Tanglewood

Visitors to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this week will be privileged to hear first performances there of contemporary works by Goffredo Petrassi and Howard Hanson. The Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 by the Italian composer, now in residence at Tanglewood in a teaching capacity, is to be featured in Friday evening's concert while the American composer's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" will be included in Saturday evening's Shed concert. Both of these programs are to be conducted by Charles Munch, director of the Boston Orchestra and of the Berkshire Festival itself.

Friday's program will also include Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 2 and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The balance of Saturday's concert has scheduled Schumann's A minor Piano Concerto, Honegger's Symphony No. 5, and Debussy's "La Mer." The eminent pianist, Rudolph Serkin, is to be the soloist in the Schumann performance.

Next Sunday's concert, to be conducted by the concertmaster of the Boston Orchestra, Richard Burgin, will have violinist Ruth Posselt as the guest artist. She will be heard in Hindemith's Violin Concerto while the orchestra will offer Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite, No. 2 and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major. Incidentally, Miss Posselt in private life is Mrs. Richard Burgin. An accomplished artist, she is a favorite with Boston audiences, having performed many times with the Boston Orchestra in Symphony Hall.

Two chamber music events this week at the Festival are also of interest. The first of these tomorrow evening is the second of two programs donated this season by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. The program of works by modern composers will be performed by principals of the Boston Orchestra with Marjorie McClung, soprano, and Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichordist, as the guest artists. The regular chamber music concert on Wednesday evening will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio—Daniel Guilet, violin, Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano. Trios by Mendelssohn, Brahms and Ravel, are listed for performance. Both of these chamber music events are to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Utica Daily Press
7/4/56

Annual Berkshire Festival Opens in Bay State Today

The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, music director, will open today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The symphony, choral and chamber music concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to Aug. 12, on the spacious estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales," a century ago.

The Kroll String Quartet will open the concert season tonight with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Friday evening Benny Goodman will make his Tanglewood debut as soloist on the orchestra program, and Saturday the Yale Glee Club will assist the orchestra in two Mozart works.

The concerts through July 15 will be given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

For the four final weekends of the festival, July 20 to Aug. 12, the orchestra moves to the 6,000-seat Music Shed for 12 concerts. The Shed is open on three sides so the overflow crowds may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns.

This year's concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs. Concert versions of "Die Walkure," Act I, and the opening and final scenes of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars and other soloists, and the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The Shed series also will feature Tanglewood first performances commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary year. They will be symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston.

These symphonies will be taken by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after the close of the Tanglewood season. The orchestra will make a five-week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival, and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Inquirer and Mirror
NANTUCKET, Mass.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,275

JUL 21 1956

Candlelight Recitals At the Galleries.

Miss Emilia Cundari presented a delightful program at the Kenneth Taylor Galleries on Wednesday evening, consisting of a Mozart group, a group of Lieder, two songs and an aria by Debussy, and four interesting and lovely songs in English.

Throughout the evening she displayed a singularly beautiful tone, especially in the middle register, finished musicianship, great charm, and a real feeling for the text.

The Mozart group, Debussy's "Il Pleut dans Mon Coeur", and the "Jewel Song" from "Faust" were undoubtedly outstanding. Miss Cundari's choice of the "Jewel Song" as her encore was particularly appreciated by her large and enchanted audience.

Miss Cundari has made great strides during the past year as a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and sings with authority and distinction.

Royal Hinman, who is always so welcome in Nantucket, played the accompaniments as usual beautifully.

* * * * *

Leonard Hungerford, Australian pianist, will be the recitalist at the next Candlelight evening on Wednesday, July 25. He will present a program of works by Bach, Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin.

Mr. Hungerford, who was one of Carl Friedberg's most distinguished students, has toured extensively and has everywhere received enthusiastic critical acclaim. His Town Hall recitals were recognized as events of major importance in the musical world.

* * * * *

John McCollum, tenor, who will be the guests artist at the Candlelight evening on Wednesday, August 29, has just sung the tenor solos in Bach's "St. John Passion" at Tanglewood under director Charles Munch. On August 4, Mr. McCollum will again appear at Tanglewood, singing in Mozart's "Mass in C Minor".

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

JUL 22 1956

Petrassi Work Set At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 21—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of Summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday.

Charles Munch, music director of the symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this Summer at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood.

[27]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

JUL 21 1956

6,000 Attend Tanglewood Program

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 20—The program said, "Afternoon of a Faun," but it might have read "To a Waterfowl," as an intermittent drizzle fell on the Berkshire Music Festival here tonight.

More than 6,000 persons turned out to welcome Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra as they opened the main concert series of the season in Elie Saarinen's big music shed. Plastic raincoats and herchiefs comprised the haut couture. The elite sat in their customary boxes in simple cotton prints. Not a mink spenser among them, nor a tiara. Things have been slowly going down hill socially since the concerts left the Westinghouse estate.

There was simple but hearty fare for the troops tonight. It included Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony. I don't know why Debussy and Ravel back to back; it is rather two sides of the same oboe. But in any event, longhaired "Pops" generally sums the thing up.

From Bandbox Shining New

Familiar as all the works are, it is to Mr. Munch's continuing credit that he brought them all shining new out of the bandbox. Nothing routine about his readings, but verve and freshness for every piece. It was an evening full of brilliant pages. Not that there were any special departures from the accepted versions of these items. It was just that Mr. Munch returned them to their original gleam, and furnished them up at every turn, no effect missed, no detail given but with a point, and the whole score vibrating with intense musical life.

The performance by the 100 men and a girl of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was practically what the doctor ordered. Naturally, it being the first major concert of the season, they had to fall all over themselves in the initial Berlioz overture. It was packed with enthusiasm and done in high style, but most of the corners were taken on two wheels and the enthusiasm outdid the accuracy.

All this was redeemed in the Debussy "Prelude," however, which was impeccable in performance down to the last ping of the crotala. The same crystal-clear reading that Mr. Munch found for the Berlioz he also brought to the Debussy. Some people might like the whole effect a little more veiled. As a matter of fact, I would join their number. Atmosphere is the soul of this piece. Still, given Mr. Munch's more open statement of it, it was elegant in temper, beautifully designed and handsomely performed.

Antiquity's Cruder View

"Daphnis and Chloe" is anybody's highjinks, a cruder view of antiquity than Debussy's, but a brilliant score and so it was delivered up tonight. Mr. Munch gave it a sumptuous opening lifting the sun up over the horizon with grandeur, and he closed it with a general hoe-down of such puissance that it must have been heard in Hartford. Not since the late great Dr. Serge Koussevitzky vied one turbulent night with a thunderstorm while playing "Scheherazade," has there been such a wonderful din beating against the roof of the shed. The playing was distinguished, as it had been in the Debussy.

The Brahms that brought the concert to a close was typically after the manner of Munch. It was lucid in the French style rather than melded in the German. I do not think it reached quite the Olympian heights of Koussevitzky's Brahms, being more thoughtful than emotional, more contained than surging. But each to his taste. And the prolonged applause of the house indicated that both the reading and the playing was ninety nine and forty-four hundredths every body's dish.

T. H. P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 21 1956

Boston Symphony Heard At Best Led By Munch

Last evening the full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was heard for the first time this season when it performed in the vast music shed at Tanglewood with its director, Charles Munch.

The audience welcomed Mr. Munch and the orchestra with prolonged applause which they acknowledged by standing quietly for a few minutes.

Then Mr. Munch turned, the players were seated, and off at an incredible tempo went the musicians, swift and flawless in the salterello of Berlioz' Roman Carnival Overture. Berlioz would have been well pleased with this performance and its pace since it is well known that he had difficulty finding the conductor who would give it the correct rollicking beat. The English horn solo was hauntingly beautiful and again the same theme in the bassoons against the salterello in the second violins, the whole tempered by Mr. Munch's good taste and the orchestra's impeccable musicianship.

Debussy's Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun brought sighs and a long hush at its close when Doriot Dwyer shared applause with Mr. Munch. The mood seemed a little heavy and too mortal, but it may have been the weather, the skies being heavy with unshed rain.

For a balmy moonlight evening the next number would have been quite correct, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe"; the aquatic beginning of "Daybreak" was a little too suggestive for the unwanted but imminent weather and one wished for the originally scheduled "Rhapsodie Espagnol"; the effect was musically satisfying in every way, ending on a high note of jubilation from the full orchestra.

Brahms' second symphony in D major was the final offering; the allegro a little fidgety in starting but settling into the proper tempo; the adagio pleading and portentous, with its melodies and counter melodies weaving endlessly throughout; the minuet-like grace of the allegretto and its colorful treatment of the first theme and the final allegro, starting with strings sotto voce, such as only the Boston Symphony strings can evoke, gradually building to great heights for full orchestra, again a softer mood, much development, all so ingenious as Brahms ever was, and handled with superb skill by Mr. Munch; each change accentuated by his subtle and again marked directions.

This symphony, although not one of Brahms' massive works, is not the less appealing for that reason; it fitted well with the mood of the whole evening, one of pleasant relaxed enjoyment. The comparatively small audience, no doubt because of the threatening weather, was well rewarded for facing whatever the elements might bring.

Saturday's concert at 8:30 will include the Tanglewood premiere of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert daCosta and James Pease, directed by Mr. Munch. Sunday's concert will be Rossini, Bartok concerto for orchestra and the seldom heard Schubert seventh symphony, conducted by 81-year-old Pierre Monteux.—M. deB. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 21 1956

Engage Boxes for Boston Symphony Berkshire Series

Western Mass. Residents To Attend Concerts in Tanglewood Shed

Boxholders for the Shed series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, director, at Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, have been announced. Included are residents of this city, Chicopee, South Hadley, Blandford, and many other areas in Western Massachusetts.

Boxes have been taken by Eldon V. Johnson of Springfield, Samuel Black of West Springfield, Mrs. William F. Barrett of Great Barrington, Pres. James P. Baxter, 3d, of Williams College in Williamstown, Frederick W. Benecke of New York and Great Barrington, Alan Blau of Pittsfield, Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton, Mrs. Winthrop Crane, Jr., of Dalton and E. V. Dillon of Pittsfield.

A box has been engaged by the Industrial Building Corporation of Chicopee. Others in the box holder list are Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Gail Rector, and Miss Gertrude R. Smith, all of New York and Stockbridge; David R. Shoales of Blandford, John L. Senior of New York and Lenox, Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of New Orleans, La., and Lenox, Dr. Walter VonHorst of Rego Park, N. Y., and Housatonic, Robert E. K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky of Lenox, Robert B. Anderson of Housatonic, Carson Feinstein of South Hadley, C. H. Moore of Stafford Springs, Conn., and Mrs. William Whittlesey of Pittsfield.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506

JUL 22 1956

Programs Slated This Week At Tanglewood

Visitors to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this week will be privileged to hear first performances there of contemporary works by Goffredo Petrassi and Howard Hanson. The Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 by the Italian composer, now in residence at Tanglewood in a teaching capacity, is to be featured in Friday evening's concert while the American composer's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" will be included in Saturday evening's Shed concert. Both of these programs are to be conducted by Charles Munch, director of the Boston Orchestra and of the Berkshire Festival itself.

Friday's program will also include Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 2 and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The balance of Saturday's concert has scheduled Schumann's A minor Piano Concerto, Honegger's Symphony No. 5, and Debussy's "La Mer." The eminent pianist, Rudolph Serkin, is to be the soloist in the Schumann performance.

Next Sunday's concert, to be conducted by the concertmaster of the Boston Orchestra, Richard Burgin, will have violinist Ruth Posselt as the guest artist. She will be heard in Hindemith's Violin Concerto while the orchestra will offer Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite, No. 2 and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major. Incidentally, Miss Posselt in private life is Mrs. Richard Burgin. An accomplished artist, she is a favorite with Boston audiences, having performed many times with the Boston Orchestra in Symphony Hall.

Two chamber music events this week at the Festival are also of interest. The first of these tomorrow evening is the second of two programs donated this season by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. The program of works by modern composers will be performed by principals of the Boston Orchestra with Marjorie McClung, soprano, and Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichordist, as the guest artists. The regular chamber music concert on Wednesday evening will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio—Daniel Guilet, violin, Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano. Trios by Mendelssohn, Brahms, and Ravel, are listed for performance. Both of these chamber music events are to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Annual Berkshire Festival Opens in Bay State Today

7/4/56 Utica Daily Press

The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, music director, will open today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The symphony, choral and chamber music concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to Aug. 12, on the spacious estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales," a century ago.

The Kroll String Quartet will open the concert season tonight with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Friday evening Benny Goodman will make his Tanglewood debut as soloist on the orchestra program, and Saturday the Yale Glee Club will assist the orchestra in two Mozart works.

The concerts through July 15 will be given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

For the four final weekends of the festival, July 20 to Aug. 12, the orchestra moves to the 6,000-seat Music Shed for 12 concerts. The Shed is open on three sides so the overflow crowds may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns.

This year's concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs. Concert versions of "Die Walkure," Act I, and the opening and final scenes of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars and other soloists, and the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The Shed series also will feature Tangiewood first performances commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary year. They will be symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston.

These symphonies will be taken by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after the close of the Tanglewood season. The orchestra will make a five-week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival, and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Inquirer and Mirror
NANTUCKET, Mass.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,275

JUL 21 1956

Candlelight Recitals At the Galleries.

Miss Emilia Cundari presented a delightful program at the Kenneth Taylor Galleries on Wednesday evening, consisting of a Mozart group, a group of Lieder, two songs and an aria by Debussy, and four interesting and lovely songs in English.

Throughout the evening she displayed a singularly beautiful tone, especially in the middle register, finished musicianship, great charm, and a real feeling for the text.

The Mozart group, Debussy's "Il Pleut dans Mon Coeur", and the "Jewel Song" from "Faust" were undoubtedly outstanding. Miss Cundari's choice of the "Jewel Song" as her encore was particularly appreciated by her large and enchanted audience.

Miss Cundari has made great strides during the past year as a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and sings with authority and distinction.

Royal Hinman, who is always so welcome in Nantucket, played the accompaniments as usual beautifully.

* * * * *

Leonard Hungerford, Australian pianist, will be the recitalist at the next Candlelight evening on Wednesday, July 25. He will present a program of works by Bach, Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin.

Mr. Hungerford, who was one of Carl Friedberg's most distinguished students, has toured extensively and has everywhere received enthusiastic critical acclaim. His Town Hall recitals were recognized as events of major importance in the musical world.

* * * * *

John McCollum, tenor, who will be the guests artist at the Candlelight evening on Wednesday, August 29, has just sung the tenor solos in Bach's "St. John Passion" at Tanglewood under director Charles Munch. On August 4, Mr. McCollum will again appear at Tanglewood, singing in Mozart's "Mass in C Minor".

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

JUL 22 1956

Petrassi Work Set At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 21—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of Summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday.

Charles Munch, music director of the symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this Summer at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood.

[127]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 21

Warm Welcome Greets Munch At Tanglewood

Special to the Hartford Times
By EVANS CLINCHY

Lenox, Mass.—The Berkshire Music Festival, moving into its third week, moved also into the mammoth Music Shed last night for the first of its full orchestral concerts here at Tanglewood.

More than 6,000 people—not a large crowd by shed standards, but then it looked like rain — were on hand to give Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony a rousing hand to inaugurate the new series. The audience kept on applauding, too, throughout the program, although musically speaking there was not a great deal to applaud about.

Mr. Munch, following his normal predilections, programmed three French works and the Brahms Second. Perhaps he plays so much French music because he plays it so well, but the first half of a program made up of Berlioz' Roman Carnival Overture, Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" and Ravel's second suite from "Daphnis and Chloe" was too much of a good thing.

* * *

THE BEST PARTS of this trio were the Berlioz and the Ravel. Mr. Munch brought out all of the overture's brazen, musculine charm, driving it along at a brisk pace. The Ravel was given a thunderous, rattling performance designed to leave even the most hardened concert-goer just a little bit limp. The flutes and the brass had quite a whirl on this one.

The Brahms was of a different order, however. Here Mr. Munch served up an almost deliberate reading. Only on the final coda did rattle any teeth.

It was not really a tepid performance of this haunting symphony, but it did not have the tension and the passion that the music calls for. Nor were the orchestra's horns in their finest fettle last night, and the horns are rather vital in this music.

For some reason unfathomable to me, the orchestra played the French pieces in virtuoso style but not the Brahms. The strings were strong and rich in tone in the Debussy, for instance, and the entire ensemble played very much as a single unit.

* * *

THIS WAS not true of the symphony. Here everyone had a tendency to go his own way, and perhaps this was part of the cause of the slightly ponderous cast that lay over the performance.

So far during this Tanglewood season, the Boston Symphony has been having its artistic ups and downs. Perhaps the men are getting wearied by a full Winter season quickly followed by a busy Summer. Whatever the cause, their playing needs some tightening up if the Boston's vaunted reputation is going to be maintained.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUL 21 1956

NORFOLK

Faculty Trio Plays Difficult and Rewarding Concert at Music School—Other Notes

Norfolk, July 21—The latest concert at the Norfolk Music school was characterized by uniformly expert and imaginative playing throughout the program by Bruce Simonds, pianist; Luigi Silva, violoncellist, and Keith Wilson, clarinetist. They are faculty members of the Norfolk Music school of Yale university. The list of works they chose for the recital was a rather formidable one, in the technical and interpretive problems it presented to the musicians.

Clyde Duncan's "Sonatina" for clarinet and piano, in three movements, was the first piece. Mr. Duncan is an American composer, clarinetist and teacher; his sonatina is a prize winning one. Its pretentions are small, its idiom chromatic and the form skillfully developed. Although the slow movement is sombre, the piece as a whole is light and engaging. The material offered was shown off to the best possible advantage by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Simonds, in their handling of the complex rhythms, their subtle nuances of color and by freshness of style.

Goffredo Petrassi, a Roman born and trained musician, has composed choral, orchestral and chamber works, and is this summer at Tanglewood. Luigi Silva and Bruce Simonds played his "Prelude, Aria and Finale" for violoncello and piano. This work also employs chromatic means, but is much more serious and broad in scope than the first offering on the program. The three parts are widely contrasted, the prelude being intellectually conceived, the aria having emotionally expressive long lines of melody, while the last part sets a mood of forcefulness and strong colors. Here again the artists revealed the composer's mesage with unusual insight and prowess, the high level of interpretation presenting the music to its best advantage. Mr. Silva handled a variety of bravura effects with deftness, and should be commended for the beauty of his tone and phrasing, especially in the aria, and in the cadenza-like passage of the prelude.

Brahms' superb "Trio, Opus 114," for clarinet, violoncello and piano, balanced the program by concluding on familiar ground. The ensemble playing had a smooth "give and take," each instrumentalist contributed to the lyric richness of the combined tone. There was authority in the interpretation of each movement; the introspection of the adagio, the grace of the andantino, and the warmth of the whole. One left the concert hall with the feeling of something having been added to one's musical understanding.

ELISE BECKET

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 24 1956

FOURTH WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Concerts Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday

Lenox, July 23—The fourth week of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood opens with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio Wednesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall. This will be followed by concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon.

Rudolf Serkin, celebrated concert pianist, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor with the orchestra Saturday night. Concerts are at 8.30 p. m. Fridays and Saturdays and at 2.30 p. m. Sundays.

The programs:

Wednesday, July 25
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms
The Beaux Arts Trio
(Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano)

Friday, July 27
Overture, "Leonore," No. 2 Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 Petrassi
Symphony No. 5, in F minor ..... Tchaikovsky
Charles Munch, Conductor

Saturday, July 28
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor Schumann
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
"La Mer" ..... Debussy
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 29
"Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Soloist: Ruth Posselt
Symphony No. 1, in D major Mahler
Richard Burgin, Conductor

Seats for all remaining concerts in this summer's Berkshire Festival, are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted, Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 21 1956

The Summer Trade

AT TANGLEWOOD, still dogged by poor weather that was keeping attendance figures slightly below last year's record highs, the spotlight shifted to the Music Shed, where an audience of 6,203 attended the first of 12 major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra . . . An estimated 7,000 persons lined the shores of Lake Onota to watch a flotilla of motorized craft compete in the second annual regatta of the Pittsfield Boating Club . . . In Stockbridge, the venerable Red Lion Inn was placed under a temporary trusteeship to satisfy creditors, whose claims were quoted as running to approximately $205,000. The inn will remain open, however . . . With more than 300 riders competing for some $7,000 in prizes before a final-day crowd of 3,000, the annual Great Barrington Horse Show on the town's fair grounds was rated the most successful (and profitable) to date.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826

JUL 22 1956

6,000 Attend Tanglewood Program

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 20—The program said, "Afternoon of a Faun," but it might have read "To a Waterfowl," as an intermittent drizzle fell on the Berkshire Music Festival here tonight.

More than 6,000 persons turned out to welcome Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra as they opened the main concert series of the season in Elie Saarinen's big music shed. Plastic raincoats and herchiefs comprised the haut couture. The elite sat in their customary boxes in simple cotton prints. Not a mink spenser among them, nor a tiara. Things have been slowly going down hill socially since the concerts left the Westinghouse estate.

There was simple but hearty fare for the troops tonight. It included Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony. I don't know why Debussy and Ravel back to back; it is rather two sides of the same oboe. But in any event, longhaired "Pops" generally sums the thing up.

From Bandbox Shining New

Familiar as all the works are, it is to Mr. Munch's continuing credit that he brought them all shining new out of the bandbox. Nothing routine about his readings, but verve and freshness for every piece. It was an evening full of brilliant pages. Not that there were any special departures from the accepted versions of these items. It was just that Mr. Munch returned them to their original gleam, and furnished them up at every turn, no effect missed, no detail given but with a point, and the whole score vibrating with intense musical life.

The performance by the 100 men and a girl of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was practically what the doctor ordered. Naturally, it being the first major concert of the season, they had to fall all over themselves in the initial Berlioz overture. It was packed with enthusiasm and done in high style, but most of the corners were taken on two wheels and the enthusiasm outdid the accuracy.

All this was redeemed in the Debussy "Prelude," however, which was impeccable in performance down to the last ping of the crotala. The same crystal-clear reading that Mr. Munch found for the Berlioz he also brought to the Debussy. Some people might like the whole effect a little more veiled. As a matter of fact, I would join their number. Atmosphere is the soul of this piece. Still, given Mr. Munch's more open statement of it, it was elegant in temper, beautifully designed and handsomely performed.

Antiquity's Cruder View

"Daphnis and Chloe" is anybody's highjinks, a cruder view of antiquity than Debussy's, but a brilliant score and so it was delivered up tonight. Mr. Munch gave it a sumptuous opening, lifting the sun up over the horizon with grandeur, and he closed it with a general hoe-down of such puissance that it must have been heard in Hartford. Not since the late great Dr. Serge Koussevitzky vied one turbulent night with a thunderstorm while playing "Scheherazade," has there been such a wonderful din beating against the roof of the shed. The playing was distinguished, as it had been in the Debussy.

The Brahms that brought the concert to a close was typically after the manner of Munch. It was lucid in the French style rather than melded in the German. I do not think it reaches quite the Olympian heights of Koussevitzky's Brahms, being more thoughtful than emotional, more contained than surging. But each to his taste. And the prolonged applause of the house indicated that both the reading and the playing was ninety nine and forty-four hundredths every body's dish.

T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506

JUL 22 1956

Berkshire Center Plans Premiere Of Opera 'Griffelkin'

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this summer. The opera, which will be performed on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the Composition Department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of this summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

The opera, in three acts, is the composer's largest stage work to date. It is based on a little-known German folk tale which the composer first heard from his mother at the age of seven and promptly set as an opera at the age of eight. Twenty-three years later Foss again turned to the same story, writing a synopsis and asking the British poet, Alastair Reid, teacher of English literature at Sarah Lawrence College in New York, to write a rhymed libretto. The composer writes that there "followed a correspondence of some 50 letters and various drafts of the libretto. Reid was a wonderful collaborator—we did not have a single argument (until we met a year later!) we are now contemplating more work together."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 23 1956

34 From U.N. Entertained On Weekend

Many community groups and individuals combined efforts this weekend to entertain 34 United Nations visitors in their seventh annual visit sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding.

Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon were the focal events of the weekend and the 20 local hosts for the visitors from 19 different countries supplied sightseeing and entertainment on the informal level.

The Castle at Pontoosuc Lake held an open house for the visitors and their hosts both before and after the Saturday evening concert. This is a traditional annual party that the Castle sponsors. James De Weese, president of the Castle, reported that about 60 people attended the Saturday evening party.

Group Serves Lunch

At 1 yesterday afternoon a buffet lunch was served in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood. Members of the U.N. secretariat, their hosts, and many of the foreign students who are studying at Tanglewood this summer attended. They were served by the Merry-Mates of the First Baptist Church headed by Mrs. Raymond Warner. As a result of the luncheon, some local people expressed the desire to entertain some of the foreign students at their homes throughout the summer.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra again provided tickets for Shed seats for the entire group.

Mrs. R. S. Schoonmaker was chairman of the hosts' committee, with Mrs. F. M. Myers in charge of the U.N. arrangements. K. K. Paluev is chairman of the Workshop for World Understanding which sponsored the weekend. Miss Peggy Parsons, volunteer services representative, was in charge of the affair at the U.N. end.

[128]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 22,452
JUL 24 1956

...ial wedding is planned.

20,000 Attend Opening At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., July 22—The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood brought more than 20,000 music lovers for three concerts conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

More than 6,200 were in the opening audience Friday evening when Charles Munch raised his baton to start the four-week season of concerts in the big music shed. The performance of the Brahms "Symphony No. 2, in D major" was so fine that one was assured of another memorable season of excellent performances which the large week-end audiences here have come to accept as normal.

Despite the heavy rain of Saturday which kept away many who normally are seated on the spacious lawns, there was a large audience for the performance of Wagner's "Die Walkure," Act I, which featured the soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass. The first part of the program presented Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques", composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was a rapt audience which listened to the excellent performance of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" at the opening concert. There was color and fire in the performance of Ravel's ballet music from his "Daphnis et Chloe." Throughout the evening the string section of the Boston gave an inspired performance. Mr. Munch conducted with such ease of manner and the orchestra responded with such splendor that it was difficult to realize what rehearsal had gone on behind the scenes in the days preceding.

The Sunday afternoon performance brought a large audience to the grounds as well as the shed to hear the 81-year-old Pierre Monteux conduct the program of Rossini, Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and Schubert's "Symphony in C Major."

Concerts this week will bring the music of Beethoven, Tschaikovsky, and Petrassi Friday evening; Rudolph Serkin as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" Saturday evening, and Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto" Sunday afternoon with her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister, conducting that concert.

The Sunday afternoon program will include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Symphony No. 1, in D Major."

S.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 23 1956

12,749 at Music Festival; Monteux at 81 on Podium

Rain on Saturday marred the first week-end of shed concerts of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, and total attendance at the programs Saturday night and yesterday afternoon was only 12,749.

Saturday Concert

The Saturday evening concert was highlighted by a concert version of the first act of Wagner's opera, "Die Walkure." Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease were the vocal soloists, and the Boston Symphony orchestra was under the direction of Charles Munch. Also heard were Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques."

Yesterday afternoon, with the weather improved and the attendance enlarged to almost 7,000 persons, 81-year-old Pierre Monteux was on the podium, making the first of two guest appearances of the current festival. Works heard were the Overture to "L'Italiani in Algeri," by Rossini; the Concerto for Orchestra, by Bartok, and the Symphony No. 7 in C Major, by Schubert.

The festival now moves into the fourth of its six-week schedule.

Concert Wednesday

The first of the week's concerts will be on Wednesday evening in the theater-concert hall, when the Beaux Arts Trio will give another in the series of weekly chamber music programs. Scheduled are the Trio in D minor by Mendelssohn, the Trio in A minor by Ravel and the Trio in C minor, by Brahms.

Mr. Munch is to conduct two of the week-end shed concerts, on Friday and Saturday evenings. The orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munich's Friday program comprises orchestra music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and the Tnglewood p remiere of a work by Go%re do Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is a guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school.

Next Saturday

The Saturday evening festival concert will be composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony and the Koussevitzky Music foundation for the current 75th anniversary of the orchestra. They were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolph Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor on Saturday.

Sunday Afternoon

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert will consist of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Richard Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 24 1956

James Abresch

The Beaux Arts Trio—Daniel Guiletz, violin; Menahem Pressler, piano, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello—will give a concert at Tanglewood Wednesday evening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 23 1956

1956 Tanglewood on Parade Program Scheduled Aug. 9th

The program details were announced today for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the giant Music shed at Tanglewood Thursday night, Aug. 9.

Climaxes Celebration

The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in Rimsky - Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao:" Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After Intermission

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Saroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works of the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected—and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 in the Formal Gardens and Barn by the students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music center, on the lawn outside the great Music shed and at 6 p. m. simultaneous performances in the shed, theater and chamber music hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments.

Picnic Suppers

At 7, while concert-goers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main house. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 and at its conclusion at approximately 10:30 there will be waltzing on the lawn.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office.

Beaux Arts Trio to Give Concert at Tanglewood

The Beaux Arts Trio will present a chamber music program tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as the opening event in the fourth week of the Berkshire Festival Concerts.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony in the Shed and Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, will direct the program Sunday afternoon.

Two works, commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, will be presented this weekend.

The commissioned workers are the Goffredo Petrassi "Concerto for Orchestra, number 5," to be presented Friday evening; and the Howard Hanson "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" which will be given Saturday evening.

* * *

RUDOLF SERKIN, whose appearance at Tanglewood last year attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" on Saturday evening.

Members of the Beaux Arts Trio are Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano. Their program tonight will include the Mendelssohn "Trio in D minor"; Ravel, "Trio in A minor"; and Brahms, "Trio in C minor."

The Friday evening program of the Boston Symphony will include the Beethoven, "Overture, 'Leonore,' number 3"; the Petrassi concerto; and the Tchaikovsky, "Symphony number 4, in F minor."

THE SATURDAY evening program will open with the Hanson Elegy; followed by Serkin and the orchestra in the Schumann concerto. The last part of the program will include the Honegger, "Symphony number 5," and the Debussy, "La Mer."

The Sunday afternoon program will feature Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Burgin, as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto." Other numbers programmed are the Prokofieff "Romeo and Juliet suite number 2" and the Mahler "Symphony number 1 in D major."

Evening programs at Tanglewood start at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704
JUL 22 1956

American Works To Be Played

At two of the five concerts which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present at the Edinburgh International Festival next month, Charles Munch will conduct the first European performances of works by two American composers.

They are Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, which was written for the orchestra's 75th anniversary and played in Providence last season, and Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. The Piston symphony is on the opening program, Aug. 26; the Copland ode is scheduled for Aug. 28.

American-born violinist Isaac Stern will be soloist at the latter concert, in Beethoven's Concerto in D Major. Pierre Monteux will conduct two of the five programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 22,452
JUL 24 1956

A fall wedding is planned.

20,000 Attend Opening At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., July 22—The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood brought more than 20,000 music lovers for three concerts conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

More than 6,200 were in the opening audience Friday evening when Charles Munch raised his baton to start the four-week season of concerts in the big music shed. The performance of the Brahms "Symphony No. 2, in D major" was so fine that one was assured of another memorable season of excellent performances which the large week-end audiences here have come to accept as normal.

Despite the heavy rain of Saturday which kept away many who normally are seated on the spacious lawns, there was a large audience for the performance of Wagner's "Die Walkure," Act I, which featured the soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass. The first part of the program presented Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques", composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was a rapt audience which listened to the excellent performance of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" at the opening concert. There was color and fire in the performance of Ravel's ballet music from his "Daphnis et Chloe." Throughout the evening the string section of the Boston gave an inspired performance. Mr. Munch conducted with such ease of manner and the orchestra responded with such splendor that it was difficult to realize what rehearsal had gone on behind the scenes in the days preceding.

The Sunday afternoon performance brought a large audience to the grounds as well as the shed to hear the 81-year-old Pierre Monteux conduct the program of Rossini, Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and Schubert's "Symphony in C Major."

Concerts this week will bring the music of Beethoven, Tschaikovsky, and Petrassi Friday evening; Rudolph Serkin as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" Saturday evening, and Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto" Sunday afternoon with her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister, conducting that concert.

The Sunday afternoon program will include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Symphony No. 1, in D Major."

S.M.

Beaux Arts Trio to Give Concert at Tanglewood

The Beaux Arts Trio will present a chamber music program tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as the opening event in the fourth week of the Berkshire Festival Concerts.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony in the Shed and Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, will direct the program Sunday afternoon.

Two works, commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, will be presented this weekend.

The commissioned workers are the Goffredo Petrassi "Concerto for Orchestra, number 5," to be presented Friday evening: and the Howard Sanson "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevizky" which will be given Saturday evening.

* * *

RUDOLF SERKIN, whose appearance at Tanglewood last year attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" on Saturday evening.

Members of the Beaux Arts Trio are Daniel Guilet, violin; Berriard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano. Their program tonight will include the Mendelssohn "Trio in D minor"; Ravel, "Trio in A minor"; and Brahms, "Trio in C minor."

The Friday evening program of the Boston Symphony will include the Beethoven, "Overture, 'Leonore,' number 2"; the Petrassi concerto; and the Tchaikovsky, "Symphony number 4, in F minor."

THE SATURDAY evening program will open with the Hanson Elegy; followed by Serkin and the orchestra in the Schumann concerto. The last part of the program will include the Honegger, "Symphony number 5," and the Debussy, "La Mer."

The Sunday afternoon program will feature Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Burgin, as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto." Other numbers programmed are the Prokofieff "Romeo and Juliet suite number 2" and the Mahler "Symphony number 1 in D major."

Evening programs at Tanglewood start at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 23 1956

12,749 at Music Festival; Monteux at 81 on Podium

Rain on Saturday marred the first week-end of shed concerts of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, and total attendance at the programs Saturday night and yesterday afternoon was only 12,749.

Saturday Concert

The Saturday evening concert was highlighted by a concert version of the first act of Wagner's opera, "Die Walkure." Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease were the vocal soloists, and the Boston Symphony orchestra was under the direction of Charles Munch. Also heard were Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques."

Yesterday afternoon, with the weather improved and the attendance enlarged to almost 7,000 persons, 81-year-old Pierre Monteux was on the podium, making the first of two guest appearances of the current festival. Works heard were the Overture to "L'Italiani in Algeri," by Rossini; the Concerto for Orchestra, by Bartok, and the Symphony No. 7 in C Major, by Schubert.

The festival now moves into the fourth of its six-week schedule.

Concert Wednesday

The first of the week's concerts will be on Wednesday evening in the theater-concert hall, when the Beaux Arts Trio will give another in the series of weekly chamber music programs. Scheduled are the Trio in D minor by Mendelssohn, the Trio in A minor by Ravel and the Trio in C minor, by Brahms.

Mr. Munch is to conduct two of the week-end shed concerts, on Friday and Saturday evenings. The orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munich's Friday program comprises orchestra music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and the Tnglewood p remiere of a work by Go%re do Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is a guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school.

Next Saturday

The Saturday evening festival concert will be composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony and the Koussevitzky Music foundation for the current 75th anniversary of the orchestra. They were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolph Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor on Saturday.

Sunday Afternoon

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert will consist of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Richard Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704
JUL 22 1956

American Works To Be Played

At two of the five concerts which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present at the Edinburgh International Festival next month, Charles Munch will conduct the first European performances of works by two American composers.

They are Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, which was written for the orchestra's 75th anniversary and played in Providence last season, and Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. The Piston symphony is on the opening program, Aug. 26; the Copland ode is scheduled for Aug. 28.

American-born violinist Isaac Stern will be soloist at the latter concert, in Beethoven's Concerto in D Major. Pierre Monteux will conduct two of the five programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 24 1956

James Abresch

The Beaux Arts Trio—Daniel Guiletz, violin; Menahem Pressler, piano, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello—will give a concert at Tanglewood Wednesday evening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 23 1956

1956 Tanglewood on Parade Program Scheduled Aug. 9th

The program details were announced today for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the giant Music shed at Tanglewood Thursday night, Aug. 9.

Climaxes Celebration

The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in Rimsky – Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao:" Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After Intermission

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Saroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works of the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected—and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 in the Formal Gardens and Barn by the students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music center, on the lawn outside the great Music shed and at 6 p. m. simultaneous performances in the shed, theater and chamber music hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments.

Picnic Suppers

At 7 [illegible] their picnic suppers on the lawn the Tanglewood [illegible] under the direction of [illegible] Ross, Arts present an [illegible] on the porch of the [illegible] concert by the [illegible] Symphony orchestra will [illegible] promptly at 8:15 and at [illegible] admission at approximately [illegible] there will be waltzing on the [illegible]

Tickets to [illegible] rade are now [illegible] box office.

[129]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 23 1956

...ean started in Atlantic

Tanglewood in Review — Pierre Monteux, Boston Symphony in Sunday Program

By TERE PASCONE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Pierre Monteux, venerable conductor, gave a performance yesterday at Tanglewood belying the many birthdays he has had.

The 81-year-old stocky little Frenchman with black hair and drooping white mustache, led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of his two appearances this Summer at the Berkshire Festival.

Warm acclaim came not only from the 6,000 attending. For just as the concert began, the sun broke bright and clear through the dark heavy sky putting to rout the blanket of grey which had hung threateningly since morning.

* * *

TONAL MAGIC resounded through the shed and out over the rustic atmosphere of Tanglewood with every movement of the lovable Mr. Monteux' stick. That stick was precise, commanding, crisp and to the point, and he got what he wanted from his men and communicated it to his audience. Without arm waving or the expressive body calisthenics synonymous with many modern maestros.

The program included two firsts for Tanglewood audiences —the Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" ("The Italian Woman in Algiers") and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra which was the centerpiece of the three-number program. The closing work was Shubert's Symphony in C major, No. 7.

The Bartok was full of unexpected delights. A symphony-like work in five sections, it treated single instruments and groups of instruments in soloistic fashion, which contributed countless brilliant passages and melodramatic contrasts.

Bartok was commissioned to write the work by Serge Koussevitky during a period when the composer was convalescing from a serious illness. This probably accounts for the mood of the concerto which represents a gradual transition from somberness and mournfulness to hope and rebirth. In the second movement, however, Bartok interrupts the transition with a little jesting. Wind instruments in pairs chatter and rollick with one another in waves of tonal color until the drum draws the curtain, and in the finale movement the flavor is a jazzy Hungarian and the character a lively exciting folk dance which leads into a furious coda until the final dramatic note—the clash of the cymbals—is sounded.

* * *

THE OVERTURE was typically Rossini, imaginative, light and bubbling and under Mr. Monteux' direction it truly bubbled. After the Bartok presentation, the Schubert work seemed tame indeed, but nevertheless it glowed with the spirit of Vienna and tonal color of every hue.

Saturday Concert

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—At the Metropolitan a twilight has descended on the Wagnerian gods and goddesses but at Tanglewood Charles Munch is making artistic amends this year with two Wagner programs.

Saturday night Mr. Munch devoted the entire second half of his program to a concert version of Act 1 of "Die Walkure" with a trio of soloists capable of bringing heroic dimensions to this music. In the palmy days of Flagstad and Melchior the Met could more than match the talents of Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, and James Pease; today it could do little better and it has never been able to boast the orchestral resources that the Boston Symphony can offer.

* * *

THE BOSTONIANS surrounded the singers with a rich tapestry of sound and Munch made no concessions to his soloists in the driving momentum of this performance. Fortunately, both Harshaw and Da Costa had the breadth and amplitude of voice to cope with the combined sonority of 104 musicians, which was no small compliment to their natural endowments. Even Flagstad and Traubel did not ordinarily contend with an orchestra of this size.

If Saturday's concert is a criterion, Mr. Da Costa sounds like a logical choice for a great Heldentenor. His voice often had the ringing quality reminiscent of Melchoir in his best days and his conception of Siegmund was always fluent, although not as expressive as it will probably become with greater familiarity. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Pease were wholly admirable and authoritative as Sieglinde and Hunding.

For the novelty seekers Mr. Munch programed Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) and it proved the most dynamic new work this reviewer has heard in some time. Winner of the 1955 New York Music Critics Circle Award, it was among the works commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra.

* * *

ORIGINALLY entitled "Symphonie Fantastique" by the composer, its spiritual affinity to Berlioz is clearcut and unmistakable, particularly in its tour de force of orchestral effects. If it is short on sustained lyricism, it is long on frenetic energy and compulsive drive, qualities that held the attention of the audience throughout.

The orchestra was in virtuosic form for this fiendishly difficult score and the playing in this and in Samuel Barber's elegiac "Adagio for Strings" was superlative by the best Boston Symphony standards.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

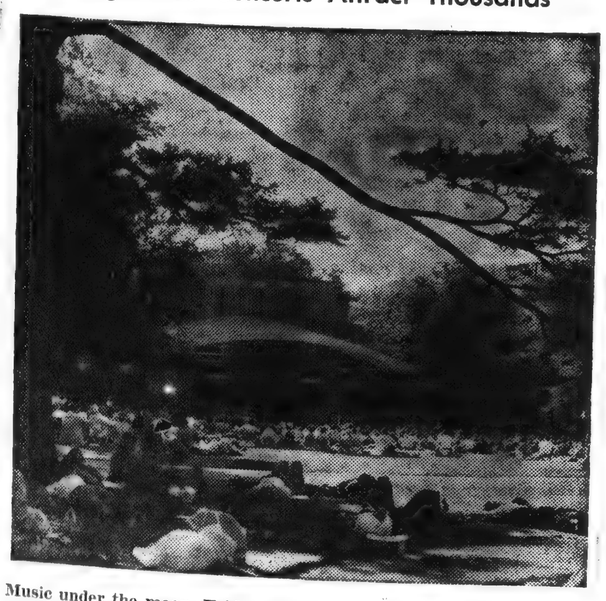
JUL 24 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BRISTOL, PA.
COURIER
Circ. D. 10,785

JUL 5 1956

Tanglewood Concerts Attract Thousands



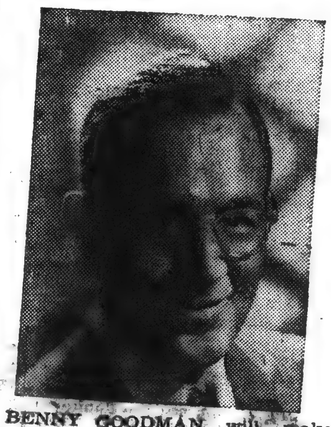
Music under the moon, Friday and Saturday evenings, and in the sun on Sunday afternoons by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Shed at Tanglewood during the annual six-week Berkshire Festival—from July 4 to August 2 in 1956—attracts thousands of music lovers. 108,336 persons attended 12 Shed concerts during the 1955 Festival, an average of 9,028 persons (capacity 6,000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns. Concerts of chamber music are also given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday evenings, and two week ends (July 6-7-8 and July 13-14-15) of "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS HERALD
Circ. W. 980

JUL 6 1956

At Tanglewood



BENNY GOODMAN will make his Tanglewood debut on Friday 6 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Moart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

Big Shindig As Cronin Enters Hall

By ARTHUR SIEGEL

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y. — The Red Sox may not win the American League pennant, but Owner Tom Yawkey has established a Hall of Fame precedent. . . . Never was any man installed in baseball's shrine under more festive arrangements. . . . The Red Sox threw a shindig that made Hall of Fame history. . . . He started with inviting 34 persons, from Mayor Hynes of Boston to press attache Tommy McCarthy. . . . There were other events. The breakfast just for the Boston party. . . . There was a cocktail party for the Boston group. . . . There was dinner at the O-te-sa-ga Hotel. . . . Nobody could explain why the hotel is spelled that way, with hyphens, while the lake which the hotel borders is the Otsego. . . . Years ago, Cooperstown was famous as the place where the first Conestoga, or covered wagon, was built. . . . But the Boston party certainly did not travel in covered wagon. . . . And the highlight of the Hall of Fame trek was when Hall of Famer Joe Cronin said, at the cocktail party, "Now I finally can relax. . . . This is the perfect ending to a perfect day." . . . Incidentally, Cronin and Mayor Hynes went on the air for a coast-to-coast broadcast. . . . The total allotted time, as they learned when the broadcast began, was two minutes. . . . So Cronin was unable to tell of the Mayor's having been the star third baseman of the Ashmont Social and Athletic Club.

CRONIN

Kelleher Going to Ireland

FRED SOUCY, FORMER HEAD of the FBI in Boston, came down from Albany to spend a full day with the Boston group, especially Mike Kelleher and Harry Blake. . . . Kelleher, by the way, has a special project and then goes to Ireland in August with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. . . . The tour begins in Cork, where Mike's father was born 100 years ago. . . . The orchestra will play several Irish cities and then go to Scotland, England, France and even to Russia. . . . Kelleher won't make anything but the Irish tour. . . . Cronin spoke extemporaneously at the Hall of Fame installation. . . . Had nothing prepared. . . . Later said, "Mel Ott told me that no matter how long you have prepared, you find out the actual day is something different. . . . You get up there to speak and all of a sudden you find a great big lump in your throat. . . . I found out how true his words were." . . . Hank Greenberg explained his remarks about trying out at Braves Field for the Washington Senators. . . . "I was playing ball at East Douglas for Win Schuster. . . . He arranged for the tryout with the Senators in Boston. . . . At that time Sunday games weren't permitted at Fenway Park. . . . So the Sunday games were played at Braves Field. . . . Johnson was very interested in me. . . . But the offer wasn't quite good enough and I had to refuse."

[13°]

FADED TEXT TIGHT BINDING

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,250

Berkshire Festival Concerts To Begin Wednesday, July 4

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening next week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening, July 4, with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, July 6, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening, July 7, concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club.

On Sunday afternoon, July 8, a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives, will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11, 13, 14, 15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p. m.

For the final four weekends of the Berkshire Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 weekend concerts, July 20-Aug. 12, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concerts versions of "Die Walkure," Act. I, and the opening and final scenes of Act. III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The Shed series will also feature Tanglewood first performances of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this, its 75th anniversary year, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston. These symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season, when the orchestra makes a five-and-one-half week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
DAVENPORT, IA.
TIMES
JUL 1 1956

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer—
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony orchestra for its 75th anniversary last season will be played at the annual Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood, Mass. this summer. The series of festival concerts in the music shed will begin Friday, July 20 and continue through August 21. The works are Petrassi's Concerto for orchestra; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Sergei Koussevitsky; Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode," and Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony.

CHARLES MUNCH

. . .Conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will direct seven of the 12 concerts; Pierre Monteux will conduct two and and Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein will conduct one concert each. Concerts are scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Many soloists will appear at the concerts. Ruth Posselt will play the Hindemith Violin Concerto; Rudolf Serkin, the Schumann Piano Concerto; Jocy de Oliveria, the Ravel Piano Concerto and Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello. Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts and David Lloyd will sing in the Mozart C Minor Mass and Margaret Harshaw, Albert DaCosta and James Pease will appear in two programs of Wagnerian excerpts.

THERE WILL BE

.chamber music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood between July 4 and Aug 8. Goodman, the Kroll String quartet; Beaux Arts Trio; Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Woodwind Quintet; the Yale Glee Club; Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists and Mr. Serkin and Miss Harshaw. There will be two weeks of "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Intimate Theater on the two week-ends preceding the regular festival concerts. The entire series will benefit the Revolving Scholarship Fund for students at the Berkshire Music Center, the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony in connection with the music festival.

MILWAUKEE

...has a unique plan in raising funds for its Milwaukee Pops orchestra. The committee in charge was divided and each had a division to solicit. One group sought $5,000 from among 45 medium sized manufacturing, processing and wholesale firms. Another had the corporation division, which had a goal of $20,000 among about 30 corporations. Sponsors of the orchestra hope to endow 86 chairs in the orchestra at a cost of $1,000 to $3,000 each. A concertmaster's chair will cost $5,000 and the chair for the resident conductor will cost $7,500. More than one donor may subscribe to the same chair.

THE ACCENT

...will be on youth for next season for the Milwaukee Pops orchestra. Seven of the 14 scheduled concerts planned will be youth concerts. These will be held in various parts of the city and afterward it is planned that part of the orchestra will play for dancing. The campaign for next season's budget will be to raise about $100,000. Prominent business men of the city headed the various committees for each division.

CONCERTS

...at Grant Park, Chicago, this week include the winner of the Michaels Award to play with the orchestra this evening. Wednesday and Friday nights, Leo Kopp will conduct the "Holiday Pops" with Seymour Lipkin, pianist and Saturday and Sunday nights will be Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights with well known vocalists. "Hit the Deck" will be the offering at the St. Louis Municipal opera beginning tomorrow (Monday) night and continuing until July 8.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Church Street - New York
VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
JUL 1 1956

mainly things

by ED MERRITT

No doubt the summer season has finally arrived. Our sunburn is beginning to peel. . . . Anniversary number 23 of graduation from school has been heralded by the arrival of a neat invitation. Monday and Tuesday the Berkshire Playhouse and The Malden Bridge Summer Theatre opened their respective doors, to be followed closely by the rest of the summer features. Everything seems to make good sense, except for the graduation anniversary.

By this time we had hoped for definite word on the schedule at Music Inn, Lenox, where the jazz and the musical talk will flow during a goodly part of the summer. Unfortunately, not anymore than a brief notice of their opening has blown across the desk. We do know it's a big season . . . We'll report details as soon as available. On the other hand, plenty of dope on the upcoming doings at Tanglewood. This would be a big year for familiar composers and familiar music. Also a group of features by contemporary composers written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be celebrated this year. Crowds can be expected for many events on the programs, particularly such items as the Benny Goodman appearances with both orchestra and chamber groups. Mr. G., fresh from the triumphs of "The Benny Goodman Story," a wonderful engagement at the Cafe Rouge in New York, and a swing across the country with his band, will make music in the Berkshire Hills July 6 and 11. In addition to these concerts, this department looks forward with great anticipation to a pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of the fabulous octogenarian Pierre Monteux. These musical events July 22 and August 11 will again afford a wonderful opportunity to see and hear one of the greatest musicians of our time in action.

Bulked into the summer plans of most everyone . . . a chance to get close to some of the books we've been promising ourselves all winter long. We'd like to suggest a couple here . . . one mighty serious and the other fairly relaxed. Here at home we have the ever present headlines to remind us of the problem of race relations, a problem spread around the world, unfortunately. Most pressing and alarming conditions probably are found in South Africa where a conservative guess would suggest the clock has been turned back 200 years. Recent telecast by Edward R. Murrow, in the fine journalistic tradition, brought this situation close to the attention of Americans. Now, further and distressing enlightment to be found in a book by one of Murrow's guests, Father Trevor Huddleston, "Naught For Your Comfort." This one aptly titled . . . some find the volume exciting and moving. We find it horrifying. If you want to know a bit about the madness which sometimes seizes human beings, if you want to see how and why the actions of people, thousands of miles away, stir up a witches' brew, which well may plague us here, don't fail to read this distressing story.

Number two book . . . "H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Memory" by Charles Angoff. Catch a close-up glimpse of one of the most interesting and controversial men of the Twenties. Perhaps you'll not care for the manners, but the man is terrific.

Just a pair of record selections this week. In the popular department . . . Elliott Lawrence on the Fantasy label with a fine set of tunes as arranged by Tiny Kahn and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable band playing. Then, halfway between the popular and the concert world comes pianist, Pablo Flores. MGM releases his recording of "Memories of Mexico." May not be profound, but one of the best listening items to come along in quite a while. So . . . more later.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SPARTANBURG, S. C.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. S. 31,912
JUL 1 1956

Festival Concerts Begin Wednesday At Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS. — Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4-August 12, on the pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

THE SERIES of 24 concerts will begin Wednesday evening with a program of chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. Friday evening, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman, clarinetist, as soloist. Works by Martinu, Henry Cowell, Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be featured in Saturday and Sunday concerts.

During the final four weekends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will give 12 week-end concerts, July 20-Aug. 12.

FADED TEXT TIGHT BINDING

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390
JUN 30 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts To Begin Wednesday, July 4

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening next week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening, July 4, with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, July 6, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening, July 7, concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club.

On Sunday afternoon, July 8, a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives, will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11, 13, 14, 15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p. m.

For the final four weekends of the Berkshire Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 weekend concerts, July 20-Aug. 12, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concerts versions of "Die Walkure," Act. I, and the opening and final sceen of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The Shed series will also feature Tanglewood first performances of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this, its 75th anniversary year, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston. These symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season, when the orchestra makes a five-and-one-half week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
DAVENPORT, IA
TIMES
JUL 1 1956

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer—
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony orchestra for its 75th anniversary last season will be played at the annual Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood, Mass. this summer. The series of festival concerts in the music shed will begin Friday, July 20 and continue through August 21. The works are Petrassi's Concerto for orchestra; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Sergei Koussevitsky; Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode," and Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony.

CHARLES MUNCH

. . .Conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will direct seven of the 12 concerts; Pierre Monteux will conduct two and and Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein will conduct one concert each. Concerts are scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Many soloists will appear at the concerts. Ruth Posselt will play the Hindemith Violin Concerto; Rudolf Serkin, the Schumann Piano Concerto; Jocy de Oliveria, the Ravel Piano Concerto and Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello. Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts and David Lloyd will sing in the Mozart C Minor Mass and Margaret Harshaw, Albert DaCosta and James Pease will appear in two programs of Wagnerian excerpts.

THERE WILL BE

.chamber music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood between July 1 and Aug 8. Goodman, the Kroll String quartet; Beaux Arts Trio; Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Woodwind Quintet; the Yale Glee Club; Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists and Mr. Serkin and Miss Harshaw. There will be two weeks of "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Intimate Theater on the two week-ends preceding the regular festival concerts. The entire series will benefit the Revolving Scholarship Fund for students at the Berkshire Music Center, the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony in connection with the music festival.

MILWAUKEE

...has a unique plan in raising funds for its Milwaukee Pops orchestra. The committee in charge was divided and each had a division to solicit. One group sought $8,000 from among 45 medium sized manufacturing, processing and wholesale firms. Another had the corporation division, which had a goal of $20,000 among about 30 corporations. Sponsors of the orchestra hope to endow 66 chairs in the orchestra at a cost of $1,000 to $3,000 each. A concertmaster's chair will cost $5,000 and the chair for the resident conductor will cost $7,500. More than one donor may subscribe to the same chair.

THE ACCENT

...will be on youth for next season for the Milwaukee Pops orchestra. Seven of the 14 scheduled concerts planned will be youth concerts. These will be held in various parts of the city and afterward it is planned that part of the orchestra will play for dancing. The campaign for next season's budget will be to raise about $100,000. Prominent business men of the city headed the various committees for each division.

CONCERTS

...at Grant Park, Chicago, this week include the winner of the Michaels Award to play with the orchestra this evening. Wednesday and Friday nights, Leo Kopp will conduct the "Holiday Pops" with Seymour Lipkin, pianist and Saturday and Sunday nights will be Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights with well known vocalists. "Hit the Deck" will be the offering at the St. Louis Municipal opera beginning tomorrow (Monday) night and continuing until July 8.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
YAKIMA, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000
JUN 29 1956

mainl

by ED

No doubt the summer seas beginning to peel. . . . Annive school has been heralded by the day and Tuesday the Berkshir Summer Theatre opened the by the rest of the summer feat sense, except for the graduation

By this time we had hoped Music Inn, Lenox, where the ja ing a goodly part of the summ brief notice of their opening desk. We do know it's a big se details as soon as available. On of dope on the upcoming doms would be a big year for famil miliar music. Also a group of porary composers written for of the Boston Symphony Orche this year. Crowds can be expec on the programs, particularly Benny Goodman appearances and chamber groups. Mr. G umphs of "The Benny Goodm the Cafe Rouge in New York has band, will make music a addition to these concerts, the anticipation to a pair of concert direction of the fabulous octogs sical events July 22 and Aug portunity to see and hear the in action.

Bulked into the summer [illegible] most everyone [illegible] get close to some of the books we've been promising ourselves [illegible] ter long. We'd like to suggest a couple here . . . one mighty serious, the other fairly relaxed. Here at home we have the ever present lines to remind us of the problems of race relations, a problem around the world, unfortunately. Most pressing and alarming ditions probably are found in South Africa where a conservative would suggest the clock has been turned back 200 years. Reast by Edward R. Murrow, in the fine journalistic tradi brought this situation close to the attention of Americans. Neither and distressing enlightment to be found in a book by Murrow's guests, Father Trevor Huddleston, "Naught For Yo fort." This one aptly titled . . . soon find the volume exciting moving. We find it horrifying. If you want to know a bit about madness which sometimes seizes human beings, if you want to kn and why the actions of people, thousands of miles away, sh witches' brew, which well may plague us here, don't fail to read distressing story.

Number two book . . . "H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Mem by Charles Angoff. Catch a close-up glimpse of one of the most teresting and, controversial men of the Twenties. Perhaps you're here for the manners, but the man is terrific.

Just a pair of record selections this week. In the popular ortment . . . Elliott Lawrence on the Fantasy label with a fine set tunes as arranged by Tiny Kaye and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable band playing. Then, halfway between the popular and the concert world comes pianist, Pablo Fiero. MGM releases his recording of "Memories of Mexico." May not be profound, but one of the more listening items to come along in quite a while. So . . . more hings

by HITT

ially arrived. Our suburban s cember 23 of graduation from e of a neat invitation Mot house and The Malden Bridge e doors, to be followed closely Everything seems to make good sary.

definite word on the schedule at The musical talk will flow dur- fortunately, not anymore than a ness across the

We'll report hand, plenty nglewood. This posers and fa- ces to contem- ch anniversary to be celebrated or many events ers as the both orchestra from the tri- a wonderful engagement a swing across the country with shire Hills July 6 and 7 ment looks forward Boston Symphony, Pierre Monteux, season offers a variety of greatest

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SPARTANBURG, S. C.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. S. 31,9?
JUL 1 1956

Festival Concerts Begin Wednesday At Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS. — Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4-August 12, on the pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

THE SERIES of 24 concerts will begin Wednesday evening with a program of chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. Friday evening, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman, clarinetist, as soloist. Works by Martinu, Henry Cowell, Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be featured in Saturday and Sunday concerts.

During the final four week-ends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will give 12 week-end concerts, July 20-Aug. 12.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CHARM MAGAZINE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 1956

after 5

BY ANN P. ELIASBERG

Worth Hearing

You take the moon over the Seine—give us the moon over Washington Heights when there's a concert on at New York's Lewisohn Stadium. The audience isn't brilliant and the seats aren't padded but there's something about a summer night at the stadium that no concert hall can offer. (The something may be the drone of an airplane heard above the music, but no matter—it's part of the charm.) The season this year is June 18 to July 28, with concerts scheduled every evening except Fridays and Sundays, those days being held open for weather postponements. Pierre Monteux, Vladimir Golschmann, Alexander Smallens, and Thomas Scherman will be among the guest conductors to appear.

• At Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, home of the famed Berkshire Festival, the setting is pastoral, the music lovers are earnest, and the concerts are of top caliber. The main programs will be held in the Shed on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, July 20 through August 12. Charles Munch and guest conductors will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Chamber groups will play on the weekends of July 6 and 15 and on Wednesday evenings during the six-week season. Write to Symphony Hall in Boston for subscriptions.

• Visitors to Colorado now prospect for culture instead of for gold, at the Central City Festival, held in this picturesque Rocky Mountain ghost mining-town annually for twenty-five years. This year a new folk opera by Pulitzer prizewinner Douglas Moore and John Latouche, The Ballad of Baby Doe, will be given its first performance on July 7. Metropolitan stars Dolores Wilson, Martha Lipton, and Walter Cassel will sing leading roles. Puccini's La Tosca will alternate with the new opera through the Central City music season, June 20 to July 28. For information, write to the Central City Festival Association. 1509 Cleveland Place, Denver, Colorado.

• The American Jazz Festival at Newport, Rhode Island, is a young institution, but judging from the artists on its list this year, it has arrived. Festival dates are July 5, 6, and 7. The artists—well, there'll be Louis Armstrong, Count Basie, Dave Brubeck, Sarah Vaughan, Dizzie Gillespie, Eddie Condon, and German jazz pianist Jutta Hipp, among others. Sold? Then get in touch with Jazz Festival Headquarters at the Hotel Viking in Newport.

The Eddy Duchin Story (Columbia, CL 790, $3.98)

In the days when there was tea dancing at the Plaza and Brenda Frazier took up the news space now reserved for Grace Kelly, Eddy Duchin was the darling of a generation of college girls and nightclub-goers. He was so much the fashion that few people bothered to wonder if he was really talented or just lucky.

In this album, his piano style, rippling over a large keyboard in a steady danceable rhythm, is pleasantly distinctive and wears well, time and imitators notwithstanding. So do the tunes he plays; among them: "Time on My Hands," "Just One of Those Things," "You're My Everything," and—of course—his theme, the Chopin Nocturne in E Flat. This album, like the others mentioned here, is long-playing.

King Oliver (Epic, LN 3208, $3.98)

Skipping back a decade we come upon one of the earliest and best of New Orleans jazzmen, playing "High Society," "Dippermouth Blues," and other Dixieland standards in an album that belongs on any serious jazz fancier's shelf. (Note, though, that the date of the original recordings, 1923, makes for an inevitable tonal loss.) The list of band personnel reads like a who's who of jazz: Louis Armstrong and Oliver on cornets, Baby Dodds on drums, Lil Hardin Armstrong on piano. The sheer vigor and high spirits of this group may blast you out of your chair but you'll relish the experience.

Miss Helen Forrest (Capitol T-704, $3.98)

Several years and a complete revolution in popular taste separate King Oliver and company from Helen Forrest, the lady who sang with Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman, and Harry James in the heyday of the big bands. Remember "The Honorable Mr. So-and-So"? It's in Miss Forrest's new album, along with "More Than You Know" and "Taking a Chance on Love." The big-band backing has given way to two quiet instrumentalists but Miss Forrest doesn't need more. She carries her torch as high as ever and her singing style improves with the years.

• The recent visit to America of Soviet violinist David Oistrakh touched off an avalanche of recordings of violin concertos, violin sonatas, and chamber music for the violin. Oistrakh himself contributes a formidable number of albums to the array, some made in Europe and some here. When he isn't actually on the concert stage he seems to be in the recording studios, and clearly the killing pace agrees with him. His technical proficiency is dazzling and there is never a perfunctory note in his playing.

But if Oistrakh is the new violin sensation, Jascha Heifetz is still the old master and, for our money, still the man to beat. Yehudi Menuhin, (Continued on next page)

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUL 4 1956

String Quartet Concert at Tanglewood

The Kroll String Quartet will present the first of the Wednesday Evening Chamber Music concerts at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

THE PROGRAM will include the Mozart "Quartet in C Major, K. 465," the so-called "Dissonant" Quartet; the Prokofieff "Quartet number 1, opus 50"; and the Beethoven "Quartet in C Major, Opus 59, number 3" the last of the three "Rasoumovsky" Quartets.

Members of the quartet include William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovits, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The quartet was founded by Mr. Kroll in 1945 and is the official quartet of the Musicians' Guild in New York. Mr. Kroll, co-head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department, has been in charge of the violin and chamber music departments at Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory of Music since 1947 and teacher at the Mannes School of Music in New York since 1948.

* * *

REMAINING seats for tonight's concert and for all concerts of the Berkshire Festival are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the performance. In case of rain the program will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

The program next Wednesday evening will be presented by jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
VINCENNES, IND.
SUN-COMMERCIAL
Circ. D. 13,204 - S. 13,302
JUL 2 1956

Chamber Music To Be Featured At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday, July 11, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturdays, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concerts of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday, July 6, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprises the BSO String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening, July 13. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Godovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening, July 14. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon, July 15, will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, [illegible] by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held [illegible] Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday, July [illegible] p. m., open on a reserved seat basis to friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SCRANTON, PA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 58,538
JUL 7 1956

Concert Broadcasts From Festival Listed

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on NBC Radio Monday, July 9 (8:15 P.M.). The concerts will include many of the high lights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
YORK, PA.
GAZETTE & DAILY
Circ. D. 32,550
JUL 7 1956

Festival Concerts To Be Broadcast From Berkshire

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire festival concerts in Tanglewood will begin Monday at 8:15 p.m. on NBC radio with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Guest directors will conduct several of the concerts and distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate. On July 16 composer-conductor Lukas Foss will direct contemporary and classical music.

The broadcasts, which will continue through Oct. 1, are recorded because actual concerts at Tanglewood last only six weeks.

[132]

Worth Seeing

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
...ork
...956

...ED MERRITT

...eason has finally arriv... ...from ...niversary number 23 o... ...the arrival of a neat invitation. ... Mon...shire Playhouse and The Malden Bridge ...ir respective doors, to be followed closely ...features. Everything seems to make good ...tion anniversary.

...oped for definite word on the schedule at ...e jazz and the musical talk will flow dur...mer. Unfortunately, not anymore than a ...g has blown across the ... season. . . . We'll report ...n the other hand, plenty ...ngs at Tanglewood. This ...miliar composers and fa... of features by contem...or the 75th anniversary ...rchestra to be celebrated ...pected for many events ...rly such items as the ...es with both orchestra ...G., fresh from the tri...dman Story," a wonderful engagement at ...rk, and a swing across the country with ...n the Berkshire Hills July 6 and 14. In ...his department looks forward with great ...certs by the Boston Symphony under the ...togenarian, Pierre Monteux. These au...gust 11 will again afford a wonderful op...ne of the greatest musicians of our time ...

...plans of most everyone . . . a chance to ...s we've been promising ourselves all win... ...a couple here . . . one mighty serious and ...r at home we have the ever present head... ...oblem of race relations, a problem spread ...ately. Most pressing and alarming con... ...South Africa where a conservative gues... ...been turned back 200 years. Recent tele...v, in the fine journalistic tradition, ha... ...to the attention of Americans. Now fo... ...ment to be found in a book by one of ...vor Huddleston, "Naught For Your Com... . . . some find the volume exciting and ...ng. If you want to know a bit about the ...izes human beings, if you want to see how ...ople, thousands of miles away, stir up a ...hay plague us here, don't fail to read this ...

...H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Memory" ...close-up glimpse of one of the most in... ...men of the Twenties. Perhaps you'll not ...e man is terrific.

...ections this week. In the popular depart... ...on the Fantasy label with a fine set of ...Kahn and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable bis... ...y between the popular and the concert ...Flores. MGM releases his recording of ...y not be profound, but one of the best ...in quite a while. So . . . more later!

...G BUREAU
...t - New York
...URG, S. C.
...OURNAL
...21,912
1956

...Concerts ...ednesday ...ewood

... — Symphony, ...r music come ...kshire Hills ... ...isetts with the ... at Tanglewood ...kshire Festival ...hony Orchestra. ... given for six ...ust 12, on the ...here a century ...withorne was a ...s Tanglewood ...

...26 concerts will ...evening with a ...ber music of ... and Beethoven ...g Quartet. Fri... ...ries Munch will ...chestra of Bos... ...chestra players ... program, with ... clarinetist, ... Martinu, ...e, Alexei ... will be ... Sunday ... four weeks ... ...he full 100-piece ... Orchestra will ... concerts, July too, has a host of fans, and for good reason. We won't attempt to analyze the playing of these top artists. We've listened to these new recordings by each of them and we hope you'll like them all as much as we did.

The man in the middle is Ernest Borgnine—caught between the arguments of Debbie Reynolds and Bette Davis in The Catered Affair

Here's a sampling:

David Oistrakh: Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4; Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E Minor; with the Philadelphia Orchestra conducted by Eugene Ormandy. Columbia, ML 5085, $3.98

David Oistrakh: Sibelius Violin Concerto in D Minor; with the Stockholm Festival Orchestra conducted by Sixten Ehrling; Sibelius Symphony No. 3; the Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Paul Kletzki. Angel 35315, $3.48

Jascha Heifetz: Mozart Violin Sonatas Nos. 10 and 15; Brooks Smith accompanies at the piano. Victor LM 1958, $3.98

Yehudi Menuhin: Mozart Violin Concertos Nos. 4 and 5; with the Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by John Pritchard. Victor LM 1961, $3.98

• Also for your classics library:

Haydn: Symphonies No. 101 (The Clock) and No. 102; Igor Markevitch and the Orchestre National de la Radiodiffusion Française. Angel 35312, $3.48

In this Mozart bicentennial year we tend to forget that there were other eighteenth-century symphonic composers. These two gems remind us that Haydn wrote some of the most beautiful symphonic music of the period. On this disk it's treated with the love and respect it deserves.

Bartók: Concerto for Orchestra; Fritz Reiner and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Victor LM 1934, $3.98

Bartók was a twentieth-century master, and even if you're wary of modern music we expect you to fall in love with this work. It's gay and melancholy, lyrical, and inventive—in short, a joy.

Worth Seeing

The Catered Affair (M-G-M), starring Bette Davis, Ernest Borgnine, Debbie Reynolds, screenplay by Gore Vidal.

In the television play, writer Paddy Chayefsky took a close-up look at a Bronx family whose problems have familiar roots: too little money, too little time left over from the routine of living to learn to love and understand one another.

The film adaptation preserves Chayefsky's tender affection for his characters and his wry humor at the muddle they get themselves into when the daughter of the family (Debbie Reynolds) says she wants to marry her young man immediately, and with no fuss.

Bette Davis is the mother who decides that every girl wants a fancy wedding and her girl is going to have one even if it ruins Dad. Ernest Borgnine is the hard-working father who wonders when, if ever, he's going to have his say in this family. We don't quite know how Barry Fitzgerald, with his brogue and his devilish charm, got into the act but he's always a pleasure to have around. Like Marty, The Catered Affair is a perceptive vignette of middle-class life, as unpretentious and satisfying as a family dinner.

The Eddy Duchin Story (Columbia), starring Tyrone Power, Kim Novak, Technicolor and CinemaScope.

While Columbia's new album of Duchin's music reminds us why he became famous, this new film shows us how.

So many of our top popular musicians have been dogged by success that the screenwriters usually build in a few failures to make a movie biography ring true. With Duchin the problem was different. He was phenomenally successful in his career but his personal life was so full of authentic tragedy that the scriptwriter's temptation must have been to look the other way.

At any rate, The Eddy Duchin Story emerges as a slick tale of a bigtime bandleader plagued by the kind of misfortunes that keep soap-opera heroines biting their lips and choking back tears. Occasionally some genuine pathos comes through. Kim Novak is often quite touching as the society girl who loved Duchin before he made good in the big town, and who died in childbirth after a brief idyllic marriage. Tyrone Power gives a winning portrayal of Duchin, especially in his brash early days, before he contracted the fatal disease that robbed him of the full enjoyment of his success. The music is lovely and nostalgic, the scenes of New York café life have all the gay bravura of the thirties and —oh well, just forget its faults and enjoy this one.

Moby Dick (Warner Brothers), starring Gregory Peck, Richard Basehart, and Leo Genn, produced and directed by John Huston.

Several scenes are already in our collection of memorable film moments: Royal Dano, as Elijah, shouting his prophecy of evil at the men boarding the Pequod; Gregory Peck, as Ahab, dedicating his crew to the destruction of the whale that tried to destroy him; Friedrich Ledebur, as Queequeg, resigning himself to death while the ship, becalmed and heat-scorched, awaits its prey.

In producing this newest screen version of Melville's classic American novel, John Huston has tried to illuminate its symbolic values without impairing the dramatic force of the narrative. In visual terms he succeeds brilliantly. The muted Technicolor he uses creates an authentic flavor of old whaling days, plus a brooding quality that exactly suits the mood of the story. But at its greatest moment—when Captain Ahab actually pits himself against the white whale—the picture somehow loses rather than gains in force. The climactic fight is not so much a tragedy as a spectacle. It hardly seems fair, though, to criticize a fine film for not being a masterpiece. Moby Dick is good and you won't want to miss it.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUL 4 1956

String Quartet Concert at Tanglewood

The Kroll String Quartet will present the first of the Wednesday Evening Chamber Music concerts at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

THE PROGRAM will include the Mozart "Quartet in C Major, K. 465," the so-called "Dissonant" Quartet; the Prokofieff "Quartet number 1, opus 50"; and the Beethoven "Quartet in C Major, Opus 59, number 3" the last of the three "Rasoumovsky" Quartets.

Members of the quartet include William Kroll and Louis Graeser, violins; David Mankovits, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The quartet was founded by Mr. Kroll in 1945 and is the official quartet of the Musicians' Guild in New York. Mr. Kroll, co-head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department, has been in charge of the violin and chamber music departments at Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory of Music since 1947 and teacher at the Mannes School of Music in New York since 1943.

* * *

REMAINING seats for tonight's concert and for all concerts of the Berkshire Festival are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the performance. In case of rain the program will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

The program next Wednesday evening will be presented by jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
VINCENNES, IND.
SUN-COMMERCIAL
Circ. D. 13,204 - S. 13,302
JUL 2 1956

Chamber Music To Be Featured At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday, July 11, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturdays, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concerts of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday, July 6, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprises the BSO String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening, July 13. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening, July 14. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon, July 15, will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire [illegible] by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held [illegible] Theatre-Concert [illegible] on Monday, [illegible] p. m., open on [illegible] seat basis to friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SCRANTON, PA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 58,538
JUL 7 1956

Concert Broadcasts From Festival Listed

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on NBC Radio Monday, July 9 (8:15 P.M.). The concerts will include many of the high lights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
YORK, PA.
GAZETTE & DAILY
Circ. D. 32,500
JUL 7 1956

Festival Concerts To Be Broadcast From Berkshire

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire festival concerts in Tanglewood will begin Monday at 8:15 p.m. on NBC radio with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Guest directors will conduct several of the concerts and distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate. On July 16 composer-conductor Lukas Foss will direct contemporary and classical music.

The broadcasts, which will continue through Oct. 1, are recorded because actual concerts at Tanglewood last only six weeks.

Worth Seeing

The man in the middle is Ernest Borgnine—caught between the arguments of Debbie Reynolds and Bette Davis in The Catered Affair

too, has a host of fans, and for good reason. We won't attempt to analyze the playing of these top artists. We've listened to these new recordings by each of them and we hope you'll like them all as much as we did.

Here's a sampling:

David Oistrakh: Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4; Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E Minor; with the Philadelphia Orchestra conducted by Eugene Ormandy. Columbia, ML 5085, $3.98

David Oistrakh: Sibelius Violin Concerto in D Minor; with the Stockholm Festival Orchestra conducted by Sixten Ehrling; Sibelius Symphony No. 3; the Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Paul Kletzki. Angel 35315, $3.48

Jascha Heifetz: Mozart Violin Sonatas Nos. 10 and 15; Brooks Smith accompanies at the piano. Victor LM 1958, $3.98

Yehudi Menuhin: Mozart Violin Concertos Nos. 4 and 5; with the Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by John Pritchard. Victor LM 1961, $3.98

• Also for your classics library:

Haydn: Symphonies No. 101 (The Clock) and No. 102; Igor Markevitch and the Orchestre National de la Radiodiffusion Française. Angel 35312, $3.48

In this Mozart bicentennial year we tend to forget that there were other eighteenth-century symphonic composers. These two gems remind us that Haydn wrote some of the most beautiful symphonic music of the period. On this disk it's treated with the love and respect it deserves.

Bartók: Concerto for Orchestra; Fritz Reiner and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Victor LM 1934, $3.98

Bartók was a twentieth-century master, and even if you're wary of modern music we expect you to fall in love with this work. It's gay and melancholy, lyrical, and inventive—in short, a joy.

Worth Seeing

The Catered Affair (M-G-M), starring Bette Davis, Ernest Borgnine, Debbie Reynolds, screenplay by Gore Vidal.

In the television play, writer Paddy Chayefsky took a close-up look at a Bronx family whose problems have familiar roots: too little money, too little time left over from the routine of living to learn to love and understand one another.

The film adaptation preserves Chayefsky's tender affection for his characters and his wry humor at the muddle they get themselves into when the daughter of the family (Debbie Reynolds) says she wants to marry her young man immediately, and with no fuss.

Bette Davis is the mother who decides that every girl wants a fancy wedding and her girl is going to have one even if it ruins Dad. Ernest Borgnine is the hard-working father who wonders when, if ever, he's going to have his say in this family. We don't quite know how Barry Fitzgerald, with his brogue and his devilish charm, got into the act but he's always a pleasure to have around. Like Marty, The Catered Affair is a perceptive vignette of middle-class life, as unpretentious and satisfying as a family dinner.

The Eddy Duchin Story (Columbia), starring Tyrone Power, Kim Novak, Technicolor and CinemaScope.

While Columbia's new album of Duchin's music reminds us why he became famous, this new film shows us how.

So many of our top popular musicians have been dogged by success that the screenwriters usually build in a few failures to make a movie biography ring true. With Duchin the problem was different. He was phenomenally successful in his career but his personal life was so full of authentic tragedy that the scriptwriter's temptation must have been to look the other way.

At any rate, The Eddy Duchin Story emerges as a slick tale of a bigtime bandleader plagued by the kind of misfortunes that keep soap-opera heroines biting their lips and choking back tears. Occasionally some genuine pathos comes through. Kim Novak is often quite touching as the society girl who loved Duchin before he made good in the big town, and who died in childbirth after a brief idyllic marriage. Tyrone Power gives a winning portrayal of Duchin, especially in his brash early days, before he contracted the fatal disease that robbed him of the full enjoyment of his success. The music is lovely and nostalgic, the scenes of New York café life have all the gay bravura of the thirties and —oh well, just forget its faults and enjoy this one.

Moby Dick (Warner Brothers), starring Gregory Peck, Richard Basehart, and Leo Genn, produced and directed by John Huston.

Several scenes are already in our collection of memorable film moments: Royal Dano, as Elijah, shouting his prophecy of evil at the men boarding the Pequod; Gregory Peck, as Ahab, dedicating his crew to the destruction of the whale that tried to destroy him; Friedrich Ledebur, as Queequeg, resigning himself to death while the ship, becalmed and heat-scorched, awaits its prey.

In producing this newest screen version of Melville's classic American novel, John Huston has tried to illuminate its symbolic values without impairing the dramatic force of the narrative. In visual terms he succeeds brilliantly. The muted Technicolor he uses creates an authentic flavor of old whaling days, plus a brooding quality that exactly suits the mood of the story. But at its greatest moment—when Captain Ahab actually pits himself against the white whale—the picture somehow loses rather than gains in force. The climactic fight is not so much a tragedy as a spectacle. It hardly seems fair, though, to criticize a fine film for not being a masterpiece. Moby Dick is good and you won't want to miss it.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

JUL 4 1956

String Quartet Concert at Tanglewood

The Kroll String Quartet will present the first of the Wednesday Evening Chamber Music concerts at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

THE PROGRAM will include the Mozart "Quartet in C Major, K. 465," the so-called "Dissonant" Quartet; the Prokofieff "Quartet number 1, opus 50"; and the Beethoven "Quartet in C Major, Opus 59, number 3" the last of the three "Rasoumovsky" Quartets.

Members of the quartet include William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The quartet was founded by Mr. Kroll in 1945 and is the official quartet of the Musicians' Guild in New York. Mr. Kroll, co-head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department, has been in charge of the violin and chamber music departments at Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory of Music since 1947 and teacher at the Mannes School of Music in New York since 1943.

* * *

REMAINING seats for tonight's concert and for all concerts of the Berkshire Festival are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the performance. In case of rain the program will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

The program next Wednesday evening will be presented by jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

VINCENNES, IND.
SUN-COMMERCIAL
Circ. D. 13,204 - S. 13,302

JUL 2 1956

Chamber Music To Be Featured At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday, July 11, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturdays, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concerte of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday, July 6, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprises the BSO String Quartet. Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening, July 13. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Godovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening, July 14. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon, July 15, will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday, July 16, at 8:30 p. m., open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SCRANTON, PA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 55,533
JUL 7 1956

Concert Broadcasts From Festival Listed

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on NBC Radio Monday, July 9 (8:15 P.M.). The concerts will include many of the high lights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

YORK, PA.
GAZETTE & DAILY
Circ. D. 32,530
JUL 7 1956

Festival Concerts To Be Broadcast From Berkshire

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire festival concerts in Tanglewood will begin Monday at 8:15 p.m. on NBC radio with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Guest directors will conduct several of the concerts and distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate. On July 16 composer-conductor Lukas Foss will direct contemporary and classical music.

The broadcasts, which will continue through Oct. 1, are recorded because actual concerts at Tanglewood last only six weeks.

[132]

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUNCIE, IND.
STAR
Circ. D. 27,810 - S. 29,028

JUL 1 1956

'Parable of Death' Climax for Summer Arts Festival

Lukas Foss, Los Angeles, composer of the "Parable of Death" presented at Ball State College Thursday night as part of the First Summer Arts Festival at the college, stand on the set of the "Parable" at left. Foss directed the performance here. With him are Gertrude Lippincott, modern dancer; John Lewis, set designer for the production; and Dr. Robert Hargreaves, head of the Ball State music department.

If the authors of the sociological study which characterized Muncie as "Middletown, U.S.A." . . . the place where everyone's lace curtains were dirty . . . could have been in the Ball State Assembly Hall for Thursday night's performance of "A Parable of Death," they would surely have been inspired to accept the title of the first Summer Arts Festival as the basis for a new evaluation of the city. "Crossroads of America," the theme of the Arts Festival, reached its full significance in the presentation of the powerful work by Lukas Foss, Los Angeles composer, conductor and pianist.

Commissioned only a few seasons ago by the Louisville Orchestra, the "Parable" was written during the composer's stay at the American Academy in Rome. Originally intended for the dancer-actress Vera Zorina, the work was premiered by the Louisville Orchestra with Zorina as narrator, Farrold Stevens as tenor soloist, and Robert Whitney as conductor, and has been recorded by that cast.

Since that time, only a few cultural centers on the East and West coasts, such as New York, Los Angeles and the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, have been privileged to witness a production of the new work.

The Arts Welded

In addition to presenting the mid-continent premiere of the "Parable of Death," the Ball State Arts Festival gave the production an additional premiere aspect by combining for the first time the arts of stagecraft and the dance with narration and the musical forces . . . an event heralded last Sunday in the New York Times. Aiding the enthusiastic audience in its understanding of the work on first hearing was a pre-concert discussion of the composer, the dancer, Gertrude Lippincott, the scene designer, John Lewis, and moderated by Dr. Robert Hargreaves, head of the Ball State music department.

Mr. Foss recounted his search for a suitable epic narrative after the Louisville commission had identified his task as a speaking piece for Zorina with the support of the Louisville Orchestra. After examining many possible stories, the composer decided to combine an old narrative found in Geschichten vom lieben Gott by Rainer Maria Rilke with selected poetic aplification of the theme . . . love and death . . . taken from Rilke's collected works. Entrusting the original story telling to the narrator, Foss then assigned to the tenor soloist and to the chorus the lyrical or dramatic comments selected from the poetic works. The function of the orchestra then became one of tying together the diverse elements, underlining the important moments, and intensifying the dramatic impact of the entire production.

Long-Distance Collaboration

Miss Lippincott, well-known exponent of modern dance, explained how she had arrived at representative motions and postures in creating the choreography for "A Parable of Death" by the study of Foss' score and the Louisville recording, even though some 2,000 miles distance prevented collaboration with the composer before their initial meeting on the Ball State campus last Monday. Foss and Miss Lippincott presented several items from the production with the composer at the piano.

A third party working independently of the composer and choreographer until last week was John Lewis, Kokomo artist, who with his wife Betse prepared the symbolic stage set and supervised the lighting of the production. Lewis explained that before he had become acquainted with the score, his intent had been to drape the stage with tattered bat-like shapes intensifying the sombre. After reading the text, he determined that a simple design employing projected pictures and suggestive colors would best serve Rilke's intent: "To affirm an intimate trust towards Death, out of the deepest joys and wonder of life; that he, Death, who never was a stranger, emerge again, the silent, knowing partner of the living."

New Cultural Heights

Narrator in Thursday evening's production was Dr. Edward Strother of the Ball State English faculty. He carried skillfully the burden of pacing the fragments of the narrative to fit the musical tempo. Tenor soloist was Carroll Alexander, a Ball State student whose performance of the difficult part won warm praise from Mr. Foss. A Festival chorus under the direction of F. Lemuel Anderson and a Festival orchestra prepared by Dr. Robert Hargreaves were molded into a powerful emotional vehicle under the skillful baton of Lukas Foss. Additional musical background was provided by the college trio in residence for the summer, including Gideon Grau, violinist; Irene Rosenberg, pianist, and Salvatore Silipigni, cellist.

The concensus voiced frequently since Thursday evening is that the performance of "A Parable of Death" was of such dramatic and musical effectiveness as to have elevated the Arts Festival to a concluding flourish that future Festivals will be hard pressed to match the success of the first. Certainly the reputations of Muncie and Ball State College as centers of intellectual and cultural activity have leaped overnight into the national forefront with the successful wedding of the arts in this production.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
Circ. D. 344,297 - S. 361,728

JUL 15 1956

THE KANSAS-MISSOURI SECTOR is represented at the Berkshire Music center at Lenox, Mass., by five aspiring young scholarship students. Four of them are shown here with Ralph Berkowitz (standing, left), dean of the music center. Kneeling or seated are Barbara Utt (left), Warrensburg, Mo.; Jack Bayes (center), Wichita, Kas., and Geraldine Riggs (right), El Dorado, Kas. Standing with Dean Berkowitz is Wayne Harrell, Wichita. The fifth student, not in the photograph, is James Seubert, St. Louis.

Thomson, [illegible] City.

Miss Utt a Soprano.

Miss Utt is the daughter of Prof. Paul R. Utt, retired director of the music division of the Central Missouri State college. She is a lyric soprano who has had teaching experience, and this fall will begin teaching teachers at Wisconsin State college in Platteville, Wis. While there she will commute to Northwestern university in Evanston, Ill., where she recently received her master's degree, to continue her music studies. With a devotional seriousness, she said she hoped to be a choral conductor! In Warrensburg she lives with her family at 616 South Maguire street.

Geraldine Riggs, a volatile blonde, is a cellist. Her father is Carl C. Riggs, professor of education at the Junior college in El Dorado. She came to the cello when her father taught in Liberal, Kas., and the school orchestra was short of that instrument. She was only 10 then and shorter than the big fiddle, but it was a union of love immediately. Her four sisters are pianists, but marriage appeared to have halted any urge for professionalism. Miss Riggs, however, intends to be a concert cellist. Her home is at 1310 North Topeka road, El Dorado.

In Family Tradition.

Carrying on a family tradition is Jack Bayes. His father, the late John Bayes, was an amateur trombonist and his uncle, Harold Bayes, is the retired trombone soloist of the U. S. Marine band. So Jack took to the trombone naturally and Music center [illegible] has devoted 10 years of his life to the violin and intends to devote the rest of his leisure life to it. His father is professor of education at Washington university.

When these five students leave Tanglewood this country will be the richer by five excellent musicians, a happy result envisioned for the Berkshire Music center by its founder, Sergei Koussevitzky.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST
Circ. D. 187,155 - S. 201,445

JUL 9 1956

TODAY ON RADIO

A hidden microphone will listen in on a student council comprising juvenile delinquents on Childen in Trouble at 3:15 PM on KPRC. This is a new series designed to show what is being done about the problem of juvenile delinquency. The program originates at New Jersey's Menlo Park Diagnostic Center, a juvenile corrective institution.

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire concerts begin at 7:15 PM on KPRC. This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra will present an all-Mozart program for the series opener.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
POST & TIMES HERALD

JUL 15 1956

Highlights

This Week On Radio

MONDAY

7:30 p. m.—WGMS. Music Festival: Germany: Joseph Keilberth conducts the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra.

8:15 p. m.—WRC. Berkshire Festival: Bach, Piano Concerto in D Minor.

9 p. m.—WRC. The Telephone Hour: Tenor Brian Sullivan, guest.

9:15 p. m.—WTOP. Johnny Dollar: Johnny begins investigation of "The Star of Capetown Matter."

11 p. m.—WMAL. Let's Dance: Premiere of new Monday through Saturday late evening dance music show.

[133]

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUNCIE, IND.
STAR
Circ. D. 27,810 - S. 29,028

JUL 1 1956

'Parable of Death' Climax for Summer Arts Festival

Lukas Foss, Los Angeles, composer of the "Parable of Death" presented at Ball State College Thursday night as part of the First Summer Arts Festival at the college, stand on the set of the "Parable" at left. Foss directed the performance here. With him are Gertrude Lippincott, modern dancer; John Lewis, set designer for the production; and Dr. Robert Hargreaves, head of the Ball State music department.

If the authors of the sociological study which characterized Muncie as "Middletown, U.S.A." . . . the place where everyone's lace curtains were dirty . . . could have been in the Ball State Assembly Hall for Thursday night's performance of "A Parable of Death," they would surely have been inspired to accept the title of the first Summer Arts Festival as the basis for a new evaluation of the city. "Crossroads of America," the theme of the Arts Festival, reached its full significance in the presentation of the powerful work by Lukas Foss, Los Angeles composer, conductor and pianist.

Commissioned only a few seasons ago by the Louisville Orchestra, the "Parable" was written during the composer's stay at the American Academy in Rome. Originally intended for the dancer-actress Vera Zorina, the work was premiered by the Louisville Orchestra with Zorina as narrator, Farrold Stevens as tenor soloist, and Robert Whitney as conductor, and has been recorded by that cast.

Since that time, only a few cultural centers on the East and West coasts, such as New York, Los Angeles and the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, have been privileged to witness a production of the new work.

The Arts Welded

In addition to presenting the mid-continent premiere of the "Parable of Death," the Ball State Arts Festival gave the production an additional premiere aspect by combining for the first time the arts of stagecraft and the dance with narration and the musical forces . . . an event heralded last Sunday in the New York Times. Aiding the enthusiastic audience in its understanding of the work on first hearing was a pre-concert discussion of the composer, the dancer, Gertrude Lippincott, the scene designer, John Lewis, and moderated by Dr. Robert Hargreaves, head of the Ball State music department.

Mr. Foss recounted his search for a suitable epic narrative after the Louisville commission had identified his task as a speaking piece for Zorina with the support of the Louisville Orchestra. After examining many possible stories, the composer decided to combine an old narrative found in Geschichten vom lieben Gott by Rainer Maria Rilke with selected poetic aplification of the theme . . . love and death . . . taken from Rilke's collected works. Entrusting the original story telling to the narrator, Foss then assigned to the tenor soloist and to the chorus the lyrical or dramatic comments selected from the poetic works. The function of the orchestra then became one of tying together the diverse elements, underlining the important moments, and intensifying the dramatic impact of the entire production.

Long-Distance Collaboration

Miss Lippincott, well-known exponent of modern dance, explained how she had arrived at representative motions and postures in creating the choreography for "A Parable of Death" by the study of Foss' score and the Louisville recording, even though some 2,000 miles distance prevented collaboration with the composer before their initial meeting on the Ball State campus last Monday. Foss and Miss Lippincott presented several items from the production with the composer at the piano.

A third party working independently of the composer and choreographer until last week was John Lewis, Kokomo artist, who with his wife Betse prepared the symbolic stage set and supervised the lighting of the production. Lewis explained that before he had become acquainted with the score, his intent had been to drape the stage with tattered bat-like shapes intensifying the sombre. After reading the text, he determined that a simple design employing projected pictures and suggestive colors would best serve Rilke's intent: "To affirm an intimate trust towards Death, out of the deepest joys and wonder of life; that he, Death, who never was a stranger, emerge again, the silent, knowing partner of the living."

New Cultural Heights

Narrator in Thursday evening's production was Dr. Edward Strother of the Ball State English faculty. He carried skillfully the burden of pacing the fragments of the narrative to fit the musical tempo. Tenor soloist was Carroll Alexander, a Ball State student whose performance of the difficult part won warm praise from Mr. Foss. A Festival chorus under the direction of F. Lemuel Anderson and a Festival orchestra prepared by Dr. Robert Hargreaves were molded into a powerful emotional vehicle under the skillful baton of Lukas Foss. Additional musical background was provided by the college trio in residence for the summer, including Gideon Grau, violinist; Irene Rosenberg, pianist, and Salvatore Silipigni, cellist.

The concensus voiced frequently since Thursday evening is that the performance of "A Parable of Death" was of such dramatic and musical effectiveness as to have elevated the Arts Festival to a concluding flourish that future Festivals will be hard pressed to match the success of the first. Certainly the reputations of Muncie and Ball State College as centers of intellectual and cultural activity have leaped overnight into the national forefront with the successful wedding of the arts in this production.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST
Circ. D. 187,155 - S. 201,445

JUL 9 1956

TODAY ON RADIO

A hidden microphone will listen in on a student council comprising juvenile delinquents on Childen in Trouble at 3:15 PM on KPRC. This is a new series designed to show what is being done about the problem of juvenile delinquency. The program originates at New Jersey's Menlo Park Diagnostic Center, a juvenile corrective institution.

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire concerts begin at 7:15 PM on KPRC. This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra will present an all-Mozart program for the series opener.

Views Inside

16, 1956—SUNDAY

28

56

...LURE TO 5 ...ANSAS AND MISSOURI STUDENTS THERE FOR SUMMER.

Berkshire Music Center Provides Inspirational Schooling for Young Musicians Who Win Scholarship Honors.

By Joseph Kaye.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 14.—Under the same great pines where this correspondent has been interviewing Missouri-Kansas students here for the past several years, a new crop of these enthusiastic aspirants to musical distinction was gathered. There were five of them, two girls and three young men, all attractive, as though the search for the highest in music had enhanced them physically. They were Barbara Utt of Warrensburg, Mo., Jack Bayes of Wichita, Kas., Geraldine Riggs of El Dorado, Kas., Wayne Harrell of Wichita, Kas., and James Seubert of St. Louis.

They are enrolled in the celebrated Berkshire Music center, which is part of the annual summer festival of music conducted by the Boston symphony orchestra in Tanglewood, set amid the Berkshire hills. All are scholarship students, which indicates their exceptional talents.

Barbara Utt, a blond young woman with the provoking faculty of flashing from the gay to the serious, is studying choral conducting. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, has assigned her to conduct (for student recitals) three choral songs by a fellow-Missourian, Virgil Thomson, formerly of Kansas City.

Miss Utt a Soprano.

Miss Utt is the daughter of Prof. Paul R. Utt, retired director of the music division of the Central Missouri State college. She is a lyric soprano who has had teaching experience, and this fall will begin teaching teachers at Wisconsin State college in Platteville, Wis. While there she will commute to Northwestern university in Evanston, Ill., where she recently received her master's degree, to continue her music studies. With a devotional seriousness, she said she hoped to be a choral conductor. In Warrensburg she lives with her family at 616 South Maguire street.

Geraldine Riggs, a volatile blonde, is a cellist. Her father is Carl C. Riggs, professor of education at the Junior college in El Dorado. She came to the cello when her father taught in Liberal, Kas., and the school orchestra was short of that instrument. She was only 10 then and shorter than the big fiddle, but it was a union of love immediately. Her four sisters are pianists, but marriage appeared to have halted any urge for professionalism. Miss Riggs, however, intends to be a concert cellist. Her home is at 1310 North Topeka road, El Dorado.

In Family Tradition.

Carrying on a family tradition is Jack Bayes. His father, the late John Bayes, was an amateur trombonist and his uncle, Harold Bayes, is the retired trombone soloist of the U. S. Marine band. So Jack took to the trombone naturally and is now a member of the Wichita Symphony orchestra while studying at Wichita university. When he was with the Springfield high school band he played several times in Kansas City at the new music conferences held by the Jenkins Music company. Bayes lives at 1619 Fairmount street, Wichita.

The other man from Wichita, Wayne Harrell, plays French horn and is the son of Arthur L. Harrell, director of music education in the Wichita public schools. A twin brother, Wynne, who plays the trumpet, will be teaching music in the Kansas City, Kansas, public schools this fall. Another brother, Hugh, is a trombonist and a third brother, Ray, is a clarinetist. The senior Harrell taught music in Jefferson City and Independence, Mo., and it was in his father's bands that Wayne began studying his instrument.

One Married Student.

Harrell is the only married student in the group. His wife is Patsy, a secretary with the Claude Neon Light company in Wichita. They live at 445 Matthewson court, Wichita.

James Seubert, a violinist, is something of a phenomenon here—he does not aspire to be a professional musician. His ambition is to be a good physicist, and he is studying for his future profession at Washington university in St. Louis. Seubert is thus an amateur in the exact and most respected meaning of the word—lover of music. He is fine enough a musician to have won a scholarship offered by the women's association of the St. Louis Symphony, and to have been accepted at the Berkshire Music center. He has devoted 10 years of his life to the violin and intends to devote the rest of his leisure life to it. His father is professor of education at Washington university.

When these five students leave Tanglewood this country will be the richer by five excellent musicians, a happy result envisioned for the Berkshire Music center by its founder, Sergei Koussevitzky.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
POST & TIMES HERALD

JUL 15 1956

Highlights This Week On Radio

MONDAY

7:30 p. m.—WGMS. Music From Germany: Joseph Keilberth conducts the Bayreuth Festival Orchestra.

8:15 p. m.—WRC. Berkshire Festival: Bach, Piano Concerto in D Minor.

9 p. m.—WRC. The Telephone Hour: Tenor Brian Sullivan guest.

9:15 p. m.—WTOP. Johnny Dollar: Johnny begins investigation of "The Star of Capetown Matter."

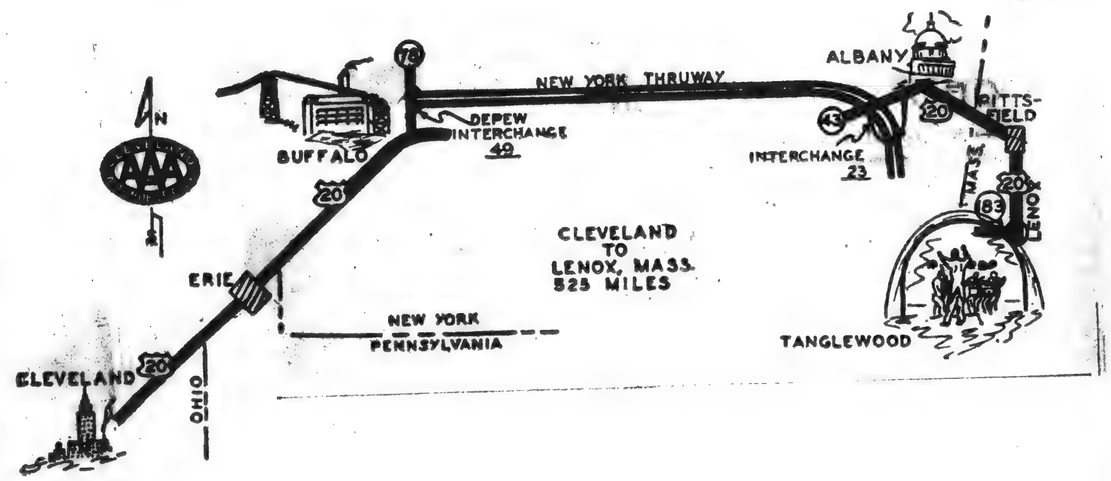
11 p. m.—WMAL. Let's Dance: Premiere of new Monday through Saturday late evening dance music show.

[133]

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
Circ. D. 302,579 - S. 520,850

THE OPEN ROAD

Berkshire Festival Offers Harmony Tour



This short trip suggested by the Open Road aims at pure pleasure for several days of touring and relaxation. It is a visit to the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood is well known to classical music lovers as the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. You need not be a music lover to find you will relish this different trip where you can enjoy maximum recreation by relaxing.

Here on a beautiful 200-acre estate you will find a retreat that will quickly give you that solid feeling of ease and comfort you look for on a vacation trip.

Central point of interest at Tanglewood is the "Music Shed." This is where the orchestra will present its superb music in the out-of-doors daily through Aug. 12.

It is 525 miles from Cleveland to Lenox but the New York Thruway makes it an easy drive. Leaving Cleveland you follow U.S. Route 20 through Erie, Pa., and past Buffalo, N.Y., to Route 78 and the Depew Interchange 49 to put you on the thruway.

Leaving the thruway at Interchange 23, follow Route 43 to Albany and rejoin U.S. Route 20. Follow east to Pittsfield, then south to Lenox and Tanglewood.

On the Tanglewood estate you can visit the little Red House where Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote "The House of Seven Gables" and collected material for his classic "Tanglewood Tales."

This entire area abounds with historic and scenic attractions. The Berkshire Mountains offer scenic tours and there are many small lakes worth a stop and visit.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUL 3 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN DAILY
Circ. D. 30,450
JUL 9 1956

Radio - TV Roundup

By TED NELSON

TODAY'S RADIO: The Boston Symphony Orchestra will come to you via WRCA at 8:15 tonight from the Berkshire Festival with Ben Grauer as host . . . The Armed Services Music shows will be broadcast at 4:30 p.m. instead of the usual 2:30 p.m. beginning today from WOR . . . The mutual station will also premiere a new adventure series at 8:30 p.m. called "Danger with Granger." . . . A hidden microphone will "listen in" on a student council of juvenile delinquents on WRCA at 4:15 p.m. . . . Pat O'Brien will guest on "Your Happy Holiday" on WABC at 2 p.m. . . . Arthur Godfrey returns to his two radio programs from the west coast today at 10 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. on WCBS . . . "The Telephone Hour" will feature Jose Iturbi at 9 tonight on WRCA.

TODAY'S TELEVISION: Guest soloist on tonight's "Voice of Firestone," is Mildred Miller on ABC-TV at 8:30 (also on radio WABC) . . . A full plastic aorta operation will be shown tonight at 9 on "Medic" via NBC-TV . . . "So This is Hollywood" replaces "I Married Joan" at 5 p.m. over NBC-TV . . . "The Vic Damone Show" will guest Rocky Graziano, Dolores Gray and Paul Newman at 9:30 p.m. over CBS-TV . . . Jack Hawkins will star in "The Adventurers," at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV's "Film Fair." . . . Chas. Winninger portrays Charles Farrel's father on the "Charlie Farrell Show" tonight at 9 on CBS-TV.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
WASHINGTON, D. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 138,778
JUL 16 1956

Radio Fill-In

8:15 WRC—Berkshire Festival: Lukas Foss will assume the dual role of conductor and piano soloist as he plays Bach's "Piano Concerto in D Minor."

9:05 WGMS—Concert Masterpieces: Mozart, Symphony No. 41 in C—K.551 "Jupiter; Weber; Piano Concerto No. 2.

11:00 WWDC—John Massey: Massey livens the night with the latest rhythm and blues discs.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD
Circ. D. 88,500
JUL 14 1956

Lukas Foss' Opera Listed At Berkshire Music Center

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

The opera which is to be presented the evenings of Aug. 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer who is serving as a faculty member in the Berkshire Center's composition department.

Boris Godolvsky, head of the center's opera department, is to stage the opera which is based on a little-known German folk tale.

"'Griffelkin'," in the words of the composer, "is the story of a devil sent into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil . . . to change the world to hell.

"When he arrives in the world, he sees for the first time the blue sky. This is his first discovery. In the course of the day he discovers many things human—love, death, a mother with her children. With each discovery he becomes more human.

"Finally he commits a good deed and is thereupon expelled from hell."

This is the composer's second opera. His first is "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County."

Goodman at Tanglewood Friday

Benny Goodman, celebrated jazz musician, will make his Tanglewood debut Friday night at the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert hall at Boston Symphony's summer home at Lenox, Mass.

GOODMAN will be featured in the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622," with a chamber orchestra including first chair men of the Boston orchestra under the direction of Dr. Charles Munch.

The program wil also include the Mozart "Symphony in G. minor, K. 550" and the "Symphony in D major K 504."

Goodman will also appear on July 11 in a program at 8:30 p.m. with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in the Mozart "Clarinet Quintet."

* * *

THE BERKSHIRE Festival Concerts for 1956 will pay homage to the current season's 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and will feature first performances at Tanglewood of four works commissioned by the orchestra. A number of works will also be performed in observance of the world-wide celebration of Mozart's bi-centennial.

The symphonic pieces commissioned by the orchestra include works of Goffredo Petrassi, Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston.

The festival pattern is the same as in recent years with six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music; chamber orchestra concerts in the popular "Bach-Mozart series" for the first two weekends and in the final four weekends the full 104-piece Boston Symphony playing 12 weekend concerts.

* * *

THE FIRST of the Wednesday evening programs wil be presented tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall by the Kroll String Quartet. The program will include the Mozart "Quartet in C major, K. 460"; the Prokofieff "Quartet number 1, opus 50" and the Beethoven "Quartet, opus 59, number 3."

A Saturday evening program by the chamber orchestra will include the Mozart "Symphony in D major, K. 385," and the "Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297 b"; the Martinu "Military Mass" and the Cowell "Hymn and Fuguing Tune." The Yale Glee Club will make its initial appearance in the "Military Mass." Dr. Munch will conduct.

On the Sunday afternoon program at 2:30 o'clock, Lukas Foss will appear in the double role of soloist and conductor. The program will include the Hadyn "Symphony number 86 in D major," the [illegible] Song, for [illegible] the Haieff "Divertimento," Ives "The Unanswered Question" and the Bach "Piano Concerto in D minor."

BENNY GOODMAN
King of Swing

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

RALEIGH, N. C.
NEWS & OBSERVER
Circ. D. 129,607

JUL 1 1956

Local Girl Gets Voice Scholarship

Because of the lilt in her voice, Raleigh's Carolyn Warlick (daughter of the Maxwell Warlicks, 3105 Eton Rd.) will sing at the country's summer music capital — Tanglewood, Mass.

CAROLYN

To young and talented Carolyn has come a musical plum, a full scholarship to the Tanglewood Choir. It was one of two awarded over the South and the slender, pretty girl can thank her fine record at the Manhattan School of Music this past year for the summer musical theining with the best.

The musical center at Tanglewood, is of course the famed Berkshire Music Center, which this year will be in session from July 7 to August 12, with a distinguished faculty including principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The purpose of the Center is to provide for the advanced study of music through experience in group performance. Concerts are Student concerts include such versatile programs as opera, orchestra, chorus, student compositions, and chamber music.

The Tanglewood Choir forms the nucleus of the Festival Chorus. A limited number of especially qualified singers — like Carolyn — serve as chorus leaders in all choral activity, and are also assigned solo parts in the work of the Choir.

The rigid scheduling and training demands stiff discipline. Carolyn will be allowed no dates during the weekend — that's concert time.

But Carolyn, who left for the Mass. country Thursday with her mother, has an honor worth discipline.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DALLAS NEWS
DALLAS TEXAS
JUL 9 1956

Berkshire Concerts On WFAA

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on WRC, Radio Monday, July 9, and will be heard at 7:15 p.m. over WFAA-820.

Many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass., will be included in this series.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by regular director, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

Monday's opening concert will be devoted entirely to music of Mozart.

These recorded broadcasts will continue through Oct. 1, 1956.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

AMARILLO, TEX.
NEWS-GLOBE

JUL 1 1956

TEACHER

Will Study In New York

MILDRED M. BUSCH

Studying piano and advanced teaching methods with Edwin Hughes, who was recently awarded the Harry Hadley Medal for distinguished services to American music, will be Mildred M. Busch, 923 Fannin, pianist and teacher.

Mrs. Busch left last night for New York for six weeks of study. She also will study sculpture and ceramics at the Museum of Modern Art and will attend the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., as well as many concerts and recitals in Manhattan. She will return to Amarillo on Aug. 15.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MOUNTAINBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

JUL 5 1956

Benny Goodman Plays at Tanglewood July 6 and 11

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartest on Wednesday, July 11; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles

Benny Goodman

Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who makes his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts on Friday, July 6, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B.S.O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CALL-CHRONICLE
Circ. S. 61,385

JUL 1 1956

Music Lovers Plan Excursion To Tanglewood

Tanglewood, Mass., with its inspiring music and beautiful scenery, will attract members of the Music Lovers Club and their friends to the Berkshire Music Festival again this year.

They will leave from Allentown by chartered bus on Thursday morning, July 26, and will stay at the Wendell - Sherwood Hotel in Pittsfield, Mass., with the return trip scheduled for Sunday night, the 29th.

The itinerary includes three concerts performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting. Rudolph Serkin will be the soloist at the Saturday evening concert. He is doing the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A Minor."

The group also will attend the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, Mass., where they will see a performance by the San Francisco Ballet, and will have matinee seats at the Berkshire Play House for the play "Heartbreak House."

Reservations for the trip are now being taken by Mrs. Grace E. Peters of Allentown. This will be the fourth year that she has shepherded music loving groups to the music festival.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
POST & TIMES HERALD

JUL 16 1956

Highlights on Radio

11 a. m.—WMAL. Jerry and Jimma: Mr. and Mrs. Strong entertain with special features and popular music.

11:30 a. m.—WTOP. Kathy Godfrey Show: Willy Ley, one of the world's foremost authorities on rockets and flying saucers, discusses man's first landing on Mars.

1:15 p. m.—WWDC. Fred Fiske: "Waltzes," an album of old favorites arranged and conducted by David Carroll, is featured.

5:35 p. m.—WGMS. Road Show: Bizet, L'Arlesienne Suite No. 1.

8:15 p. m.—WRC. Berkshire Festival: Lukas Foss assumes the dual role of conductor and piano soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor.

8:30 p. m.—WMAL. Voice of Firestone: Baritone Thomas L. Thomas is guest.

9 p. m.—WRC. The Telephone Hour: Tenor Brian Sullivan is guest.

9:05 p. m.—WTOP. My Son Jeep: Dr. Allison hears that his 13-year-old daughter is planning to enter a local bathing beauty contest.

9:15 p. m.—WTOP. Johnny Dollar: Johnny begins investigation of "The Star of Capetown Matter," concerning the disappearance of a famous diamond insured for $150,000.

10:30 p. m.—WWDC. True Detective: A taxi crash, in which the driver is killed, baffles police as to whether it was accident or murder.

10:30 p. m.—WGMS. Opera Box: Scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 190,612 - S. 166,660

JUL 15 1956

Summer Festivals

TOLEDO

Tuesday at 8: Zoo Amphitheater, Walbridge Park. Toledo Concert Band, Samuel P. Szor conducting; Rose Bruno, contralto; admission free, no tickets required.

ELSEWHERE

Detroit: Music Shed, Michigan State Fair Grounds, through Aug. 11. Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Valter Poole conducting. Admission free. Write James Hicks, Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Masonic Auditorium, Detroit, Mich.

Detroit: Band Shell, Belle Isle. Free band concerts; Leonard B. Smith conducting. Every night at 8:15, through Aug. 4.

Tanglewood: Berkshire Music Festival, Lenox, Mass., through Aug. 12. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Muench conducting, Opera orchestra, chamber music. Write Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Cincinnati: 35th season of Zoo Opera, through July 28. Nightly at 8:15, except Mondays and Tuesdays. Write Cincinnati Summer Opera, 534 Vine St., Cincinnati 2, O.

Ravinia: Ravinia Park, Chicago, through Aug. 11. Chicago Symphony Orchestra; conductors — Ormandy, Fiedler, Monteux, Markevitch, Bernstein, Copland, Solti, Steinberg, Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo; soloists, etc. Write Ravinia Festival Association, 11 S. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Cleveland: "Pops" concerts, Public Auditorium (air conditioned). Cleveland Summer Orchestra, Louis Lane conducting. Orchestra, soloists, etc. Tickets at Burrow's, 419 Euclid Ave., or contact George E. L. Smith, Severance Hall.

Stratford, Ont.: Through Aug. 11. Festival Orchestra, Reginald Stewart and Heinz Unger conducting; chorus, opera, jazz, orchestra, recitals. New concert hall.

Wisconsin: Peninsula Music Festival: Gibraltar Auditorium, Fish Creek. Aug. 11 through 26. Thor Johnson, musical director. Orchestra, soloist, chamber music; premieres of commissioned and other works; concerts for children and young people; dance music. Write Helen P. Gauntlett, 43 East 27th St., New York 16.

New York: Stadium Concerts; Lewisohn Stadium, 137th St. and Amsterdam Ave. Stadium Symphony Orchestra (Philharmonic). Nightly at 8:30, through July 28. Orchestra, ballet, soloists, etc.

ON THE AIR

Today at 2:05 (WJR): "World Music Festivals"; James Fassett, commentator. Los Angeles Festival; Debussy, "Martyrdom of St. Sebastian"—Louis Jourdan, narrator; Roger Wagner Chorale; Marni Nixon, soprano; Dorothy Ledger, Gina Rufino, mezzo-soprano—Andre Jolivet, Concertino for trumpet, strings, piano; Waxman conducting.

Tomorrow at 8:15 (WWJ): Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Muench conducting. Berlioz, Debussy and Roussel.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,152 - S. 116,397

JUL 6 1956

1st Concert Tonight at Tanglewood

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Music Festival will be given tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 o'clock when Dr. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber music orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program.

The featured soloist will be the Tanglewood debut of the famed jazz clarinetist, Benny Goodman who will be heard in the Mozart Concerto in A major with the orchestra. The orchestra will offer two Mozart symphonies, the G minor, No. 40 and the D major, No. 38.

WEEK-END PROGRAM

Saturday night the program will include the "Haffner" Symphony and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertant by Mozart. The second half of the program will include the Berkshire Music Center's chorus department and the Yale Glee Club, under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Sunday afternoon, at 2:30, Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a program of music by Haydn, Haieff and Ives. He will also be the soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor. Reservations for all concerts may be secured by calling the Festival box office, Lenox 600.

[135]

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

RALEIGH, N. C.
NEWS & OBSERVER
Circ. D. 129,607

JUL 1 1956

Local Girl Gets Voice Scholarship

Because of the lilt in her voice, Raleigh's Carolyn Warlick (daughter of the Maxwell Warlicks, 3103 Eton Rd.) will sing at the country's summer music capital — Tanglewood, Mass.

CAROLYN

To young and talented Carolyn has gone a musical plum, a full scholarship to the Tanglewood Choir. It was one of two awarded over the South and the slender, pretty girl can thank her fine record at the Manhattan School of Music this past year for the summer musical thaining with the best.

The musical center at Tanglewood, is of course the famed Berkshire Music Center, which this year will be in session from July 7 to August 12, with a distinguished faculty including principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The purpose of the Center is to provide for the advanced study of music through experience in group performance. Concerts are Student concerts include such versatile programs as opera, orchestra, chorus, student compositions, and chamber music.

The Tanglewood Choir forms the necleus of the Festival Chorus. A limited number of especially qualified singers — like Carolyn — serve as chorus leaders in all choral activity, and are also assigned solo parts in the work of the Choir.

The rigid scheduling and training demands stiff discipline. Carolyn will be allowed no dates during the weekend — that's concert time.

But Carolyn, who left for the Mass. country Thursday with her mother, has an honor worth discipline.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DALLAS NEWS
DALLAS TEXAS
JUL 9 1956

Berkshire Concerts On WFAA

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on NBC Radio Monday, July 9, and will be heard at 7:15 p.m. over WFAA-820.

Many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass., will be included in this series.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by regular director, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

Monday's opening concert will be devoted entirely to music of Mozart.

These recorded broadcasts will continue through Oct. 1, 1956.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

AMARILLO, TEX.,
NEWS-GLOBE

JUL 1 1956

TEACHER

Will Study In New York

MILDRED M. BUSCH

Studying piano and advanced teaching methods with Edwin Hughes, who was recently awarded the Henry Hadley Medal for distinguished services to American music, will be Mildred M. Busch, 923 Fannin, pianist and teacher.

Mrs. Busch left last night for New York for six weeks of study. She also will study sculpture and ceramics at the Museum of Modern Art and will attend the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., as well as many concerts and recitals in Manhattan. She will return to Amarillo on Aug. 15.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673
JUL 5 1956

Benny Goodman Plays at Tanglewood July 6 and 11

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartest on Wednesday, July 11; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles

Benny Goodman

Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who makes his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts on Friday, July 6, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B.S.O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CALL-CHRONICLE
Circ. S. 61,385
JUL 1 1956

Music Lovers Plan Excursion To Tanglewood

Tanglewood, Mass., with its inspiring music and beautiful scenery, will attract members of the Music Lovers Club and their friends to the Berkshire Music Festival again this year.

They will leave from Allentown by chartered bus on Thursday morning, July 26, and will stay at the Wendell - Sherwood Hotel in Pittsfield, Mass., with the return trip scheduled for Sunday night, the 29th.

The itinerary includes three concerts performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting. Rudolph Serkin will be the soloist at the Saturday evening concert. He is doing the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A Minor."

The group also will attend the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, Mass., where they will see a performance by the San Francisco Ballet, and will have matinee seats at the Berkshire Play House for the play "Heartbreak House."

Reservations for the trip are now being taken by Mrs. Grace E. Peters of Allentown. This will be the fourth year that she has shepherded music loving groups to the music festival.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
POST & TIMES HERALD
JUL 16 1956

Highlights on Radio

11 a. m.—WMAL. Jerry and Jimma: Mr. and Mrs. Strong entertain with special features and popular music.

11:30 a. m.—WTOP. Kathy Godfrey Show: Willy Ley, one of the world's foremost authorities on rockets and flying saucers, discusses man's first landing on Mars.

1:15 p. m.—WWDC. Fred Fiske: "Waltzes," an album of old favorites arranged and conducted by David Carroll, is featured.

5:35 p. m.—WGMS. Road Show: Bizet, L'Arlesienne Suite No. 1.

8:15 p. m.—WRC. Berkshire Festival: Lukas Foss assumes the dual role of conductor and piano soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor.

8:30 p. m.—WMAL. Voice of Firestone: Baritone Thomas L. Thomas is guest.

9 p. m.—WRC. The Telephone Hour: Tenor Brian Sullivan is guest.

9:05 p. m.—WTOP. My Son Jeep: Dr. Allison hears that his 13-year-old daughter is planning to enter a local bathing beauty contest.

9:15 p. m.—WTOP. Johnny Dollar: Johnny begins investigation of "The Star of Capetown Matter," concerning the disappearance of a famous diamond insured for $150,000.

10:30 p. m.—WWDC. True Detective: A taxi crash, in which the driver is killed, baffles police as to whether it was accident or murder.

10:30 p. m.—WGMS. Opera Box: Scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 190,612 - S. 166,660
JUL 15 1956

Summer Festivals

TOLEDO

Tuesday at 8: Zoo Amphitheater, Walbridge Park. Toledo Concert Band, Samuel P. Szor conducting; Rose Bruno, contralto; admission free, no tickets required.

ELSEWHERE

Detroit: Music Shed, Michigan State Fair Grounds, through Aug. 11. Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Valter Poole conducting. Admission free. Write James Hicks, Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Masonic Auditorium, Detroit, Mich.

Detroit: Band Shell, Belle Isle. Free band concerts; Leonard B. Smith conducting. Every night at 8:15, through Aug. 4.

Tanglewood: Berkshire Music Festival, Lenox, Mass., through Aug. 12. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Muench conducting, Opera orchestra, chamber music. Write Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Cincinnati: 35th season of Zoo Opera, through July 28. Nightly at 8:15, except Mondays and Tuesdays. Write Cincinnati Summer Opera, 534 Vine St., Cincinnati 2, O.

Ravinia: Ravinia Park, Chicago, through Aug. 11. Chicago Symphony Orchestra; conductors — Ormandy, Fiedler, Monteux, Markevitch, Bernstein, Copland, Solti, Steinberg. Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo; soloists, etc. Write Ravinia Festival Association, 11 S. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Cleveland: "Pops" concerts, Public Auditorium (air conditioned). Cleveland Summer Orchestra, Louis Lane conducting. Orchestra, soloists, etc. Tickets at Burrow's, 419 Euclid Ave., or contact George E. L. Smith, Severance Hall.

Stratford, Ont.: Through Aug. 11. Festival Orchestra, Reginald Stewart and Heinz Unger conducting; chorus, opera, jazz, orchestra, recitals. New concert hall.

Wisconsin: Peninsula Music Festival: Gibraltar Auditorium, Fish Creek. Aug. 11 through 26. Thor Johnson, musical director. Orchestra, soloist, chamber music; premieres of commissioned and other works; concerts for children and young people; dance music. Write Helen P. Gauntlett, 43 East 27th St., New York 16.

New York: Stadium Concerts, Lewisohn Stadium, 137th St. and Amsterdam Ave. Stadium Symphony Orchestra (Philharmonic). Nightly at 8:30, through July 28. Orchestra, ballet, soloists, etc.

ON THE AIR

Today at 2:05 (WJR): "World Music Festivals"; James Fassett, commentator. Los Angeles Festival; Debussy, "Martyrdom of St. Sebastian"—Louis Jourdan, narrator; Roger Wagner Chorale; Marni Nixon, soprano; Dorothy Ledger, Gina Rufino, mezzo-soprano—Andre Jolivet, Concertino for trumpet, strings, piano; Waxman conducting.

Tomorrow at 8:15 (WWJ): Berkshire Music Festival. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Muench conducting. Berlioz, Debussy and Roussel.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,152 - S. 116,397
JUL 6 1956

1st Concert Tonight at Tanglewood

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Music Festival will be given tonight in The Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 o'clock, when Dr. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber music orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program.

The featured soloist will be the Tanglewood debut of the famed jazz clarinetist, Benny Goodman who will be heard in the Mozart Concerto in A major with the orchestra. The orchestra will offer two Mozart symphonies, the G minor, No. 40 and the D major, No. 38.

WEEK-END PROGRAM

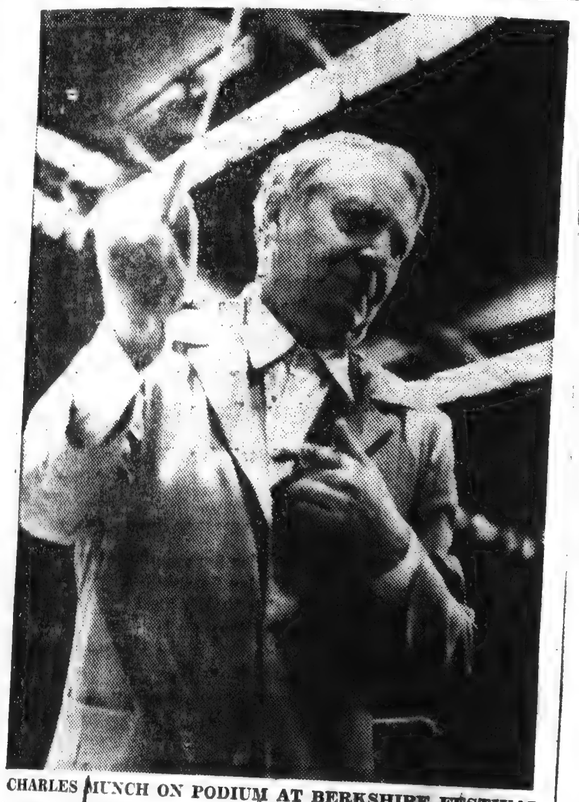
Saturday night the program will include the "Haffner" Symphony and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertant by Mozart. The second half of the program will include the Berkshire Music Center's chorus department and the Yale Glee Club, under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Sunday afternoon, at 2:30, Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a program of music by Haydn, Haieff and Ives. He will also be the soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor. Reservations for all concerts may be secured by calling the Festival box office, Lenox 600.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
Circ. D. 17,580
JUL 6 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6.) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
TARRYTOWN, N. Y.
NEWS
Circ. D. 5,155
JUL 6 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
PEEKSKILL, N. Y.
STAR
JUL 6 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.
STANDARD STAR
Circ. D. 16,526
JUL 6 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
ITEM
Circ. D. 13,765
JUL 6 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
MAMARONECK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 7,211
JUL 6 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
OSSINING, N. Y.
CITIZEN REGISTER
Circ. D. 6,464
JUL 6 1956

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
ELIZABETH, N. J.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 48,228
JUL 12 1956

ANDREW CRISANTI JR.
Student plays first clarinet at musicians' retreat.

Tanglewood Role Given Crisanti

CRANFORD—Andrew Crisanti Jr., 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Crisanti of 304 Centennial Ave., is at Tanglewood, the musicians' retreat at Lenox, Mass., where he is first clarinetist in the Tanglewood Orchestra.

He was chosen to spend six weeks at the music center on the basis of his accomplishments at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, from which he was graduated recently with a B.S. in music degree.

He was the only student from the Essex and Union counties area to be chosen to play at Tanglewood.

Mr. Crisanti has won a two-year scholarship to continue his studies at the conservatory for a master's degree. He is a graduate of Cranford High School where he played in the band and orchestra and on the football and baseball teams.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
COLUMBUS, OHIO
CITIZEN
Circ. D. 91,273 - S. 104,943
JUL 13 1956

Stand Back--It's Mozart

Familiar faces in two different musical worlds are those of Benny Goodman, behind the clarinet, and Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Charles Munch, behind baton. They've teamed up to do the Mozart Clarinet Concerto with the Bostonians for an all-Mozart concert at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-0068
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064
JUL 26 1956

EMINENT VIOLINIST . . . Zino Francescatti who will return to Tanglewood as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto on Sunday, August 5.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 26 1956

Munch To Conduct Student Orchestra

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Berkshire Music Center student symphony orchestra in a portion of the concert it will give Thursday evening, Aug. 2 in the Tanglewood Music Shed. Dr. Munch will lead the students in a work in the interpretation of which he is world-renowned, the Berlioz "Symphonie Fantastique."

[136]

STUDENTS IN "TANGLEWOOD." Among Syracusans studying in Berkshire Music Center is Lenox, Mass., are shown with Richard Burgin, standing, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony and head of the Center's chamber music department. Students Wilfred Burkle, oboeist; Lanalee Litz, harpist; Elaine V. Quint, soprano, and John Oberbrunner, flutist. Burkle, Miss Litz and Oberbrunner play in the Student Orchestra. Miss Quint is an opera department drama student.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUL 26 1956

Two Works to Have Festival Premieres

Compositions of Petrassi and Hanson to Be Heard

Noted Italian's Work Scheduled for Friday Concert and That of Head of Eastman School of Music Is on Saturday Program. — Dr. Munch and Richard Burgin on Podium.

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is in the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music. Last night a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Revel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night, and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, seventy-fifth anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on Saturday night.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood Gala Planned For Aug.

The program details are announced for Tanglewood On Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday evening, August 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. deCarvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composed Heitor Villa-Lobos—the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops will make their third consecutive Tanglewood On Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4:00 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. the Shed, Theater and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7:00 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the main house. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at is conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000
JUL 26 1956

Ruth Posselt to Be Soloist at Tanglewood This Sunday

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, this weekend moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music.

Charles Munch, music director of the Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday, July 27 and Saturday, July 28, evenings and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 29.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

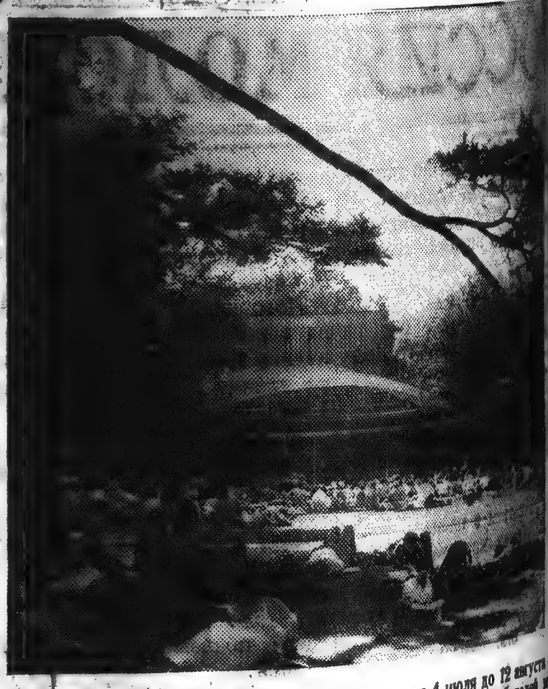
Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, wil be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

RUTH POSSELT

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8.30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and the Sunday afternoon concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., July 28, for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

ЧЕТВЕРГ, 26 ИЮЛЯ 1956 ГОД
НОВОЕ РУССКОЕ СЛОВО — Russian Daily
NOVOYE RUSSKOYE SLOVO



ТЭНГЛВУД, ЛЕНОКС, МАСС.

Музыка при свете луны по пятницам и субботам вечером, и при свете солнца по воскресеньям днем, в исполнении Бостонского Симфонического Оркестра в огромном «Мюзик Шед» в Тэнглвуде в течение Беркширского Фестиваля — от 4 июля до 12 августа — привлекает тысячи любителей музыки. Во время фестиваля 1955 года концерты посетили 198.899 человек, в среднем 9.028 на концерт. По средам вечером в «Тенгр-Холл» даются концерты камерной музыки.

[137]

STUDENTS IN "TANGLEWOOD." Among Syracusans studying in Berkshire Music Center is Lenox, Mass., are shown with Richard Burgin, standing, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony and head of the Center's chamber music department. Students: Wilfred Burkle, oboeist; Lanalee Litz, harpist; Elaine V. Quint, soprano, and John Oberbrunner, flutist. Burkle, Miss Litz and Oberbrunner play in the Student Orchestra. Miss Quint is an opera department drama student.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUL 26 1956

Two Works to Have Festival Premieres

Compositions of Petrassi and Hanson to Be Heard

Noted Italian's Work Scheduled for Friday Concert and That of Head of Eastman School of Music Is on Saturday Program. — Dr. Munch and Richard Burgin on Podium.

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is in the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music. Last night a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Revel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night, and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, seventy-fifth anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on Saturday night.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood Gala Planned For Aug.

The program details are announced for Tanglewood On Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday evening, August 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. deCarvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composed Heitor Villa-Lobos—the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops will make their third consecutive Tanglewood On Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4:00 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. the Shed, Theater and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7:00 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the main house. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at is conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly • Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

JUL 26 19[illegible]

Ruth Posselt to Be Soloist at Tanglewood This Sunday

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, this weekend moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music.

Charles Munch, music director of the Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday, July 27 and Saturday, July 28, evenings and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 29.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, wil be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

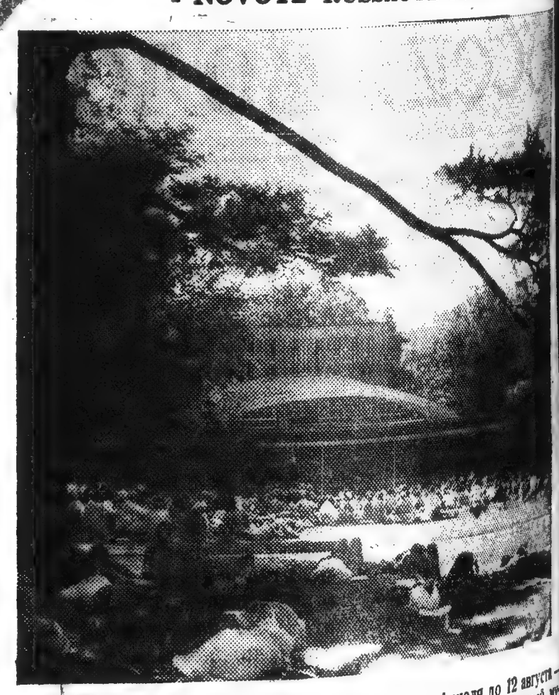
RUTH POSSELT

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8.30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and the Sunday afternoon concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., July 28, for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

ЧЕТВЕРГ, 26 ИЮЛЯ 1956 ГОД

НОВОЕ РУССКОЕ СЛОВО — Russian Daily — NOVOYE RUSSKOYE SLOVO



ТЭНГЛВУД, ЛЕНОКС. МАСС.

Музыка при свете луны по пятницам и субботам вечером, и при свете солнца по воскресеньям днем, в исполнении Бостонского Симфонического Оркестра в огромном «Мюзик Шед» в Тэнглвуде в течение Беркширского Фести-валя — от 4 июля до 12 августа — привлекает тысячи любителей музыки. Во время фестиваля 1955 года концерты посетили 108.336 человек, в среднем 9.028 на концерт. По средам вечером в «Театр-Холл» даются концерты камерной музыки.

[137]

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408
JUL 26 1956

Koussevitzky Tribute Set For Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its seventh week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a meorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 26 1956

Goffredo Petrassi, Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center. His Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 will have its Tanglewood première Friday night.

Marais and Miranda, balladeers, will give a recital Saturday afternoon at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
JUL 27 1956

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Lenox, tonight at 8:30, beginning the second week-end in the main series of the 1956 Berkshire Festival. The program:

Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Goffredo Petrassi: Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 (first performance in Tanglewood); Tchaikovsky: Fourth Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625
JUL 26 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — The schedule for this season's Organ Institute concerts at Methuen have been announced. The programs will open on Thursday evening, Aug. 2, and will end on Friday evening, Aug. 17.

The opening concert will feature the noted artist Adolphe Teichert in a recital of harpsichord music. This will mark the first time that this instrument has been heard in the Institute series.

It has been announced that this was made possible because of the desire for the guest soloist to appear in Methuen. An authority in this field, he has given countless recitals with this not too often heard instrument.

The world famous organist, Abdre Marchal will be heard for the first time at Methuen. His list will include concerts on Aug. 3, 10 and 17. It is really an occasion for the Institute to get an artist of such standing for the series.

Agi Jambor will also appear in the series for the first time on Aug. 9 in a piano recital. This marks another first in the distinguished series.

Appearing again will be Catherine Crozier. Her organ recital is scheduled for Aug. 16. One of the world's foremost woman organists, Miss Crozier has provided many brilliant moments to the history of the Methuen series.

Friml's popular "Firefly" will be the featured attraction of next week's program at the Arundel Opera theater in Kennebunkport, Me. A talented cast of singing artists are listed to appear. This promises to be another tops for Misters Boynton and Haithwaite.

Tanglewood Opera

Five acts from 19th century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863, which Mr. Goldovsky's New England Opera company premiered in this country in 1955 in Boston; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), which had a belated 1917 premiere abroad. Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlos" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

Scenery is by Robert O'Hearn ("The Trojans"), Thomas De Gaetani ("Falstaff"), Edward Flesh ("La Rondine" and "Don Carlo"), Roger Graef ("Aida"). Leo Van Witsen has provided costumes for "The Trojans," "Don Carlo", and "Falstaff"; the "Aida" excerpt will employ unit costumes designed by Laura Zirner; and Ray Simpson is costuming "La Rondine." Lighting and technical direction is by Mr. De Gaetani, make-up by Mr. Van Witsen. Piano accompaniment will be provided by Boris Goldovsky.

The program is as follows:

Verdi: Don Carlo (Act II in Italian).
King Philip ..... John Parella
The Grand Inquisitor ..... John McCurdy
Count Lerma Spelios Constantine
Queen Elizabeth ..... Madeline Palmer
Rodrigo .... Donald Henrickson
Princess Eboli .. Shirley Carter

Berlioz: The Trojans (Act IV English translation by Goldovsky, Caldwell and Sloss).
Dido ..... Marjorie McClung
Aeneas ..... Robert Nagy
Anna ..... Anne Rothgeb
Iopas ..... Mallory Walker
Narbal .... Spelios Constantine
Ascanius ..... Mildred Allen
Courtiers of Carthage:
Elaine Hubband, Rolanda Ringo, Norman Schmidt, John Walker.

Verdi: Aida (Duet from Act II in Italian).
Aida ..... Anabelle Bernard
Amneris .... Claudia Taranova
Handmaidens:
Kathleen Eberlein, Barbara Hansen, Elaine Hubbard, Lesli Loosli, Ruth Moore, Inge Weiss, Ruth Willis.

Puccini: La Rondine (Act I English translation by Robert Hess).
Magda ..... Lynn Rasmussen
Lisetta ..... Polyna Zagaretou
Prunier ..... Harold Johnson
Rambaldo ..... Guy Gardner
Suzy ..... Regina Sarfaty
Perichaud .. Spelios Constantine
Bianca ..... Mary Jane Paul
Crebillion ..... Alan Cohn
Ruggero ..... Hal Roberts
Yvette ..... Norma Cleary
Gobin ..... Robert Morris

Verdi: Falstaff (Act I, Scene 2. English translation by Goldovsky, Marshall and Caldwell.)
Mistress Alice Ford ..... Virginia Babikian
Mistress Meg Page ..... Abby-Maria Byers
Dame Quickly .. Rosiland Hupp
Fenton ..... Robert Nagy
Ford ..... Malcolm Bernstein
Dr. Caius ..... Robert Morris
Bardolph ..... Alan Cohn
Pistol ..... Joseph McCurdy
Servants
Mallory Walker and Norman Schmidt.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064
JUL 26 1956

AMUSEMENTS CALENDAR

July 23 - 28—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Heartbreak House, 8:45 p.m. Sat. Mat. 2:30 p.m. Next week, Roomful of Roses.
July 24 - 28—Sharon Playhouse, Heartbreak House, 8:40 p.m. Wed. Mat. 2:30 p.m. Next week, Harvey.
July 27 - 28—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 4 and 9 p.m. San Francisco Ballet.
July 27 - 29—Tanglewood Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Beethoven, Petrassi, Tchaikovsky.
Saturday, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Hanson, Echumann, Honegger. Rudolf Serkin, soloist.
Sunday, 2:30 p.m. Richard Burgin conducting Handel, Hindemith, Mahler. Ruth Posselt, soloist.
July 29—Music Mountain, 4 p.m. Berkshire Quartet. Benny Goodman, guest artist. Mozart, Rainier, Brahms.
July 31 - Aug. 1—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 9 p.m. Aug. 2, 4 p.m. San Francisco Ballet.
Aug. 1—Norfolk Music School, 3:30 p.m. Ensemble Program.
Aug. 1—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, 4 p.m. Scoville Library.
Aug. 1—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Rudolf Serkin and woodwind quartet playing Schumann and Mozart.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Reporter
FOXBORO, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,120
JUL 26 1956

Many Events For One Day Trips In Massachusetts

CAPE ANN, MASS.—There's a full weekend of widely diversified events scheduled for visitors who plan to come here July 27th.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, on Friday July 27th, the famous and festive North Shore Arts Association Costume Ball will get underway at 9:00 p.m. at the wharf off East Gloucester Square. The gay carnival mood which prevails at this event has attracted national attention.

The following day, the annual Annisquam Sea Fair will start. The Fair, a highly educational event based on a nautical theme, attracts thousands of visitors to Annisquam Village each year.

On Sunday, July 29, probably one of the best known and most solemn events held on the East Coast, the Fishermen's Memorial Service, will take place at 4:00 p.m. at Western Avenue near Richard Blyman Bridge, Gloucester. Following the religious ceremonies, for the men who "go down to the sea in ships", relatives and friends toss wreaths into the outgoing tide in memory of their loved ones, lost at sea.

Cape Ann and Gloucester are located off Route 128, and a leisurely ride over this picturebook road is one you will never forget. From Boston, Routes 1 and 1A will connect with Route 128.

LENOX, MASS. — Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27th, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known Festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27th perfomance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28th, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy.

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408
JUL 26 1956

Koussevitzky Tribute Set For Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its second week of summer symphonic events, including with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a meorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 26 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
JUL 27 1956

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Lenox tonight at 8:30, beginning the second week-end in the main series of the 1956 Berkshire Festival. The program:

Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore" No 2; Goffredo Petrassi: Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 (first performance in Tanglewood); Tchaikovsky: Fourth Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625
JUL 26 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — The schedule for this season's Organ Institute concerts at Methuen have been announced. The programs will open on Thursday evening, Aug. 2, and will end on Friday evening, Aug. 17.

The opening concert will feature the noted artist Adolphe Teichert in a recital of harpsichord music. This will mark the first time that this instrument has been heard in the Institute series.

It has been announced that this was made possible because of the desire for the guest soloist to appear in Methuen. An authority in this field, he has given countless recitals with this not too often heard instrument.

The world famous organist, Abdre Marchal will be heard for the first time at Methuen. His list will include concerts on Aug. 3, 10 and 17. It is really an occasion for the Institute to get an artist of such standing for the series.

Agi Jambor will also appear in the series for the first time on Aug. 9 in a piano recital. This marks another first in the distinguished series.

Appearing again will be Catherine Crozier. Her organ recital is scheduled for Aug. 16. One of the world's foremost woman organists, Miss Crozier has provided many brilliant moments to the history of the Methuen series.

Friml's popular "Firefly" will be the featured attraction of next week's program at the Arundel Opera theater in Kennebunkport, Me. A talented cast of singing artists are listed to appear. This promises to be another tops for Misters Boynton and Haithwaite.

Tanglewood Opera

Five acts from 19th century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Muisc center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863, which Mr. Goldovsky's New England Opera company premiered in this country in 1955 in Boston; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), which had a belated 1917 premiere abroad. Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlos" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

Scenery is by Robert O'Hearn ("The Trojans"), Thomas De Gaetani ("Falstaff"), Edward Flesh ("La Rondine" and "Don Carlo"), Roger Graef ("Aida"). Leo Van Witsen has provided costumes for "The Trojans," "Don Carlo", and "Falstaff"; the "Aida" excerpt will employ unit costumes designed by Laura Zirner; and Ray Simpson is costuming "La Rondine.' Lighting and technical direction is by Mr. De Gaetani, make-up by Mr. Van Witsen. Piano accompaniment will be provided by Boris Goldovsky.

The program is as follows:

Verdi: Don Carlo (Act II in Italian).
King Philip ..... John Parella
The Grand Inquisitor ..... John McCurdy
Count Lerma ..... Spelios Constantine
Queen Elizabeth ..... Madeline Palmer
Rodrigo .... Donald Henrickson
Princess Eboli .. Shirley Carter

Berlioz: The Trojans (Act IV English translation by Goldovsky, Caldwell and Sloss).
Dido ..... Marjorie McClung
Aeneas ..... Robert Nagy
Anna ..... Anne Rothgeb
Iopas ..... Mallory Walker
Narbal .... Spelios Constantine
Ascanius ..... Mildred Allen
Courtiers of Carthage:
Elaine Hubband, Rolanda Ringo, Norman Schmidt, John Walker.

Verdi: Aida (Duet from Act II in Italian).
Aida ..... Anabelle Bernard
Amneris .... Claudia Taranova
Handmaidens:
Kathleen Eberlein, Barbara Hansen, Elaine Hubbard, Lesli Loosli, Ruth Moore, Inge Weiss, Ruth Willis.

Puccini: La Rondine (Act I English translation by Robert Hess).
Magda ..... Lynn Rasmussen
Lisetta ..... Polyna Zagaretou
Prunier ..... Harold Johnson
Rambaldo ..... Guy Gardner
Suzy ..... Regina Sarfaty
Perichaud .. Spelios Constantine
Bianca ..... Mary Jane Paul
Crebillion ..... Alan Cohn
Ruggero ..... Hal Roberts
Yvette ..... Norma Cleary
Gobin ..... Robert Morris

Verdi: Falstaff (Act I, Scene 2. English translation by Goldovsky, Marshall and Caldwell.)
Mistress Alice Ford ..... Virginia Babikian
Mistress Meg Page ..... Abby-Maria Byers
Dame Quickly .. Rosiland Hupp
Fenton ..... Robert Nagy
Ford ..... Malcolm Bernstein
Dr. Caius ..... Robert Morris
Bardolph ..... Alan Cohn
Pistol ..... Joseph McCurdy
Servants
Mallory Walker and Norman Schmidt.

Goffredo Petrassi, Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center. His Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 will have its Tanglewood première Friday night.

Marais and Miranda, balladeers, will give a recital Saturday afternoon at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass.

[138]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064
JUL 26 1956

AMUSEMENTS CALENDAR

July 23 - 28—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Heartbreak House, 8:45 p.m. Sat. Mat. 2:30 p.m. Next week, Roomful of Roses.
July 24 - 28—Sharon Playhouse, Heartbreak House, 8:40 p.m. Wed. Mat. 2:30 p.m. Next week, Harvey.
July 27 - 28—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 4 and 9 p.m. San Francisco Ballet.
July 27 - 29—Tanglewood Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Beethoven, Petrassi, Tchaikovsky.
Saturday, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Hanson, Echumann, Honegger. Rudolf Serkin, soloist.
Sunday, 2:30 p.m. Richard Burgin conducting Handel, Hindemith, Mahler. Ruth Posselt, soloist.
July 29—Music Mountain, 4 p.m. Berkshire Quartet. Benny Goodman, guest artist. Mozart, Rainier, Brahms.
July 31 - Aug. 1—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 9 p.m. Aug. 2, 4 p.m. San Francisco Ballet.
Aug. 1—Norfolk Music School, 3:30 p.m. Ensemble Program.
Aug. 1—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, 4 p.m. Scoville Library.
Aug. 1—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Rudolf Serkin and woodwind quartet playing Schumann and Mozart.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Reporter
FOXBORO, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,120
JUL 26 1956

Many Events For One Day Trips In Massachusetts

CAPE ANN, MASS.—There's a full weekend of widely diversified events scheduled for visitors who plan to come here July 27th.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, on Friday July 27th, the famous and festive North Shore Arts Association Costume Ball will get underway at 9:00 p.m. at the wharf off East Gloucester Square. The gay carnival mood which prevails at this event has attracted national attention.

The following day, the annual Annisquam Sea Fair will start. The Fair, a highly educational event based on a nautical theme, attracts thousands of visitors to Annisquam Village each year.

On Sunday, July 29, probably one of the best known and most solemn events held on the East Coast, the Fishermen's Memorial Service, will take place at 4:00 p.m. at Western Avenue near Richard Blyman Bridge, Gloucester. Following the religious ceremonies, for the men who "go down to the sea in ships", relatives and friends toss wreaths into the outgoing tide in memory of their loved ones, lost at sea.

Cape Ann and Gloucester are located off Route 128, and a leisurely ride over this picture-book road is one you will never forget. From Boston, Routes 1 and 1A will connect with Route 128.

LENOX, MASS. — Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27th, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known Festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27th perfomance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28th, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy.

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

BRANFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,38[illegible]

DUNCAN MacDONALD suggests.....

(Duncan MacDonald is featured every weekday on the "YANKEE HOME and FOOD SHOW" on the Yankee Network at 1:15 p.m.)

047

...THE BERKSHIRES as an ideal vacation spot. With its main emphasis on the musical attractions at Tanglewood, only it April to forget that, with Labor Day, the Berkshires have many months of pleasant holidays featuring beautiful scenery and music. A short motor [illegible] a variety of possibilities: At Pittsfield, The Berkshire Museum, The Berkshire Athenaeum which houses the Herman Melville Memorial Room, the Little Cinema, the Berkshire Garden Center. [illegible] a few miles away, there is the Crane Museum at Dalton; the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary at Lenox; the studio of Daniel Chester French at Stockbridge, Massachusetts. And at Williamstown, not too far away, the new Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute.

...MARGARET FRENCH CRESSON is a charming person to [illegible] in conversation about her father, Daniel Chester French, the distinguished sculptor. Mrs. Cresson lives in the family home which is adjacent to Chesterwood, the sculptor's studio. Open to the public until the end of September, the studio has many models, [illegible] and bronzes, including those of the Lincoln Memorial, the Alma Mater on the steps of Low Library at Columbia University, the figure Harvard in Harvard Yard, the bronze doors of the Boston Public Library, the War Memorial at Exeter, New Hampshire, the Minute Man at Concord.

...DR. HENRY WOOD IS a page out of American history. Daniel Chester [illegible] with only 16 when the Concord Committee entrusted him with the completion for the Minute Man. When the statue was [illegible] by Ralph Waldo Emerson on April 19, 1875, it brought [illegible] to the sculptor. Fifty years later he was present at the dedication of his most famous statue, the great Seated Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

...SPEAKING OF HISTORY, George Bisacca, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, has revived a friendly Civil War on his 500-acre tract in Lenox, Massachusetts, formerly the estate of multi-millionaire Morris C. Tuckerman, and now a year-round vacation resort. Each Sunday afternoon the guests and staff 'take sides', put on their Civil War attire, and a sham battle takes place. George Bisacca has visited every important battlefield in the United States, and his collection of Civil War cannons, guns, drawings and maps is [illegible].

...THE INDOOR POOL is one of the most fabulous in New [illegible]. At a cost of $115,000, guests can enjoy swimming [illegible] day while watching skiing enthusiasts outside the [illegible] windows. Other recreation is provided in the form of [illegible], horseback, archery, hunting and fishing. Eastover is not cheap, a lift of the eyebrows or a lot in the price. Whether you play [illegible] with house, the converted carriage house, or in one of the cottages, the view is breathtaking and it is not surprising that the [illegible] of yesteryear come to Lenox from all over the nation to spend the summer.

...PROTEIN FOODS PROVIDERS of blood building nutrients [illegible] energy from fruit sugar. They are a rich source of [illegible] vitamins A, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

...for a [illegible] Carpenter said, "The bow cannot possibly always stand high nor can human nature or human frailty subsist without some kind of recreation."

—KEEP YOUR CHIN UP!

—Duncan MacDonald

NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 27 1956

Music, Fresh Air at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its [illegible]th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 13th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The 1956 season of 24 concerts extends through Aug. 12. In 1955 Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 136,087 music lovers. Its chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall averaged an attendance of 3,032 persons. An average of 9,028 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood (capacity 6,000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

JUL 26 1956

COMING PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood are: Saturday evening, July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor—Soloist: Rudolf Serkin; [illegible]: Symphony No. [illegible]

[illegible]bussy: "La Mer"—Charles Munch, Conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto—Solist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major—Richard Burgin, Conductor.

Next week the Berkshire Festival moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are [illegible] in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate assoloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Echumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premeire of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Beacon
MAYNARD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,021

JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood Festival In 4th Week

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will be completing its fourth week of the current season, the weekend of July 27.

The July 27th performance, scheduled for 8:30 p. m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28th, the 8:30 p. m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p. m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Thursday, July [illegible]

Tanglewood Announces Coming Programs for Shed

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchai[illegible] kovsky Violin Concerto, [illegible] memorate the 100th anni[illegible] of the death of Robert Sc[illegible] (July 29, 1856) with a per[illegible] of his second symphony, a[illegible] also give the Tanglewood p[illegible] of Aaron Copland's Sym[illegible] Ode.

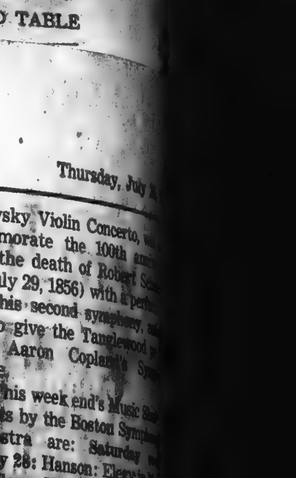
This week end's Music Shed [illegible] certs by the Boston Symph[illegible] chestra are: Saturday e[illegible] July 28: Hanson: Elegy in M[illegible] of Serge Koussevitzky; Schu[illegible] Piano Concerto in A minor—[illegible]ist: Rudolf Serkin; [illegible] Symphony No. 5; Debuss[illegible] Mer"—Charles Munch, Con[illegible] Sunday afternoon, July 29: [illegible]kofieff: "Romeo and Juliet" [illegible] No 2; Hindemith: Violin C[illegible] —Soloist: Ruth Posselt; [illegible] Symphony No. 1, in D, m[illegible] Richard Burgin, Conductor.

Soloist at Tang[illegible]



Jocy De Oliveira, of B[illegible] who has played concer[illegible] ments with the Brazil [illegible] Orchestra and given [illegible] principal South Ameri[illegible] and who performed with [illegible] orchestras last season [illegible] Paris and Hanover, will [illegible] American debut at [illegible] August 3 Berkshire Fe[illegible] cert (8:30 p.m. Music [illegible] forming Ravel's "Piano [illegible] with the Boston Sym[illegible] chestra under the direc[illegible] husband, Brazilian con[illegible] azar De. Carvalho.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 27 1956

New Concerto Will Be Heard At Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere tonight of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer Goffredo Petrassi, as the second weekend of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p. m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA Victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the orchestra.

Benny Goodman Plays Music Mountain Sunda[illegible]

There will be an [illegible] change in the progra[illegible] the fifth Sunday afternoon [illegible] ber music concert of the [illegible] seventh Music Mountain [illegible] Sunday, July 29, at Music [illegible] tain, Falls Village, Conn. [illegible] Goodman, eminent virtuoso [illegible] clarinet in the fields of [illegible] classical music, will be the [illegible] guest artist in a progra[illegible] Brahms, Rainier, and Mozart [illegible] tasha Magg, who was sched[illegible] appear with her husband, [illegible] shire Quartet cellist Fritz [illegible] in Chopin's Sonata for Cel[illegible] Piano in G Minor, will [illegible] sented on Sunday, August [illegible] in the afternoon. Mrs. Mag[illegible] Fritz Magg will then play [illegible] Chopin Sonata for Cello and [illegible]

The program for Sunday [illegible] 29, will be the Quartet in [illegible] Major (K. 458) ("The Hu[illegible] Mozart; the Quartet by [illegible] Rainier; and the Quintet for [illegible] net and Strings in B Minor [illegible] 115 by Brahms. Benny Go[illegible] who appeared twice at [illegible] wood during the summer [illegible] by Mozart, will join the [illegible] of the Berkshire Quartet [illegible] Brahms Quintet for Clari[illegible] Strings.

[139]

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Review
BRANFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,888

JUL 26 1956

DUNCAN MacDONALD suggests . . . . .

(Duncan MacDonald is featured every weekday on the "YANKEE HOME and FOOD SHOW" on the Yankee Network at 1:15 p.m.)

. . . THE BERKSHIRES as an ideal vacation spot. With so much emphasis on the musical attractions at Tanglewood, one is apt to forget that even after Labor Day, the Berkshires have many points of interest besides beautiful scenery and music. A mere listing indicates a variety of possibilities: At Pittsfield, The Berkshire Museum, The Berkshire Athenaeum which houses the Herman Melville Memorial Room, the Little Cinema, the Berkshire Garden Center. Just a few miles away there is the Crane Museum at Dalton; the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary at Lenox; the studio of Daniel Chester French at Stockbridge, Massachusetts. And at Williamstown, not too far away, the new Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute.

. . . MARGARET FRENCH CRESSON is a charming person to engage in conversation about her father, Daniel Chester French, the distinguished sculptor. Mrs. Cresson lives in the family home which is adjacent to Chesterwood, the sculptor's studio. Open to the public until the end of September, the studio has many models, plaster casts and bronzes, including those of the Lincoln Memorial, the Alma Mater on the steps of Low Library at Columbia University, the John Harvard in Harvard Yard, the bronze doors of the Boston Public Library, the War Memorial at Exeter, New Hampshire, the Minute Man at Concord.

. . . CHESTERWOOD is a page out of American history. Daniel Chester French was only 23 when the Concord Committee entrusted him with the commission for the Minute Man. When the statue was unveiled by Ralph Waldo Emerson on April 19, 1875, it brought immediate fame to the sculptor. Fifty years later he was present at the dedication of his most famous statue, the great Seated Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

. . . SPEAKING OF HISTORY, George Bisacca, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, has revived a friendly Civil War on his 500-acre tract at Lenox, Massachusetts, formerly the estate of multi-millionaire Harris C. Fahnestock, and now a year-round vacation resort. Each Sunday afternoon the guests and staff 'take sides', put on their Civil War attire, and a sham battle takes place. George Bisacca has visited every important battlefield in the United States, and his collection of Civil War cannons, guns, drawings and flags is attracting nationwide attention.

. . . EASTOVER'S INDOOR POOL is one of the most fabulous in New England. Built at a cost of $115,000, guests can enjoy swimming on a winter's day while watching skiing enthusiasts outside the massive picture windows. Other recreation is provided in the form of golf, tennis, horseback, archery, hunting and fishing. Eastover is on the American plan and 'seconds' and 'thirds' at mealtime do not cause a lift of the eyebrows or a lift in the price. Whether one stays in the main house, the converted carriage house, or in one of the cottages the view is breathtaking and it is not surprising that the millionaires of yesteryear came to Lenox from all over the entire country to spend the summer.

. . . PRUNE WHIP is an easy dessert. Combine in top of double boiler: 3 egg whites, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon prune cooking liquid, and a dash of salt. Place over boiling water and beat with rotary beater until mixture stands up in peaks when beater is lifted (4 to 7 minutes). Remove from heat and fold in ¾ cup pureed cooked prunes. Cool and serve with cream or custard sauce. 6 servings.

. . . PRUNES ARE POTENT PROVIDERS of blood building nutrients and quick energy from fruit sugar. They are a rich source of needed vitamins A, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

. . . for a THO[illegible]T: Cervantes said, "The bow cannot possibly always stand bent, [illegible] can human nature or human frailty subsist without some lawful recreation."

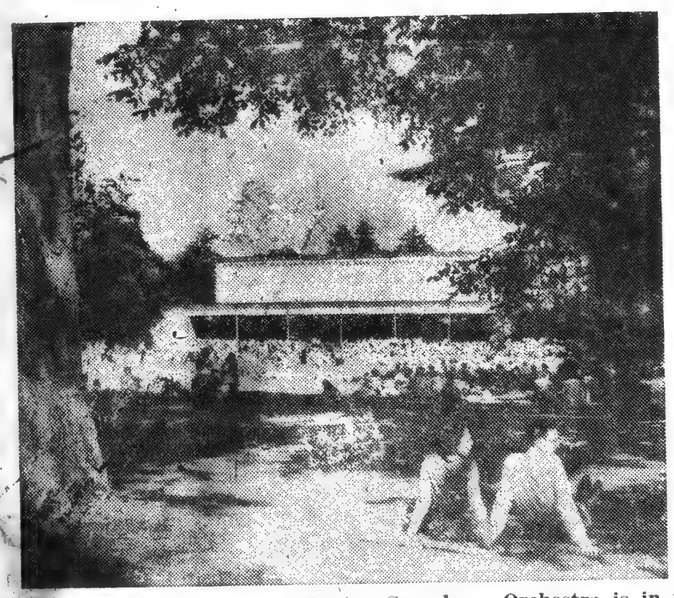
— KEEP YOUR CHIN UP!

— Duncan MacDonald

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 27 1956

Music, Fresh Air at Tanglewood



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The 1956 season of 24 concerts extends through Aug. 12. In 1955 Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 136,087 music lovers. Its chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall averaged an attendance of 3,032 persons. An average of 9,028 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood (capacity 6,000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-0068

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

JUL 26 1956

COMING PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood are: Saturday evening, July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor—Soloist: Rudolf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5: Debussy: "La Mer"—Charles Munch, Conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto—Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major—Richard Burgin, Conductor.

Next week the Berkshire Festival moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Directo Charles Munch (August 5).

The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate assoloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Echumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premeire of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420

Beacon
MAYNARD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,021

JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood Festival In 4th Week

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will be completing its fourth week of the current season, the weekend of July 27.

The July 27th performance, scheduled for 8:30 p. m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28th, the 8:30 p. m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p. m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Thursday, July 26

Tanglewood Announces Coming Programs for Shed

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premeire of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor—Soloist: Rudolf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; Debussy: "La Mer"—Charles Munch, Conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto—Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D. major—Richard Burgin, Conductor.

* * *

Soloist at Tangle

Jocy De Oliveira, of Br... who has played concert... ments with the Brazil S... Orchestra and given re... principal South Americ... and who performed with ... orchestras last season in ... Paris and Hanover, will ... American debut at the ... August 3 Berkshire Fest... cert (8:30 p.m. Music Sh... forming Ravel's "Piano C... with the Boston Symph... chestra under the direct... husband, Brazilian condu... azar De. Carvalho.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 27 1956

New Concerto Will Be Heard At Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere tonight of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer Goffredo Petrassi, as the second weekend of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p. m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA Victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the orchestra.

Benny Goodman Plays Music Mountain Sunda...

There will be an impo... change in the program... the fifth Sunday afternoon ... ber music concert of the ... seventh Music Mountain sea... Sunday, July 29, at Music ... tain, Falls Village, Conn. ... Goodman, eminent virtuoso ... clarinet in the fields of jaz... classical music, will be the fea... guest artist in a program ... Brahms, Rainier, and Mozart ... tasha Magg, who was schedu... appear with her husband, ... shire Quartet cellist Fritz ... in Chopin's Sonata for Cello ... Piano in G Minor, will be ... sented on Sunday, August 1... in the afternoon. Mrs. Magg ... Fritz Magg will then perfor... Chopin Sonata for Cello and ...

The program for Sunday, ... 29, will be the Quartet in D ... Major (K. 458) ("The Hunt... Mozart; the Quartet by Pe... Rainier; and the Quintet for ... pet and Strings in B Minor ... 115 by Brahms. Benny Goo... who appeared twice at Ta... wood during the summer in ... by Mozart, will join the m... of the Berkshire Quartet ... Brahms Quintet for Clarine... Strings.

[139]

Town Times, Inc.

For news or information call CRestwood 4-1968. Address mail to TOWN TIMES, Box 888, Oakville, or to Box 1, Watertown, Conn.

Publishers: Carl Less, Joseph F. Smith

Reentered as second class matter May 12, 1955 at the post office at Watertown, Conn. Original entry as second class matter Jan. 12, 1948 at the post office Oakville, Conn. under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Bartok Work High Point Of Concert At Tanglewood

The "Concerto For Orchestra" by Bela Bartok was the undisputed champion of the Sunday afternoon concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this week.

Under the restrained and precise conducting of Pierre Monteux, the orchestra performed the work in such an excellent and inspiring manner as to evoke an enthusiastic ovation from the large audience.

Mr. Monteux led the orchestra through the second work of the afternoon, (which treats the instrumental groups of the orchestra as soloists, hence the name "Concerto" as applied to the five-movement symphony-like work) with a deep insight into the historic Bartok composition.

A hushed audience absorbed every note as the solemn, questing first movement with its fugato intrusions of the brilliant color of the brasses progressed in the warmth of an unexpectedly sunny afternoon.

A dramatic drum-beat opened the second movement marked Giuoco delle copie: Allegro Scherzando by the composer. The buffoon-like march was taken up successively by pairs of bassoons, oboes, clarinets, flutes and muted trumpets.

The fourth movement gave the impression of a cynical musical "joke" perpetrated by the Composer, as the bumbling voices of bass instrument were answered by cascades of laughter from strings and woodwinds.

The vibrant beauty and vital power of the fifth movement, with the composers notation of Presto faithfully executed by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra, captured the imagination of the audience and swept them along in a whirlwind of sound. Mr. Monteux, with a languid flip of the wrist, executed a compelling transformation as with his gesture, the tremendous rushing force of the orchestra was hushed and the somewhat unexpected gentle voice of the Harp took center stage for a brief period before the imposing coda.

Applause and shouts of "bravo" rang out under the huge Music Shed as the enthusiastic audience expressed their delight with the work of Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Bartok work was the winner, that day.

The first performance on Sunday's program was Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri." The romantic beauty of the lively piece, with its frequent lapses into musical nostalgia, was much appreciated by the audience, who responded with generous applause.

Everyone was "in the mood" by the time the third and final work of the afternoon, Schubert's "Symphony in C. major, No. 7," was presented. From the lyric beauty of the first, Andante, movement with horns and strings alternating on the theme with perfect balance to the singing strings and rhythmic tempo of the Andante con moto second, the audience identification was growing. During the Scherzo, a casual look around the shed revealed numbers of heads moving slightly as individuals almost unconsciously beat time to the music.

The vigorous last movement featured beautiful work by the whole orchestra and lovely passages by woodwinds and strings. The golden tones of the brasses cut like a beam of light through a gentle background to re-state the theme. The afternoon came to a close with the audience well-satisfied with the day's entertainment.

This Week's Program

Tomorrow evening's Tanglewood concert, with Charles Munch conducting, will feature Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Perassi and the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony.

On Saturday, in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch will take the podium once more to conduct the Hanson "Elegy", the Schumann Concerto in A. Minor with Rudolf Serkin as soloist, the Symphony No. 5 by Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., guest conductor Richard Burgin will lead the orchestra in "Romeo and Juliet" by Prokofieff, the Hindemith Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt as soloist and Gustav Mahler's First Symphony.

L.F.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Free Press
MELROSE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,490

JUL 26 1956

Famous Berkshire Music Festival Now In Fourth Week

Learn the magic of music and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts department of commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m. will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and on the 29, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

"Plan now for a week or a weekend in the Bay State's beautiful Berkshire Hills. There's always plenty to do in this enchanting natural playground. Special events in local towns plus the area's natural facilities for swimming, fishing, hiking, picnicking and general relaxation will make your stay a pleasant and memorable one," says the department of commerce.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

JUL 26 1956

Petrassi's Concerto to Be Premiered at Tanglewood

Goffredo Petrassi's "Concerto for Orchestra, number 5," will receive its Tanglewood premiere tonight with Charles Munch conducting the performance in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

THE NUMBER was composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the modern Italian, who is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

The concerto is in two contrasting movements, the first a Presto and the second, an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

The program tonight also will include the second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

* * *

TOMORROW EVENING pianist Rudolf Serkin will be the featured soloist with the orchestra under Dr. Munch in the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann. The performance is in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

Tomorrow evening's program also will include the Tanglewood premiere of Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," the Fifth Symphony by the late Arthur Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

* * *

SUNDAY AFTERNOON Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

The Sunday afternoon concert will open with the second suite from Prokofieff's Ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the Symphony number 1 in D major by Mahler.

Evening programs at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., start at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 26 1956

2d Tanglewood Week Opens Friday Night

Lenox, Mass.—Charles Munch will inaugurate the second week end of concerts in the giant Tanglewood Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday at 8:30 p. m. He again will be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto, programmed to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will conduct a Sunday afternoon program featuring his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal & Press
SOMERVILLE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 22,184

JUL 26 1956

Berkshire Festival In Fourth Week

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27 by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known Festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m. will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and on the 29, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record
WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,163

JUL 26 1956

Fine Variety This Weekend At Tanglewood

LENOX, (Special) — Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27 by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, now completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahlers Symphony No. 1.

Berkshire Festival Moves into Semi-Final Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleasar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stavinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzy in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10 a.m. (Aug. 4), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

[140]

Town Times, Inc.

For news or information call CRestwood 4-1968. Address mail to TOWN TIMES, Box 888, Oakville, or to Box 1, Watertown, Conn.

Publishers: Carl Less, Joseph F. Smith

Re-entered as second class matter May 12, 1955 at the post office at Watertown, Conn. Original entry as second class matter Jan. 13, 1948 at the post office Oakville, Conn. under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Bartok Work High Point Of Concert At Tanglewood

The "Concerto For Orchestra" by Bela Bartok was the undisputed champion of the Sunday afternoon concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this week.

Under the restrained and precise conducting of Pierre Monteux, the orchestra performed the work in such an excellent and inspiring manner as to evoke an enthusiastic ovation from the large audience.

Mr. Monteux led the orchestra through the second work of the afternoon, (which treats the instrumental groups of the orchestra as soloists, hence the name "Concerto" as applied to the five-movement symphony-like work) with a deep insight into the historic Bartok composition.

A hushed audience absorbed every note as the solemn, questing first movement with its fugato intrusions of the brilliant color of the brasses progressed in the warmth of an unexpectedly sunny afternoon.

A dramatic drum-beat opened the second movement marked Giuoco delle copie: Allegro Scherzando by the composer. The buffoon-like march was taken up successively by pairs of bassoons, oboes, clarinets, flutes and muted trumpets.

The fourth movement gave the impression of a cynical musical "joke" perpetrated by the Composer, as the bumbling voices of bass instrument were answered by cascades of laughter from strings and woodwinds.

The vibrant beauty and vital power of the fifth movement, with the composers notation of Presto faithfully executed by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra, captured the imagination of the audience and swept them along in a whirlwind of sound. Mr. Monteux, with a languid flip of the wrist, executed a compelling transformation as with his gesture, the tremendous rushing force of the orchestra was hushed and the somewhat unexpected gentle voice of the Harp took center stage for a brief period before the imposing coda.

Applause and shouts of "bravo" rang out under the huge Music Shed as the enthusiastic audience expressed their delight with the work of Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Bartok work was the winner, that day.

The first performance on Sunday's program was Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri." The romantic beauty of the lively piece, with its frequent lapses into musical nostalgia, was much appreciated by the audience, who responded with generous applause.

Everyone was "in the mood" by the time the third and final work of the afternoon, Schubert's "Symphony in C. major, No. 7," was presented. From the lyric beauty of the first, Andante, movement with horns and strings alternating on the theme with perfect balance to the singing strings and rhythmic tempo of the Andante con moto second, the audience identification was growing. During the Scherzo, a casual look around the shed revealed numbers of heads moving slightly as individuals almost unconsciously beat time to the music.

The vigorous last movement featured beautiful work by the whole orchestra and lovely passages by woodwinds and strings. The golden tones of the brasses cut like a beam of light through a gentle background to re-state the theme. The afternoon came to a close with the audience well-satisfied with the day's entertainment.

This Week's Program

Tomorrow evening's Tanglewood concert, with Charles Munch conducting, will feature Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Perassi and the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony.

On Saturday, in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch will take the podium once more to conduct the Hanson "Elegy", the Schumann Concerto in A Minor with Rudolf Serkin as soloist, the Symphony No. 5 by Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., guest conductor Richard Burgin will lead the orchestra in "Romeo and Juliet" by Prokofieff, the Hindemith Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt as soloist and Gustav Mahler's First Symphony.

L.F.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Free Press
MELROSE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,490

JUL 26 1956

Famous Berkshire Music Festival Now In Fourth Week

Learn the magic of music and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts department of commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m. will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and on the 29, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

"Plan now for a week or a weekend in the Bay State's beautiful Berkshire Hills. There's always plenty to do in this enchanting natural playground. Special events in local towns plus the area's natural facilities for swimming, fishing, hiking, picnicking and general relaxation will make your stay a pleasant and memorable one," says the department of commerce.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

JUL 26 1956

Petrassi's Concerto to Be Premiered at Tanglewood

Gottredo Petrassi's "Concerto for Orchestra, number 5," will receive its Tanglewood premiere tonight with Charles Munch conducting the performance in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

THE NUMBER was composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the modern Italian, who is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

The concerto is in two contrasting movements, the first a Presto and the second, an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

The program tonight also will include the second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

* * *

TOMORROW EVENING pianist Rudolf Serkin will be the featured soloist with the orchestra under Dr. Munch in the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann. The performance is in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

Tomorrow evening's program also will include the Tanglewood premiere of Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," the Fifth Symphony by the late Arthur Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

* * *

SUNDAY AFTERNOON Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

The Sunday afternoon concert will open with the second suite from Prokofieff's Ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the Symphony number 1 in D major by Mahler.

Evening programs at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., start at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 26 1956

2d Tanglewood Week Opens Friday Night

Lenox, Mass.—Charles Munch will inaugurate the second week end of concerts in the giant Tanglewood Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday at 8:30 p. m. He again will be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto, programmed to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will conduct a Sunday afternoon program featuring his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal & Press
SOMERVILLE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 22,184

JUL 26 1956

Berkshire Festival In Fourth Week

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27 by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known Festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and on the 29, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record
WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,163

JUL 26 1956

Fine Variety This Weekend At Tanglewood

LENOX, (Special) — Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27 by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, now completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahlers Symphony No. 1.

Berkshire Festival Moves into Semi-Final Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleasar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stavinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzy in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemmorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the ground, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10 a.m. (Aug. 4), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

[140]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 27 1956

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Stage

Current at the Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, is the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Carousel," which closes on Saturday, July 28, after a two-week run. Opening Monday, July 30, is "Plain and Fancy," starring Tom Avera, Mildred Cook and Martin Wolfson, which will run through Saturday, August 4. For tickets call New Haven, ATwater 8-0639.

"The Desperate Hours" by Alfred Hayes of Brookfield, which opened at the Starlight Theatre, Pawling, N. Y. on Tuesday, July 24, plays through Sunday, July 29. It will be followed July 31-August 5 by "The Chalk Garden," a satire. Evening curtain at 8:30. Wednesday matinee at 2:30. For ticket information, call Pawling 5711 or 3171.

"Anniversary Waltz" is the current attraction at Jack Quinn's Southbury Playhouse, closing Sunday, July 29. It will be followed by "Love In a Mist," Tuesday, July 31 through August 5. Call Woodbury, COngress 4-8408 for tickets.

The American Shakespeare Festival Theatre, Stratford, has announced a change in its schedule. There will be no Sunday evening performances, and Wednesday matinees have been added, starting Wednesday, August 8. This has necessitated a change in the repertory schedules as follows: "King John", evenings, July 26, 29, 31; matinee July 28. "Measure for Measure", evenings, July 27, 28, August 3, 4, 7; matinees, July 29, August 8. "Taming of the Shrew", opening August 5, evening performance. Call Stratford EDison 7-4457.

Moliere's farce-comedy, "A Doctor In Spite of Himself," is next week's attraction at the Westport County Playhouse, starting Monday evening, July 30. It follows the new play, "The Gimmick," which ends its week's run Saturday, July 28. For tickets, call Westport CApitol 9-8715.

Music

The first major Connecticut jazz festival will be presented at the Fairfield University field, Fairfield, for the benefit of the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 28, at 8:30 p.m., with Duke Ellington and other top jazz artists featured. Sidney Gross will emcee the affair. Tickets may be purchased at the Flagpole Fountain or at the Connecticut Symphony Office, 991 Broad Street Bridgeport.

Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Friday and Saturday in the Music Shed, July 27 and 28, at 8:30 p.m. Friday's program is the music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and Petrassi. On Saturday, Schumann, Honegger, DeBussy and Hanson, with Rudolf Serkin as soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor. Sunday, the orchestra will be conducted by Richard Burgin in music by Prokofioff, Hindemith and Mahler, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

Benny Goodman, clarinet virtuoso, will be the featured guest artist at Music Mountain, Falls Village, July 29, at 4 p.m., in a program of Brahms, Rainier and Mozart. Natasha Magg, who had been scheduled to appear with her husband, Berkshire quartet cellist, Fritz Magg, will be presented Sunday, August 19. For tickets, call Canaan, TAylor 4-7126.

Aldo Parisot, Dr Carleton S. Smith and Maria Louisa Fiana will present the August Music Hour at the Piano Center, Washington Depot, on August 5 at 3:15 p.m., with music by Gabriel Pierne, Jean-Philippe Rameau and Carl Maria von Weber for flute, cello and piano.

Free carillon recitals are being given at Trinity College, Hartford, each Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. this month through August 29.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 27 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 181,485
JUL 27 1956

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Lenox, tonight at 8:30, beginning the second weekend in the main series of the 1956 Berkshire Festival. The program:

Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Goffredo Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 (first performance at Tanglewood); Tchaikovsky, Fourth Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 27 1956

Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra To Have Tanglewood Premiere Tonight

Rudolf Serkin Soloist in Shed Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch will conduct tonight the Tanglewood premiere of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer Goffredo Petrassi as the second weekend of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA Victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the orchestra.

100th Anniversary

Mr. Petrassi, who composed his Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Charles Munch conducted the world premiere of the work at a pair of Boston Symphony concerts last December, and then conducted it in New York and various other eastern cities. It is in two contrasting movements, the first a Presto, the second an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hanso Honegger and Debussy.

Burgin To Conduct

Sunday afternoon Richard Bu in, concertmaster and associat conductor of the Boston Symphon Orchestra, will make his onl Tanglewood conducting appearanc of the season in a concert whic will also feature his wife, violinis Ruth Posselt, in a performance o the Hindemith Concerto.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a.m. tomorrow morning. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Remaining tickets for tonight's corncert, as well as all those remaining in the Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug. 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Piano soloist, Rudolf Serkin, right, at tomorrow night's Music Shed concert at Tanglewood, takes time out from rehearsals to visit with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last season when Serkin made his debut at Tanglewood, his concert with the BSO drew more than 15,000.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 27 1956

Rudolf Serkin To Play Schumann Piano Concerto

Rudolph Serkin, who attracted an overflow crowd of more than 15,000 when he made his Tanglewood debut at last summer's Berkshire Festival, returns tomorrow night at 8:30 to perform in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Serkin will play the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Tanglewood premiere of Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and performed for the first time by the orchestra at home and on tour last winter.

After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct the Fifth Symphony by the late Artur Honegger, and Debussy's "La Mer."

Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will also feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

The concert will begin with the second suite from Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 27 1956

Tanglewood Tales

Opening selection on the Berkshire Festival program of Sunday afternoon is Prokofieff's Suite No. 2, from the ballet "Romeo and Juliet." By coincidence, the Little Cinema in the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, will commence a week's engagement that same evening of the handsome, color film version of "The Ballet of Romeo and Juliet," made in the U.S.S.R. employing the full Prokofieff score and featuring Galina Ulanova and the Bolshoi Theater dancers who will make an American tour next fall.

Prokofieff wrote the ballet score in 1935 for the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow, and the film was made with its present dancers and corps de ballet in 1955. The Boston Symphony concert, which concertmaster Richard Burgin will conduct, will play the following movements from the ballet: Montagues and Capulets; Juliet, the Maiden Dance; Romeo at Juliet's Grave.

* * *

Tomorrow morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund will find Charles Munch on the podium at Tanglewood's Music Shed at 10 a.m. rehearsing the Berkshire Festival concert for that evening, with piano virtuoso Rudolf Serkin playing the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, programmed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Mr. Serkin will be driving to Tanglewood from his year-round home in Marlboro, Vermont, where he directs the Marlboro School of Music. The chamber music concert he will play next Wednesday with the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, he is donating to the Berkshire Music Center's revolving scholarship fund.

Many Church Leaders To Attend New Shadowbrook Ground Breaking

Church dignitaries from all over New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit Novitiate at Lenox, which will replace the building destroyed by fire on March 10.

More than 1500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood, facilities provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Berkshire Music Festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England hierarchy will be present.

Ground breaking will be performed by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, D.D., Bishop of the Springfield Diocese.

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Sharowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin on Tuesday, a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31st will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced Wednesday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

The Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and co-chairmen including former mayor Robert T. Capeless, Berkshire area; William S. Ginn, Berkshire; and Judge Daniel M. Keyes, Jr. of Chicopee, Springfield area.

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

[141]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 27 1956

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Stage

Current at the Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, is the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Carousel," which closes on Saturday, July 28, after a two-week run. Opening Monday, July 30, is "Plain and Fancy," starring Tom Avera, Mildred Cook and Martin Wolfson, which will run through Saturday, August 4. For tickets call New Haven, ATwater 8-0639.

"The Desperate Hours" by Alfred Hayes of Brookfield, which opened at the Starlight Theatre, Pawling, N. Y. on Tuesday, July 24, plays through Sunday, July 29. It will be followed July 31-August 5 by "The Chalk Garden," a satire. Evening curtain at 8:30. Wednesday matinee at 2:30. For ticket information, call Pawling 5711 or 3171.

"Anniversary Waltz" is the current attraction at Jack Quinn's Southbury Playhouse, closing Sunday, July 29. It will be followed by "Love In a Mist," Tuesday, July 31 through August 5. Call Woodbury, COngress 4-8408 for tickets.

The American Shakespeare Festival Theatre, Stratford, has announced a change in its schedule. There will be no Sunday evening performances, and Wednesday matinees have been added, starting Wednesday, August 8. This has necessitated a change in the repertory schedules as follows: "King John", evenings, July 26, 29, 31; matinee July 28. "Measure for Measure", evenings, July 27, 28, August 3, 4, 7; matinees, July 29, August 8. "Taming of the Shrew", opening August 5, evening performance. Call Stratford EDison 7-4457.

Moliere's farce-comedy, "A Doctor In Spite of Himself," is next week's attraction at the Westport County Playhouse, starting Monday evening, July 30. It follows the new play, "The Gimmick," which ends its week's run Saturday, July 28. For tickets, call Westport CApitol 9-8715.

Music

The first major Connecticut jazz festival will be presented at the Fairfield University field, Fairfield, for the benefit of the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 28, at 8:30 p.m., with Duke Ellington and other top jazz artists featured. Sidney Gross will emcee the affair. Tickets may be purchased at the Flagpole Fountain or at the Connecticut Symphony Office, 991 Broad Street Bridgeport.

Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Friday and Saturday in the Music Shed, July 27 and 28, at 8:30 p.m. Friday's program is the music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and Petrassi. On Saturday, Schumann, Honegger, DeBussy and Hanson, with Rudolf Serkin as soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor. Sunday, the orchestra will be conducted by Richard Burgin in music by Prokofioff, Hindemith and Mahler, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto.

Benny Goodman, clarinet virtuoso, will be the featured guest artist at Music Mountain, Falls Village, July 29, at 4 p.m., in a program of Brahms, Rainier and Mozart. Natasha Magg, who had been scheduled to appear with her husband, Berkshire quartet cellist, Fritz Magg, will be presented Sunday, August 19. For tickets, call Canaan, TAylor 4-7126.

Aldo Parisot, Dr Carleton S. Smith and Maria Louisa Fiana will present the August Music Hour at the Piano Center, Washington Depot, on August 5 at 3:15 p.m., with music by Gabriel Pierne, Jean-Philippe Rameau and Carl Maria von Weber for flute, cello and piano.

Free carillon recitals are being given at Trinity College, Hartford, each Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. this month through August 29.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 27 1956

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Lenox, tonight at 8:30, beginning the second weekend in the main series of the 1956 Berkshire Festival. The program:

Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Goffredo Petrassi: Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, first performance in Tanglewood; Tchaikovsky: Fourth Symphony.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 27 1956

Many Church Leaders To Attend New Shadowbrook Ground Breaking

Church dignitaries from all over New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit Novitiate at Lenox, which will replace the building destroyed by fire on March 10.

More than 1500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood, facilities provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Berkshire Music Festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England hierarchy will be present.

Ground breaking will be performed by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, D.D., Bishop of the Springfield Diocese.

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Sharowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin on Tuesday, a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31st will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced Wednesday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

The Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and co-chairmen including former mayor Robert T. Capeless, Berkshire area; William S. Ginn, Berkshire; and Judge Daniel M. Keyes, Jr. of Chicopee, Springfield area.

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 27 1956

Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra To Have Tanglewood Premiere Tonight

Rudolf Serkin Soloist in Shed Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch will conduct tonight the Tanglewood premiere of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer Goffredo Petrassi as the second weekend of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA Victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the orchestra.

100th Anniversary

Mr. Petrassi, who composed his Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Charles Munch conducted the world premiere of the work at a pair of Boston Symphony concerts last December, and then conducted it in New York and various other eastern cities. It is in two contrasting movements, the first a Presto, the second an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hansò Honegger and Debussy.

Burgin To Conduct

Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a.m. tomorrow morning. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Remaining tickets for tonight's corncert, as well as all those remaining in the Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug. 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Piano soloist, Rudolf Serkin, right, at tomorrow night's Music Shed concert at Tanglewood, takes time out from rehearsals to visit with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last season when Serkin made his debut at Tanglewood, his concert with the BSO drew more than 15,000.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 27 1956

Rudolf Serkin To Play Schumann Piano Concerto

Rudolph Serkin, who attracted an overflow crowd of more than 15,000 when he made his Tanglewood debut at last summer's Berkshire Festival, returns tomorrow night at 8:30 to perform in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Serkin will play the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856. Dr. Munch will open the program with the Tanglewood premiere of Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and performed for the first time by the orchestra at home and on tour last winter.

After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct the Fifth Symphony by the late Artur Honegger, and Debussy's "La Mer."

Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will also feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

The concert will begin with the second suite from Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 27 1956

Tanglewood Tales

Opening selection on the Berkshire Festival program of Sunday afternoon is Prokofieff's Suite No. 2, from the ballet "Romeo and Juliet." By coincidence, the Little Cinema in the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, will commence a week's engagement that same evening of the handsome, color film version of "The Ballet of Romeo and Juliet," made in the U.S.S.R. employing the full Prokofieff score and featuring Galina Ulanova and the Bolshoi Theater dancers who will make an American tour next fall.

Prokofieff wrote the ballet score in 1935 for the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow, and the film was made with its present dancers and corps de ballet in 1955. The Boston Symphony concert, which concertmaster Richard Burgin will conduct, will play the following movements from the ballet: Montagues and Capulets; Juliet, the Maiden Dance; Romeo at Juliet's Grave.

* * *

Tomorrow morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund will find Charles Munch on the podium at Tanglewood's Music Shed at 10 a.m. rehearsing the Berkshire Festival concert for that evening, with piano virtuoso Rudolf Serkin playing the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, programmed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Mr. Serkin will be driving to Tanglewood from his year-round home in Marlboro, Vermont, where he directs the Marlboro School of Music. The chamber music concert he will play next Wednesday with the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, he is donating to the Berkshire Music Center's revolving scholarship fund.

[141]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 26 1956

TRIO IS HEARD IN RECITAL AT TANGLEWOOD

Beaux Arts Group Plays Mendelssohn, Ravel, Brahms Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 25 — The chamber music series in the Theater-Concert Hall is proving one of the outstanding attractions of the Berkshire Festival season. Tonight the hall was filled to capacity with 1375 attentive listeners and they heard a splendid program superbly performed by the Beaux Arts Trio. One of the first appearances this ensemble made was in Springfield several seasons ago.

Instruments Blend

Members of the ensemble are Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violinist; and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist. Each is a virtuoso who has fitted his very considerable talents and personality into an ensemble. When we first heard this trio, Mr. Pressler had a tremendous power of projection which took away the sense of a perfect trio. Tonight, there was the same fine pianism, but there was a finer blend with the other instruments.

Mr. Guilet and Mr. Greenhouse are veteran ensemble musicians.

The program tonight was routine but very fine. The opening number was the Mendelssohn long time and whose artistic sense and musicianship are blended into a perfect whole.

Continued On Page 6

Friday night in the shed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch will play a program consisting of the "Lenore" Overture No. 2; the "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" by Figgredo Petrassi, guest composer here this season; and Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. 4." The Petrassi work was written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony.

Saturday night, pianist Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist, playing Schumann's "Concerto for Piano in A Minor." The opening work will be an elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, composed by Howard Hanson. This is also a commissioned anniversary work. Honegger's "Symphony No. 5" and Debussy's "La Mer" will complete the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 27 1956

oe Petrovec

These opera students at the Berkshire Music Center—Spelios Constantine, Mildred Allen, Marjorie McClung, Anne Rothgeb, and Robert Macy—will be seen in an act from Berlioz' "The Trojans," to be heard in a program of opera scenes at Tanglewood Monday night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 28 1956

Students to Give Opera Excerpts

FIVE acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi will be sung by students of the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads this department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved. (Telephone Lenox 600).

The Tanglewood premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow). Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Aida" and "Falstaff" complete the program.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7, the opera department will give the first staged performance anywhere of a three-act opera, "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss, associate professor of music at the University of California, and a member of the Berkshire Music Center composition faculty. The opera was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company which telecast it nationally in November, 1955.

Based on a little-known German folk tale, "Griffelkin" has a rhymed libretto by British poet Alastair Reid, a teacher at Sarah Lawrence College. Boris Goldovsky is producing the opera, and the composer will conduct a student orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Dorchester-Roxbury Record
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 10,350 Free
JUL 2[illegible] 1956

Music Lovers Are Invited To Tanglewood Music Festival

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokoffi. Sunday, the program begins at 3:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20 connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 27 1956

Munch Conducts Premiere Tonight

Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere tonight of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer, Goffredo Petrassi, as the second week-end of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

SPRINGFIELD FREE PRESS—SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1956

Fifth Week Of Berkshire Summer Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Starvinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former condutor, Serge Koussevitzy, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States; and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Vahon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

[142]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 28 1956

IKIO IS HEARD IN RECITAL AT TANGLEWOOD

Beaux Arts Group Plays Mendelssohn, Ravel, Brahms Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 25 — The chamber music series in the Theater-Concert Hall is proving one of the outstanding attractions of the Berkshire Festival season. Tonight the hall was filled to capacity with 1379 attentive listeners and they heard a splendid program superbly performed by the Beaux Arts Trio. One of the first appearances this ensemble made was in Springfield several seasons ago.

Instruments Blend

Members of the ensemble are Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violinist; and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist. Each is a virtuoso who has fitted his very considerable talents and personality into an ensemble. When we first heard this trio, Mr. Pressler had a tremendous power of projection which took away the sense of a perfect trio. Tonight, there was the same fine pianism, but there was a finer blend with the other instruments.

Mr. Guilet and Mr. Greenhouse are veteran ensemble musicians.

The program tonight was routine but very fine. The opening number was the Mendelssohn

Continued On Page 6

long time and whose artistic sense and musicianship are blended into a perfect whole.

Friday night in the shed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch will play a program consisting of the "Leonore" Overture No. 2; the "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" by Figgredo Petrassi, guest composer here this season; and Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. 4." The Petrassi work was written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony.

Saturday night, pianist Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist, playing Schumann's "Concerto for Piano in A Minor." The opening work will be an elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, composed by Howard Hanson. This is also a commissioned anniversary work. Honegger's "Symphony No. 5" and Debussy's "La Mer" will complete the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 27 1956

oe Petrovec

These opera students at the Berkshire Music Center—Spelios Constantine, Mildred Allen, Marjorie McClung, Anne Rothgeb, and Robert Macy—will be seen in an act from Berlioz' "The Trojans," to be heard in a program of opera scenes at Tanglewood Monday night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 28 1956

Students to Give Opera Excerpts

FIVE acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi will be sung by students of the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads this department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved. (Telephone Lenox 600).

The Tanglewood premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow). Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Aida" and "Falstaff" complete the program.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7, the opera department will give the first staged performance anywhere of a three-act opera, "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss, associate professor of music at the University of California, and a member of the Berkshire Music Center composition faculty. The opera was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company which telecast it nationally in November, 1955.

Based on a little-known German folk tale, "Griffelkin" has a rhymed libretto by British poet Alastair Reid, a teacher at Sarah Lawrence College. Boris Goldovsky is producing the opera, and the composer will conduct a student orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Dorchester-Roxbury Record
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 10,350 Free
JUL 2[illegible] 1956

Music Lovers Are Invited To Tanglewood Music Festival

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m performance will include works o Moevs, Mozart and Prokofiff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:3[illegible] p.m. with music by Copeland Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20 connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 27 1956

Munch Conducts Premiere Tonight

Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere tonight of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer, Goffredo Petrassi, as the second week-end of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

Fifth Week Of Berkshire Summer Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3), by Leonard Bernstein (August 4), by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Starvinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former condutor, Serge Koussevitzy, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Vahon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conducter in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

[14a]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 27 1956

Joe Petrovec

These opera students at the Berkshire Music Center—Spelios Constantine, Mildred Allen, Marjorie McClung, Anne Rothgeb, and Robert Macy—will be seen in an act from Berlioz' "The Trojans," to be heard in a program of opera scenes at Tanglewood Monday night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 28 1956

Students to Give Opera Excerpts

FIVE acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi will be sung by students of the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads this department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved. (Telephone Lenox 600).

The Tanglewood premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow). Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Aida" and "Falstaff" complete the program.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7, the opera department will give the first staged performance anywhere of a three-act opera, "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss, associate professor of music at the University of California, and a member of the Berkshire Music Center composition faculty. The opera was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company which telecast it nationally in November, 1955.

Based on a little-known German folk tale, "Griffelkin" has a rhymed libretto by British poet Alastair Reid, a teacher at Sarah Lawrence College. Boris Goldovsky is producing the opera, and the composer will conduct a student orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Dorchester-Roxbury Record
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 10,350 Free

JUL 2[illegible] 1956

Music Lovers Are Invited To Tanglewood Music Festival

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m performance will include works o Moevs, Mozart and Prokofiff. Sunday, the program begins at 3:3 p.m. with music by Copeland Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20 connect with Route 7.

SPRINGFIELD FREE PRESS—SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1956

Fifth Week Of Berkshire Summer Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Starvinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former condutor, Serge Koussevitzy, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Vahon, and soloists [illegible] Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein [illegible] Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 27 1956

Munch Conducts Premiere Tonight

Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere tonight of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer, Goffredo Petrassi, as the second week-end of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchsetra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

[142]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 28 1956

Most Satisfying Symphony Program Warmly Received

In spite of the humidity in most places, Tanglewood wafted cool breezes over the 6,256 thankful music-lovers who attended last evening's concert.

One of three offerings, Beethoven's second "Leonore" Overture, a source of much debate where musicians gather, some preferring his more brilliant third, was a dramatic unfolding of the opera; the calm despair of the hero reflected by the marvellous sustained bowing of the strings, the gradual evolvement of the story, starting softly and spreading with mounting tension through the orchestra to burst dramatically in the trumpet fanfare heard in the distance, and then as if a little closer, announcing the salvation of the hero and heroine, the following quiet repetition of the hero's aria, and the anticipation of and release of thankful emotion in the famous violin passage. Mr. Munch directed the whole with dramatic fervor.

Next came the first performance at Tanglewood by Goffredo Petrassi's fifth Concerto for orchestra, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation. Mr. Petrassi, a major contemporary composer, is composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

This concerto employs all manner of sounds, formulated by an ingenious use of the instruments, is melodically pleasant, at times, dissonances not displeasing except in the second movement where an intensity of pitch becomes scalp-tingling; it begins very melodramatically with a theme of six tones in the violas, an eerie sound played ponticello, followed immediately by another group of six in the muted trombones, the two comprising a series of 12 on which this and the following movement are built; then everyone is kept busy with an erratic rhythmic beat, the percussion relieved by the basses, the almost perpetual motion of the strings.

In the two movements there is much change of mood along with tempo, a gay gamboling of the strings in the second is answered by a merry tune in the piccolo, flute and woodwinds; repetitious use of the thematic material of the first is obvious but not too wearisome; both movements end pianissimo, a relief from the usual fortissimo, necessary, one feels, because the ultimate in tonal absorption has been reached. Mr. Petrassi was given a very warm ovation, which he shared graciously with Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

The oft-played Tschaikowsky fourth symphony completed, most satisfying program. Certainly Mr. Munch did not spare himself at any time, to delineate carefully every nuance, and to expend himself and his players in a thoroughly vibrant and sensitive performance.

The audience reflected its pleasure in prolonged applause.

This evening's concert at 8:30, will include Schumann's Aminor piano concerto by Rudolf Serkin, and Elegy composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Howard Hanson, and Honegger's fifth Symphony, also Debussy's La Mer.

Sunday's performance will be conducted by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the symphony, who will be assisted by his wife, Ruth Posselt, playing the Hindemith violin concerto. Mahler's first symphony and Prokofieff's Romeo and Juliet Ballet, Second Suite, will also be directed by Mr. Burgin. Both concerts are well worth the pleasant drive necessary to attend them.—M. deB. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 28 1956

Couples Offered Box Seats For Tanglewood on Parade

An innovation for this year's Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 9, is that box seats are being offered to couples, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, chairman of the box committee, announced today. Box tickets will go on general sale Monday.

Individual box seats will be available for those who do not wish to purchase an entire box for the annual event to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. The center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now is in its 14th season.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky again is general chairman of arrangements for Tanglewood on Parade. Mrs. Bruce Sanborn is vice chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, secretary. Miss Robinson Smith is being assisted by Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. as box committee vice chairman.

County Boxholders

Berkshire County residents who already have reserved boxes are Mrs. John L. Brooke, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hawkins, Mrs. Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. George K. Livermore, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn and Mrs. John L. Senior, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Kay of Lenox; Mrs. George Otis Rockwood, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Kerrick, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Kreisler, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., Miss Robinson Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe and Mrs. Charles Griswold of Stockbridge.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Beinecke and Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington; Mrs. S. Ralph Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Harrison L. Amber of Pittsfield; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holton Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton. Another boxholder will be Julius Fleischmann of Cincinnati, Ohio. Sharing boxes will be Miss Anna R. Alexandre and Mr. and Mrs. David Huxley of Lenox, and Miss Gladys Greene of Lenox and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond.

Grounds Open at 4

Grounds will open at 4 in the afternoon, when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to an opera by students of the Berkshire Music Center. After a welcome at 5:45, all are invited to see the center in operation. Simultaneous sessions of each department will be held. The orchestra will perform in the Shed; composers in the chamber music hall; and opera students, in the theater-concert hall.

A picnic supper will be held at 7, and those attending may bring picnic baskets or make use of the buffet and refreshment carts. During the picnic hour, there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Chorus on the porch of the main house.

The evening will conclude with a concert in the Shed at 8:15. The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra both will perform.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 28 1956

TANGLEWOOD SHED CONCERT ATTRACTS 6256

Novelty On Program 'Fifth Concerto for Orchestra' By Petrassi

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 27—The opening concert of the second week of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed drew an audience of 6256 people. The inclement weather has held audiences down to almost a minimum this season, which, aside from the financial loss, is unfortunate because not for many seasons have there been finer performances of the great music in the orchestral literature.

Commissioned Work

Tonight, the novelty on the program was the "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" by Goffredo Petrassi. This work was commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary and it had its first performance in Boston in Dec., 1955. Mr. Petrassi is an artful craftsman who knows his orchestra and how to expose it to advantage. Unfortunately the present work seems to have no form or focus. Just when one expects the work to get some place, off goes the composer on another tangent. There are moments of charming melodies, but these are fragmentary. The orchestra is given ample opportunity to show what can be accomplished by a group of virtuosi. Perhaps, had we not heard so recently the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra," this work of Mr. Petrassi might have assumed a greater interest. As it was, it seemed to bear out our thought that inspiration and commissions do not necessarily go hand in hand. Mr. Munch labored mightily on this work and it was probably given the finest performance it will ever have.

The program opened with a magnificent performance of the "Leonore" Overture No. 2. Heard less often than the No. 3, it has the same soulful and grave introduction based on the air of Florestan. There is not quite the sustained excitement one finds in the third "Leonore" Overture, but there is within the second a wonderful building of climax and extraordinarily fine contrasts. Mr. Munch was at his most communicative.

Passages Almost New

The concert concluded with a scintillating performance of "Symphony No. 4 in F Minor" by Tschaikowsky. The playing of the last symphonies of Tschaikowsky have practically become a tradition here at Tanglewood. They were the sure-fire portion of a Koussevitzky program, year after year. Mr. Munch's approach to those symphonies is less vehement than Mr. Koussevitzky. In fact, his readings are so beautifully detailed that at times one hears passages which seem almost new, so seldom were they heard in the welter of noise that is the sum total of what many conductors feel is the tradition of Tschaikowsky interpretation.

The performance tonight was very fine. So was the audience reaction.

Tonight's Program

Tomorrow night Mr. Munch will open the program with an "Elegy In Memory of Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson. This was another work composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. Rudolf Serkin, the most popular pianist to come to Tanglewood, will play the Schumann "Concerto in A Minor" and this will be followed by Honegger's "Symphony No. 5." The program will close with one of the great interpretive triumphs of Mr. Munch, "La Mer" by Debussy.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, will conduct the program on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and will have as soloist his wife, Ruth Posselt, who will play Hindemith's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra." The program will open with Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, Second Suite, and conclude with Mahler's "Symphony No. 1 in D Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

JUL 28 1956

Tanglewood Features Petrassi Concerto

LENOX — The fourteenth program of the Berkshire Music Festival, last night in the shed at Tanglewood, pitted against each other long-digested works from the classic and romantic eras, versus a highly controversial work by a contemporary Italian composer.

The Boston Symphony was conducted by Charles Munch, and it was peak performance throughout.

An audience of 6,256 persons heard the following: Beethoven's overture, "Leonore," No. 2, Opus 72; Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto of Orchestra (composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra); and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4, in F. Minor, Opus 36.

From the standpoint of newness, the important item was, of course, the Petrassi concerto. He is currently teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center and was on hand to take a bow at the conclusion of the performance.

Imaginative Study

There is no question that the concerto is an exhilarating, cleverly contrived, and imaginative study in orchestral color and effect. Certainly one never knows what is "around the corner," although many of the corners are never quite negotiated, and leave us with a new plane of ideas to contend with.

We also do not doubt that the work might well "grow" on one with enough hearing and determination. Last night it seems to have been very well played. In fact one member of the orchestra told us that of the three performances it has given the work, this one was outstanding. Since wrong notes could easily conceal themselves in the melange of sound, we must take his word for it.

Describing the sounds purely in terms of their effect, the work begins with shimmering statements in strings to soft, deep punctuations in percussion.

Plan Slow to Evolve

In spite of this graphic musical idea, it takes some time to awaken to a correlated plan. Many "moods" transpire—barbaric syncopation, during which flutes shrill remarks, strings are bounced upon the plucked. In disjointed successiveness, the balance of the two movements rant, cajole, and wander, and get tamed only in the final sequence that closes in the vague spirit of the opening.

Beethoven's "Leonore" overture opened in a formal style, investing most of its Romantic notions in woodwind and string solos. Munch gave it a preoccupied reading, devout and unhurried. When the storms burst, they did so with deliberation and dignity.

The finale shouted with rather inordinate strain, climaxing the overture with impressive but exaggerated sonority—a little pummelling with the playing.

The Tchaikovsky symphony received a brilliant performance, and had an antidotal effect after the Petrassi. The surging strength of its themes, affectionate melodies, and frustration were vividly unfolded by conductor and orchestra.

Tonight's program, conducted by Munch, will include Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Schumann's Piano Concerto, with Rudolf Serkin as soloist; Honegger's Fifth Symphony; and Debussy's "La Mer."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 27 1956

Bernstein Conducts Fifth Prokofieff Symphony

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

the three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

To Commemorate Anniversary

Dr Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 156) with a performance will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr Copland, assistant to Dr Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10 a.m. (August 4), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 28: Hanson: Elery in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor, soloist, Rudolf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No 5; Debussy: "La Mer", Charles Munch, conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto, soloist, Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major, Richard Burgin, conductor.

[143]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 28 1956

TANGLEWOOD SHED CONCERT ATTRACTS 6256

Novelty On Program 'Fifth Concerto for Orchestra' By Petrassi

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 27—The open- ing concert of the second week o concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed drew an audience of 6256 people. The in- clement weather has held audi- ences down to almost a minimum this season, which, aside from the financial loss, is unfortunate because not for many seasons have there been finer performances of the great music in the orchestral literature.

Commissioned Work

Tonight, the novelty on the pro- gram was the "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" by Goffredo Petrassi. This work was commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary and it had its first performance in Bos- ton in Dec., 1955. Mr. Petrassi is an artful craftsman who knows his orchestra and how to expose it to advantage. Unfortunately the present work seems to have no form or focus. Just when one ex- pects the work to get some place off goes the composer on another tangent. There are moments of charming melodies, but these are fragmentary. The orchestra is given ample opportunity to show what can be accomplished by a group of virtuosi. Perhaps, had we not heard so recently the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra," this work of Mr. Petrassi might have assumed a greater interest. As it was, it seemed to bear out our thought that inspiration and commissions do not necessarily go hand in hand. Mr. Munch labored mightily on this work and it was probably given the finest performance it will ever have.

The program opened with a magnificent performance of the "Leonore" Overture No. 2. Heard less often than the No. 3, it has the same soulful and grave in- troduction based on the air of Florestan. There is not quite the sustained excitement one finds in the third "Leonore" Overture, but there is within the second a wonderful building of climax and extraordinarily fine contrasts. Mr. Munch was at his most com- municative.

Passages Almost New

The concert concluded with a scintillating performance of Symphony No. 4 in F Minor" by Tschaikowsky. The playing of the first symphonies of Tschaikowsky have practically become a tradi- tion here at Tanglewood. They are the sure-fire portion of a Koussevitzky program, year after year. Mr. Munch's approach to these symphonies is less vehe- ment than Mr. Koussevitzky. In fact, his readings are so beauti- fully detailed that at times one hears passages which seem al- most new, so seldom were they heard in the welter of noise that the sum total of what many conductors feel is the tradition of Tschaikowsky interpretation. The performance tonight was very fine. So was the audience reaction.

Tonight's Program

Tomorrow night Mr. Munch will open the program with an Elegy In Memory of Koussevit- zky" by Howard Hanson. This was another work composed for the 75th anniversary of the Orchestra. Rudolf Serkin, the most popular pianist to come to Tanglewood, will play the Schu- mann "Concerto in A Minor" and it will be followed by Honeg- ger's "Symphony No. 5." The program will close with one of great interpretive triumphs Mr. Munch, "La Mer" by Debussy.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, will conduct the program Sunday afternoon at 2.30 and will have as soloist his wife, with Posselt, who will play Hindemith's "Concerto for Viola and Orchestra." The program will open with Prokofieff's "Ro- meo and Juliet" Ballet. Second Suite, and conclude with Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 28 1956

Hanson's Elegy to Koussevitzky On Festival Program Tonight

Memorial Composition Also Will Be Performed by BSO on European Tour—Serkin Featured Soloist in Music Shed

Howard Hanson

TANGLEWOOD—The elegy composed by Howard Hanson in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, to be performed tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed by Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be presented to audiences at six concerts in Europe by the BSO during its coming tour. Hanson's composition is scheduled for performances in Dublin, Edinburg, Prague, Vienna, Paris and Munich.

Dr. Munch will open tonight's program with the Tanglewood premiere of Hanson's work, which was composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Hanson is director of the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester.

Big Crowd Expected

Rudolf Serkin, who attracted one of the biggest concert crowds in the history of the Berkshire Festival when an overflow audience of 15,000 turned out last year, returns to the Shed tonight to play the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856. While the advance sale of tickets for tonight's concert is not up to last year's sales for the Serkin concert, one of the largest crowds of the season to date is expected.

The Festival had its first break of the season's Shed concerts from the weatherman last night when 6,258 persons attended the concert, and if rain holds off tonight, an even larger crowd is expected to be on hand.

After the Intermission tonight, Dr. Munch will conduct the Fifth Symphony by the late Artur Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. He has played with all the major orchestras in the world and in recent years has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in Festival performances with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. A Berkshire neighbor in the summer, Mr. Serkin lives on a Vermont farm.

Husband, Wife Team

Tomorrow afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will also feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith. The concert will begin with the second suite from Prokofieff's Ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

Ruth Posselt (Mrs. Richard Burgin) has played with most of our leading orchestras and with such conductors as Szell, Monteux, De Sabata, Dorati, Bernstein, Koussevitzky and Munch since her sensational debut in Carnegie Hall, New York, at the age of nine. She has played the world premiere performances of many works written especially for her, among them the Concerti of Hindemith, Piston, Hill and Dukelsky. Her most recent Tanglewood appearance was at a concert during the 1954 Festival when she introduced the Concerto by Khatchaturian to the Berkshire Festival.

The Berkshire Festival will move into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music next week with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by Mr. Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening in the Theater Concert Hall.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Leonard Bernstein and Dr. Munch.

Next Week at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its fifth week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday afternoon—will be held in the Music Shed and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3), by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4), and by Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

Mr. de Carvalho is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. His program will include works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, and Igor Stravinsky. Mr. de Carvalho's wife, Jocy de Oliveira, will make her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein will devote his concert as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, and it will consist of Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood première of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon. The soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of Robert Schumann's passing (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his Second Symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood première of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 28 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,916
JUL 28 1956

Things to See and Do:

Lyme Art Ass'n. Opens 55th Annual Show; Outdoor Music Season Nearing Climax

By ROBINA C. CLARK

The Lyme Art association has opened its 55th annual exhibition of oil paintings supplemented by watercolors, pastels, prints, drawings and sculpture, to remain open through August 12.

This exhibition, one of Connecticut's oldest and most important lists 200 numbers. The Lyme shows, generally considered "conservative," nevertheless keep pace with important art trends and a comparison of the current show with those of a dozen or so years ago would point up that fact.

Tosca Olinsky's still life, one of the notable numbers in this season's showing, hangs in a place of honor in the north gallery. In the same fundamental grouping the canvases of Gertrude Nason also stand out. These works are among the canvases and pastels, exhibited by more than a dozen leading women artists. On the distaff side also is Elizabeth Gordon, winner of the national competition for a head in bronze of the late Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal, who shows two finely modeled heads in bronze.

There are wood carvings by Hank and Halina Peck, a man and wife team and a fine terracotta by Henry Kreis. Outstanding canvases are exhibited by such well known artists as Will Howe Foote, whose "Mexican Mountain Town" is given the center in the south gallery, Ivan G. Olinsky, Frederick Buchholz, Frederick Lester Sexton, Guy Wiggins and many others.

The Lyme show which has more than a local reputation, annually attracts between four and five thousand visitors.

Tanglewood to Hear Serkin

The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts in Lenox, Mass., will begin Wednesday night with a joint recital to be given in the Tanglewood theater, by Rudolph Serkin, pianist and the Boston Woodwind Quartet.

Mr. Serkin will play two major Schumann works, the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnival", and will be at the keyboard for the Mozart Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds (K-452).

In the Music Shed, Eleazar de Carvalho, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of works by Debussy, Falla, Ravel, Stravinsky, with his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, as soloist in the Ravel Piano Concerto Friday evening. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in a memorial to its former conductor Serge Koussevitzky, Saturday evening, the program consisting of Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5 which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States; and Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Charles Munch takes the concert Sunday afternoon with works scheduled by Aaron Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann, with Zino Francescatti soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

New Haven To Welcome Eileen Farrell

Eileen Farrell, the young American dramatic soprano, beloved by radio and TV listeners of the Telephone Hour, will be the solo artist at the July 31 Pop concert in New Haven's Yale Bowl.

Miss Farrell, who is to make her operatic debut next month with the San Francisco Opera company, will be enjoying something of a homecoming in her first appearance at the Bowl. She is a true Connecticut product, born in Willimantic and educated in the public schools of Norwich. Her mother organized the first choral group at the University of Connecticut.

She will sing operatic selections from "Madame Butterfly" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," and a group of popular numbers: "Sing to Me, Sing" by Homer, "All the Things You Are" and "The Night Was Made for Love" by Kern, and "Let My Song Fill Your Heart," by Charles.

The New Haven Symphony orchestra, directed by Frank Brieff, its regular winter conductor, will play the Overture to "The Gypsy Baron" by Strauss; the Bacchanale from "Samson and Delilah" by St. Saens; the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's "Schwanda" and an orchestral version of "The King and I."

Concerts Continue at Fairfield

Two stars from the musical theater, Dorothy Sarnoff and Ray Middleton, will be featured in the Connecticut Symphony society's fifth concert of its summer Pops series in the Fairfield University Stadium Bowl on August 3. They will present show tunes from "The King and I" and other popular Broadway musicals.

Of special interest to music lovers in the Danbury area is the fact that John Pennington of Ridgefield, will be on the conductor's podium.

Mr. Pennington who was formerly assistant to Sir Thomas Beecham, of the London Philharmonic, will again wield the baton at a special Pops concert for young people on August 11. It will be a daytime concert, with the Bridgeport Bagpipe band appearing in dress uniforms, as soloists.

Sunday at Music Mountain

There will be a change in the program of the fifth afternoon chamber music concert of the Music Mountain season this Sunday at Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Benny Goodman, virtuoso of the clarinet in the fields of jazz and classical music, will be the featured artist in a program of Brahms, Rainier and Mozart. Natasha Magg, who was scheduled to appear with her husband, Berkshire Quartet cellist Fritz Magg, in Chopin's Sonata for Cello and Piano in G Minor, will be presented on Sunday, Aug. 19, at 4 p. m. Mrs. Magg and Fritz Magg will then perform the Chopin Sonata for Cello and Piano.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 28 1956

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Shed.
8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "Mrs. McThing."
8:40—Sharon (Conn.) Playhouse. Final performance, "Heartbreak House."
8:45—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Final performance, "Heartbreak House."
8:45—Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse. "The Solid Gold Cadillac."
9:00—Jacob's Pillow. San Francisco Ballet.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next seven weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 28 1956

SERKIN, BERNSTEIN ON LENOX SCHEDULE

The next to the last week of the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., will open Wednesday with a chamber-music recital by Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first of the three weekend concerts of symphonic music in the Shed. His program Friday evening will introduce to America the Brazilian pianist Jocy de Oliveira. She will play the Ravel Concerto in G.

The Saturday evening program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony and Mozart's Mass in C minor will be performed. Soloists in the latter will be Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Charles Munch will conduct the final week-end program on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5. He will observe the centenary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of the composer's Second Symphony. Zino Francescatti will be violin soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto, and the program will also include Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 28 1956

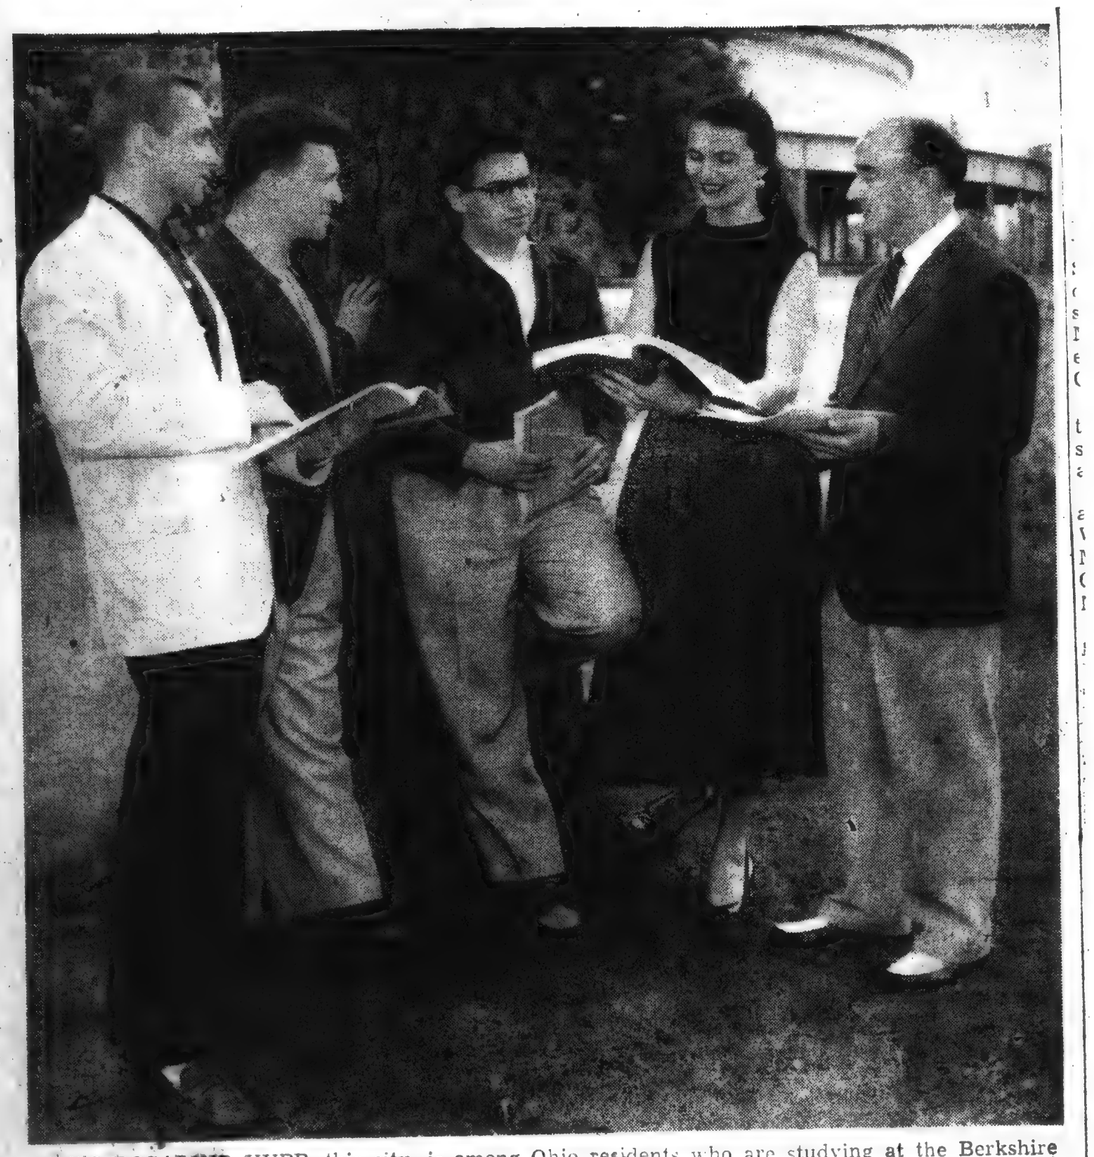
Serkin to Play At Berkshire Fete

Rudolf Serkin, who attracted an overflow crowd of more than 15,000 when he made his Tanglewood debut at last summer's Berkshire Festival, returns tonight to perform in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Serkin will play the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856.

Tomorrow afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will also feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the violin Concerto by Hindemith. The concert will begin with the second suite from Prokofieff's Ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," and conclude with the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

[144]

Chillicothe Gazette - July 28.



MISS ROSALIND HUPP, this city, is among Ohio residents who are studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer. With her are (from left) Mr. Norman J. Schmidt of Dayton, an associate in the opera department; Mr. Robert D. Nagy of Lorain, drama student in the opera department; Mr. George Posell of Cleveland, coach in the opera department; and Mr. Robert B. Morris of Kenton, a drama student in the opera department. Miss Hupp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart E. Hupp, 144 Vine St., is a drama student in the opera department. The Berkshire Music Center, summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival concerts, is in its 14th session from July 2 to Aug. 14.

THE EVENING SUN, HANOVER, PA. SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1956

T MUSIC CENTER—Two Hanoverians and two other Pennsylvanians are studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer. They are, from left, Earl F. Groner, Stroudsburg, who plays the bass trombone in the student orchestra; Shirley M. Rhodes, Hanover, who sings in the Festival Chorus; Mara Hall, Lancaster, who plays violin in the student orchestra, and Nancy L. Williams, Hanover, a drama student in the opera department. The school is in its 14th session from July 2 to Aug. 12 with Charles Munch as director of the school, Aaron Copland as assistant director and Ralph Berkowitz as dean.

[145]

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 28, 1956—9

Music

Petrassi at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the fourth weekend at Tanglewood was devoted to two new works for the first half and to the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony after intermission.

Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an excellent reading of the rarely played original overture of Beethoven to his sole opera of which the title was juggled several times between "Leonora" and "Fidelio." This particular version of the overture was new to Tanglewood. The fifth concerto for orchestra of Goffredo Petrassi was a real novelty as it was only played for the first time anywhere less than a year ago in Symphony Hall, having been commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony by the orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

* * *

Petrassi uses the extreme limits of the orchestral resources more often than he does the conventional means, such, for instance, as requiring the strings for long episodes to play near the bridge where vibration is restricted, and indicating mutes for the brass. The effects he thus calls for are applied to a classicism which rarely deviates in spirit. The figures and idioms he uses, and reiterates to drive them home, impress his audience deeply. There is little pretense of romanticism and his music proceeds in comparatively narrow channels.

* * *

What, then, makes it such gripping music? The twelve-tone system and the complex rhythmic pattern are not allowed, either by the composer or by last night's conductor, to become obsessions to obscure the general kaleidoscopic panorama. That much of it may be derivative need not detract from its originality. One may be inclined to listen too intently to the details on first hearing and that can be bewildering. It is the larger symmetry that is rewarding and Petrassi's mastery reveals itself best in that aspect.

Goffredo Petrassi

* * *

The composer is currently guest of the composition department on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center and he was called to the stage by the conductor to share the applause of the audience which exceeded 6,200. The concerto is in two movements which conform very little to normal structure as evidenced by the ponticello beginning and the vanishing coda but we should hazard a guess that this work will endure and grow in the esteem of music-lovers.

* * *

EXCEPT FOR the fascinating pizzicato scherzo the Tchaikovsky vividness is intensified by noisy brass and percussion and Munch played with energetic, almost savage, impetuosity. The audience broke in sixteen bars before the end to start their applause and they did not stop until the conductor had been recalled many times.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 28 1956

Symphony Tour To Take 25 Back To European Homelands

Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, on Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris on Sept. 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres on Sept. 21.

Included in this group are Emil Kornsand (born in Colmar), Norbert Lauga (born in Aix-les-Bains), Pierre Mayer (born in Paris) and Roger Shermont (born in Paris), violinists Albert Yves Bernard (born in Seine) and Jean Caulape (born in Toulouse) are French-born violists. Leon Marjollet (born in Chalons-sur-Marne) and Alfred Zighera (born in Paris) are native French cellists.

The bass section includes Georges Moleux, principal bass (born in Boulogne-sur-Mer), Gaston Dufresne (born in Lille) and Henri Girard, born in Montlhery. Other French-born Boston Symphony players are Jean Devergie (born in Marseille), oboe; Louis Speyer (born in Paris), English horn; Roger Voisin, principal trumpet (born in Angers); Marcel Lafosse (born in Marly-le-Roi), trumpet; and Bernard Zighera (born in Paris), harp.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and tour

Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born. Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Three Russian-born violinists have been polishing up their Russian for the orchestra's concerts in Leningrad on Sept. 5 and 6, and Moscow on Sept. 8 and 9. They are Victor Manusevitch (born in Alexandrovsk), Vladimir Resnikoff (born in Novgorod), and Manuel Zung (born in Grodno).

Two cellists, Louis Berger (born in Prague) and Josef Zimbler (born in Pilsen), have been briefing their colleagues about the best restaurants and hotels in Prague, where the orchestra will play on Sept. 11.

The concert in Vienna on Sept. 12 will find Irving Frankel (born in Lemberg), bass, and Ernst Panenka (born in Vienna), bass soon, acting as guides for the other men as they go sight-seeing in this famous musical capital.

The two remaining foreign-born players whose homelands will be visited are violinists Alfred Krips (born in Boston) and Einar Hansen (born in Copenhagen). The orchestra will play in Copenhagen on Aug. 31 immediately after its final performance at the Edinburgh Festival, and Stuttgart and Munich in Germany will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Sept. 2 and 14. Eleven other members of the orchestra are foreign-born, but their countries are not included on the itinerary for this year's

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 28 1956

Familiar Music Fresher With Munch at Helm

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony proved last night at Tanglewood that familiar music needs only the rejuvenating freshness of the interpreter.

In a program of Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikowsky the normal presumption would be that the novelty of a Petrassi premiere would outweigh in aesthetic importance a rehearing of standard repertory pieces by Beethoven and Tchaikowsky. Such was not the case and the Tchaikowsky 4th Symphony was a striking example.

Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2 reaffirms the artistic stature of the Master of Bonn and his unending quest for perfection of form and the highest expressivity. It would be an interesting experiment sometime for a conductor to place the three Leonore Overtures, as well as the socalled Fidelio Overture, on one program so that all might observe the composer's painstaking development of his materials.

* * *

IN THE SECOND Leonore Mr. Munch was most persuasive in the introduction, where his tempo encompassed all the nobility and gravity of the situation and was in vivid contrast to the driving impetus of the "storm" section preceding the trumpet calls. There were times last night when the conductor allowed his brass to cover the strings but this was the only artistic miscalculation in a moving performance.

Goffredo Petrassi is the guest composer at the Berkshire Festival this year, a figure of considerable importance in Italy where his orchestral and choral works have been frequently performed. Last night the orchestra played his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, which was commissioned for the 75th anniversary celebration.

At first hearing the influence of Stravinsky is readily apparent. One could hardly overlook the similarity to "Le Sacre" with its aggressive rhythms, throbbing brass, and persistent staccato figures. To this reviewer, however, it lacks communicable organic unity and cumulative impact.

* * *

IT WAS NATURAL that the greatest audience enthusiasm should be reserved for the ubiquitous Tchaikowsky 4th but the performance last night deserved praises. The tendency is to sentimentalize or melodramatize but Munch avoided both of these extremities in a reading beautifully balanced in its component parts.

The Boston brass played with sonorous and impelling authority, particularly in the last movement, and the strings were eloquent in their songfulness. James Huneker, the noted critic, called Tchaikowsky a "dramatic poet" and that is exactly how Munch envisioned him in this exciting performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 28 1956

Joe Petrovec

Eleazar de Carvalho will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its Tanglewood concert Friday evening, Aug. 3. His wife, Jocy de Oliveira, will be the soloist in the Ravel Piano Concerto.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124
JUL 28 1956

New Work Played At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 27 — There's news from the Berkshire Music Festival here tonight.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra finally got around to performing a new work.

New to a degree, that is. For Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra was actually written for the Boston Symphony's seventh-fifth anniversary and premiered in the sometime Athens of America during the past season.

This was its first hearing at Tanglewood, and apart from the joy it imparted as something new to listen to, it proved an interesting, impactful work. One in fact, that might almost be called important in its overall excellences, were it not for so any highly derivative pages.

As John Burk remarks in his program notes, no one has commented upon Petrassi without yoking the names of Stravinsky and Hindemith to his. This will probably always be so, and one may further augment similarities by calling up Profofiev.

Basically, the Fifth Concerto for Orchestra is twelve-tone in approach and manufacture. It is in two movements, the first molto moderato, the second andante tranquillo. As Mr. Burk also points out, it is without concertino or extended solo passages. Where it is persistently like Stravinsky is in such elements as hyper - attention to instrumental timbres, upon which the composition is reared quite as much as on harmonies; its continual use of small groups of considerably diversified instruments; its rhythmic patterns alternating between repetitive and syncopated effects; and its partiality to tympani.

High Ranging Melodies

Where it is like Profofiev is especially in the second movement. There the high ranging melodies put together out of wide intervals suggests many pages out of the Russian's symphones.

But Mr. Petrassi's concerto is most like Stravinsky in its programmatic, theater or literary implications. It is picture-making music, remote for abstraction. It is about something, rather than merely of sound. Here it is vivid, warm, human and thoughtful. It does not exist in a vacuum, as does so much modern music, and for this one is both grateful and moved.

What the concert is "about," Mr. Petrassi knows best. But it certainly pulses with the alternate anguish and aspiration of our times. This is not a new theme. In fact, it is one of the most frequent. But still, Mr. Petrassi has felt and written intensely about it, putting every bar to cogent musical and philosophical purpose. His concerto is a communicative experience, if not an entirely new one.

The evening opened with Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 2, a work which makes one realize how much more concretely effective is the No. 3: The orchestra took the first twelve bars even to begin to get together, and then had trouble giving anything like a precise performance of the rest of the item.

Final offering of the evening was Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony. As muc of it as I was able to hear proceeded in orderly fashion though rather more than usually spasmodically. Mr. Munch is frequently an unpredictable man with the tempi, and he appeared to be sorting them around quite freely on the occasion.

T.H.P.

4—The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 28, 1956

Couples Offered Box Seats For Tanglewood on Parade

An innovation for this year's Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 9, is that box seats are being offered to couples, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, chairman of the box committee, announced today. Box tickets will go on general sale Monday.

Individual box seats will be available for those who do not wish to purchase an entire box for the annual event to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. The center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now is in its 14th season.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky again is general chairman of arrangements for Tanglewood on Parade. Mrs. Bruce Sanborn is vice chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, secretary. Miss Robinson Smith is being assisted by Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. as box committee vice chairman.

County Boxholders

Berkshire County residents who already have reserved boxes are Mrs. John L. Brooke, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hawkins, Mrs. Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. George K. Livermore, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn and Mrs. John L. Senior, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Kay of Lenox; Mrs. George Otis Rockwood, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Kerrick, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Kreisler, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., Miss Robinson Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe and Mrs. Charles Griswold of Stockbridge.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Beinecke and Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington; Mrs. S. Ralph Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Harrison L. Amber, of Pittsfield; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holton Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton. Another boxholder will be Julius Fleischmann of Cincinnati, Ohio. Sharing boxes will be Miss Anna R. Alexandre and Mr. and Mrs. David Huxley of Lenox, and Miss Gladys Greene of Lenox and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond.

Grounds Open at 4

Grounds will open at 4 in the afternoon, when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to an opera by students of the Berkshire Music Center. After a welcome at 5:45, all are invited to see the center in operation. Simultaneous sessions of each department will be held. The orchestra will perform in the Shed; composers in the chamber music hall; and opera students, in the theater-concert hall.

A picnic supper will be held at 7, and those attending may bring picnic baskets or make use of the buffet and refreshment carts. During the picnic hour, there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Chorus on the porch of the main house.

The evening will conclude with a concert in the Shed at 8:15. The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra both will perform.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

SAT., July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolph Serkin, Piano
SUN., July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho, Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 666
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. at 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1.00

Tanglewood Soprano Sings Here Tomorrow

GREAT BARRINGTON — Marjorie McClung, soprano, will sing Mozart's "Alleluia" at the 10 o'clock service tomorrow morning in the First Congregational Church.

Miss McClung is a student of opera dramatics at the Berkshire Music Center. She will sing the role of Dido in Berlioz's "The Trojans" at Tanglewood Monday evening.

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday

July 29

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Richard Burgin. Music Shed.

"Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 — Prokofieff

Violin Concerto — Hindemith

Soloist: Ruth Posselt

Symphony No. 1 in D major — Mahler

8:30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Concert of Renaissance and Early Baroque music under auspices of the Williamstown Theater Foundation. Adams Memorial Theater, Williamstown.

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Benny Goodman, clarinet.

Quartet in B flat major, K.458 — Mozart

Quartet — Rainier

Quintet for clarinet and strings in B minor, Op. 115 — Brahms

Avaloch

8:30—Steffen Zacharias Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent."

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey and band, with Louis Bellson and Charlie Shavers

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Final performance, "The Solid Gold Cadillac"

Monday

July 30

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. Four complete acts from 19th century operas. (Friends—special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Happy Time," with Paul Lipson

Continuing: Avaloch, 8:30

Tuesday

July 31

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 2 Chorus, Tanglewood Choir. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Up From Everest." (Professional premiere)

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Tea and Sympathy"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Harvey"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "The Tarot"; "Jinx"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

Wednesday

August 1

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. Theater-Concert Hall.

Symphonic Etudes — Schumann

Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K.452 — Mozart

"Carnaval" — Schumann

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 5

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphonic Ode — Copland

Violin Concerto — Tchaikovsky

Soloist: Zino Francescatti

Symphony No. 2 in C major — Schumann

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Sarah Vaughan and Trio

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 6

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. First stage performance. (Friends — special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens

August 7

Tanglewood

8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Point of No Return"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "Con Amore"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 8

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall.

Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure

Violin Sonata — Ravel

Violin Sonata — Franck

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 12

Tanglewood

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven

"Die Meistersinger," Act 3 — Wagner

(opening and final scene) Chorus and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music

(At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 13

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45 — "A Roomful of Roses," with Francesca Bruning

August 14

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Flowering Peach"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Bus Stop"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Rainmaker"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 15

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Brindge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

August 19

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Claudio Monteverdi, sacred and secular works (At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Errol Garner Trio

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 20

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Made in Heaven," with Richard Arlen

August 21

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Glass Menagerie"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Bus Stop" (second week)

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Love Is a Two-Way Street," with Albert Dekker, Edith Atwater (new play)

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 22

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

August 26

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Music of the German Reformation and Baroque (At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Glenn Miller Orchestra with Ray McKinley

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 27

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Little Foxes," with Ruth Chatterton

August 28

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Tiger at the Gates"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Anastasia"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Blithe Spirit"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 29

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

September 2

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—The Old Testament in Early Music (At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet, with Gerry Mulligan, Jimmy Giuffre and Lee Becker and Jazz Dance Group

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

September 3

September 4

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Festival"

September 5

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Thursday

August 2

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Marian McPartland Trio

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

6:00—Student Orchestra, Opera Scenes, Chorus, Chamber Music.

8:15—Shed Concert.
Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho.
Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa Lobos
Boston Pops Orchestra. Conductor, Arthur Fiedler.
La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 16

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Evening of Calypso, West Indian and Cuban music.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 23

Berkshire Music Barn

Billy Taylor Trio

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 30

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Jam Session

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

September 6

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Friday

August 3

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Music Shed.
"La Kermesse"
"The Three-Cornered Hat" — Barraud
Piano Concerto — Falla
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira — Ravel
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (complete) — Stravinsky

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major — Haydn
Symphony No. 6 — Piston
"Don Juan" — Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier" — Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

August 17

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Irina Borowska, Alan Howard, Emy St. Just & Company, Tommy Marlowe, Rebecca Harris

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 24

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Nina Novak and Leon Danielian. Anna Sokolov's Theater Dance Company. Gina, dances of India.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 31

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Louis Smith and David Adams. Myra Kinch & Company. Lotte Goslar

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

September 7

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Saturday

August 4

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Music Shed. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky).
Mass in C minor (K.427) Kyrie and Gloria — Mozart
Chorus and Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, Soprano; Eunice Alberts, Contralto; John McCollum, Tenor
Symphony No. 5 — Prokofieff

South Mountain

3:30—Beaux Arts Trio
Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") — Beethoven
Trio in D minor, Op. 120 — Faure
Trio in B flat, Op. 99 — Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.
Festival Overture — Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major — Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9 — Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" — Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet
Sonata for Violin and Piano — Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello — Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 26 — Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 18

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet
Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1 — Boccherini
Quartet Op. 70 — Ernest Toch
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1 — Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 25

South Mountain

3:30—Robert Goldsand, piano.
Partita in C minor — Bach
Sonata in G minor, Op. 22 — Schumann
"Gaspard de la Nuit" — Ravel

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45 Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

September 1

South Mountain

3:30—Trio Concertante. (Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Memorial Concert, given by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress)
Trio in C minor, Op. 101 — Brahms
Variations "Ich bin der Schneider Kakadu" — Beethoven
Trio in A minor — Ravel

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

September 8

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

F147

County Notes

APPOINTED by Gov. Herter to the 10-member state Board of Education was Mrs. Robert A. Pederson of Alford, state PTA vice president, advisory committee member for the Massachusetts Council for Public Schools, and a crusader for the Southern Berkshire Regional School. At the same time, the governor reappointed Pittsfield Police Chief Thomas H. Calnan to the Massachusetts Highway Safety Committee and named Pittsfield Atty. W. Stanley Cooke public administrator for Berkshire County to succeed Atty. Jacob S. Aaronson. . . . The Williamstown Summer Theater, now in its make-or-break second season after running a $6,700 deficit in 1955, announced that last week production of Shaw's "St. Joan" set two house records by drawing 2,500 customers and grossing $3,950, well above the break-even point. . . . Despite poor weather, 34 U.N. staff members representing 19 nations were wined and dined by Berkshire hosts at the seventh annual Tanglewood weekend sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding. . . . In a nationwide "Operation Alert" civil defense exercise, Berkshire CD workers coped with a mock air attack that caused 26,000 local "casualties" and rendered outlying areas uninhabitable when a hypothetical A-bomb (described as a small one) was dropped in the center of the city.

ALBERT STERNER

ARTIST ALBERT STERNER left a deeply etched impression on the world during his 83 years in it. He was the fiery exponent of a point of view

"EVIL COUNSEL," artist Sterner's conception of the eternal Lady Macbeth poisoning the mind of a man, may be seen in the Berkshire Museum show in two different versions. This is an oil painting; the other is a drypoint etching.

Pittsfield Industrial Development Co.

Pittsfield, Massachusetts

SNOOK'S and BERT'S
ALBANY ROAD, WEST PITTSFIELD
(Recommended by TRAVEL MAT)

Tanglewood Tales

Composers' Forum Tomorrow Night

Aaron Copland will be the moderator for the composers' forum to be held in the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow evening at 8:30.

The program follows:

Sonata for Flute and Piano (1953).
Richard Hillert, Wausau, Wis.
Fast, Slow, Fast.
Gerardo Levy, flute.
Elizabeth Cowling, piano.

Sonatina No. 2 for Violin and Piano (1953)
Hector Campos-Parsi, San Juan, Puerto Rico
Vivo, Adagietto, Comodo e grazioso.
Isaac David Hurwitz, violin.
Judith Yaeger, piano.

Partita for Harp, Flute and Clarinet (1952)
Lothar Klein, Minneapolis, Minn.
Allegro, Sostenuto, Ballando.
Diane Williams, harp.
Gerardo Levy, flute.
Efraim Guigui, clarinet.

Sonatina for Piano (1955)
Arlene Zallman, New York City.
Moderato, Póco lento, Vivace assai.
Arlene Zallman, piano.

Sonata for Violin Alone (1956).
Allen Brings, Flushing, N.Y.
Allegro moderato, Lento.
Nancy Cirillo, violin.

Chamber Concerto (1955, Revised 1956)
Michael Sahl, New York City.
With vigor, restrained.
Pete Angelo, oboe.
Efrain Guigui, clarinet.
Bradford deVos, bassoon.
Ronald Hebert, horn.
Margaret Allen, horn.
Maynard Goldman, violin.
Michael Nieland, violin.
Carolyn Mae Lentz, viola.
Roberta Luce, cello.
David Bethe, string bass.

Chamber Music Monday at 4:30

The Department 1 chamber music program to be given Monday afternoon at 4:30 in the Chamber Music Hall follows:

Octet — Pascal
Janice Morgan, Kingston, Pa., flute.
John Oberbrunner, Syracuse, N.Y., flute.
Mickey Hooten, Shreveport, La., oboe.
Jack Ratterree, Towkawa, Okla., clarinet.
Ruth Moss, Newport News, Va., bassoon.
Harold Ritsma, Monence, Ill., bassoon.
Edwin Thayer, Weymouth, French horn.
Ruth Still, Sebring, Fla., trumpet.

Fantasy — Britten
Milton C. Hamilton, Benton Harbor, Mich., oboe.
Noriko Oka, Tokyo, Japan, violin.
Carolyn Lentz, Hillsdale, Mich., viola.
Edward A. Klein, Sharon, cello.

Suite — Berezowsky
Andre Come, Newton, trumpet.
Natalo Faella, Baton Rouge, La., trumpet.
Wayne Harrell, Wichita, Kan., French horn.
Barbara Schelberg, Old Tappan, N.J., French horn.
Jack Bayes, Bell, Calif., trombone.
Daniel W. Sable, New York, N.Y., trombone.
Bruce B. Butler, Schenectady, N.Y., tuba.

Choir Concert Tuesday Night

Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall the Tanglewood choir will present the following program:

Jesu, meine Freude, Dietrich Buxtehude (1637-1707)
Choral: Jesu, meine Freude.
Trotz dem alten Drachen.
Weg mit allen Schatzen.
Albert Barouch, Bronx, N.Y., bass solo.
Jack Hohensee, Milwaukee, Wis., conductor.

Jesu, meine Freude J. S. Bach (1685-1750)
Trotz dem alten Drachen.
Weicht, ihr trauer geister.
Richard Aslanian, Belmar, N.J., conductor.

Love's Tempest — Edward Elgar (1857-1934)
The Golden Cloud — Tchaikovsky (1840-1893)
Tafelleid (Drinking Song). — Brahms (1809-1883)
Beverly Mason, Springfield, conductor.

Mass in E Minor. — Anton Bruckner (1824-1896)
Kyrie.
George Woodhead, Baltimore, Md., conductor.
Credo.
David Buttolph, New York, N.Y., conductor.

Les Noces — Igor Stravinsky (1882-)
James Alfieris, conductor.

Thursday August 9th ● Events From 6 to 11 P.M.

RAIN OR SHINE

TANGLEWOOD — LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Shed Concert at 8:15 by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conducted By ELEAZAR DE CARVALHO

Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa Lobos
Berkshire Festival Chorus

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
In a Typical Pops Program

La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

(Encores May be Expected)

Lawn Party ★ Picnic Supper ★ Door Prizes

TICKETS: Box Seats $5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50.

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:

Symphony Orchestra ★ Opera Scenes
The Chorus ★ Chamber Music

—REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS—
Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., July 28-29, Aug. 3-4-5-10-11-12
(Chamber Concerts—Wed. Eve., Aug. 8)
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50
(Box Seats $6.50) Admission $2.00
Write or Phone
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 28 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY PLAYS A TRIBUTE

Concerto by Petrassi, Marking Orchestra's 75th Year, Heard at Tanglewood

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 27—It was an evening of explosive music here at Tanglewood tonight.

The center of the explosion was the new Fifth Concerto for Orchestra that Goffredo Petrassi composed for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Boston Symphony. It was presented first last winter in Boston and New York. Mr. Petrassi is guest instructor in composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center.

Charles Munch, himself a man of no mean explosive power, conducted tonight's performance by the Boston Symphony.

Although not always explosive in volume, Mr. Petrassi's concerto is a series of emotional explosions in the best late-romantic tradition. And while he uses twelve-tone thematic material his score is always tonal and clothed in the richest romantic orchestral color. The sound is permeated by the shudder of string tremolos.

The color range goes from soft dark sounds in the depths of the double basses and tympani to shimmering high strings pierced by a blinding flash of a trumpet with a smash of cymbals.

There is a temptation for the ear to go reminiscence-hunting, for Mr. Petrassi's score has clear echoes of the "Rite of Spring" and of later works by Stravinsky. There are touches of harmony and instrumental color of Alban Berg, from the murder scene of his "Wozzeck," for example.

But what harm, if Mr. Petrassi makes convincing expressive use of these? Mozart, whose bicentennial we are celebrating, was one of the most electic composers who ever lived. From beginning to end his music career is full of themes and procedures that were the clichés of his day. We need not compare Mr. Petrassi to Mozart in other ways, but his concerto seems honest and highly effective music.

It was flanked on tonight's program by the second of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overtures, surely the most dramatic of the four he wrote for his opera.

Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony closed the program in a performance of heroic sweep and passion. The finale was like skyrockets and pinwheels exploding into the night sky of Tanglewood.

[148]

TIGHT BINDING

except where otherwise indicated, both pages from

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 29, 1956

In Programs Scheduled for This Week at Tanglewood

JOCY DE OLIVEIRA

ELEAZAR DE CARVALHO

EUNICE ALBERTS

PHYLISS CURTIN

Concert pianist Jocy De Oliveira makes her North America debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Shed at Tanglewood next Friday night. Her husband, Eleazar De Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony of Rio de Janeiro, will lead the Boston musicians that night. Eunice Alberts, contralto, and Phyliss Curtin, soprano, will sing as Leonard Bernstein conducts a memorial program for Serge Koussevitsky on Saturday night.

SAN FRANCISCO BALLET CONCERT GUESTS

Lenox, July 28, Twenty-five members of the San Francisco Ballet, accompanied by Lew Christensen, their general director, and Ted Shawn, their host during their current eastern debut at Jacob's Pillow in Becket, will be guests of the Berkshire Festival at the Sunday concert (July 29); and a party of 31 students from the dance festival will also attend. On August 4, the summer school of Clark University in Worcester, Mass. will picnic and swim at Tanglewood and attend the concert. August 11 Tanglewood will be host at the International Summer School of Bennington College, Vt., when the visitors will attend the morning rehearsal of Pierre Monteux with the Boston Symphony, swim in Stockbridge Bowl, and have have supper with Tanglewood's students at Wheatleigh.

Yesterday morning's public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, found Charles Munch on the podium at Tanglewood's Music Shed, rehearsing the Berkshire Festival concert for that evening, with piano virtuoso Rudolf Serkin playing the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, programmed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of composer's death.

RUTH POSSELT SOLOIST IN VIOLIN CONCERTO AT TANGLEWOOD TODAY

Lenox, July 28—Tomorrow afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only appearance of the season as a conductor in a program which will also feature Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith. The concert will begin with the second suite from Prokofieff's Ballet "Romeo and Juliet" and conclude with the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

Ruth Posselt (Mrs. Richard Burgin) has played with most of our leading orchestras and with such conductors as Szell, Monteux, De Sabata, Dorati, Bernstein, Koussevitzky and Munch since her sensational debut in Carnegie Hall, New York, at the age of nine. She has played the world premiere performances of many works written especially for her, among them the Concerti of Hindemith, Piston, Hill and Dukelsky. Her most recent Tanglewood appearance was at a concert during the 1954 Festival when she introduced the Concerto by Khatchaturian to the Berkshire [illegible]

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 28—Tanglewood's opera department is concentrating its major effort of the summer on Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin," which students of Boris Goldovsky, who is staging the work, will perform with alternate casts on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 6 and 7. The composer, a member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition department since 1946, will conduct both performances in the Theater-Concert Hall. As has been the case with all past productions of the Berkshire Music Center opera department, admission to the "Griffelkin" performances will be by special tickets, available only to those who, by joining the Friends' organization, help support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Seats may now be reserved by inquiry to the Friends' office at Tanglewood or by telephone to Lenox 600.

* * *

Mr. Foss, who is 34, first heard the story of a little-known German folk tale, "Griffelkin," from his mother, when he was a child of seven, and at the precocious age of eight tried setting it to music. The theme evidently remained vivid in his imagination, because he returned fresh to the subject two years ago. Hugh Ross, of Tanglewood's chorus department, introduced him to British poet, Alastair Reid, a teacher of English literature at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y. Although Foss was a continent away, teaching composition at the University of California in Los Angeles, a lively correspondence of some 50 letters and a number of drafts passed between them, until the present, rhymed libretto, was achieved. Meanwhile, of the strength of the promise he had shown in the field of opera with his short work, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," based on Mark Twain's story, which the Tanglewood opera department premiered in 1950, and which has since had nearly 40 productions in the U. S. and abroad, Mr. Foss received a commission to complete the work by the NBC Television Opera Theater, which telecast it nationally last November.

* * *

The composer is definite on some points: " 'Griffelkin' is not a TV opera. It is now receiving its first complete performance, its stage premiere. It is neither fairytale nor children's opera, though the story—of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil—does play in a world which will make it interesting to children as well as to grownups. In this work, as in 'The Jumping Frog,' a 20-year study of Mozart opera will easily be detected by the scholar. I have grown up with Mozart opera, and it is partly due to Mozart opera that I have dedicated my life to music. However, nowhere am I attempting to recreate the theater of the 18th Century. 'Griffelkin' has little to do with neo-Classicism. My goal is always to find my own opera style, but by way of a tradition which I love and in which I believe."

* * *

"Griffelkin" uses a large cast, some 15 principals, a chorus of nine, and some 30 dancers who appear but do not sing. It is scheduled for European production in Stuttgart, Berlin and Stockholm after Tanglewood, and encouraged by the success of their collaboration, Mr. Foss and Mr. Reid hope to do further work together. Of the TV presentation, Howard Taubman, music critic of the N. Y. Times, wrote: "The piece moves, and the orchestra is full of gay and fanciful comment, written with sureness of effect and telling transparency. In the second act, Mr. Foss achieves something more touching—a mood and an emotion that touch the heart."

* * *

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Berkshire Music Center student symphony orchestra in a portion of the concert it will give Thursday evening, Aug. 2, in the Tanglewood Music Shed. Dr. Munch will lead the students in a work the interpretation of which he is world-renowned, the Berlioz "Symphonie Fantastique."

* * *

Student composers whose works will be performed in Sunday night's Composers' Forum at Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall (July 29) are: Hector Campos-Parsi, of San Juan, Puerto Rico; Richard Hillert, Wausau, Wisc.; Michael Sahl, New York City; Allen Brings, Flushing, N. Y.; Lothar Klein, Minneapolis, Minn.; Harold Boatrite, Philadelphia, Pa.

* * *

In addition to Sunday morning's (July 29) regularly scheduled concert of chamber music at Tanglewood, an informal program of chamber music by students of Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Boston Symphony Orchestra principals will be held Monday afternoon (July 30) at 4.30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall.

* * *

Tuesday's (July 31) second concert by the Tanglewood Choir, specialists in Hugh Ross' choral department (Theater-Concert Hall, 8.30 p. m.), will include the Kyrie and Credo from Bruckner's Mass in E minor; works by Bach, Buxtehude, Elgar, Tchaikowsky, Brahms; and Igor Stravinsky's "Les Noces," with soloists, the latter conducted by Mr. Ross' assistant James Aliferis, who is choral director of the University of Minnesota.

* * *

Herman Silberman, BSO violinist, whose home is in Jamaica Plain, Mass., a Boston suburb, has received notice he is on jury duty Aug. 8 for the Brinks case, which may complicate his flying to Europe with the Boston Symphony on Aug. 14. Boston photographer John Brook, Tanglewood photographer in 1953, is also on the prospective jury.

CONDUCTS SATURDAY

LEONARD BERNSTEIN will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood next Saturday night in a concert in memory of the late Serge Koussevitsky. Works by Mozart, Prokofieff and Moevs are on the program.

In Chamber Music Concert Wedne

The Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet performs works by Schumann and ater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Wednesday night. Eminent pianist Rudo the same program. The members of the quartet that plays Wednesday ar oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoo picture is Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the first flutist of the Boston Symphony peared with members of this group.

[149]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4400
Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 43,857
JUL 29 1956

19th Century Operas To Be Performed

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863, which Goldovsky's New England Opera Company premiered in this country in 1955 in Boston; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), which had a belated 1917 premiere abroad. Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

Second Thoughts On

First Act of 'Die
Given Notable P

Margaret Harshaw, Albert D
Praise Grandly Supported glewood; Contemporary

D M. CLARK
28 — The Berk-stival is the one may be sure of at orchestral lity played. Never en finer perfor-
ose taking place here will always for such perfor-

n, during the pro-
July 20, provid-finest interpreta-
eer as he led the hony Orchestra
Berlioz overture Carnival," Debus-of a Faun" and s "Daphnis et
These are works
rench conductor equally fortunate of the Brahms in D major.
at he opened the smooth and ele-of "Adagio for uel Barber. Then Symphony No.
he 75th anniver-
hestra and dedilunch. This is a ation, written by man. Its thema-nteresting and its rich and color-

n Artists of "Die Walkure" sung by Margar-
"Sieglinde"; Alas "Siegmund"
se as "Hunding."
is surely the top
rano today. She ent tones and a standing of the dition. Albert Da soon be the top tenor for he has es, vocal and in-singing was outhful freshness erstanding of the ium and fine proand text.

stay in Europe, as grown tremen-
and artistic sta-is large, reason-musical. He is a o to watch. The overwhelming in d Mr. Munch was nductor.

conductor Pierre
1 years old, took n for the Sunday
rt. The orchestra
roached the podi-
any in the audi-
m hears so lucid performance of certo for Orches-
Monteux made
k was written for at the behest of tzky. Thus Barliber of the men for. The result an in the orches-virtuoso. As Mr.
cted, the work un-
glittering kalaidi-

x's reading of phony No 7 in C
ressive in its retempi with which ere no angry cliare prone to find ture of the Schu-
. Instead there vital approach the orchestra to

...sclip Agency, Inc.
...Richmond 2-4200
...Republican
...URY, Conn.
...pendent
...48,857
...29 1956

...Century ...as To Be ...rmed

...from 19th Century op-...ox, Puccini, and Verdi, ... scheduled for first ... performance, will be ...idents of Department ...f the Berkshire Music ... a single performance ...ed, Lenox, Massachu-...row night at 8:30 in ...Concert Hall. The op-...will be given in Italian ...ish, under the direction ...idovsky, who heads the ...rtment of the Boston ... Orchestra's summer ...ol.

...rmance is open to those ...rt the Berkshire Music ...ough membership in its ...ganization. All seats are ...

...mieres are Act IV of ...rlioz' massive "The Tro-...mposed in 1863, which ...s New England Opera ...premiered in this coun-...6 in Boston; and Act I ...'s "La Rondine" (The ...which had a belated 1917 ... abroad. Scenes from ...on Carlo" (1867), "Aida" ...d "Falstaff" (1893) com-...program.

...ncert Wednes...

...ms works by Schumann and Mozart i... ...ht." Eminent pianist Rudolf Serkin ... that plays Wednesday are Ralph ..., and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Also ... ...ist of the Boston Symphony, who ha... ...bers of this group.

Second Thoughts On Music

First Act of 'Die Walkure' Given Notable Performance

Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease Grandly Supported by Orchestra at Tanglewood; Contemporary Works Heard

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 28 — The Berkshire Music Festival is the one place where one may be sure of hearing the great orchestral literature superbly played. Never have there been finer performances than those taking place this season. There will always be an audience for such performances.

Charles Munch, during the program of Friday, July 20, provided some of the finest interpretations of his career as he led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through the Berlioz overture "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" and Ravel's glorious "Daphnis et Chloe" suite. These are works in which the French conductor excels. He was equally fortunate in his reading of the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

The next night he opened the program with a smooth and elegant reading of "Adagio for Strings" by Samuel Barber. Then came Martinu's Symphony No. 6 written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and dedicated to Mr. Munch. This is a work of imagination, written by an expert craftsman. Its thematic material is interesting and its orchestration is rich and colorful.

Wagnerian Artists

The first act of "Die Walkure" by Wagner was sung by Margaret Harshaw as "Sieglinde"; Albert Da Costa as "Siegmund" and James Pease as "Hunding." Miss Harshaw is surely the top Wagnerian soprano today. She sang with opulent tones and a thorough understanding of the Wagnerian tradition. Albert Da Costa will very soon be the top ranking Helden tenor for he has all the resources, vocal and intellectual. His singing was marked by a youthful freshness of voice, an understanding of the Wagnerian medium and fine projection of mood and text.

During his stay in Europe, James Pease has grown tremendously in vocal and artistic stature. The voice is large, resonant and always musical. He is a Wagnerian basso to watch. The orchestra was overwhelming in its grandeur and Mr. Munch was an inspired conductor.

The veteran conductor Pierre Monteux, now 81 years old, took over the podium for the Sunday afternoon concert. The orchestra stood as he approached the podium. So did many in the audience. One seldom hears so lucid and detailed a performance of the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" as Mr. Monteux made known. The work was written for the orchestra at the behest of Serge Koussevitzky. Thus Bartok knew the caliber of the men he was writing for. The result is that every man in the orchestra becomes the virtuoso. As Mr. Monteoux conducted, the work unfolded as a glittering kalaidiscope of sound.

Mr. Monteoux's reading of Schubert's Symphony No 7 in C major was impressive in its restraint. There were no angry climaxes or violent tempi with which some composers are prone to find in this most mature of the Schubert symphonies. Instead there was a steady, vital approach which caused the orchestra to sing.

Contemporary Music

Yes, there is a deal of contemporary music being heard at Tanglewood this summer, even though the orchestra is not giving its whole attention to it. The second concert sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago was more or less on the same level as the opening concert, but a little less nerve-wracking. Not all the music was pleasing. Much was informative. The program included two works commissioned by the foundation, a quintet for five instruments by Leland Smith of the music department of Chicago University and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock" by the Cuban composer Julian Orbon, a Berkshire music student in 1946. It is written for soprano and eight instruments.

Both works were first performances. The Smith work had nothing to offer the listener and probably not much more for the performers. It had no direction, no focal point and its harmonic structure is so complex as to be practically undiscernible.

Seymour Lipkin conducted the Cuban work. Marjorie McClung proved herself to be a fine musician with a pleasant lyric soprano voice. The work poses no listening difficulties. It is a sincere offering, sonorous and often melodic. The performance was first rate.

We got particular pleasure in listening to a "Sonata da Camera" by Goffredo Petrassi. This is scored for harpsichord with an orchestra of 10 instruments. Mr. Petrassi is guest composer at the Berkshire Center. He writes with a sure sense of proportion and tonal values. He allows the harpsichord to be heard both as solo instrument and in ensemble. When Miss Marlow played the DeFallo "Concerto for Harpischord" at the beginning of the program, much of the time it was inaudible. It was a fine performance and the audience reaction was happy.

Opera Scenes

Scenes from 13 operas by Mozart were offered by the Opera department. All the singers in the department were involved in this concert which was of interminable length. There were scenes from "The Magic Flute," "Bastien and Bastienne" "Lucio Silla" "La Finta Giardiniera," "Il Re Pastore," Don Giovanni," "Zaide," "The Impresarizo," "Idomeneo" "The Abduction from the Seraglio," "Titus," "Cosi Fan Tutte" and "The Marriage of Figaro."

All in all, Mozart was well served. There were several fine voices, notably the tenor Robert Nagy who sang Idomeneo; the Elvira of Madeleine Palmer; the Zaide of Annabelle Bernard and the Don Ottavio of Hal Roberts who had, more than many of the rest, as real sense of the Mozart style.

The settings were magnificient and drew almost as much applause as the singers and Boris Goldovsky was in his element, telling about each scene in his inimitable manner and playing piano accompaniments.

Today's Concert

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra will conduct the concert in the Shed this afternoon at 2:30 p. m. His wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, will be the soloist in the Hindemith Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. Mr. Burgin will offer Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, Second Suite", and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major.

Four Conductors in Week To Lead Boston Symphony

Burgin to Direct Shed Concert Today, De Carvalho Friday, Bernstein Saturday and Munch Next Sunday; Serkin Soloist Wednesday

Lenox, July 28—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 when the full orchestra will be conducted by Richard Burgin, concertmaster.

On the program will be the "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 by Sergei Prokofieff, violin concerto by Paul Hindemith, with Ruth Posselt (Mrs. Burgin) as soloist, and Symphony No. 1 in D by Gustav Mahler.

A joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet will be given on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

De Carvalho Returns

The three concerts next week end by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon will be held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's music director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's piano concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's fifth symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria. He will have the assistance of the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856), with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode." Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8.30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10 a. m. (Aug. 4), for which a nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. The complete programs:

Wednesday, Aug. 1, 8.30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music
Symphonic Etudes .....Schumann
Rudolf Serkin, pianist
Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K. 452 .....Mozart
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet (Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon) and Rudolf Serkin
"Carnaval" .....Schumann
Rudolf Serkin

Friday, Aug. 3, 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
"La Kermesse" (First performance at Tanglewood) .....Barraud
"The Three-Cornered Hat" ....Falla
Piano Concerto .....Ravel
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, pianist (North American debut)
American debut)
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (Complete) .....Stravinsky
Conductor: Eleazar de Carvalho

Saturday, Aug. 4, 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
In Memory of Serge Koussevitsky
Mass in C minor (K. 427, Kyrie and Gloria (First Tanglewood performance) .....Mozart
Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, soprane; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor
Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon
Symphony No. 5 .....Prokofieff
Conductor: Leonard Bernstein

Sunday, Aug. 5, 2.30 P. M.
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphonic Ode (First performance at Tanglewood) .....Copland
Violin Concerto .....Tchaikovsky
Soloist: Zino Francescatti
Symphony No. 2, in C major .....Schumann
Conductor: Charles Munch

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
JUL 29 1956

BEAUX ARTS TRIO TO BE HEARD AT SOUTH MOUNTAIN

Guilet, Greenhouse, Pressler to Give Concert Saturday

Pittsfield, July 28—The famous Beaux Arts Trio will be heard Saturday, Aug. 4, at 3:30 p. m. at the Temple of Music, South Mountain, Pittsfield. This is the second of a series of six concerts being sponsored by the South Mountain Association this sumer.

The trio, which made its debut at the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood last summer, with a return engagement there this year, is also being featured at the Ravinia Festival and with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra for two concerts in December.

At Tanglewood

The exhibition presented this past week in the glass reception hall at Tanglewood's main gate by the Berkshire Museum included a selection of paintings taken from the one-man exhibition of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz at the Pittsfield museum.

This exhibition was fully reviewed when it opened at the Berkshire Museum early this month and needs no further comment here except to note that the group should have been found interesting by the students and staff of the music school and the Boston Symphony Orchestra because the artist is dean of the music school and a well-known concert pianist.

This year the management of the Festival House, a popular inn in Lenox built by the Morgans, is providing an interesting program of art activities for its guests and has installed a well-known artist as artist in residence to give art instructions for those inclined and has exhibitions of paintings, drawings and prints throughout the first floor to stimulate an interest in art.

Berkshire Music Festival Nears Close

Time passes so quickly that it seems hardly possible that there remain but two more weeks before the current Berkshire Music Festival comes to a close. No attendance figures to-date have been issued so that one may only wonder whether attendance at the Festival concerts has fallen off this year as it has in many summer series including our own Bowl concerts.

The semi-final week of Tanglewood programs will include the usual chamber music concert on Wednesday evening and the three weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony. The eminent pianist, Rudolph Serkin, is to be the guest artist on Wednesday's Theater-Concert Hall program by the Boston Orchestra's Woodwind Quartet. The pianist will perform Mozart's Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds (K 452) with the Boston musicians and his solo offerings are to be two Schumann works—the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval."

The Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct Friday's Shed concert in which his pianist wife, Jocy de Oliveira, will make her North American debut. She is to be the soloist in the Ravel Concerto. The balance of the program lists Barraud's "La Kermesse" (first Tanglewood performance), Falla's "The Three-Cornered Hat," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

On Saturday evening, Leonard Bernstein will conduct a memorial concert to his late mentor and patron, Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Orchestra. This program will include the first Tanglewood performance of Mozart's C minor Mass and Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Koussevitzky introduced in this country. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students will be heard in the performance of the Mass and the soloists are to be: Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor.

Next Sunday afternoon's concert, to be conducted by Charles Munch, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856). The great romantic will be represented by his Second Symphony. The balance of the program consists of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode (first Festival performance) and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as the soloist.

Munch Opens Fourth Set Of Tanglewood Concerts

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 28.—It was almost as if the musical thunderclaps of Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 2 could be credited with dispelling the high humidity that enveloped the more than 6,000 listeners at yesterday evening's Tanglewood concert, opening the fourth set of week-end concerts. As the music of the program gained in heat, the air cooled with corresponding mercy.

One could safely assume that most of the audience was mentally comparing the second "Leonore" overture with the much better-known third, and finding the comparison instructive as well as revealing of Beethoven's ceaseless search for the most perfect representation of his vision. Charles Munch led the splendid work as if possessed, and one wondered whether he would have energy left for the rest of the demanding program.

"Interesting" is a much overworked term and—when applied to a new work—has acquired a flavor of condescension or lack of sympathy. But Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra is in the best sense interesting. If it is not at all times communicative, it consistently fascinates the ear and mind, that it is sincerely felt and essentially musical cannot be denied even by one who remains largely outside its emotional world.

To judge from this one work—always a risky procedure—Mr. Petrassi is an eclectic composer who does not hesitate to employ twelve-tone rows of Bergian cast in a fairly tonal and accessible idiom, whose music acknowledges its debt to Stravinskian rhythm while exhibiting a thoroughly expressionistic and subjective approach.

His two-movement concerto, in any event, strikes one as an accomplishment of superb intelligence, a mature and inventive grasp of orchestral possibilities. The harmonic texture is high- tension, but colorful and often beautiful. Yet the ear is occupied with so rich a variety of instrumental sonorities and refined blends that the long line—if it is there—is often lost. Toward the end, one may tire a bit; the composer, we understand, is already working on revisions of the score.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 29 1956

[150]

...sclip Agency, Inc.
... • RIchmond 2-4200
Republican
URY, Conn.
pendent
43,857

2 9 1956

...Century ...as To Be ...rmed

...from 19th Century op... ...oz, Puccini, and Verdi, ... scheduled for first ... performance, will be ...idents of Department ...f the Berkshire Music ... a single performance ...ed, Lenox, Massachu... ...row night at 8:30 in ...Concert Hall. The op... ...will be given in Italian ...ish, under the direction ...ldovsky, who heads the ...rtment of the Boston ... Orchestra's summer ...ol.

...rmance is open to those ...rt the Berkshire Music ...ough membership in its ...ganization. All seats are ...

...mieres are Act IV of ...rlioz' massive "The Tro... ...mposed in 1863, which ...s New England Opera ...premiered in this coun... ...in Boston; and Act I ...'s "La Rondine" (The ... which had a belated 1917 ... abroad. Scenes from ...Don Carlo" (1867), "Aida" ...d "Falstaff" (1893) com... program.

...ncert Wednesd...

...ms works by Schumann and Mozart i... ...ht.' Eminent pianist Rudolf Serkin ... that plays Wednesday are Ralph ...n, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Also ... ...ist of the Boston Symphony, who has ...bers of this group.

Second Thoughts On Music

First Act of 'Die Walkure' Given Notable Performance

Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease Grandly Supported by Orchestra at Tanglewood; Contemporary Works Heard

By WILLARD M. CLARK

...Berk... ...the one ... ...festival in... ...ostal lit... ...Never ... ...pertain... ...place ... ...ays ... ...season. The ... ...such a period... ...

...h, during the pro... ...of Friday, July 20, provid... ...some of the finest interpreta... ...tions of his career as he led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through the Berlioz overture "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" and Ravel's glorious "Daphnis et Chloe" suite. These are works in which the French conductor excels. He was equally fortunate in his reading of the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

The next night he opened the program with a smooth and elegant reading of "Adagio for Strings" by Samuel Barber. Then came Martinu's Symphony No. 6 written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and dedicated to Mr. Munch. This is a work of imagination, written by an expert craftsman. Its thematic material is interesting and its orchestration is rich and colorful.

Wagnerian Artists

The first act of "Die Walkure" by Wagner was sung by Margaret Harshaw as "Sieglinde"; Albert Da Costa as "Siegmund" and James Pease as "Hunding." Miss Harshaw is surely the top Wagnerian soprano today. She sang with opulent tones and a thorough understanding of the Wagnerian tradition. Albert Da Costa will very soon be the top ranking Helden tenor for he has all the resources, vocal and intellectual. His singing was marked by a youthful freshness of voice, an understanding of the Wagnerian medium and fine projection of mood and text.

During his stay in Europe, James Pease has grown tremendously in vocal and artistic stature. The voice is large, resonant and always musical. He is a Wagnerian basso to watch. The orchestra was overwhelming in its grandeur and Mr. Munch was an inspired conductor.

The veteran conductor Pierre Monteux, now 81 years old, took over the podium for the Sunday afternoon concert. The orchestra stood as he approached the podium. So did many in the audience. One seldom hears so lucid and detailed a performance of the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" as Mr. Monteux made known. The work was written for the orchestra at the behest of Serge Koussevitzky. Thus Bartok knew the caliber of the men he was writing for. The result is that every man in the orchestra becomes the virtuoso. As Mr. Monteux conducted, the work unfolded as a glittering kaleidoscope of sound.

Mr. Monteux's reading of Schubert's Symphony No 7 in C major was impressive in its remarks or violent tempi with which some composers are prone to find in this most mature of the Schubert symphonies. Instead there was a steady, vital approach which caused the orchestra to sing.

Contemporary Music

Yes, there is a deal of contemporary music being heard at Tanglewood this summer, even though the orchestra is not giving its whole attention to it. The second concert sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago was more or less on the same level as the opening concert, but a little less nerve-wracking. Not all the music was pleasing. Much was informative. The program included two works commissioned by the foundation, a quintet for five instruments by Leland Smith of the music department of Chicago University and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock" by the Cuban composer Julian Orbon, a Berkshire music student in 1946. It is written for soprano and eight instruments.

Both works were first performances. The Smith work had nothing to offer the listener and probably not much more for the performers. It had no direction, no focal point and its harmonic structure is so complex as to be practically undiscernible.

Seymour Lipkin conducted the Cuban work. Marjorie McClung proved herself to be a fine musician with a pleasant lyric soprano voice. The work poses no listening difficulties. It is a sincere offering, sonorous and often melodic. The performance was first rate.

We got particular pleasure in listening to a "Sonata da Camera" by Goffredo Petrassi. This is scored for harpsichord with an orchestra of 10 instruments. Mr. Petrassi is guest composer at the Berkshire Center. He writes with a sure sense of proportion and tonal values. He allows the harpsichord to be heard both as solo instrument and in ensemble. When Miss Marlow played the DeFallo "Concerto for Harpischord" at the beginning of the program, much of the time it was inaudible. It was a fine performance and the audience reaction was happy.

Opera Scenes

Scenes from 13 operas by Mozart were offered by the Opera department. All the singers in the department were involved in this concert which was of interminable length. There were scenes from "The Magic Flute," "Bastien and Bastienne" "Lucio Silla" "La Finta Giardiniera," "Il Re Pastore," Don Giovanni," "Zaide," "The Impresariso," "Idomeneo" "The Abduction from the Seraglio," "Titus," "Cosi Fan Tutte" and "The Marriage of Figaro."

All in all, Mozart was well served. There were several fine voices, notably the tenor Robert Nagy who sang Idomeneo; the Elvira of Madeleine Palmer; the Zaide of Annabelle Bernard and the Don Ottavio of Hal Roberts who had, more than many of the rest, as real sense of the Mozart style.

The settings were magnificient and drew almost as much applause as the singers and Boris Goldovsky was in his element, telling about each scene in his inimitable manner and playing piano accompaniments.

Today's Concert

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra will conduct the concert in the Shed this afternoon at 2:30 p. m. His wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, will be the soloist in the Hindemith Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. Mr. Burgin will offer Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, Second Suite" and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major."

Four Conductors in Week To Lead Boston Symphony

Burgin to Direct Shed Concert Today, De Carvalho Friday, Bernstein Saturday and Munch Next Sunday; Serkin Soloist Wednesday

Lenox, July 28—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 when the full orchestra will be conducted by Richard Burgin, concertmaster.

On the program will be the "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 by Sergei Prokofieff, violin concerto by Paul Hindemith, with Ruth Posselt (Mrs. Burgin) as soloist, and Symphony No. 1 in D by Gustav Mahler.

A joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet will be given on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

De Carvalho Returns

The three concerts next week end by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon will be held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's music director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's piano concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's fifth symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria. He will have the assistance of the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29,-1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode." Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8.30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10 a. m. (Aug. 4), for which a nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. The complete programs:

Wednesday, Aug. 1, 8.30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music:
Symphonic Etudes .....Schumann
Rudolf Serkin, pianist
Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K. 452 .....Mozart
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet (Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon) and Rudolf Serkin
"Carnaval" .....Schumann
Rudolf Serkin
Friday, Aug. 3 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
"La Kermesse" (First performance at Tanglewood) .....Barraud
"The Three-Cornered Hat" ....Falla
Piano Concerto .....Ravel
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, pianist (North American debut)
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (Complete) .....Stravinsky
Conductor: Eleazar de Carvalho
Saturday, Aug. 4, 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
In Memory of Serge Koussevitzky
Mass in C minor (K. 427, Kyrie and Gloria (First Tanglewood performance) .....Mozart
Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor
Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon
Symphony No. 5 .....Prokofieff
Conductor: Leonard Bernstein
Sunday, Aug. 5, 2.30 P. M.
Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphonic Ode (First performance at Tanglewood) .....Copland
Violin Concerto .....Tchaikovsky
Soloist: Zino Francescatti
Symphony No. 2, in C major .....Schumann
Conductor: Charles Munch

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ, 99,506

JUL 29 1956

Berkshire Music Festival Nears Close

Time passes so quickly that it seems hardly possible that there remain but two more weeks before the current Berkshire Music Festival comes to a close. No attendance figures to date have been issued so that one may only wonder whether attendance at the Festival concerts has fallen off this year as it has in many summer series including our own Bowl concerts.

The semi-final week of Tanglewood programs will include the usual chamber music concert on Wednesday evening and the three weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony. The eminent pianist, Rudolph Serkin, is to be the guest artist in Wednesday's Theater-Concert Hall program by the Boston Orchestra's Woodwind Quartet. The pianist will perform Mozart's Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds (K 452) with the Boston musicians and his solo offerings are to be two Schumann works—the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval."

The Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct Friday's Shed concert in which his pianist wife, Jocy de Oliveira, will make her North American debut. She is to be the soloist in the Ravel Concerto. The balance of the program lists Barraud's "La Kermesse" (first Tanglewood performance), Falla's "The Three-Cornered Hat," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

On Saturday evening, Leonard Bernstein will conduct a memorial concert to his late mentor and patron, Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Orchestra. This program will include the first Tanglewood performance of Mozart's C minor Mass and Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Koussevitzky introduced in this country. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students will be heard in the performance of the Mass and the soloists are to be: Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor.

Next Sunday afternoon's concert, to be conducted by Charles Munch, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856). The great romantic will be represented by his Second Symphony. The balance of the program consists of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode (first Festival performance) and Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as the soloist.

Munch Opens Fourth Set Of Tanglewood Concerts

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 28.—It was almost as if the musical thunderclaps of Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 2 could be credited with dispelling the high humidity that enveloped the more than 6,000 listeners at yesterday evening's Tanglewood concert, opening the fourth set of week-end concerts. As the music of the program gained in heat, the air cooled with corresponding mercy.

One could safely assume that most of the audience was mentally comparing the second "Leonore" overture with the much better-known third, and finding the comparison instructive as well as revealing of Beethoven's ceaseless search for the most perfect representation of his vision. Charles Munch led the splendid work as if possessed, and one wondered whether he would have energy left for the rest of the demanding program.

"Interesting" is a much overworked term and—when applied to a new work—has acquired a flavor of condescension or lack of sympathy. But Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra is in the best sense interesting. If it is not at all times communicative, it consistently fascinates the ear and mind, that it is sincerely felt and essentially musical cannot be denied even by one who remains largely outside its emotional world.

To judge from this one work—always a risky procedure—Mr. Petrassi is an eclectic composer who does not hesitate to employ twelve-tone rows of Bergian cast in a fairly tonal and accessible idiom, whose music acknowledges its debt to Stravinskian rhythm while exhibiting a thoroughly expressionistic and subjective approach.

His two-movement concerto, in any event, strikes one as an accomplishment of superb intelligence, a mature and inventive grasp of orchestral possibilities. The harmonic texture is high- tension, but colorful and often beautiful. Yet the ear is occupied with so rich a variety of instrumental sonorities and refined blends that the long line—if it is there—is often lost. Toward the end, one may tire a bit; the composer, we understand, is already working on revisions of the score.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 29 1956

[150]

BEAUX ARTS TRIO TO BE HEARD AT SOUTH MOUNTAIN

Guilet, Greenhouse, Pressler to Give Concert Saturday

Pittsfield, July 28—The famous Beaux Arts Trio will be heard Saturday, Aug. 4, at 3.30 p. m. at the Temple of Music, South Mountain, Pittsfield. This is the second of a series of six concerts being sponsored by the South Mountain Association this sumer.

The trio, which made its debut at the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood last summer, with a return engagement there this year, is also being featured at the Ravinia Festival and with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra for two concerts in December.

At Tanglewood

The exhibition presented this past week in the glass reception hall at Tanglewood's main gate by the Berkshire Museum included a selection of paintings taken from the one-man exhibition of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz at the Pittsfield museum.

This exhibition was fully reviewed when it opened at the Berkshire Museum early this month and needs no further comment here except to note that the group should have been found interesting by the students and staff of the music school and the Boston Symphony Orchestra because the artist is dean of the music school and a well-known concert pianist.

This year the management of the Festival House, a popular inn in Lenox built by the Morgans, is providing an interesting program of art activities for its guests and has installed a well-know artist as artist in residence to give art instructions for those inclined and an exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints throughout the first floor to stimulate an interest in art.

SERKIN CONCERT ATTRACTS CROWD TO TANGLEWOOD

Audience of 9821, Largest of Season, Hears Pianist

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 28 — Rudolf Serkin, pianist, was the bright star of the concert tonight by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch. As happened last season, the distinguished pianist drew a record audience of 9821, the largest thus far, of the season.

Vigor Is Evident

The Schumann "Concerto in A Minor for Piano and Orchestra" is unusually a sure fire hit. Tonight it was all of that and a bit more, for seldom have we heard this concerto played with greater vigor, boldness and impact. There was a certain lack of sensitivity and warmth, particularly in the middle movement, but this was a performance of the Schumann who had blood, not water, in his veins. To some in the audience the brilliance of this performance may have come as a shock, accustomed as one often is to the sweetly pretty conception of those young lady pianists who offer it at every opportunity. Liszt and Schumann became comrades in the Serkin-Munch performance.

The concert opened with another of the works commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. It was Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky." Mr. Hanson has been a significant member of the American composers' fraternity for a long time. He has also been particularly fortunate in having much of his work both played and recorded and he in turn has done his bit for the American composer through the annual festivals at the Eastman School of Music, which he heads. This "elegy" is a sincere and sympathetic work, often gripping in its dramatic vein and varied enough in its moods and melodic content to hold interest. The performance was an extremely able one.

SERKIN CONCERT

(Continued From Page 1A)

Honegger Work Played

Mr. Munch appears to have a liking for Arthur Honegger's Fifth Symphony. There is ample reason for this feeling because the symphony is one of the finest works to come from the many commissions of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. It is an intuitive work, quite personal from beginning to end. One finds in it a controlled power, a maturity which is greater in its intensity than the exuberance of his earlier works. Again, Mr. Munch and the orchestra served the work well.

The final work on the program is one of the works in which Charles Munch reaches the interpretive heights and the orchestra plays the music as we have heard no other, Debussy's "La Mer," three orchestral sketches. It is known that Debussy had a passion for the sea and these sketches are his impressions. There is within the music a strong personal feeling which is brought out in the delicate colorations, the shifting rhythms and constant surge of this music. The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony play this music with an almost unearthly beauty of tone. All concerned in the performance are in complete agreement.

Tomorrow afternoon, Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, takes over the podium. His wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, will be heard in the Hindemith "Concerto for Violin and Piano." The concert will open with the "Romeo and Juliet" ballet suite by Prokofieff and conclude with Mahler's First Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826
JUL 29 1956

Let's Take A Drive

Tanglewood In Berkshires Makes Lovely Rendezvous

This is another in a series of Sunday articles published by The Courant in cooperation with the Hartford Automobile Club, designed to assist you in obtaining the greatest pleasure from short motoring excursions.—The Ed.

By DICK ROBINSON
(Automobile Club of Hartford.)

This suggestion involves a pleasant trip of 135 miles to a spot with literary and musical overtones, Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Here the Boston Symphony appears every summer in a series of concerts.

The first part of the trip is to Canaan via U.S. 44 to the northwest corner of the state at the junction of U.S. Route 7 and 44.

Twelve miles north on U.S. 7 is Great Barrington, a summer and winter vacation resort center. Just before entering the town the party passes the fair grounds where the annual fair in September is one of the state's biggest.

House of Hawthorne

A few miles beyond town Route 183 angles off to the left. After a few more miles Route 183 crosses Route 102 and curves around a beautiful lake known as the Stockbridge Bowl, about three miles out of Lenox. Now the group approaches the Dixey Estate, the site of the Berkshire Music Festival and the location of the little red house in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his famous book, "The House of the Seven Gables," as well as his "Tanglewood Tales."

On this estate, now owned by the Boston Symphony, is the music shed where concerts are given. Two types of accommodations are available. Some prefer to be in the music shed itself, closer to the music and seated, but many like the beautiful grounds outside where they may loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

Spectacular View

The view from the grounds is close to spectacular, and the visitor might be advised to attend the Sunday concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, you head into Lenox and then south on U.S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket where U.S. 20 cuts east, but you go south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here, near New Boston, is a view of Hanging Mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington River. Fragments loosened by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south to Winsted and then it's U.S Route 44 back to Hartford.

Festival concerts are held in the Music Shed July 20 through August 12, Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30. Single concert prices are from $2.08 to $6.50.

For a list of hotel or guest accommodations in the Berkshires contact the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, which through the cooperation of the local Chamber of Commerce and similar organizations, will endeavor to secure reservations.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 108,999
JUL 29 1956

Serkin Given Ovation At Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Rudolf Serkin received an ovation for this performance of the Schumann piano concerto with the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch last night in the shed at Tanglewood.

The balance of the program — brilliant music throughout — was Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky" (composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra); Honegger's Symphony No. 5; and Debussy's three orchestral sketches "La Mer."

Serkin's playing of the Schumann was a lesson in shrewd interpretation vibrant technique and a thorough indoctrination of common-sense.

But it always becomes necesseary to separate these admirable qualities from Serkin's mannerisms and "tricks of the trade" whose purpose would seem to impress with showmanship. It was magnificent playing to hear and distracting to watch.

The pianist as is his custom crouched over the keyboard stomped the pedal and forever appeared to be arguing with the keyboard or making love to it in burlesque.

Notwithstanding the sounds, Serkin extracted from all three movements were brilliant marvelously gentle (particularly in the second movement)—his melodies sang for all they were worth and he propelled the finale to a virtuosic climax.

We were most agreeably impressed with the Hanson elegy. Not only is the work efficiently written but it has moments of high grandeur.

Played as it was last night these stirring incidents did not only appear at the summit of crescendos but also in the work's quiet moments of sorrow.

From a technical standpoint Hanson has written some fine counterpoint and beautiful passages in parallel voices.

As an expression of its special dedication it is readily suggestive of personal and artistic traits of the late Koussevitzky—ardor and dramatic impact being the most outstanding.

Following Petrassi's orchestral concerto heard at the Friday night concert both the Hanson and Honegger were more decisive agreement on behalf of contemporary music.

The organ-like registrations of the Honegger polytonal harmonies that are in-offensive to the ear and strongly welded correlation of ideas—all of these were skillfully handled by conductor and orchestra.

An audience of 9,821 persons expressed resounding approval of the Munch-Boston Symphony performance of Debussy's "La Mer" which is regarded as "specialty of the house."

This afternoon's concert will be conducted by Richard Burgin concertmaster of the orchestra. Soloist will be Ruth Posselt in the Hindemith Violin Concerto other works are Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" suite and Mahler's symphony No. 1 in D Major.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUN 29 19[illegible]

Exhibitions at Tanglewood To Open Sat.

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture, photographs and prints again will be a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at the main gate at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

* * *

THE FIRST SEVERAL weeks' schedule follows:

Tomorrow through Saturday, July 7, will feature a display of designs for the stage settings of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" by the noted contemporary painter Oskar Kokoschka, circulated by the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, in connection with the bicentennial of the composer.

From July 7-14, Tanglewood's reception hall will house a retrospective exhibition of paintings by the late Albert Sterner of Richmond, Mass., arranged by his widow.

* * *

THE EXHIBIT, July 14-21, entitled "The Eye Listens," will consist of prints, with special emphasis on music, the dance and the circus, from the collection of Abraham Kamberg, a lawyer, of 443 Court Square Building, Springfield, Mass.

The week July 21-July 28 will be devoted to modern paintings, many done in Italy and Israel, by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Berkowitz, an eminent pianist, studied painting at the Barnes Foundation in Merion, Pa., and had his first one-man show in Philadelphia in 1952.

[151]

SERKIN CONCERT ATTRACTS CROWD TO TANGLEWOOD

Audience of 9821, Largest of Season, Hears Pianist

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 28 — Rudolf Serkin, pianist, was the bright star of the concert tonight by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch. As happened last season, the distinguished pianist drew a record audience of 9821, the largest thus far of the season.

Vigor Is Evident

The Schumann "Concerto in A Minor for Piano and Orchestra" is unusually a sure fire hit. Tonight it was all of that and a bit more, for seldom have we heard this concerto played with greater vigor, boldness and impact. There was a certain lack of sensitivity and warmth, particularly in the middle movement, but this was a performance of the Schumann who had blood, not water, in his veins. To some in the audience the brilliance of this performance may have come as a shock, accustomed as one often is to the sweetly pretty conception of those young lady pianists who offer it at every opportunity. Liszt and Schumann became comrades in the Serkin-Munch performance.

The concert opened with another of the works commissioned

SERKIN CONCERT

(Continued From Page 1A)

for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. It was Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky." Mr. Hanson has been a significant member of the American composers' fraternity for a long time. He has also been particularly fortunate in having much of his work both played and recorded and he in turn has done his bit for the American composer through the annual festivals at the Eastman School of Music, which he heads. This "elegy" is a sincere and sympathetic work, often gripping in its dramatic vein and varied enough in its moods and melodic content to hold interest. The performance was an extremely able one.

Honegger Work Played

Mr. Munch appears to have a liking for Arthur Honegger's Fifth Symphony. There is ample reason for this feeling because the symphony is one of the finest works to come from the many commissions of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. It is an intuitive work, quite personal from beginning to end. One finds in it a controlled power, a maturity which is greater in its intensity than the exuberance of his earlier works. Again, Mr. Munch and the orchestra served the work well.

The final work on the program is one of the works in which Charles Munch reaches the interpretive heights and the orchestra plays the music as we have heard no other, Debussy's "La Mer," three orchestral sketches. It is known that Debussy had a passion for the sea and these sketches are his impressions. There is within the music a strong personal feeling which is brought out in the delicate colorations, the shifting rhythms and constant surge of this music. The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony play this music with an almost unearthly beauty of tone. All concerned in the performance are in complete agreement.

Tomorrow afternoon, Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, takes over the podium. His wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, will be heard in the Hindemith "Concerto for Violin and Piano." The concert will open with the "Romeo and Juliet" ballet suite by Prokofieff and conclude with Mahler's First Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826

JUL 29 1956

Let's Take A Drive

Tanglewood In Berkshires Makes Lovely Rendezvous

This is another in a series of Sunday articles published by The Courant in cooperation with the Hartford Automobile Club, designed to assist you in obtaining the greatest pleasure from short motoring excursions.—The Ed.

By DICK ROBINSON
(Automobile Club of Hartford.)

This suggestion involves a pleasant trip of 135 miles to a spot with literary and musical overtones, Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Here the Boston Symphony appears every summer in a series of concerts.

The first part of the trip is to Canaan via U.S. 44 to the northwest corner of the state at the junction of U.S. Route 7 and 44.

Twelve miles north on U.S. 7 is Great Barrington, a summer and winter vacation resort center. Just before entering the town the party passes the fair grounds where the annual fair in September is one of the state's biggest.

House of Hawthorne

A few miles beyond town Route 183 angles off to the left. After a few more miles Route 183 crosses Route 102 and curves around a beautiful lake known as the Stockbridge Bowl, about three miles out of Lenox. Now the group approaches the Dixey Estate, the site of the Berkshire Music Festival and the location of the little red house in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his famous book, "The House of the Seven Gables," as well as his "Tanglewood Tales."

On this estate, now owned by the Boston Symphony, is the music shed where concerts are given. Two types of accommodations are available. Some prefer to be in the music shed itself, closer to the music and seated, but many like the beautiful grounds outside where they may loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

Spectacular View

The view from the grounds is close to spectacular, and the visitor might be advised to attend the Sunday concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, you head into Lenox and then south on U.S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket where U.S. 20 cuts east, but you go south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here, near New Boston, is a view of Hanging Mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington River. Fragments loosened by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south to Winsted and then it's U.S Route 44 back to Hartford.

Festival concerts are held in the Music Shed July 20 through August 12, Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30. Single concert prices are from $2.08 to $6.50.

For a list of hotel or guest accommodations in the Berkshires contact the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, which through the cooperation of the local Chamber of Commerce and similar organizations, will endeavor to secure reservations.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUL 29 1956

Serkin Given Ovation At Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Rudolf Serkin received an ovation for this performance of the Schumann piano concerto with the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch last night in the shed at Tanglewood.

The balance of the program — brilliant music throughout — was Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky" (composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra); Honegger's Symphony No. 5; and Debussy's three orchestral sketches "La Mer."

Serkin's playing of the Schumann was a lesson in shrewd interpretation vibrant technique and a thorough indoctrination of common-sense.

But it always becomes necessary to separate these admirable qualities from Serkin's mannerisms and "tricks of the trade" whose purpose would seem to impress with showmanship. It was magnificent playing to hear and distracting to watch.

The pianist as is his custom crouched over the keyboard stomped the pedal and forever appeared to be arguing with the keyboard or making love to it in burlesque.

Notwithstanding the sounds, Serkin extracted from all three movements were brilliant marvelously gentle (particularly in the second movement)—his melodies sang for all they were worth and he propelled the finale to a virtuosic climax.

We were most agreeably impressed with the Hanson elegy. Not only is the work efficiently written but it has moments of high grandeur.

Played as it was last night these stirring incidents did not only appear at the summit of crescendos but also in the work's quiet moments of sorrow.

From a technical standpoint Hanson has written some fine counterpoint and beautiful passages in parallel voices.

As an expression of its special dedication it is readily suggestive of personal and artistic traits of the late Koussevitzky—ardor and dramatic impact being the most outstanding.

Following Petrassi's orchestral concerto heard at the Friday night concert both the Hanson and Honegger were more decisive agreement on behalf of contemporary music.

The organ-like registrations of the Honegger polytonal harmonies that are in-offensive to the ear and strongly welded correlation of ideas—all of these were skillfully handled by conductor and orchestra.

An audience of 9,821 persons expressed resounding approval of the Munch-Boston Symphony performance of Debussy's "La Mer" which is regarded as "specialty of the house."

This afternoon's concert will be conducted by Richard Burgin concertmaster of the orchestra. Soloist will be Ruth Posselt in the Hindemith Violin Concerto other works are Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" suite and Mahler's symphony No. 1 in D Major.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

Exhibitions at Tanglewood To Open Sat.

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture, photographs and prints again will be a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at the main gate at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

* * *

THE FIRST SEVERAL weeks' schedule follows:

Tomorrow through Saturday, July 7, will feature a display of designs for the stage settings of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" by the noted contemporary painter Oskar Kokoschka, circulated by the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, in connection with the bicentennial of the composer.

From July 7-14, Tanglewood's reception hall will house a retrospective exhibition of paintings by the late Albert Sterner of Richmond, Mass., arranged by his widow.

* * *

THE EXHIBIT, July 14-21, entitled "The Eye Listens," will consist of prints, with special emphasis on music, the dance and the circus, from the collection of Abraham Kamberg, a lawyer, of 443 Court Square Building, Springfield, Mass.

The week July 21-July 28 will be devoted to modern paintings, many done in Italy and Israel, by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Berkowitz, an eminent pianist, studied painting at the Barnes Foundation in Merion, Pa., and had his first one-man show in Philadelphia in 1952.

Coming Week End At Tanglewood

Leonard Bernstein, at right, is rehearsing for the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky which he will conduct Saturday night in the Music Shed. He obtained his first conducting experience as pupil of Dr. Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Jocy de Oliveira (below), Brazilian pianist, will make her first appearance in this country in Friday night's concert under the direction of her husband, Eleazar de Carvalho, playing Ravel's Concerto.

In next Sunday afternoon's concert under its regular conductor, Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will observe the centenary of Robert Schumann's death with a performance of his Symphony No. 2. Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" will have its Tanglewood premiere in this program.

Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Jocy de Oliveira, pianist.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN. Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
NEXT WED. Aug. 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—Rudolf Serkin, Piano
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting; soloist, Ruth Posselt, violinist. "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2, Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Hindemith; Symphony No. 1 in D major, Mahler.

Monday, 8:30 Scenes from 19th Century Operas: "La Rondine" ("The Swallow"), Puccini; "Aida," Act II, Scene 1; "Don Carlo," Act III; "Falstaff," Act I, Scene 2, Verdi; "The Trojans," Berlioz.

Wednesday, 8:30 Rudolf Serkin, pianist; Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. Symphonic Etudes; "Carnaval," Schumann; Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K. 452, Mozart.

Friday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Eleazar de Carvalho conducting. "La Kermesse," Barraud; "The Three-Cornered Hat," Falla; Piano Concerto, Ravel; Ballet, "Petrouchka," Stravinsky.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting; soloists, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Mass in C minor, K. 427, Kyrie and Gloria, Mozart; Symphony No. 5, Prokofiev.

Sunday, Aug. 5, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Zino Francescatti, violinist. Symphonic Ode, Copland; Violin Concerto, Tchaikovsky; Symphony No. 2 in C major, Schumann.

A Brazilian Conductor Has a Colorful Career

By JAY S. HARRISON

LENOX, Mass.

Placid lives are the common lot of most men. That, perhaps, is why biographies of uncommon ones usually run through three or more editions. Take, for instance, the life story of Eleazar de Carvalho, acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center who, on Friday, will direct the Boston Symphony in a Tanglewood concert. His tale is a history few of us can equal; that is why it is worth retelling. Mr. de Carvalho was born in Iguatu in the state of Ceara, Brazil, in 1915, the son of industrious but poor farm workers. From his father he inherited Dutch blood, from his mother pure Indian, and with both he labored side by side on the parched fields of Iguatu until, at the age of ten, his parents moved to Fortaleza, capital of Ceara. There he entered school for the first time.

His country life, however, had not lent itself to regimentation and, refusing to abide by the accepted rules of civility, he was within a month's time expelled from his classes. For de Carvalho pere there seemed no other course than to install his fractious son in a naval academy of some sort, and young Eleazar consequently found himself a member of the City School for Apprentice Seamen. Once admitted he became fascinated with the resident band and soon joined it as a player of the double bass.

Career Afloat

But to the de Carvalhos, as to most parents, music seemed an unlikely (not to say dreadful) career for a sprouting lad and so Eleazar was shipped to the Angra do Reis, in the state of Rio, to continue his education as an ordinary seaman. After his graduation he did, in fact, join the National Corps, serving with them until his discharge in 1936. His naval hitch, on the other hand, did not prevent him from attending to other chores and in 1939 he began simultaneous study—at night—in the Instituto Rio Branco and the National School of Music of the University of Brazil, where, in 1940, he graduated with honors, a doctor's degree in music and a conductor-composer diploma.

Thus far, despite his experience and degrees, Mr. de Carvalho considered himself an amateur. He took his first professional step by running a competition under whose terms he became a permanent member of the famed Teatro Municipal of Rio de Janeiro as, of all things, a tuba virtuoso. And shortly he found himself assistant conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra. Then, in 1941, when the leader of the group fell ill, he substituted for the ailing maestro on one day's notice and, conducting without score, made such a mark on the Brazilian public as has rarely been seen since a fledgling named Toscanini did the same thing in the same place some sixty-odd years ago.

Came Here in 1946

As he had overwhelmed at least three-quarters of his own country, there seemed nothing left for Mr. Carvalho to do but to come to the United States and try to duplicate his successes. In 1946, he arrived here—unknown, friendless, without a word of English on his tongue—a condition, incidentally, which he has now corrected to the degree of being able to carry on rudimentary conversation. On his arrival in the United States he made his way straight to Tanglewood, met the late Serge Koussevitzky, then the lord of the manor, and without batting an eye asked the great conductor to turn over the student orchestra to him for five minutes so that he might prove his ability. Koussevitzky, caught off guard by the fervor with which the appeal was made, consented and chose Rimsky-Korsakov's "Russian Easter" Overture as Carvalho's audition piece. In less than ten measures, the Boston Symphony's director knew that a master musician had come to him. Turning to a neighbor he said simply, "In five years de Carvalho will be one of the country's leading conductors."

At Tanglewood

Never one to miss a good thing, Koussevitzky immediately invited de Carvalho to join the staff of the Berkshire Music Center as his assistant in the training class in conducting and to lead the B. S. O. for a two-week period during the 1947-'48 season. Subsequently, until 1951, he remained on the Tanglewood faculty and since then has spent his time traveling between Brazil and Europe. At the moment he is Artistic Director of the Orquestra Sinfonica Brasileira, General Director of the Juventude Musical Brasiliera, a society of 75,000 Brazilian youngsters which he founded in 1952 to solidify the artistic education of small-fry compatriots, and one of the strongest voices in the culture of his country. He is now forty-one and the end of his achievements is not in sight.

A Horatio Alger story? No. An Eleazar de Carvalho story. But they are much the same.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 29, 1956

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra moves into its fifth week of symphonic music on August 1 with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart in the Theater-Concert Hall by Pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. The three week end concerts by the Boston Symphony's full orchestra will be in the Music Shed, starting with Friday night when Eleazar de Cavallo will conduct. Soloist wil be Pianist Jocy De Olivera in her North American debut. The program will comprise numbers by Barraid, de Falla, Ravel and Stravinsky. In private life, Miss De Oliveira is Mrs. de Cavallo.

Leonard Bernstein will lead the Orchestra in a Memorial to Serge Koussevitsky Saturday night, Aug. 4. Included in the program will be Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5 which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced in the United States, and excerpts from Mozart's Mass in C Minor with a Festival Chorus of students from the Berkshire Music Center, and soloists. Dr. Munch will conduct the Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5 program, the selections including works by Aaron Copland, Tschaikowsky and Schumann. Zino Francescatti will play the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto with orchestra.

This afternoon's concert, Richard Burgin conducting, will include the Mahler Symphony No. 1 in D Major; Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and the Hindemith Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt, soloist. Richard Burgin is concert master of the Boston Symphony and head of the chamber music department in the Berkshire Music Center.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN. Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
NEXT WED. Aug. 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—Rudolf Serkin, Piano
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 29 1956
MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2.....Prokofieff
Violin Concerto.....Hindemith
Symphony No. 1.....Mahler
MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Program of scenes from nineteenth century operas sung by students of Berkshire Music Center and directed by Boris Goldovsky.
Don Carlo (Act. 2); Aida (Act 3); Falstaff (Act 1, Scene 2, in English).....Verdi
The Trojans (Act 4 in English)..Berlioz
La Rondine (Act 1 in English).....Puccini
WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber music program by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.
Symphonic Etudes; Carnaval..Schumann
Quintet for piano and woodwinds (K. 452).....Mozart
FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; Jocy de Oliveira, pianist (North American debut).
La Kermesse (first Tanglewood performance).....Barraud
The Three-Cornered Hat.....Falla
Piano Concerto.....Ravel
Petrouchka.....Stravinsky
SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
Mass in C minor (K. 427); Kyrie and Gloria (first Tanglewood performance).....Mozart
Symphony No. 5.....Prokofieff
NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 5, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Zino Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance).....Copland
Violin Concerto.....Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 2.....Schumann

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 29 1956
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3-5; 10-12. Boston Symphony Orchestra to perform Friday, Saturday evenings, Sunday afternoons. TOURIST

[15a]

Coming Week End At Tanglewood

Leonard Bernstein, at right, is rehearsing for the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky which he will conduct Saturday night in the Music Shed. He obtained his first conducting experience as pupil of Dr. Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Jocy de Oliveira (below), Brazilian pianist, will make her first appearance in this country in Friday night's concert under the direction of her husband, Eleazar de Carvalho, playing Ravel's Concerto.

In next Sunday afternoon's concert under its regular conductor, Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will observe the centenary of Robert Schumann's death with a performance of his Symphony No. 2. Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" will have its Tanglewood premiere in this program.

Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Jocy de Oliveira, pianist.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN Aug 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
NEXT WED Aug. 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—Rudolf Serkin, Piano
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting; soloist, Ruth Posselt, violinist. "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2, Prokofiev; Violin Concerto, Hindemith; Symphony No. 1 in D major, Mahler.

Monday, 8:30 Scenes from 19th Century Operas: "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Puccini; "Aida," Act II, Scene I; "Don Carlo," Act III; "Falstaff," Act I, Scene 2, Verdi; "The Trojans," Berlioz.

Wednesday, 8:30 Rudolf Serkin, pianist; Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. Symphonic Etudes; "Carnaval," Schumann; Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K. 452, Mozart.

Friday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Eleazar de Carvalho conducting. "La Kermesse," Barraud; "The Three-Cornered Hat," Falla; Piano Concerto, Ravel; Ballet, "Petrouchka," Stravinsky.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting; soloists, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Mass in C minor, K. 427, Kyrie and Gloria, Mozart; Symphony No. 5, Prokofiev.

Sunday, Aug. 5, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Zino Francescatti, violinist. Symphonic Ode, Copland; Violin Concerto, Tchaikovsky; Symphony No. 2 in C major, Schumann.

A Brazilian Conductor Has a Colorful Career

By JAY S. HARRISON

LENOX, Mass.

Placid lives are the common lot of most men. That, perhaps, is why biographies of uncommon ones usually run through three or more editions. Take, for instance, the life story of Eleazar de Carvalho, acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center who, on Friday, will direct the Boston Symphony in a Tanglewood concert. His tale is a history few of us can equal; that is why it is worth retelling. Mr. de Carvalho was born in Iguatu in the state of Ceara, Brazil, in 1915, the son of industrious but poor farm workers. From his father he inherited Dutch blood, from his mother pure Indian, and with both he labored side by side on the parched fields of Iguatu until, at the age of ten, his parents moved to Fortaleza, capital of Ceara. There he entered school for the first time.

His country life, however, had not lent itself to regimentation and, refusing to abide by the accepted rules of civility, he was within a month's time expelled from his classes. For de Carvalho pere there seemed no other course than to install his fractious son in a naval academy of some sort, and young Eleazar consequently found himself a member of the City School for Apprentice Seamen. Once admitted he became fascinated with the resident band and soon joined it as a player of the double bass.

Career Afloat

But to the de Carvalhos, as to most parents, music seemed an unlikely (not to say dreadful) career for a sprouting lad and so Eleazar was shipped to the Angra do Reis, in the state of Rio, to continue his education as an ordinary seaman. After his graduation he did, in fact, join the National Corps, serving with them until his discharge in 1936. His naval hitch, on the other hand, did not prevent him from attending to other chores and in 1939 he began simultaneous study—at night— in the Instituto Rio Branco and the National School of Music of the University of Brazil, where, in 1940, he graduated with honors, a doctor's degree in music and a conductor-composer diploma.

Thus far, despite his experience and degrees, Mr. de Carvalho considered himself an amateur. He took his first professional step by running a competition under whose terms he became a permanent member of the famed Teatro Municipal Rio de Janeiro as, of all things, tuba virtuoso. And shortly he found himself assistant conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra. Then, in 1941, when the leader of the group fell ill, he substituted for the ailing maestro on one day's notice and, conducting without score, made such a mark on the Brazilian public as has rarely been seen since a fledgling named Toscanini did the same thing in the same place some sixty-odd years ago.

Came Here in 1946

As he had overwhelmed at least three-quarters of his own country, there seemed nothing left for Mr. Carvalho to do but to come to the United States and try to duplicate his successes. In 1946, he arrived here—unknown, friendless, without a word of English on his tongue—a condition, incidentally, which he has now corrected to the degree of being able to carry on a rudimentary conversation. On his arrival in the United States, he made his way straight to Tanglewood, met the late Serge Koussevitzky, then the lord of the manor, and without batting an eye asked the great conductor to turn over the student orchestra to him for five minutes so that he might prove his ability. Koussevitzky, caught off guard by the fervor with which the appeal was made, consented and chose Rimsky-Korsakov's "Russian Easter" Overture as Carvalho's audition piece. In less than ten measures, the Boston Symphony's director knew that a master musician had come to him. Turning to a neighbor he said simply, "In five years de Carvalho will be one of the country's leading conductors."

At Tanglewood

Never one to miss a good thing, Koussevitzky immediately invited de Carvalho to join the staff of the Berkshire Music Center as his assistant in the training class in conducting and to lead the B. S. O. for a two-week period during the 1947-'48 season. Subsequently, until 1951, he remained on the Tanglewood faculty and since then has spent his time traveling between Brazil and Europe. At the moment he is Artistic Director of the Orquestra Sinfonica Brasileira, General Director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira, a society of 75,000 Brazilian youngsters which he founded in 1952 to solidify the artistic education of small-fry compatriots, and one of the strongest voices in the culture of his country. He is now forty-one and the end of his achievements is not in sight.

A Horatio Alger story? No. An Eleazar de Carvalho story. But they are much the same.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 29, 1956

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra moves into its fifth week of symphonic music on August 1 with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart in the Theater-Concert Hall by Pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. The three week end concerts by the Boston Symphony's full orchestra will be in the Music Shed, starting with Friday night when Eleazar de Cavallo will conduct. Soloist will be Pianist Jocy De Olivera in her North American debut. The program will comprise numbers by Barraid, de Falla, Ravel and Stravinsky. In private life, Miss De Oliveira is Mrs. de Cavallo.

Leonard Bernstein will lead the Orchestra in a Memorial to Serge Koussevitsky Saturday night, Aug. 4. Included in the program will be Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5 which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced in the United States, and excerpts from Mozart's Mass in C Minor with a Festival Chorus of students from the Berkshire Music Center, and soloists. Dr. Munch will conduct the Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5 program, the selections including works by Aaron Copland, Tschaikowsky and Schumann. Zino Francescatti will play the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto with orchestra.

This afternoon's concert, Richard Burgin conducting, will include the Mahler Symphony No. 1 in D Major; Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and the Hindemith Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt, soloist. Richard Burgin is concert master of the Boston Symphony and head of the chamber music department in the Berkshire Music Center.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN. Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
NEXT WED. Aug. 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—Rudolf Serkin, Piano
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 29 1956
MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Symphony No. 1 ..... Mahler

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Program of scenes from nineteenth century operas sung by students of Berkshire Music Center and directed by Boris Goldovsky.
Don Carlo (Act. 2); Aida (Act 3); Falstaff (Act 1, Scene 2, in English) ..... Verdi
The Trojans (Act 4 in English) .. Berlioz
La Rondine (Act 1 in English) ..... Puccini

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber music program by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.
Symphonic Etudes; Carnaval, Schumann
Quintet for piano and woodwinds (K. 452) ..... Mozart

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; Jocy de Oliveira, pianist (North American debut).
La Kermesse (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Barraud
The Three-Cornered Hat ..... Falla
Piano Concerto ..... Ravel
Petrouchka ..... Stravinsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
Mass in C minor (K. 427); Kyrie and Gloria (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Mozart
Symphony No. 5 ..... Prokofieff

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 5, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Zino Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Copland
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 2 ..... Schumann

[15d]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 29 1956

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood — in Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3-5; 10-12. Boston Symphony Orchestra to perform Friday, Saturday evenings, Sunday afternoons. TOURIST

CONCERT AND OPERA PROGRAMS FOR THE WEEK

ETERNAL ROMANTIC

Centenary of the Death of Schumann Is Receiving Scant Attention

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

A HUNDRED years ago today, Robert Schumann died in a private institution for the mentally sick at Edenich, near Bonn. He had been in this sanitarium for more than two years, a period of slow dying except for lucid, responsible intervals. His work was done, and an abundant harvest it had been.

"It is hard to speak of the soul's secrets," Schumann once observed. He was one of the few who succeeded. His compositions, particularly the piano pieces and the songs, are the autobiography of his spirit. They reveal, more than his own letters, the diary of his wife Clara or the words of his closest contemporaries, the true nature of this mercurial, passionate, tremulously sensitive poet in tone.

Robert Schumann did not have a rigorous musical education in his childhood and youth. Even after he had given up the plan to study law and had turned entirely to composition, even after pieces of his had been performed, published and won him some recognition, he felt the need to undertake lessons in thorough-bass. Toward the end of his active life, he was immersed in the counterpoint of Bach.

When he tackled the larger forms, he found himself hampered by a lack of ease in orchestration. Nor was he completely comfortable with the enormous canvas that a symphony provided. But his ardor and lyricism broke through the confinements imposed by his hesitancies and uncertainties. The symphonies are not tight, fully realized creations, like the masterly examples in this form by Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms, but the stamp of Schumann's genius is on them and they remain unique in the repertory.

Pianistic Thinking

The piano was Schumann's dearest confidant and the most searching mirror of his soul. It has been said truly that even when he wrote for other instruments his thinking and expression more often than not were pianistic. He did most of his composing at the piano. Occasionally he tried to write away from it. He cautioned a student to do his music-making in his head, but kept returning to the piano in the making of his own.

The piano works best reflect the rich, varied inner life of the man. The compositions made up of short, connected pieces, beginning with the "Abegg Variations" and "Papillons" and continuing through "Davidsbuendlertaenze," "Carnaval," "Fantasiestuecke," "Kinderscenen," "Kreisleriana," "Album fuer die Jugend" and the rest, reveal his endless play of fancy. Here as well as in the sonatas and Fantasy we find all the aspects of his restless moods—passion, tenderness, rebelliousness, impatience and melancholy. Here Florestan, the exuberant, and Eusebius, the reticent—those two figures of his invention—appear and disappear by turns. Here is the essence of romanticism.

Schumann was born in 1810. Within a ten-year period, from 1803 to 1813, these other movers and shakers of romanticism were born: Berlioz, 1803; Mendelssohn, 1809; Chopin, 1810; Liszt, 1811; Wagner, 1813. In their youth and early manhood these men in their various ways fought the battle against Philistinism. The "new music" was worth fighting for; moreover, it was their own. In later years, Schumann looked askance at the gigantic outbursts of Liszt and might have felt the same way about Wagner's huge scores. He did have reservations about Wagner's early operas.

Schumann's gift was for intimate, lyrical expression. In his songs he captured not only an emotion but also its overtones. His finest are settings of Heine's poems, with their intimations of meanings far beyond the literal content. When he came to set Chamisso's cycle, "Frauenlieben und Leben," he provided that extra something of feeling that turned the verses into art.

A Personal Style

Writing for the piano, Schumann achieved a personal idiom and a freedom exceeded only by Chopin's music for the instrument. His harmonies were like quicksilver in their changes; his pedal effects were fresh and imaginative; he was endlessly resourceful in the handling of rhythms and accompaniment figures. These were never tricks of technique; they were necessary to give his music the poetic glow he wanted for it.

The most important thing in his life, next to music, was Clara Wieck. Their love and marriage, described memorably in John N. Burk's "Clara Schumann," were catalysts for some of Schumann's most beautiful works. But he responded to everything around him, and it was all refracted by the prism of his mind and emerged as music.

The proof of this is in a letter he wrote to Clara. Excerpts from it, as translated by Mr. Burk and drawn from his book, follow:

"* * * My mind is at work, musical thoughts are shaping into compositions. I am affected by all that goes on in the world—politics, literature, people; I ponder it all in my own way, and somehow it comes to light in the form of music. And so many of my compositions are hard to understand, because they have remote causes, and sometimes they are striking because extraordinary happenings take hold of me, and must have their outlet in music.

Poetic Impulse

"The reason so few of the newer compositions satisfy me is that, aside from their construction, they spring from no genuine impulse, and consequently emerge as inferior lyrical effusions. The best of these does not reach what is the point of departure of my music. Theirs may be a flower, but mine is a poem of the spirit; theirs has a crudity of feeling, mine is the expression of poetical consciousness.

"I am not aware of these matters while I am composing—they occur to me afterward. * * * I cannot really speak of these things, and on music especially, one becomes quite incoherent, though I think much about it * * *."

At the end of this letter, in which Robert was revealing himself to Clara and adumbrating their future together, he wrote with irresistible and innocent honesty, "and we will play and poetize together like angels, bringing delight to mankind."

A century after his death, Schumann still delights mankind through his music. It needs no special celebration. It remains as fresh and enchanting as when it was new. As the composer himself so well knew, he was reaching for the soul's secrets.

As far as this department knows no centennial observance on a grand scale has been planned. The memorials to Mozart this year on the bicentennial of his birth have occupied most musical organizations. Schumann's music does not need the stimulus of special testimonials any more than Mozart's does. But it would be a fair occasion to have revivals of some of his compositions which are not often done, like the opera "Genovava," which deserves, if not a full-dress stage presentation, at least a fine concert performance.

Joey de Oliveira plays Ravel Concerto Friday at Tanglewood festival.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Symphony No. 1 ..... Mahler

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Program of scenes from nineteenth century operas sung by students of Berkshire Music Center and directed by Boris Goldovsky.
Don Carlo (Act 2); Aida (Act 2); Falstaff (Act 1, Scene 2, in English) ..... Verdi
The Trojans (Act 4 in English) .. Berlioz
La Rondine (Act 1 in English) ..... Puccini

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber music program by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.
Symphonic Etudes; Carnaval ..... Schumann
Quintet for piano and woodwinds (K. 452) ..... Mozart

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; Jocy de Oliveira, pianist (North American debut).
La Kermesse (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Barraud
The Three-Cornered Hat ..... Falla
Piano Concerto ..... Ravel
Petrouchka ..... Stravinsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
Mass in C minor (K. 427); Kyrie and Gloria (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Mozart
Symphony No. 5 ..... Prokofieff

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 5, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Zino Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Copland
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 1 ..... Schumann

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN. Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
NEXT WED. Aug. 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—Rudolf Serkin, Piano
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 29 1956

TANGLEWOOD OPENS

The Berkshire Music Centre, founded in 1940, will open its 14th session this afternoon when the 400 students will be welcomed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

The first concerts by the orchestra will be held this coming week end. On Friday night Benny Goodman will be the featured soloist in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. The Yale Glee Club sings with the orchestra Saturday evening, and Sunday's concert presents Lukas Foss in the dual role of conductor and soloist. Mr. Foss' solo offering is Bach's Concerto in D minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 29 1956

Petrassi Likes Ives

Talk With Composer Poses Some Problems

By TUCKER KEISER

It was, lamented Goffredo Petrassi, a "grand dommage" (great party) that his interpreter was not on hand for the interview the guest instructor of composition at Tanglewood agreed to last Sunday morning. The distinguished Italian composer made do with Spanish, French, Italian and beginner's English assisted by a fluent command of facial expressions.

A professor of composition at the Santa Cecilia Academy, first presided over by Palestrina, Petrassi recently completed a term as president of the International Society of Contemporary Music. Although inevitably influenced by Stravinsky and Hindemith, he has developed an individual style rather less astringent and more melodic. His interest in the vocal elements in musical composition was pointed up by the performance at a July 19 concert at Tanglewood of his "Coro di Morti," a dramatic madigal for male chorus.

"Grand dommage," he commented, when I suggested that the Santa Cecilia Conservervatory Chorus had been somewhat less than sensationally successful in its Boston appearance last October. He suggested that the lack of full-bodied tone and blending was brought about by the reduction of the chorus to a skeleton organization with a consequent loss of homogeneity.

When I asked what difficulties his six composition students seemed to have, he looked wistfully toward the driveway up which an interpreter was not striding to the rescue, and struggled to put into words a matter which he felt was "tres difficile."

The students, he feels, are likely to be so familiar with the mannerisms of a particular musical idiom that they fail to appreciate the need for a deeper understanding of the structure and rationale behind the idiom. Petrassi, incidentally, who speaks French fluently, communicates with his students either in that language or by interpreter.

The composer himself is one of the newer Italian musicians whose works reflects the growing interest in symphonic music. For two centuries Italy has worshipped the human voice; not since the days of Corelli and Vivaldi have Italians composed much for orchestral combinations. When a piece for strings appears on our programs by Verdi or Puccini, we usually find that it is a very early work, a product of student days rather than an example of the composer's mature art.

Like his contemporary, Luigi Dellapiccola, Petrassi is much smitten with a modified Schoenbergian 12-tone system of composition. This certainly represents an extreme in aesthetic approach for Italian music, since such austere musical idiamis the antithesis of lyricism, the outstanding characteristic of Italian music.

Mr. Petrassi's music is boldly dissonant and almost jagged in contour. He lays on orchestral color in the broadest possible strokes.

He was one of the composers who received a commission to write a new work of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 75th anniversary season. This was his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, heard early last fall in Boston, later on tour, and last Friday again at Tanglewood.

It was a surprise to discover with what enthusiasm Signor Petrassi regarded Charles Ives, an American composer whose use of American hymn tunes and folk material and whose strange and difficult style might be expected to reduce his appeal abroad. Evidently Ives is not without an audience in Italy since the Italian Radio devoted four evenings to performances of his works recently and musicologists, according to the Italian composer, are very much interested in his techniques.

The interpreter never came up the driveway, and about lunchtime I felt that, interesting though the interview was, it might be unfair to expect a continuous miracle of communication by only partially linguistic means, so I said "arivederci."

"Good afternoon," said Signor Petrassi.

[153]

CONCERT AND OPERA PROGRAMS FOR THE WEEK

ETERNAL ROMANTIC

Centenary of the Death of Schumann Is Receiving Scant Attention

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

A HUNDRED years ago today, Robert Schumann died in a private institution for the mentally sick at Edenich, near Bonn. He had been in this sanitarium for more than two years, a period of slow dying except for lucid, responsible intervals. His work was done, and an abundant harvest it had been.

"It is hard to speak of the soul's secrets," Schumann once observed. He was one of the few who succeeded. His compositions, particularly the piano pieces and the songs, are the autobiography of his spirit. They reveal, more than his own letters, the diary of his wife Clara or the words of his closest contemporaries, the true nature of this mercurial, passionate, tremulously sensitive poet in tone.

Robert Schumann did not have a rigorous musical education in his childhood and youth. Even after he had given up the plan to study law and had turned entirely to composition, even after pieces of his had been performed, published and won him some recognition, he felt the need to undertake lessons in thorough-bass. Toward the end of his active life, he was immersed in the counterpoint of Bach.

When he tackled the larger forms, he found himself hampered by a lack of ease in orchestration. Nor was he completely comfortable with the enormous canvas that a symphony provided. But his ardor and lyricism broke through the confinements imposed by his hesitancies and uncertainties. The symphonies are not tight, fully realized creations, like the masterly examples in this form by Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms, but the stamp of Schumann's genius is on them and they remain unique in the repertory.

Pianistic Thinking

The piano was Schumann's dearest confidant and the most searching mirror of his soul. It has been said truly that even when he wrote for other instruments his thinking and expression more often than not were pianistic. He did most of his composing at the piano. Occasionally he tried to write away from it. He cautioned a student to do his music-making in his head, but kept returning to the piano in the making of his own.

The piano works best reflect the rich, varied inner life of the man. The compositions made up of short, connected pieces, beginning with the "Abegg Variations" and "Papillons" and continuing through "Davidsbuendlertaenze," "Carnaval," "Fantasiestuecke," "Kinderscenen," "Kreisleriana," "Album fuer die Jugend" and the rest, reveal his endless play of fancy. Here as well as in the sonatas and Fantasy we find all the aspects of his restless moods—passion, tenderness, rebelliousness, impatience and melancholy. Here Florestan, the exuberant, and Eusebius, the reticent—those two figures of his invention—appear and disappear by turns. Here is the essence of romanticism.

Schumann was born in 1810. Within a ten-year period, from 1803 to 1813, these other movers and shakers of romanticism were born: Berlioz, 1803; Mendelssohn, 1809; Chopin, 1810; Liszt, 1811; Wagner, 1813. In their youth and early manhood these men in their various ways fought the battle against Philistinism. The "new music" was worth fighting for; moreover, it was their own. In later years, Schumann looked askance at the gigantic outbursts of Liszt and might have felt the same way about Wagner's huge scores. He did have reservations about Wagner's early operas.

Schumann's gift was for intimate, lyrical expression. In his songs he captured not only an emotion but also its overtones. His finest are settings of Heine's poems, with their intimations of meanings far beyond the literal content. When he came to set Chamisso's cycle, "Frauenlieben und Leben," he provided that extra something of feeling that turned the verses into art.

A Personal Style

Writing for the piano, Schumann achieved a personal idiom and a freedom exceeded only by Chopin's music for the instrument. His harmonies were like quicksilver in their changes; his pedal effects were fresh and imaginative; he was endlessly resourceful in the handling of rhythms and accompaniment figures. These were never tricks of technique; they were necessary to give his music the poetic glow he wanted for it.

The most important thing in his life, next to music, was Clara Wieck. Their love and marriage, described memorably in John N. Burk's "Clara Schumann," were catalysts for some of Schumann's most beautiful works. But he responded to everything around him, and it was all refracted by the prism of his mind and emerged as music.

The proof of this is in a letter he wrote to Clara. Excerpts from it, as translated by Mr. Burk and drawn from his book, follow:

"* * * My mind is at work, musical thoughts are shaping into compositions. I am affected by all that goes on in the world—politics, literature, people; I ponder it all in my own way, and somehow it comes to light in the form of music. And so many of my compositions are hard to understand, because they have remote causes, and sometimes they are striking because extraordinary happenings take hold of me, and must have their outlet in music.

Poetic Impulse

"The reason so few of the newer compositions satisfy me is that, aside from their construction, they spring from no genuine impulse, and consequently emerge as inferior lyrical effusions. The best of these does not reach what is the point of departure of my music. Theirs may be a flower, but mine is a poem of the spirit; theirs has a crudity of feeling, mine is the expression of poetical consciousness.

"I am not aware of these matters while I am composing—they occur to me afterward. * * * I cannot really speak of these things, and on music especially, one becomes quite incoherent, though I think much about it * * *."

At the end of this letter, in which Robert was revealing himself to Clara and adumbrating their future together, he wrote with irresistible and innocent honesty, "and we will play and poetize together like angels, bringing delight to mankind."

A century after his death, Schumann still delights mankind through his music. It needs no special celebration. It remains as fresh and enchanting as when it was new. As the composer himself so well knew, he was reaching for the soul's secrets.

As far as this department knows no centennial observance on a grand scale has been planned. The memorials to Mozart this year on the bicentennial of his birth have occupied most musical organizations. Schumann's music does not need the stimulus of special testimonials any more than Mozart's does. But it would be a fair occasion to have revivals of some of his compositions which are not often done, like the opera "Genoveva," which deserves, if not a full-dress stage presentation, at least a fine concert performance.

Jocy de Oliveira plays Ravel Concerto Friday at Tanglewood festival.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet,
Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Symphony No. 1 ..... Mahler

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Program of scenes from nineteenth century operas sung by students of Berkshire Music Center and directed by Boris Goldovsky.
Don Carlo (Act. 2); Aida (Act 2); Falstaff (Act 1, Scene 2, in English) ..... Verdi
The Trojans (Act 4 in English) .. Berlioz
La Rondine (Act 1 in English) ..... Puccini

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber music program by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.
Symphonic Etudes; Carnaval Schumann
Quintet for piano and woodwinds (K. 452) ..... Mozart

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; Jocy de Oliveira, pianist (North American debut).
La Kermesse (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Barraud
The Three-Cornered Hat ..... Falla
Piano Concerto ..... Ravel
Petrouchka ..... Stravinsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
Mass in C minor (K. 427); Kyrie and Gloria (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Mozart
Symphony No. 5 ..... Prokofieff

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 5, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Zino Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Copland
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 2 ..... Schumann

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
NEXT WED. Aug 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—Rudolf Serkin, Piano
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 29 1956

TANGLEWOOD OPENS

The Berkshire Music Centre, founded in 1940, will open its 14th session this afternoon when the 400 students will be welcomed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

The first concerts by the orchestra will be held this coming week end. On Friday night Benny Goodman will be the featured soloist in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. The Yale Glee Club sings with the orchestra Saturday evening, and Sunday's concert presents Lukas Foss in the dual role of conductor and soloist. Mr. Foss' solo offering is Bach's Concerto in D minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 29 1956

Petrassi Likes Ives

Talk With Composer Poses Some Problems

By TUCKER KEISER

It was, lamented Goffredo Petrassi, a "grand dommage" (great party) that his interpreter was not on hand for the interview the guest instructor of composition at Tanglewood agreed to last Sunday morning. The distinguished Italian composer made do with Spanish, French, Italian and beginner's English assisted by a fluent command of facial expressions.

A professor of composition at the Santa Cecilia Academy, first presided over by Palestrina, Petrassi recently completed a term as president of the International Society of Contemporary Music. Although inevitably influenced by Stravinsky and Hindemith, he has developed an individual style rather less astringent and more melodic. His interest in the vocal elements in musical composition was pointed up by the performance at a July 19 concert at Tanglewood of his "Coro di Morti," a dramatic madigal for male chorus.

"Grand dommage," he commented, when I suggested that the Santa Cecilia Conservervatory Chorus had been somewhat less than sensationally successful in its Boston appearance last October. He suggested that the lack of full-bodied tone and blending was brought about by the reduction of the chorus to a skeleton organization with a consequent loss of homogeneity.

When I asked what difficulties his six composition students seemed to have, he looked wistfully toward the driveway up which an interpreter was not striding to the rescue, and struggled to put into words a matter which he felt was "tres difficile."

The students, he feels, are likely to be so familiar with the mannerisms of a particular musical idiom that they fail to appreciate the need for a deeper understanding of the structure and rationale behind the idiom. Petrassi, incidentally, who speaks French fluently, communicates with his students either in that language or by interpreter.

The composer himself is one of the newer Italian musicians whose works reflects the growing interest in symphonic music. For two centuries Italy has worshipped the human voice; not since the days of Corelli and Vivaldi have Italians composed much for orchestral combinations. When a piece for strings appears on our programs by Verdi or Puccini, we usually find that it is a very early work, a product of student days rather than an example of the composer's mature art.

Like his contemporary, Luigi Dellapiccola, Petrassi is much smitten with a modified Schoenbergian 12-tone system of composition. This certainly represents an extreme in aesthetic approach for Italian music, since such austere musical idiamis the antithesis of lyricism, the outstanding characteristic of Italian music.

Mr. Petrassi's music is boldly dissonant and almost jagged in contour. He lays on orchestral color in the broadest possible strokes.

He was one of the composers who received a commission to write a new work of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 75th anniversary season. This was his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, heard early last fall in Boston, later on tour, and last Friday again at Tanglewood.

It was a surprise to discover with what enthusiasm Signor Petrassi regarded Charles Ives, an American composer whose use of American hymn tunes and folk material and whose strange and difficult style might be expected to reduce his appeal abroad. Evidently Ives is not without an audience in Italy since the Italian Radio devoted four evenings to performances of his works recently and musicologists, according to the Italian composer, are very much interested in his techniques.

The interpreter never came up the driveway, and about lunchtime I felt that, interesting though the interview was, it might be unfair to expect a continuous miracle of communication by only partially linguistic means, so I said "arivederci."

"Good afternoon," said Signor Petrassi.

[153]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 29 1956

TANGLEWOOD OPENS

The Berkshire Music Cent
founded in 1940, will open 14th session this afternoon wi the 400 students will be w comed by Charles Munch, mu director of the Boston Sy phony.

The first concerts by orchestra will be held coming week end. On Fri night Benny Goodman will the featured soloist in Moza
Clarinet Concerto. The Y
Glee Club sings with orchestra Saturday eveni and Sunday's concert prese
Lukas Foss in the dual role conductor and soloist. Mr. Fo solo offering is Bach's Conce
in D minor.

s Ives

th Composer ome Problems

SER

Goffredo ommage" his interd for the nstructor anglewood morning.
lian com-
Spanish, beginner's a fluent pressions.
osition at Academy,
y Palestly com-sident of ciety of Although by Stra-he has al style nd more in the cal com-
by the 19 con-of his ramatic us.

he com-ted that ervervasometionally appear-e sugof full-ng was duction ton or-equent difficuln stu-

looked iveway r was e, and ords a "tres

s, are h the r mu-to ap-heeper ucture diom.
who comdents or by

The composer himself is one of the newer Italian musicians whose works reflects the growing interest in symphonic music. For two centuries Italy has worshipped the human voice: not since the days of Corelli and Vivaldi have Italians composed much for orchestral combinations. When a piece for strings appears on our programs by Verdi or Puccini, we usually find that it is a very early work, a product of student days rather than an example of the composer's mature art.

Like his contemporary, Luigi Dellapiccola, Petrassi is much smitten with a modified Schoenbergian 12-tone system of composition. This certainly represents an extreme in aesthetic approach for Italian music since such austere musical ideamis the antithesis of lyricism, the outstanding characteristic of Italian music.

Mr. Petrassi's music is boldly dissonant and almost jagged in contour. He lays on orchestral color in the broadest possible strokes.

He was one of the composers who received a commission to write a new work of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 75th anniversary season. This was his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, heard early last fall in Boston, later on tour, and last Friday again at Tanglewood.

It was a surprise to discover with what enthusiasm Signor Petrassi regarded Charles Ives, an American composer whose use of American hymn tunes and folk material and whose strange and difficult style might be expected to reduce his appeal abroad. Evidently Ives is not without an audience in Italy since the Italian Radio devoted four evenings to performances of his works recently and musicologists, according to the Italian composer, are very much interested in his techniques.

The interpreter never came up the driveway, and about lunchtime I felt that, interesting though the interview was, it might be unfair to expect a continuous miracle of communication by only partially linguistic means, so I said "arivederci."

"Good afternoon," said Signor Petrassi.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
PEORIA, ILL.
JOURNAL-STAR
Circ. S. 89,719
JUN 29 1956

PARADE OF THE ARTS

By EVABETH MILLER

Many Relax, But Others Work

While the public concentrates on summer time relaxation, professional and amateur actors and musicians all over America and Europe are working hard at entertaining the relaxed and traveling public.

Festivals of drama and music are everywhere, each year becoming more interesting.

Closest to home is our own Corn Stock Theater, now rehearsing its second production, "The Rainmaker," for shows July 17-22 in the tented theater in Bradley park.

Ravinia summer concerts are in full swing in suburban Chicago, and down at Forest Park in St. Louis the Municipal Opera continues its 38th summer season. Next week's show is "Hit the Deck," July 2-8, to be followed July 9-15 by "The Great Waltz."

* * *

Six weeks of summer concerts in the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., begin the Fourth of July at "Tanglewood," beautiful hilltop estate first made famous by Nathaniel Hawthorne and his "Tanglewood Tales," which originated when he lived in a cottage there.

Jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman makes his Tanglewood debut as soloist in an all-Mozart program to be played July 6 by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players led by Charles Munch. All chamber orchestra programs there this year will mark the Mozart bicentennial.

The full Boston Symphony is to play for the big Music Shed concerts of classic and newly commissioned music on four weekends, July 20-Aug. 12. Last season, this festival set a new record with attendance of 136,087 people at its symphonic, choral and chamber music events.

After all this, the Boston Orchestra goes to Europe in mid-August for six weeks of performances in 13 countries. They will include a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union, as the first American symphony orchestra to perform in Russia.

* * *

Even atop the famous Rhine River rock where legend and song say the charmer Lorelei combed her golden hair and lured unwary fishermen to their deaths, there are Lorelei Festival plays on an open-air stage high above that sharp bend in the great river.

This summer, from July 5-28, they will include Schiller's "The Robbers" (played in fine fettle here in 1938 by Bradley students in the late Mary Blossom Huston's classes in German).

Because Augsburg, Germany was the home town of Mozart's musician father, Leopold, it has dedicated this bicentennial summer to a Mozart Year festival of music, art and drama. "Hamlet" is among the stage attractions, and so is Goethe's "Die Laune des Verliebten," another play once given by Mrs. Huston's advanced students—I recall especially our delight at the Chicago-imported 18th century costumes ordered for us to wear!

* * *

Down on Roanoke Island at Manteo, N. C., this Saturday night, the 766th performance of "The Lost Colony" will open the 16th season for that history-mystery by Paul Green. Scenes move from London to that island to tell in song, dance, pantomime and spoken lines the story of the colony established by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1585, long before the Mayflower sailed to Plymouth.

A Rip Van Winkle pageant on July 4 will launch the second Empire State music festival at Ellensville, N. Y., a four-weeks series of symphonic, operatic, theatrical and ballet events.

Included is the July 12 premiere of a ballet based on Eugene O'Neill's "Emperor Jones," with music by Heitor Villa-Lobos. German composer Carl Orff (of "Carmino Burana" fame) has written the musical background for "A Midsummer Night's Dream," to be conducted by Stokowski.

And so it goes, with festivals all over the map, each with its own reason for being.

* * *

University of Illinois radio station WILL broadcasts Opera Workshop excerpts from Mozart at 12:30 this Sunday afternoon (580 kc). On the program are a quartet from "The Abduction from the Seraglio" and an English concert version of Act II, "The Marriage of Figaro."

"The best thing I have ever written in my life" was Mozart's own description in 1784 for his Quintet in E-flat for Piano and Winds, included on an all-Mozart program Monday night on Promenade Concert. That excellent classical disc jockey feature is heard on WMAQ from 11:15 to 1 a.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 253,604
JUL 29 1956

This Week at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music. A joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet will be held on Wednesday evening, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program: symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky; de Carvalho's wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, will make her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

BRAZILIAN CONDUCTOR Eleazar de Carvalho will lead the Berkshire Festival concert Friday night at Tanglewood, with his wife as the soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10 a.m. (August 4), for which a charge is made ($1.00) for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

The complete programs:

Wednesday—8:30 p.m.—Theater—Concert Hall—Chamber Music
Schumann: Symphonic Etudes
Rudolf Serkin, pianist
Mozart: Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K. 452
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet (Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon) and Rudolf Serkin
Schumann: "Carnaval"
Rudolf Serkin

Friday—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Barraud: "La Kermesse" (First performance at Tanglewood)
Falla: "The Three-Cornered Hat"
Ravel: Piano Concerto
Soloist: Jocy De Oliveira, pianist (North American debut)
Stravinsky: Ballet, "Petrouchka" (Complete)
Conductor: Eleazar de Carvalho

Saturday—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Mozart: Mass in C minor (K. 427)
Kyrie and Gloria (First Tanglewood performance)
Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor.
Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon.
Prokofieff: Symphony No. 2
Conductor: Leonard Bernstein

Sunday—2:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Copland: Symphonic Ode (First performance at Tanglewood)
Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto
Soloist: Zino Francescatti
Schumann: Symphony No. 2 in C major
Conductor: Charles Munch

Week End at Tanglewood Has a Bit of Everything

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 29.—The Saturday-Sunday concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood had, as the saying goes, everything: music old and new, good and not so good, incomparable orchestral playing, and two top-flight soloists—pianist Rudolf Serkin and violinist Ruth Posselt. The grand total of attendance during the week end reached 23,810: Friday, 6,256; Saturday, 9,821, and Sunday, 7,733.

Saturday's program opened with the "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky," op. 44, by Howard Hanson, another of the Boston orchestra's seventy-fifth anniversary commissions. The elegy is a well-made piece, rich in texture to the point of opaqueness, and in no wise unpleasant. But, personal in intent as it surely is, it seems oddly impersonal in style.

Schumann's piano concerto in A minor has become a vehicle for so many amateurs and neophytes that it was exciting for a change to have it from the hands of a master. Rudolf Serkin is one of the most dynamic pianists now before the public. Visually, he has all the mannerisms of lunge and crash that have given the virtuoso a bad name, but with him the effort seems justified. He makes music—live, spontaneous, fiery music, and he sweeps the listener along irresistibly. Charles Munch is an accompanying conductor par excellence, and his enjoyment in the collaboration was evident. The audience was duly ecstatic.

Arthur Honegger's fifth symphony, by now familiar to listeners from Boston, is unquestionably a twentieth-century masterpiece. Written as a Koussevitzky Foundation commission and published in 1951, the three-movement symphony sums up the great modern master's production in a dramatic, compact and eminently communicative apotheosis. Mr. Munch conducts this work by his late friend with the most passionate intensity and, unusual for him, without score. The orchestral playing was breathtaking in its security.

The conductor's way with Debussy's three orchestral sketches, "La Mer," is regarded as one of the foremost in the concert hall, and it invariably offers an experience of ravishing sound and keen evocative value. Saturday night's rendition stood up well even after the Honegger symphony—proof of the music's quality and that of its executants.

Sunday afternoon's concert, with the weather remaining delightfully clear and cool, brought Richard Burgin, the concert-master and associate conductor, to the podium. It may be only this reviewer's imagination, but under Mr. Burgin's leadership the Boston Symphony seemed to sound as mellow and warm as it did under Koussevitzky—quite different from the brilliance and definition Mr. Munch calls for.

Who but Ruth Posselt plays Paul Hindemith's violin concerto in this country? Stand and be counted. She has championed it virtually since its composition in 1939. The first American performance, in fact, was given by her husband, Richard Burgin, in 1950. If RCA-Victor can temporarily abandon its conservatism in repertoire, this concerto—not yet endisked by any one—is respectfully proposed, with these artists as protagonists.

Mr. Burgin has long been an ardent Mahler supporter; he plays his music quite as well as do Walter and Mitroupoulos, with perhaps more viable pacing.

Rockefellers at Tanglewood

Petrovee

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III of 1 Beekman Pl., New York, at the Berkshire Festival concert Saturday at Tanglewood. The Rockefellers spent the weekend at Curtis Hotel in Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 29 1956

Berkshire Briefs

The merger of two of Berkshire County's oldest and biggest companies is expected to take place shortly. The companies are Crane & Co. and Byron Weston Co., both paper manufacturers, and both located in Dalton. Spokesmen for the two have unofficially confirmed reports that Crane & Co. has offered to buy the Weston business in its entirety and that the offer probably will be accepted by Byron Weston stockholders.

It is reported that employes of the two companies have been assured there will be no employment cutbacks if the sale takes place. Together the two firms employ about 1100 persons. Crane & Co., founded in 1801 and currently headed by Governor's Councillor Bruce Crane, makes stationary and currency paper. The Weston mills, founded in 1863, make ledger, bond and photographic papers.

* * *

Some 9000 Pittsfield GE workers will get a windfall pay boost this week in the wake of June increase in the national consumer price index. The pay raise, amounting to an average of 2 cents an hour, results from a union-company "escalator" agreement tying pay levels to the cost of living.

In addition to this raise, all GE workers will get a three per cent pay increase Sept. 15 under the terms of the five-year contract negotiated last year. Together with the cost-of-living boost, this will bring the average straight time rate for GE production workers to $2.28 an hour, an all-time high.

The "escalator" agreement provides for quarterly wage adjustments on the basis of U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics price index. Under the agreement, wages can rise without limit in line with the cost of living, but can drop no lower than the September, 1955, base if prices drop.

* * *

Heart Ailments, cancer and accidents—in that order—are now the biggest killers in Pittsfield, according to the annual report issued a few days ago by Dr. Harold M. Stein, the new city health commissioner. During 1955, there were 255 Pittsfield deaths attributed to heart and circulatory diseases, 129 from cancer, and 52 from accidents of all types.

Dr. Stein also noted that while the city's death rate rose slightly last year, the infant mortality rate dropped to 20 per 1000 population, from 30 in 1954.

* * *

Thirty-four members of the United Nations staff in New York were guests of Berkshire County residents last week end in the seventh annual "Week-end at Tanglewood," sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding, a Pittsfield organization.

The visitors, representing 19 nations, were housed with Berkshire families who volunteered to serve as hosts, and were treated to picnics and sightseeing tours between Boston Symphony concerts at the Tanglewood music festival.

* * *

General Electric Co. and Pittsfield IUE Local 255, which represents most of the plant's Berkshire employees, are at odds over the issue of union dues deductions. Local 255 Business Agent Arthur H. LaBlue has accused the company of violating the union contract by deducting union dues covering the entire month of August from July pay checks.

Company spokesmen contend that the advance deduction was made so that union dues would not have to be taken out of employees vacation pay during the August company-wide vacation. Mr. LaBlue questioned this explanation, describing the management action as "part of a growing campaign to discredit the union in the eyes of employees."

* * *

Music

The Second Shed Weekend

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE TWO PROGRAMS of the weekend at Tanglewood included much music that was either new or rarely played. Charles Munch, leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night, played two works that had been written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and Richard Burgin, on the podium yesterday afternoon, chose for his program a trio of composers of whom no one is yet ensconced in the category of classics.

Each program included an instrumental soloist: Ruth Posselt playing the Hindemith violin concerto yesterday, Rudolf Serkin the piano concerto Saturday night.

* * *

BURGIN'S PROGRAM yesterday was off the beaten path. Enclosing the violin concerto, he played Prokofieff's second suite from his ballet to "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's first symphony, two composers certainly not closely related. Yet they disclosed some factors which they held in common. Appealing melodies and fascinating fragments keep appearing in the music of both men. How they join these fragments, or separate them, is their distinctive method.

Mahler draws upon his own song cycle "Songs of a Journeyman," but his long discursive ramblings and inconclusive climaxes have made him a perennially controversial composer. At one point in musical history it looked as though Mahler would be included in the vintage half-decade which produced Sibelius, Richard Strauss, Debussy et al. There are still many who believe that history has made a mistake in ignoring Mahler, or rather in not recognizing him. Burgin yesterday afternoon, by the conviction of his conducting, proved that he is one of such a group and by the success of his leadership and the esprit de corps with which his colleagues of the orchestra responded to his belief, he may well have persuaded a goodly number to his opinion.

* * *

MAHLER'S LOVELY, amorous melodies and fetching rhythmic designs are entrancing moments of music, but the mortar with which he fills the interstices is excessive and of indeterminate ingredients. It might be said of him, as Professor Carlos Baker said of Coleridge, that "he reminds us of the great chef who forgot to light the oven under his masterpiece" or "of the prestidigitator whose rabbit died before it got in the trick."

Ruth Posselt's execution of the Hindemith was a tour de force. It is not a rewarding concerto, but Miss Posselt played it with a masterful ease, clarity and a security that belied its intricacies. Her tone was warm and full and her intonation truly a marvel. In the most involved passages and the most exposed areas of the instrument it was eminently true and just without exception. She made the complexities as transparent and lucid as though it were a Viotti concerto and gave inflection and shape to every sentence and pyrotechnical roulade. It was an unsurpassed performance. The accompaniment her husband provided as conductor was of the variety to lend added confidence in what otherwise might have been a hazardous and precarious exploit.

Prokofieff recedes, or rises, into popular tunes without effort. His entrances and departures are far removed from those of Mahler, but at least they always seem to come with facility and without labor.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED half of his program Saturday night to Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" and to Honegger's fifth symphony. The other portions were Debussy's "La Mer" and the Schumann concerto.

Serkin's performance was electrifying. Saturday lacked a single day from the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. The concerto re-emerged as a work of poetry and inspired emotion. Serkin gave it transcendental vividness. Munch and the orchestra took fire from the sparks the soloist emitted to collaborate for an indelible memory.

The diametrically opposed passages of lyric beauty and brilliant animation which Schumann inserts were instantly realized. Serkin played as one possessed yet when necessary and proper, as in the slow movement, soaring solo passage for the Boston cello section which they played with such eloquence and tone, he dropped to a soft and decorative role. But it was a gigantic performance, both in point of power and of magnificence. He played like an unleashed lion yet always maintained a rigid conformity to detail and plan and the turn of every phrase was a thing of beauty in its own right. Few can ever forget this event.

* * *

Hanson and Honegger are of the same generation and their backgrounds, even though one is American and the other French, are more or less parallel. Their training was at the same fountain and the same tools serve to guage their work. Hanson writes his "Elegy" with a searching sentiment which applies to the special circumstances under which the piece was conceived. Koussevitzky had meant a great deal to him personally as he had to so many of that epoch.

Hanson's has a measurable perpendicular dimension and Honegger's symphony also permits such an appraisal, especially in the brash opening pages in which a studied cacophony makes its effect by sheer weight. In the closing work of his program, Debussy's "La Mer," Munch gave the orchestra their head and there was every nuance produced from the most wispy film to riotous outburst of color. The orchestra played with uncommon virtuosity, responding to Munch's admonitions of restraint at one moment and then releasing their full and glamorous strength as he urged them on to faster and more furious incidents. The audience of more than 9,000 could not have expressed their acclaim more vociferously and the same degree of enthusiasm prevailed yesterday among the 7,700 attendance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 30 1956

TANGLEWOOD'S SUNDAY CROWD DISAPPOINTING

Only 7739 Hear Commendable Concert by Boston Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 29—When a Sunday afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra draws as few as 7739 people, particularly when the weather is ideal, something must be wrong. It would seem that a good Sunday afternoon should bring far more people, in fact it has drawn as many as 15,000 to Tanglewood.

Should Offer Best

With a Sunday afternoon audience from the four points of the compass, and a varied musical level, it seems that every effort should be made to provide the best Tanglewood has to offer; a conductor with audience attraction and a program and soloist of proven appeal.

With all respect to the musicianship and distinguished record of Richard Burgin, his appeal is something less than popular. While a program of Prokofieff. Hindemith and Mahler can be a magnificent listening experience. it is not the sort of program that

Continued On Page 10 2

Tomorrow night the opera department under Boris Goldovsky, will present a single act from four 19th Century operas. Many members of the department will be heard during the four acts. Wednesday night, Rudof Serkin will appear in the chamber music hall, playing the "Symphonic Etudes, and Carmaval" by Schumann and the Mozart "Quinten for Piano and Wood Winds."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 30 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 30 1956

25 Boston Symphony Members to Revisit Homelands on Tour

Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris Sept. 19 and 20, and in the cathedral at Chartres Sept. 21.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteaux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteaux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

More Variety Needed At Tanglewood Concerts; New Composition Well Done

A modern composition written expressly for the Boston Symphony orchestra on its 75th anniversary was played at Tanglewood in Lenox Friday as the Berkshire festival found itself in mid-season. It was Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto," done brilliantly by the orchestra in the big music shed under the direction of Charles Munch.

The Petrassi work has the acrid tonal quality of much contemporary music, which makes it hard listening for those not accustomed to it. Once this hurdle is passed, however, it has a strong appeal to the senses, building up shimmering orchestra effects that are as rich as any of those of the traditional craftsmen.

It did have a sound of the wail to it coming right after Beethoven's "Leonore Overture," which is an unusually sweet choice from the classical storehouse. This was a most elegant opening for the concert, showing the orchestra's flawless artistry. Nevertheless, one was thankful for a new piece on the program, for "Leonore" is heard fairly often.

The criticism has been made that the Tanglewood programs have fallen into a rut. There is indeed a great deal of repetition, which becomes tiresome in the case of so-called programme music. There are, after all, only so many great symphonies. There is, however, a treasury of other compositions to combine with the symphonies on concert programs that does not seem to be used. The Berkshire hills must be salty with the wash of Debussy's "La Mer" by this time.

People who attend the Tanglewood concerts regularly are entitled to more variety than they have been getting in recent years. There has been a tendency to concentrate on the chamber music concerts in the smaller hall, which are proportionately more popular now than the big shed concerts. But the fact remains that the full symphony in the big shed is the heart of the festival and what most people go to hear. It should not be wasted on condescension to what somebody may think is popular taste.

There were many empty seats in the shed last night, and while hundreds were on the lawns, there was not a large crowd there. Predictions of stormy weather may have kept some away. However, it may also be that there has been some wrong guessing about what people want to hear.

The repetition was quite acceptable, however, in the case of the backbone of the program, the symphony, which last night was Tschaikovsky's "Fourth," we don't know how many times we have heard this symphony played at Tanglewood, often enough, however, so that wherever we hear even a fragment of it the tall firs of Tanglewood loom up in the mind and there is a sharp image of a small man with rounded shoulders hurling himself into the glorious Russian music. Tanglewood, Tschaikovsky, and Koussevitzky will always stay together in memory. Last night the magnificent passionate music poured out from the great shed as clear and fresh as ever, and there was room for only joy and gratitude for the chance to hear it again.

A.B.M.

[155]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 29 1956

Berkshire Briefs

The merger of two of Berkshire County's oldest and biggest companies is expected to take place shortly. The companies are Crane & Co. and Byron Weston Co., both paper manufacturers, and both located in Dalton. Spokesmen for the two have unofficially confirmed reports that Crane & Co. has offered to buy the Weston business in its entirety and that the offer probably will be accepted by Byron Weston stockholders.

It is reported that employes of the two companies have been assured there will be no employment cutbacks if the sale takes place. Together the two firms employ about 1100 persons. Crane & Co., founded in 1801 and currently headed by Governor's Councillor Bruce Crane, makes stationary and currency paper. The Weston mills, founded in 1863, make ledger, bond and photographic papers.

* * *

Some 9000 Pittsfield GE workers will get a windfall pay boost this week in the wake of June increase in the national consumer price index. The pay raise, amounting to an average of 2 cents an hour, results from a union-company "escalator" agreement tying pay levels to the cost of living.

In addition to this raise, all GE workers will get a three per cent pay increase Sept. 15 under the terms of the five-year contract negotiated last year. Together with the cost-of-living boost, this will bring the average straight time rate for GE production workers to $2.28 an hour, an all-time high.

The "escalator" agreement provides for quarterly wage adjustments on the basis of U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics price index. Under the agreement, wages can rise without limit in line with the cost of living, but can drop no lower than the September, 1955, base if prices drop.

* * *

Heart Ailments, cancer and accidents—in that order—are now the biggest killers in Pittsfield, according to the annual report issued a few days ago by Dr. Harold M. Stein, the new city health commissioner. During 1955, there were 255 Pittsfield deaths attributed to heart and circulatory diseases, 129 from cancer, and 52 from accidents of all types.

Dr. Stein also noted that while the city's death rate rose slightly last year, the infant mortality rate dropped to 20 per 1000 population, from 30 in 1954.

* * *

Thirty-four members of the United Nations staff in New York were guests of Berkshire County residents last week end in the seventh annual "Weekend at Tanglewood," sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding, a Pittsfield organization.

The visitors, representing 19 nations, were housed with Berkshire families who volunteered to serve as hosts, and were treated to picnics and sightseeing tours between Boston Symphony concerts at the Tanglewood music festival.

* * *

General Electric Co. and Pittsfield IUE Local 255, which represents most of the plant's Berkshire employees, are at odds over the issue of union dues deductions. Local 255 Business Agent Arthur H. LaBlue has accused the company of violating the union contract by deducting union dues covering the entire month of August from July pay checks.

Company spokesmen contend that the advance deduction was made so that union dues would not have to be taken out of employees vacation pay during the August company-wide vacation. Mr. LaBlue questioned this explanation, describing the management action as "part of a growing campaign to discredit the union in the eyes of employees."

* * *

Music

The Second Shed Weekend

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE TWO PROGRAMS of the weekend at Tanglewood included much music that was either new or rarely played. Charles Munch, leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night, played two works that had been written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and Richard Burgin, on the podium yesterday afternoon, chose for his program a trio of composers of whom no one is yet ensconced in the category of classics.

Each program included an instrumental soloist: Ruth Posselt playing the Hindemith violin concerto yesterday, Rudolf Serkin the piano concerto Saturday night.

* * *

BURGIN'S PROGRAM yesterday was off the beaten path. Enclosing the violin concerto, he played Prokofieff's second suite from his ballet to "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's first symphony, two composers certainly not closely related. Yet they disclosed some factors which they held in common. Appealing melodies and fascinating fragments keep appearing in the music of both men. How they join these fragments, or separate them, is their distinctive method.

Mahler draws upon his own song cycle "Songs of a Journeyman," but his long discursive ramblings and inconclusive climaxes have made him a perennially controversial composer. At one point in musical history it looked as though Mahler would be included in the vintage half-decade which produced Sibelius, Richard Strauss, Debussy et al. There are still many who believe that history has made a mistake in ignoring Mahler, or rather in not recognizing him. Burgin yesterday afternoon, by the conviction of his conducting, proved that he is one of such a group and by the success of his leadership and the esprit de corps with which his colleagues of the orchestra responded to his belief, he may well have persuaded a goodly number to his opinion.

* * *

MAHLER'S LOVELY, amorous melodies and fetching rhythmic designs are entrancing moments of music, but the mortar with which he fills the interstices is excessive and of indeterminate ingredients. It might be said of him, as Professor Carlos Baker said of Coleridge, that "he reminds us of the great chef who forgot to light the oven under his masterpiece" or "of the prestidigitator whose rabbit died before it got in the trick."

Ruth Posselt's execution of the Hindemith was a tour de force. It is not a rewarding concerto, but Miss Posselt played it with a masterful ease, clarity and a security that belied its intricacies. Her tone was warm and full and her intonation truly a marvel. In the most involved passages and the most exposed areas of the instrument it was eminently true and just without exception. She made the complexities as transparent and lucid as though it were a Viotti concerto and gave inflection and shape to every sentence and pyrotechnical roulade. It was an unsurpassed performance. The accompaniment her husband provided as conductor was of the variety to lend added confidence in what otherwise might have been a hazardous and precarious exploit.

Prokofieff recedes, or rises, into popular tunes without effort. His entrances and departures are far removed from those of Mahler, but at least they always seem to come with facility and without labor.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED half of his program Saturday night to Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" and to Honegger's fifth symphony. The other portions were Debussy's "La Mer" and the Schumann concerto.

Serkin's performance was electrifying. Saturday lacked a single day from the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. The concerto re-emerged as a work of poetry and inspired emotion. Serkin gave it transcendental vividness. Munch and the orchestra took fire from the sparks the soloist emitted to collaborate for an indelible memory.

The diametrically opposed passages of lyric beauty and brilliant animation which Schumann inserts were instantly realized. Serkin played as one possessed yet when necessary and proper, as in the slow movement, soaring solo passage for the Boston cello section which they played with such eloquence and tone, he dropped to a soft and decorative role. But it was a gigantic performance, both in point of power and of magnificence. He played like an unleashed lion yet always maintained a rigid conformity to detail and plan and the turn of every phrase was a thing of beauty in its own right. Few can ever forget this event.

* * *

Hanson and Honegger are of the same generation and their backgrounds, even though one is American and the other French, are more or less parallel. Their training was at the same fountain and the same tools serve to guage their work. Hanson writes his "Elegy" with a searching sentiment which applies to the special circumstances under which the piece was conceived. Koussevitzky had meant a great deal to him personally as he had to so many of that epoch.

Hanson's has a measurable perpendicular dimension and Honegger's symphony also permits such an appraisal, especially in the brash opening pages in which a studied cacophony makes its effect by sheer weight. In the closing work of his program, Debussy's "La Mer," Munch gave the orchestra their head and there was every nuance produced from the most wispy film to riotous outburst of color. The orchestra played with uncommon virtuosity, responding to Munch's admonitions of restraint at one moment and then releasing their full and glamorous strength as he urged them on to faster and more furious incidents. The audience of more than 9,000 could not have expressed their acclaim more vociferously and the same degree of enthusiasm prevailed yesterday among the 7,700 attendance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 30 1956

TANGLEWOOD'S SUNDAY CROWD DISAPPOINTING

Only 7739 Hear Commendable Concert by Boston Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 29—When a Sunday afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra draws as few as 7739 people, particularly when the weather is ideal, something must be wrong. It would seem that a good Sunday afternoon should bring far more people, in fact it has drawn as many as 15,000 to Tanglewood.

Should Offer Best

With a Sunday afternoon audience from the four points of the compass, and a varied musical level, it seems that every effort should be made to provide the best Tanglewood has to offer; a conductor with audience attraction and a program and soloist of proven appeal.

With all respect to the musicianship and distinguished record of Richard Burgin, his appeal is something less than popular. While a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler can be a magnificent listening experience, it is not the sort of program that

Continued On Page 10 2

Tomorrow night the opera department under Boris Goldovsky, will present a single act from four 19th Century operas. Many members of the department will be heard during the four acts. Wednesday night, Rudof Serkin will appear in the chamber music hall, playing the "Symphonic Etudes, and Carnaval" by Schumann and the Mozart "Quinten for Piano and Wood Winds."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 30 1956

More Variety Needed At Tanglewood Concerts; New Composition Well Done

A modern composition written expressly for the Boston Symphony orchestra on its 75th anniversary was played at Tanglewood in Lenox Friday as the Berkshire festival found itself in mid-season. It was Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto," done brilliantly by the orchestra in the big music shed under the direction of Charles Munch.

The Petrassi work has the acrid tonal quality of much contemporary music, which makes it hard listening for those not accustomed to it. Once this hurdle is passed, however, it has a strong appeal to the senses, building up shimmering orchestra effects that are as rich as any of those of the traditional craftsmen.

It did have a sound of the wail to it coming right after Beethoven's "Leonore Overture," which is an unusually sweet choice from the classical storehouse. This was a most elegant opening for the concert, showing the orchestra's flawless artistry. Nevertheless, one was thankful for a new piece on the program, for "Leonore" is heard fairly often.

The criticism has been made that the Tanglewood programs have fallen into a rut. There is indeed a great deal of repetition, which becomes tiresome in the case of so-called programme music. There are, after all, only so many great symphonies. There is, however, a treasury of other compositions to combine with the symphonies on concert programs that does not seem to be used. The Berkshire hills must be salty with the wash of Debussy's "La Mer" by this time.

People who attend the Tanglewood concerts regularly are entitled to more variety than they have been getting in recent years. There has been a tendency to concentrate on the chamber music concerts in the smaller hall, which are proportionately more popular now than the big shed concerts. But the fact remains that the full symphony in the big shed is the heart of the festival and what most people go to hear. It should not be wasted on condescension to what somebody may think is popular taste.

There were many empty seats in the shed last night, and while hundreds were on the lawns, there was not a large crowd there. Predictions of stormy weather may have kept some away. However, it may also be that there has been some wrong guessing about what people want to hear.

The repetition was quite acceptable, however, in the case of the backbone of the program, the symphony, which last night was Tschaikovsky's "Fourth," we don't know how many times we have heard this symphony played at Tanglewood, often enough, however, so that wherever we hear even a fragment of it the tall firs of Tanglewood loom up in the mind and there is a sharp image of a small man with rounded shoulders hurling himself into the glorious Russian music. Tanglewood, Tschaikovsky, and Koussevitzky will always stay together in memory. Last night the magnificent passionate music poured out from the great shed as clear and fresh as ever, and there was room for only joy and gratitude for the chance to hear it again.

A.B.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 30 1956

25 Boston Symphony Members to Revisit Homelands on Tour

Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris Sept. 19 and 20, and in the cathedral at Chartres Sept. 21.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteaux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteaux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

[155]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 29 1956

Berkshire Briefs

The merger of two of Berkshire County's oldest and biggest companies is expected to take place shortly. The companies are Crane & Co. and Byron Weston Co., both paper manufacturers, and both located in Dalton. Spokesmen for the two have unofficially confirmed reports that Crane & Co. has offered to buy the Weston business in its entirety and that the offer probably will be accepted by Byron Weston stockholders.

It is reported that employes of the two companies have been assured there will be no employment cutbacks if the sale takes place. Together the two firms employ about 1100 persons. Crane & Co., founded in 1801 and currently headed by Governor's Councillor Bruce Crane, makes stationary and currency paper. The Weston mills, founded in 1863, make ledger, bond and photographic papers.

* * *

Some 9000 Pittsfield GE workers will get a windfall pay boost this week in the wake of June increase in the national consumer price index. The pay raise, amounting to an average of 2 cents an hour, results from a union-company "escalator" agreement tying pay levels to the cost of living.

In addition to this raise, all GE workers will get a three per cent pay increase Sept. 15 under the terms of the five-year contract negotiated last year. Together with the cost-of-living boost, this will bring the average straight time rate for GE production workers to $2.28 an hour, an all-time high.

The "escalator" agreement provides for quarterly wage adjustments on the basis of U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics price index. Under the agreement, wages can rise without limit in line with the cost of living, but can drop no lower than the September, 1955, base if prices drop.

* * *

Heart Ailments, cancer and accidents—in that order—are now the biggest killers in Pittsfield, according to the annual report issued a few days ago by Dr. Harold M. Stein, the new city health commissioner. During 1955, there were 255 Pittsfield deaths attributed to heart and circulatory diseases, 129 from cancer, and 52 from accidents of all types.

Dr. Stein also noted that while the city's death rate rose slightly last year, the infant mortality rate dropped to 20 per 1000 population, from 30 in 1954.

* * *

Thirty-four members of the United Nations staff in New York were guests of Berkshire County residents last week end in the seventh annual "Week-end at Tanglewood," sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding, a Pittsfield organization.

The visitors, representing 19 nations, were housed with Berkshire families who volunteered to serve as hosts, and were treated to picnics and sightseeing tours between Boston Symphony concerts at the Tanglewood music festival.

* * *

General Electric Co. and Pittsfield IUE Local 255, which represents most of the plant's Berkshire employees, are at odds over the issue of union dues deductions. Local 255 Business Agent Arthur H. LaBlue has accused the company of violating the union contract by deducting union dues covering the entire month of August from July pay checks.

Company spokesmen contend that the advance deduction was made so that union dues would not have to be taken out of employees vacation pay during the August company-wide vacation. Mr. LaBlue questioned this explanation, describing the management action as "part of a growing campaign to discredit the union in the eyes of employees."

* * *

Music

The Second Shed Weekend

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE TWO PROGRAMS of the weekend at Tanglewood included much music that was either new or rarely played. Charles Munch, leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night, played two works that had been written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and Richard Burgin, on the podium yesterday afternoon, chose for his program a trio of composers of whom no one is yet ensconced in the category of classics.

Each program included an instrumental soloist: Ruth Posselt playing the Hindemith violin concerto yesterday, Rudolf Serkin the piano concerto Saturday night.

* * *

BURGIN'S PROGRAM yesterday was off the beaten path. Enclosing the violin concerto, he played Prokofieff's second suite from his ballet to "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's first symphony, two composers certainly not closely related. Yet they disclosed some factors which they held in common. Appealing melodies and fascinating fragments keep appearing in the music of both men. How they join these fragments, or separate them, is their distinctive method.

Mahler draws upon his own song cycle "Songs of a Journeyman," but his long discursive ramblings and inconclusive climaxes have made him a perennially controversial composer. At one point in musical history it looked as though Mahler would be included in the vintage half-decade which produced Sibelius, Richard Strauss, Debussy et al. There are still many who believe that history has made a mistake in ignoring Mahler, or rather in not recognizing him. Burgin yesterday afternoon, by the conviction of his conducting, proved that he is one of such a group and by the success of his leadership and the esprit de corps with which his colleagues of the orchestra responded to his belief, he may well have persuaded a goodly number to his opinion.

* * *

MAHLER'S LOVELY, amorous melodies and fetching rhythmic designs are entrancing moments of music, but the mortar with which he fills the interstices is excessive and of indeterminate ingredients. It might be said of him, as Professor Carlos Baker said of Coleridge, that "he reminds us of the great chef who forgot to light the oven under his masterpiece" or "of the prestidigitator whose rabbit died before it got in the trick."

Ruth Posselt's execution of the Hindemith was a tour de force. It is not a rewarding concerto, but Miss Posselt played it with a masterful ease, clarity and a security that belied its intricacies. Her tone was warm and full and her intonation truly a marvel. the most involved pas- the most expos- instrument and rises, ...out effort. H... ...s and departures ar... removed from those of Mahler, but at least they always seem to come with facility and without labor.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED half of his program Saturday night to Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" and to Honegger's fifth symphony. The other portions were Debussy's "La Mer" and the Schumann concerto.

Serkin's performance was electrifying. Saturday lacked a single day from the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. The concerto re-emerged as a work of poetry and inspired emotion. Serkin gave it transcendental vividness. Munch and the orchestra took fire from the sparks the soloist emitted to collaborate for an indelible memory.

The diametrically opposed passages of lyric beauty and brilliant animation which Schumann inserts were instantly realized. Serkin played as one possessed yet when necessary and proper, as in the slow movement, soaring solo passage for the Boston cello section which they played with such eloquence and tone, he dropped to a soft and decorative role. But it was a gigantic performance, both in point of power and of magnificence. He played like an unleashed lion yet always maintained a rig... formity to detail an... turn of ever... of bea...

Test Is On Lake
1. Pregnancy
2. Introvert Salt
3. Great (Calf) buoyant)
4. Dogie
5. Catfish
6.
(a) Dairy—Madison (v)
(b) Flour—St. Paul (x)
(c) Grapes—Albany (z)
(d) Corn—Des Moines (w)
(e) Peaches—Atlanta (y)

under ...s conceived. ...had meant a great ...him personally as he had ...so many of that epoch.

Hanson's has a measurable perpendicular dimension and Honegger's symphony also permits such an appraisal, especially in the brash opening pages in which a studied cacophony makes its effect by sheer weight. In the closing work of his program, Debussy's "La Mer," Munch gave the orchestra their head and there was every nuance produced from the most wispy film to riotous outburst of color. The orchestra played with uncommon virtuosity, responding to Munch's admonitions of restraint at one moment and then releasing their full and glamorous strength as he urged them on to faster and more furious incidents. The audience of more than 9,000 could not have expressed their acclaim more vociferously and the same degree of enthusiasm prevailed yesterday among the 7,700 attendance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
...ublican
...80,746

...95

Test Your Horse Sense
ANSWERS Editorial Page

Tanglewood's

Continued From Page 1

attracts the audience one gets here on a Sunday.

We heard some commendable performances this afternoon, the Prokofieff "Romeo and Juliet" ballet, second suite is an excitingly orchestrated work, replete with melodies and color. The work needs only the spark of a magnetic conductor to get a great audience reception. Applause this afternoon was more polite than vehement.

Ruth Posselt, wife of Mr. Burgin, has appeared several times at Tanglewood and she has played the Hindemith "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" here before. Her performance this afternoon was a tribute to her musicianship and technical facility. Mr. Burgin provided splendid collaboration and the result was a tightly knit, well integrated performance.

The final work on the program was the "Symphony No. 1 in D major" by Gustav Mahler. This is one of the great symphonies of all times and it was evident that Mr. Burgin had an affection for it. Less lengthy than other Mahler symphonies, its constantly changing moods, its fine melodic content and rhythmic contrast add up to an unforgetable listening experience. We found Mr. Burgin's interpretation lucid, flexible and finely detailed.

Tomorrow night the opera department under Boris Goldovsky, will present a single act from four 19th Century operas. Many members of the department will be heard during the four acts, Wednesday night. Rudof Serkin will appear in the chamber music hall, playing the "Symphonic Etudes, and Carmaval" by Schumann and the Mozart "Quinten for Piano and Wood Winds."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 30 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 30 1956

25 Boston Symphony Members to Revisit Homelands on Tour

Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris Sept. 19 and 20, and in the cathedral at Chartres Sept. 21.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteaux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteaux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

More Variety Needed At Tanglewood Concerts; New Composition Well Done

A modern composition written expressly for the Boston Symphony orchestra on its 75th anniversary was played at Tanglewood in Lenox Friday as the Berkshire festival found itself in mid-season. It was Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto," done brilliantly by the orchestra in the big music shed under the direction of Charles Munch.

The Petrassi work has the acrid tonal quality of much contemporary music, which makes it hard listening for those not accustomed to it. Once this hurdle is passed, however, it has a strong appeal to the senses, building up shimmering orchestra effects that are as rich as any of those of the traditional craftsmen.

It did have a sound of the wail to it coming right after Beethoven's "Leonore Overture," which is an unusually sweet choice from the classical storehouse. This was a most elegant opening for the concert, showing the orchestra's flawless artistry. Nevertheless, one was thankful for a new piece on the program, for "Leonore" is heard fairly often.

The criticism has been made that the Tanglewood programs have fallen into a rut. There is indeed a great deal of repetition, which becomes tiresome in the case of so-called programme music. There are, after all, only so many great symphonies. There is, however, a treasury of other compositions to combine with the symphonies on concert programs that does not seem to be used. The Berkshire hills must be salty with the wash of Debussy's "La Mer" by this time.

People who attend the Tanglewood concerts regularly are entitled to more variety than they have been getting in recent years. There has been a tendency to concentrate on the chamber music concerts in the smaller hall, which are proportionately more popular now than the big shed concerts. But the fact remains that the full symphony in the big shed is the heart of the festival and what most people go to hear. It should not be wasted on condescension to what somebody may think is popular taste.

There were many empty seats in the shed last night, and while hundreds were on the lawns, there was not a large crowd there. Predictions of stormy weather may have kept some away. However, it may also be that there has been some wrong guessing about what people want to hear.

The repetition was quite acceptable, however, in the case of the backbone of the program, the symphony, which last night was Tschaikovsky's "Fourth," we don't know how many times we have heard this symphony played at Tanglewood, often enough, however, so that wherever we hear even a fragment of it the tall firs of Tanglewood loom up in the mind and there is a sharp image of a small man with rounded shoulders hurling himself into the glorious Russian music. Tanglewood, Tschaikovsky, and Koussevitzky will always stay together in memory. Last night the magnificent passionate music poured out from the great shed as clear and fresh as ever, and there was room for only joy and gratitude for the chance to hear it again.

A.B.M.

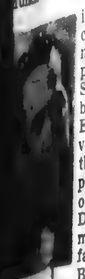
[155]

TIGHT BINDING

Berkshire Festival Closes Aug. 12

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

The Berkshire Festival, which moves into its semi-final week with a chamber music concert at Tanglewood featuring pianist Rudolf Serkin, will present its closing concert, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12. This final event will be in the Music Shed and will feature a concert version of Act III from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with baritone James Pease, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and Marguerite Willauer, soprano, as soloists. Charles Munch will be on the podium.



CARVALHO

The open-ing Shed Concert Friday night by the 105-piece Boston Symphony will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro. De Carvalho is a member of the faculty of the Boston Symphony's summer school, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Brazilian's program will include a complete orchestral performance of the ballet, "Petrouchka," by Stravinsky. His wife, pianist Joyce de Oliveira, will be making her North American debut on the same program as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Bernstein Conducts Saturday

Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium for the Saturday concert which will include two movements, the Kyrie and Gloria, from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427. Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will assist. Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5 will close the program.

Munch will return to the Bostonians for the Sunday afternoon concert when Zino Francescatti will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. Schumann's Second Symphony in C Major and Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" are also scheduled.

Pierre Monteux Aug. 11

The 81-year-old Frenchman, Pierre Monteux, will return for one more event during the current Tanglewood season, an all-orchestra concert, Saturday night, Aug. 11. Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F Major, Isidore Freed's "Festival Overture," Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9, and Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" make up the program.

Munch will conduct an all-orchestra program, Friday night, Aug. 10, featuring the Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston. Strauss' "Don Juan" and Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B Flat Major will be the other major works on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 30 1956

Music

The Second Shed Weekend

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE TWO PROGRAMS of the weekend at Tanglewood included much music that was either new or rarely played. Charles Munch, leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night, played two works that had been written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and Richard Burgin, on the podium yesterday afternoon, chose for his program a trio of composers of whom no one is yet ensconced in the category of classics.

Each program included an instrumental soloist: Ruth Posselt playing the Hindemith violin concerto yesterday, Rudolf Serkin the piano concerto Saturday night.

* * *

BURGIN'S PROGRAM yesterday was off the beaten path. Enclosing the violin concerto, he played Prokofieff's second suite from his ballet to "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's first symphony, two composers certainly not closely related. Yet they disclosed some factors which they held in common. Appealing melodies and fascinating fragments keep appearing in the music of both men. How they join these fragments, or separate them, is their distinctive method.

Mahler draws upon his own song cycle "Songs of a Journeyman," but his long discursive ramblings and inconclusive climaxes have made him a perennially controversial composer. At one point in musical history it looked as though Mahler would be included in the vintage half-decade which produced Sibelius, Richard Strauss, Debussy et al. There are still many who believe that history has made a mistake in ignoring Mahler, or rather in not recognizing him. Burgin yesterday afternoon, by the conviction of his conducting, proved that he is one of such a group and by the success of his leadership and the esprit de corps with which his colleagues of the orchestra responded to his belief, he may well have persuaded a goodly number to his opinion.

* * *

MAHLER'S LOVELY, amorous melodies and fetching rhythmic designs are entrancing moments of music, but the mortar with which he fills the interstices is excessive and of indeterminate ingredients. It might be said of him, as Professor Carlos Baker said of Coleridge, that "he reminds us of the great chef who forgot to light the oven under his masterpiece" or "of the prestidigitator whose rabbit died before it got in the trick."

Ruth Posselt's execution of the Hindemith was a tour de force. It is not a rewarding concerto, but Miss Posselt played it with a masterful ease, clarity and a security that belied its intricacies. Her tone was warm and full and her intonation truly a marvel. In the most involved passages and the most exposed areas of the instrument it was eminently true and just without exception. She made the complexities as transparent and lucid as though it were a Viotti concerto and gave inflection and shape to every sentence and pyrotechnical roulade. It was an unsurpassed performance. The accompaniment her husband provided as conductor was of the variety to lend added confidence in what otherwise might have been a hazardous and precarious exploit.

Prokofieff recedes, or rises, into popular tunes without effort. His entrances and departures are far removed from those of Mahler, but at least they always seem to come with facility and without labor.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED half of his program Saturday night to Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" and to Honegger's fifth symphony. The other portions were Debussy's "La Mer" and the Schumann concerto.

Serkin's performance was electrifying. Saturday lacked a single day from the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. The concerto re-emerged as a work of poetry and inspired emotion. Serkin gave it transcendental vividness. Munch and the orchestra took fire from the sparks the soloist emitted to collaborate for an indelible memory.

The diametrically opposed passages of lyric beauty and brilliant animation which Schumann inserts were instantly realized. Serkin played as one possessed yet when necessary and proper, as in the slow movement, soaring solo passage for the Boston cello section which they played with such eloquence and tone, he dropped to a soft and decorative role. But it was a gigantic performance, both in point of power and of magnificence. He played like an unleashed lion yet always maintained a rigid conformity to detail and plan and the turn of every phrase was a thing of beauty in its own right. Few can ever forget this event.

* * *

Hanson and Honegger are of the same generation and their backgrounds, even though one is American and the other French, are more or less parallel. Their training was at the same fountain and the same tools serve to guage their work. Hanson writes his "Elegy" with a searching sentiment which applies to the special circumstances under which the piece was conceived. Koussevitzky had meant a great deal to him personally as he had to so many of that epoch.

Hanson's has a measurable perpendicular dimension and Honegger's symphony also permits such an appraisal, especially in the brash opening pages in which a studied cacophony makes its effect by sheer weight. In the closing work of his program, Debussy's "La Mer," Munch gave the orchestra their head and there was every nuance produced from the most wispy film to riotous outburst of color. The orchestra played with uncommon virtuosity, responding to Munch's admonitions of restraint at one moment and then releasing their full and glamorous strength as he urged them on to faster and more furious incidents. The audience of more than 9,000 could not have expressed their acclaim more voeiferously and the same degree of enthusiasm prevailed yesterday among 7,700 attendance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 30 1956

Boston Symphony Orchestra Readies Tour of Europe

Lenox, July 29 -- Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris Sept. 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres Sept. 21.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Ground-Breaking Ceremony For New Novitiate Tomorrow

Hugh Ross To Direct Festival Chorus At Shadowbrook Exercises in the Shed— Archbishop Cushing Principal Speaker

LENOX — Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will direct the Festival chorus at the Music Shed tomorrow to open the ceremonies for the ground-breaking ceremonies of Shadowbrook, the Jesuit Novitiate which will be constructed near the site of the novitiate which burned to the ground March 10 with a loss of four lives.

Through arrangements with Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Music Center, Mr. Ross offered to present the Festival chorus for the ceremony which is expected to draw more than 2,000 persons.

Organ Prelude at 1

Miss Florence Dunn of the Berkshire Music Center staff will be the organist and play the prelude before the ceremonies between 1 and 1:30. The Festival chorus will sing the "Kyrie" and "Credo" from Bruckner's Mass in E minor.

Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston will deliver the principal address in the Shed. Seven Catholic bishops as well as clergymen from all parts of New England will be in attendance. Appearing with Archbishop Cushing will be Bishops Christopher J. Weldon of Springfield, Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, John J. Wright of Worcester, Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich, Auxiliary Bishops Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston and John F. Hackett of Hartford.

Following the formal ceremonies in the Shed, which has been offered to the Jesuits for the occasion by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the scene will shift to the novitiate site off West Street overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, when the soil will be turned by each of the seven bishops Bishop Weldon will be the first to break ground.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitz-Gerald, S.J., New England Provincial, will speak at the ground-breaking ceremony.

A report of the Shadowbrook Fund drive will be made by Joseph E. Sullivan of Boston, national chairman and the area chairmen will be introduced by the Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., executive chairman of the fund.

[156]

NEW YORK POST.
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,613
JUL 30 1956

Music Festival Attracts Many To Tanglewood

Over 7,000 people motored to Tanglewood Saturday to hear The Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting perform the 15th program in the current season. Rudolf Serkin, who has appeared several times in Woolsey Hall, returned to the Music Shed in Lenox to play the Piano Concerto in A Minor By Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856.

It was a magnificent concert, a most thrilling experience after the motor trip from New Haven through the rolling Connecticut country side. Munch appeared on the podium promptly at 8:30 and raised his baton for the stirring Hanson Elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and played Saturday for the first time at Tanglewood although it was played last year on the orchestra's tour.

Serkin Performs

Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer, gave a brilliant performance in this wonderful bravura work. A technician at heart, he did not sacrifice technicalities to color in Saturday's performance, and both the lovely andantino and the sparkling final movement were executed with a masterly touch. The beautiful melody which swings from the soloist to the orchestra with such garce, was never more fully interpreted than it was by the Symphony and Serkin on Saturday evening. With the orchestra giving impeccable support under the meticulous baton of the great Munch, the audience arose as one when the concerto was over and enthusiastically applauded all the artists.

The ornamental Symphony No. 5 by Artur Honegger, who died last year, was the opening number following intermission. Munch, with discerning regard for the interesting counterpoint development, gave a most colorful reading of this strangely fascinating work, a commission of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation.

Deburry Work

The exquisite tonal sketches, "La Mer" by Debussy concluded the concert. From the tumultuous dissonance of the Honegger work, the orchestra turned to the placid melodies and full harmonies of Debussy's pictures of the sea. Through the three sketches one could readily visualize the different moods of the sea, now calm, now with a brisk wind whipping up the waves; the turmoil of the sea during a storm and the return again to calm and peace as the work ends.

The Boston Symphony, a special delight to New Haveners, is heard twice each year at Woolsey Hall and it is an interesting experience to see this big organization at work in its summer headquarters in the Berkshires. Many area people journey to Tanglewood each weekend to hear the orchestra and to enjoy watching Charles Munch conduct. After a delightful trip by car of not more than two and a half hours, it is a most rewarding experience. This season's concerts are well on towards the closing programs and already Tanglewood on Parade has been announced for August 9 when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops comes to Tanglewood to share the gala concert program that evening. Other events from 6 to 11 p.m. that day include chamber concerts, opera in the concert hall and a lawn party. Eleazar deCarvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony that night. F.R.J.

TIGHT BINDING

Berkshire Festival Closes Aug. 12

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

The Berkshire Festival, which moves into its semi-final week Wednesday with a chamber music concert at Tanglewood featuring pianist Rudolf Serkin, will present its closing concert, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12. This final event will be in the Music Shed and will feature a concert version of Act III from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with baritone Thomas Hayward, Alice De Costa, soprano, and Marguerite Willauer, contralto, as soloists. Charles Munch will be on the podium.

CARVALHO

The opening Shed Concert Friday night by the 105-piece Boston Symphony will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro. De Carvalho is a member of the faculty of the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Brazilian's program will include a complete orchestral performance of the ballet, "Petrouchka," by Stravinsky. His wife, pianist Joyce de Oliveira, will be making her North American debut on the same program as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Bernstein Conducts Saturday

Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium for the Saturday concert which will include two movements, the Kyrie and Gloria, from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427. Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will assist.

Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5 will close the program.

Munch will return to the Bostonians for the Sunday afternoon concert when Zino Francescatti will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. Schumann's Second Symphony in C Major and Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" are also scheduled.

Pierre Monteux Aug. 11

The 81-year-old Frenchman, Pierre Monteux, will return for one more event during the current Tanglewood season, an all-orchestra concert, Saturday night, Aug. 11. Brahms' Symphony No 3 in F Major, Isidore Freed's "Festival Overture," Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9, and Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" make up the program.

Munch will conduct an all-orchestra program, Friday night, Aug. 10, featuring the Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston. Strauss' "Don Juan" and Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B Flat Major will be the other major works on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 30 1956

Music

The Second Shed Weekend

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE TWO PROGRAMS of the weekend at Tanglewood included much music that was either new or rarely played. Charles Munch, leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night, played two works that had been written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and Richard Burgin, on the podium yesterday afternoon, chose for his program a trio of composers of whom no one is yet ensconced in the category of classics.

Each program included an instrumental soloist: Ruth Posselt playing the Hindemith violin concerto yesterday, Rudolf Serkin the piano concerto Saturday night.

* * *

BURGIN'S PROGRAM yesterday was off the beaten path. Enclosing the violin concerto, he played Prokofieff's second suite from his ballet to "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's first symphony, two composers certainly not closely related. Yet they disclosed some factors which they held in common. Appealing melodies and fascinating fragments keep appearing in the music of both men. How they join these fragments, or separate them, is their distinctive method.

Mahler draws upon his own song cycle "Songs of a Journeyman," but his long discursive ramblings and inconclusive climaxes have made him a perennially controversial composer. At one point in musical history it looked as though Mahler would be included in the vintage half-decade which produced Sibelius, Richard Strauss, Debussy et al. There are still many who believe that history has made a mistake in ignoring Mahler, or rather in not recognizing him. Burgin yesterday afternoon, by the conviction of his conducting, proved that he is one of such a group and by the success of his leadership and the esprit de corps with which his colleagues of the orchestra responded to his belief, he may well have persuaded a goodly number to his opinion.

* * *

MAHLER'S LOVELY, amorous melodies and fetching rhythmic designs are entrancing moments of music, but the mortar with which he fills the interstices is excessive and of indeterminate ingredients. It might be said of him, as Professor Carlos Baker said of Coleridge, that "he reminds us of the great chef who forgot to light the oven under his masterpiece" or "of the prestidigitator whose rabbit died before it got in the trick."

Ruth Posselt's execution of the Hindemith was a tour de force. It is not a rewarding concerto, but Miss Posselt played it with a masterful ease, clarity and a security that belied its intricacies. Her tone was warm and full and her intonation truly a marvel. In the most involved passages and the most exposed areas of the instrument it was eminently true and just without exception. She made the complexities as transparent and lucid as though it were a Viotti concerto and gave inflection and shape to every sentence and pyrotechnical roulade. It was an unsurpassed performance. The accompaniment her husband provided as conductor was of the variety to lend added confidence in what otherwise might have been a hazardous and precarious exploit.

Prokofieff recedes, or rises, into popular tunes without effort. His entrances and departures are far removed from those of Mahler, but at least they always seem to come with facility and without labor.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED half of his program Saturday night to Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" and to Honegger's fifth symphony. The other portions were Debussy's "La Mer" and the Schumann concerto.

Serkin's performance was electrifying. Saturday lacked a single day from the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. The concerto re-emerged as a work of poetry and inspired emotion. Serkin gave it transcendental vividness. Munch and the orchestra took fire from the sparks the soloist emitted to collaborate for an indelible memory.

The diametrically opposed passages of lyric beauty and brilliant animation which Schumann inserts were instantly realized. Serkin played as one possessed yet when necessary and proper, as in the slow movement, soaring solo passage for the Boston cello section which they played with such eloquence and tone, he dropped to a soft and decorative role. But it was a gigantic performance, both in point of power and of magnificence. He played like an unleashed lion yet always maintained a rigid conformity to detail and plan and the turn of every phrase was a thing of beauty in its own right. Few can ever forget this event.

* * *

Hanson and Honegger are of the same generation and their backgrounds, even though one is American and the other French, are more or less parallel. Their training was at the same fountain and the same tools serve to guage their work. Hanson writes his "Elegy" with a searching sentiment which applies to the special circumstances under which the piece was conceived. Koussevitzky had meant a great deal to him personally as he had to so many of that epoch.

Hanson's has a measurable perpendicular dimension and Honegger's symphony also permits such an appraisal, especially in the brash opening pages in which a studied cacophony makes its effect by sheer weight. In the closing work of his program, Debussy's "La Mer," Munch gave the orchestra their head and there was every nuance produced from the most wispy film to riotous outburst of color. The orchestra played with uncommon virtuosity, responding to Munch's admonitions of restraint at one moment and then releasing their full and glamorous strength as he urged them on to faster and more furious incidents. The audience of more than 9,000 could not have expressed their acclaim more vociferously and the same degree of enthusiasm prevailed yesterday among the 7,700 attendance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 30 1956

Boston Symphony Orchestra Readies Tour of Europe

Lenox, July 29 — Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris Sept. 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres Sept. 21.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born. Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Ground-Breaking Ceremony For New Novitiate Tomorrow

Hugh Ross To Direct Festival Chorus At Shadowbrook Exercises in the Shed— Archbishop Cushing Principal Speaker

LENOX — Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will direct the Festival chorus at the Music Shed tomorrow to open the ceremonies for the ground-breaking ceremonies of Shadowbrook, the Jesuit Novitiate which will be constructed near the site of the novitiate which burned to the ground March 10 with a loss of four lives.

Through arrangements with Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Music Center, Mr. Ross offered to present the Festival chorus for the ceremony which is expected to draw more than 2,000 persons.

Organ Prelude at 1

Miss Florence Dunn of the Berkshire Music Center staff will be the organist and play the prelude before the ceremonies between 1 and 1:30. The Festival chorus will sing the "Kyrie" and "Credo" from Bruckner's Mass in E minor.

Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston will deliver the principal address in the Shed. Seven Catholic bishops as well as clergymen from all parts of New England will be in attendance. Appearing with Archbishop Cushing will be Bishops Christopher J. Weldon of Springfield, Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, John J. Wright of Worcester, Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich, Auxiliary Bishops Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston and John F. Hackett of Hartford.

Following the formal ceremonies in the Shed, which has been offered to the Jesuits for the occasion by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the scene will shift to the novitiate site off West Street overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, when the soil will be turned by each of the seven bishops Bishop Weldon will be the first to break ground.

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., New England Provincial, will speak at the ground-breaking ceremony.

A report of the Shadowbrook Fund drive will be made by Joseph E. Sullivan of Boston, national chairman and the area chairmen will be introduced by the Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., executive chairman of the fund.

[156]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,613
JUL 30 1956

Music Festival Attracts Many To Tanglewood

Over 7,000 people motored to Tanglewood Saturday to hear The Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, perform the 15th program in the current season. Rudolf Serkin, who has appeared several times in Woolsey Hall, returned to the Music Shed in Lenox to play the Piano Concerto in A Minor By Schumann in commemoratio of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856.

It was a magnificent concert, a most thrilling experience after the motor trip from New Haven through the rolling Connecticut country side. Munch appeared on the podium promptly at 8:30 and raised his baton for the stirring Hanson Elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and played Saturday for the first time at Tanglewood although it was played last year on the orchestra's tour.

Serkin Performs

Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer, gave a brilliant performance in this wonderful bravura work. A technician at heart, he did not sacrifice technicalities to color in Saturday's performance, and both the lovely andantino and the sparkling final movement were executed with a masterly touch. The beautiful melody which swings from the soloist to the orchestra with such garce, was never more fully interpreted than it was by the Symphony and Serkin on Saturday evening. With the orchestra giving impeccable support under the meticulous baton of the great Munch, the audience arose as one when the concerto was over and enthusiastically applauded all the artists.

The ornamental Symphony No. 5 by Artur Honegger, who died last year, was the opening number following intermission. Munch, with discerning regard for the interesting counterpoint development, gave a most colorful reading of this strangely fascinating work, a commission of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation.

Deburry Work

The exquisite tonal sketches, "La Mer" by Debussy concluded the concert. From the tumultuous dissonance of the Honegger work, the orchestra turned to the placid melodies and full harmonies of Debussy's pictures of the sea. Through the three sketches one could readily visualize the different moods of the sea, now calm, now with a brisk wind whipping up the waves; the turmoil of the sea during a storm and the return again to calm and peace as the work ends.

The Boston Symphony, a special delight to New Haveners, is heard twice each year at Woolsey Hall and it is an interesting experience to see this big organization at work in its summer headquarters in the Berkshires. Many area people journey to Tanglewood each weekend to hear the orchestra and to enjoy watching Charles Munch conduct. After a delightful trip by car of not more than two and a half hours, it is a most rewarding experience. This season's concerts are well on towards the closing programs and already Tanglewood on Parade has been announced for August 9 when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops comes to Tanglewood to share the gala concert program that evening. Other events from 6 to 11 p.m. that day include chamber concerts, opera in the concert hall and a lawn party. Eleazar deCarvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony that night. F.R.J.

NEW YORK POST.
29

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 30 1956

Concerts at Tanglewood

Ruth Posselt And Serkin As Soloists

By Klaus George Roy
Lenox, Mass.

The welcomed burst of gloriously fair and cool weather that enveloped the Berkshires over the weekend helped to produce an attendance at Tanglewood of 23,810—Friday evening, 6,256; Saturday evening, 9,821, and Sunday afternoon, 7,733. This is, however, nowhere near as large a figure as has been known here.

Each program contained one contemporary work of caliber, and the music making remained on a superlative level. One would be hard pressed to select a high point—which is perhaps as it should be.

Friday's program, directed by Charles Munch, opened with the Second "Leonore" Overture of Beethoven and closed with the Fourth Symphony of Tchaikovsky, both inspired readings. Dr. Munch seems at this point to have attained a degree of control and physical stamina which excels anything he has thus far given. Between the two "classic" pieces came the first Tanglewood performance of Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, first played in Boston last December.

♪ ♪ ♪

For this listener it happened to be a first hearing, and he found the piece interesting in the best sense of the word. Eclectic in style, the work absorbs one's attention for most of the way by its superbly skillful play of sonorities, and its apparent attempt to blend the 12-tone method with a tonal and easily accessible idiom of coloristic and rhythmic variety. The composer, who is teaching at the Berkshire Music Center this season at Dr. Munch's invitation, was cordially applauded.

On Saturday night Dr. Munch began with Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky," Op. 44. It is a short piece that strikes one as a bit overrich in texture and lacking in personal message, though well-made and kind to the ear.

Rudolf Serkin scored an overwhelming success with the Schumann Piano Concerto, in which he displayed his irresistible spontaneity and fire. Under his flying hands and lunging body the concerto became a living and compelling creation; the dropping of notes and considerable overpedaling were entirely irrelevant matters in the light of the musical experience he and Dr. Munch provided—a collaboration evidently enjoyed by both.

Honegger's Fifth Symphony proved itself, as several times before in Boston, as a significant symphonic statement, and it made a deep impression. Dr. Munch conducted this powerful work, dear to him musically and personally, with an impassioned intensity; revealingly for his absorption with this music, he used no score. That Debussy's "La Mer" stood up so well after the Honegger symphony was a tribute to its own lasting merits as well as to the magnificent security and skill of the orchestra.

♪ ♪ ♪

Richard Burgin took over the podium on Sunday afternoon to lead a program of music with which he has long been associated. He began with the romantic and affecting pages of Prokofiev's Second Suite from the "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet Music (1935–36), or rather four of its seven sections.

To make up, at least in part, for the curious ignoring of Paul Hindemith's sixtieth anniversary during the last season, he then conducted the German composer's Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt as soloist. He himself had played the American première in 1940.

Miss Posselt is one of the few artists in this country to have championed this concerto; she has done it even with the Harvard-Radcliffe Orchestra under Russell Stanger. RCA Victor should modify its conservative repertoire policy sufficiently to have her record this important work with Mr. Burgin and the orchestra; it would be a "first."

The music is for the most part straightforward and clear in structure, with many singing lines of beauty and charm. The artist played with penetrating intelligence as always, and a tone that was thoroughly secure if rarely sweet.

The concert and the fourth weekend series closed with a splendid traversal of Gustav Mahler's youthful and wonderfully lyrical First Symphony, which Mr. Burgin leads easily as well as do Walter and Mitropoulos, if not better. Mahler, long misunderstood and neglected in this country, would have been happy to see his prediction "My day will yet come" fulfilled here, had he seen and heard the listeners strolling through the gorgeous Tanglewood grounds after the concert cheerfully humming many a melody from his song-symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
JUL 30 1956

at the Glendale Park playground

Sec'y of State Edward J. Cronin was a guest over the weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and also attended a clambake sponsored by the Swansea Town Democratic committee at Rehoboth.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 30 1956

Business Singles Go To Tanglewood

Twelve members of the Business Singles club of the Second Congregational church went to the public rehearsal at Tanglewood Saturday and then had a picnic and swim at Bear Mt. State park as one in their series of summer activities.

Going by car, the group took in the 10 a.m. rehearsal which featured the Boston Symphony orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch with Rudolph Serkin at the piano.

On Aug. 25-26 the club plans an outing at Craigville on Cape Cod. On July 14-15, members went to Quonnochetaug, R. I., for an outing and took in a Beatrice Lillie show.

On Saturday's trip were: Ernestine Simpson, Paul Wing, Margaret Wilson, Arnold McKissick, Sally Boyden, Howard Egar, Isabelle Ahnert, Roland Bergeron, Hames Campbell, Ruth Schorr, Mildred Schmidt and Joan Mende.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 30 1956

ed this afternoon, and to his choice of music.

The soloist was Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Burgin. She played the Hindemith Violin Concerto, the Hindemith was preceded by selections from Prokofieff's Second "Romeo and Juliet" Suite and the finale was the First Symphony of Gustav Mahler.

All three works are well calculated to display a virtuoso orchestra. Mahler, most of all of the three composers, relishes his own beautiful sonorities almost as a gourmet savors fine food. The audience relished them, too.

•

But Mr. Burgin made it clear that the symphony is more than fine sonorities. He gave the little funeral march of the third movement, for example, just the right mixture of tenderness and humor. The questioning nursery tune, "Brother Jacques, Sleepest Thou?," had the touch of mysticism appropriate for Mahler. And the finale, despite its theatrical, Lisztian apotheosis, had irresistible splendor. Miss Posselt gave an elegant performance of the Hindemith Concerto, letting her violin sing the graceful line of the slow movement, and letting the rhythms dance in the finale.

Last night, Charles Munch and the orchestra paid homage to Robert Schumann with Rudolf Serkin as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto. Although the superb artistry of Mr. Serkin was necessarily in the foreground here, Mr. Munch was more than a supple and sympathetic collaborator. He was a dynamic partner.

Mr. Serkin played with his usual intensity, as if each single note were a matter of artistic life or death. Yet he never lost the broad line of the music or the tender curve of an intimate phrase. The audience responded with long applause and cheers.

•

Mr. Munch opened last night's concert with Howard Hanson's Elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, composed for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Boston Symphony. He closed with his well-known interpretation of Debussy's "La Mer."

Less familiar was the last big orchestral work of Honegger, the composer's Fifth symphony, written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and first introduced by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony in 1951.

It is a big work in a spiritual as well as physical sense, one that grows rather than diminishes with familiarity. Mr. Munch and his men gave a powerfully stirring performance. Here again the sheer sonority of the orchestra was something to wonder at.

Miracle at Lenox

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 29—It seems almost a miracle that any orchestra in the open air can have such a golden resonance as the Boston Symphony displayed this afternoon at the Berkshire Festival.

Part of the explanation is, of course, that the Music Shed at Tanglewood is not entirely an open-air auditorium. It combines its seductive view of forest and lawn with a roof and acoustics superior to many an enclosed concert hall.

But most of the credit must go to the orchestra itself; to Richard Burgin, who conduct-

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811
JUL 30 1956

Music Festival To Conclude Next Week

Four concerts next week—a recital on Wednesday night (Aug. 8) by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday night (Aug. 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Additionally, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjection with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will take place Thursday (Aug. 9).

A night concert also will take place conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops, led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
JUL 30 1956

s in the city.

Tanglew'd Music Program Exciting

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood during the weekend of Aug. 3, 4 and 5.

Each year thousands of music lovers gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Friday's performance will find the orchestra presenting Barraud's "La Kermesse," deFalla's "The Three Cornered Hat," Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka," Saturday's performance includes the works of Moer's, Mozart and Prokofieff.

Sunday's performance, which marks the conclusion of the second last week of the Festival, will have music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main routes from this area are Routes 2, 9 and 20, which connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281
JUL 28 1956

meeting.

BERKSHIRE CONCERTS

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its sem-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday enings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music ed, and will be led by Eleazar Carvalho, director of the Bra- Symphony Orchestra of Rio Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard ernstein (Aug. 4); by the oston Symphony Orchestra's usic Director Charles Munch Aug. 5).

[157]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc. N
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 30 1956

Concerts at Tanglewood—

Ruth Posselt And Serkin As Soloists

By Klaus George Roy
Lenox, Mass.

The welcomed burst of gloriously fair and cool weather that enveloped the Berkshires over the weekend helped to produce an attendance at Tanglewood of 23,810—Friday evening, 6,256; Saturday evening, 9,821, and Sunday afternoon, 7,733. This is, however, nowhere near as large a figure as has been known here.

Each program contained one contemporary work of caliber, and the music making remained on a superlative level. One would be hard pressed to select a high point—which is perhaps as it should be.

Friday's program, directed by Charles Munch, opened with the Second "Leonore" Overture of Beethoven and closed with the Fourth Symphony of Tchaikovsky, both inspired readings. Dr. Munch seems at this point to have attained a degree of control and physical stamina which excels anything he has thus far given. Between the two "classic" pieces came the first Tanglewood performance of Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, first played in Boston last December.

* * *

For this listener it happened to be a first hearing, and he found the piece interesting in the best sense of the word. Eclectic in style, the work absorbs one's attention for most of the way by its superbly skillful play of sonorities, and its apparent attempt to blend the 12-tone method with a tonal and easily accessible idiom of coloristic and rhythmic variety. The composer, who is teaching at the Berkshire Music Center this season at Dr. Munch's invitation, was cordially applauded.

On Saturday night Dr. Munch began with Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky," Op. 44. It is a short piece that strikes one as a bit overrich in texture and lacking in personal message, though well-made and kind to the ear.

Rudolf Serkin scored an overwhelming success with the Schumann Piano Concerto, in which he displayed his irresistible spontaneity and fire. Under his flying hands and lunging body the concerto became a living and compelling creation; the dropping of notes and considerable overpedaling were entirely irrelevant matters in the light of the musical experience he and Dr. Munch provided—a collaboration evidently enjoyed by both.

Honegger's Fifth Symphony proved itself, as several times before in Boston, as a significant symphonic statement, and it made a deep impression. Dr. Munch conducted this powerful work, dear to him musically and personally, with an impassioned intensity; revealingly for his absorption with this music, he used no score. That Debussy's "La Mer" stood up so well after the Honegger symphony was a tribute to its own lasting merits as well as to the magnificent security and skill of the orchestra.

* * *

Richard Burgin took over the podium on Sunday afternoon to lead a program of music with which he has long been associated. He began with the romantic and affecting pages of Prokofiev's Second Suite from the "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet Music (1935-36), or rather four of its seven sections.

To make up, at least in part for the curious ignoring of Paul Hindemith's sixtieth anniversary during the last season, he then conducted the German composer's Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt as soloist. He himself had played the American première in 1940.

Miss Posselt is one of the few artists in this country to have championed this concerto; she has done it even with the Harvard-Radcliffe Orchestra under Russell Stanger. RCA Victor should modify its conservative repertoire policy sufficiently to have her record this important work with Mr. Burgin and the orchestra; it would be a "first."

The music is for the most part straightforward and clear in structure, with many singing lines of beauty and charm. The artist played with penetrating intelligence as always, and a tone that was thoroughly secure if rarely sweet.

The concert and the fourth weekend series closed with a splendid traversal of Gustav Mahler's youthful and wonderfully lyrical First Symphony, which Mr. Burgin leads easily as well as do Walter and Mitropoulos, if not better. Mahler, long misunderstood and neglected in this country, would have been happy to see his prediction "My day will yet come" fulfilled here, had he seen and heard the listeners strolling through the gorgeous Tanglewood grounds after the concert cheerfully humming many a melody from his song-symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
JUL 30 1956

at the Glendale Park playground

Sec'y of State Edward J Cronin was a guest over the weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and also attended a clambake sponsored by the Swansea Town Democratic committee at Rehoboth.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 30 1956

Business Singles Go To Tanglewood

Twelve members of the Business Singles club of the Second Congregational church went to the public rehearsal at Tanglewood Saturday and then had a picnic and swim at Bear Mt. State park as one in their series of summer activities.

Going by car, the group took in the 10 a.m. rehearsal which featured the Boston Symphony orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch with Rudolph Serkin at the piano.

On Aug. 25-26 the club plans an outing at Craigville on Cape Cod. On July 14-15, members went to Quonnochetaug, R. I., for an outing and took in a Beatrice Lillie show.

On Saturday's trip were: Ernestine Simpson, Paul Wing, Margaret Wilson, Arnold McKissick, Sally Boyden, Howard Egar, Isabelle Ahnert, Roland Bergeron, Hames Campbell, Ruth Schorr, Mildred Schmidt and Joan Mende.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 30 1956

ed this afternoon, and to his choice of music.

The soloist was Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Burgin. She played the Hindemith Violin Concerto, the Hindemith was preceded by selections from Prokofieff's Second "Romeo and Juliet" Suite and the finale was the First Symphony of Gustav Mahler.

All three works are well calculated to display a virtuoso orchestra. Mahler, most of all of the three composers, relishes his own beautiful sonorities almost as a gourmet savors fine food. The audience relished them, too.

*

But Mr. Burgin made it clear that the symphony is more than fine sonorities. He gave the little funeral march of the third movement, for example, just the right mixture of tenderness and humor. The questioning nursery tune, "Brother Jacques, Sleepest Thou?," had the touch of mysticism appropriate for Mahler. And the finale, despite its theatrical, Lisztian apotheosis, had irresistible splendor. Miss Posselt gave an elegant performance of the Hindemith Concerto, letting her violin sing the graceful line of the slow movement, and letting the rhythms dance in the finale.

Last night, Charles Munch and the orchestra paid homage to Robert Schumann with Rudolf Serkin as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto. Although the superb artistry of Mr. Serkin was necessarily in the foreground here, Mr. Munch was more than a supple and sympathetic collaborator. He was a dynamic partner.

Mr. Serkin played with his usual intensity, as if each single note were a matter of artistic life or death. Yet he never lost the broad line of the music, or the tender curve of an intimate phrase. The audience responded with long applause and cheers.

*

Mr. Munch opened last night's concert with Howard Hanson's Elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, composed for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Boston Symphony. He closed with his well-known interpretation of Debussy's "La Mer."

Less familiar was the last big orchestral work of Honegger, the composer's Fifth symphony, written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and first introduced by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony in 1951.

It is a big work in a spiritual as well as physical sense, one that grows rather than diminishes with familiarity. Mr. Munch and his men gave a powerfully stirring performance. Here again the sheer sonority of the orchestra was something to wonder at.

Miracle at Lenox

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 29—It seems almost a miracle that any orchestra in the open air can have such a golden resonance as the Boston Symphony displayed this afternoon at the Berkshire Festival.

Part of the explanation is, of course, that the Music Shed at Tanglewood is not entirely an open-air auditorium. It combines its seductive view of forest and lawn with a roof and acoustics superior to many an enclosed concert hall.

But most of the credit must go to the orchestra itself; to Richard Burgin, who conduct-

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
JUL 30 1956

s in the city.

Tanglew'd Music Program Exciting

An "enchanting weekend" is awiating all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood during the weekend of Aug. 3, 4 and 5.

Each year thousands of music lovers gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Friday's performance will find the orchestra presenting Barraud's "La Kermesse," deFalla's "The Three Cornered Hat," Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka," Saturday's performance includes the works of Moev's, Mozart and Prokofieff.

Sunday's performance, which marks the conclusion of the second last week of the Festival, will have music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main routes from this area are Routes 2, 9 and 20, which connect with Route 7.

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811
JUL 30 1956

Music Festival To Conclude Next Week

Four concerts next week—a recital on Wednesday night (Aug. 8) by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday night (Aug. 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Additionally, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjection with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will take place Thursday (Aug. 9).

A night concert also will take place conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops, led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281
JUL 28 1956

meeting.

BERKSHIRE CONCERTS

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its sem-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, Aug. 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazilian Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

Basil Rowe

[157]

NEW HAVEN JOURNAL-COURIER, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Music Festival Attracts Many To Tanglewood

Over 7,000 people motored to Tanglewood Saturday to hear The Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, perform the 15th program in the current season. Rudolf Serkin, who has appeared several times in Woolsey Hall, returned to the Music Shed in Lenox to play the Piano Concerto in A Minor By Schumann in commemoratio of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856.

It was a magnificent concert, a most thrilling experience after the motor trip from New Haven through the rolling Connecticut country side. Munch appeared on the podium promptly at 8:30 and raised his baton for the stirring Hanson Elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and played Saturday for the first time at Tanglewood although it was played last year on the orchestra's tour.

Serkin Performs

Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer, gave a brilliant performance in this wonderful bravura work. A technician at heart, he did not sacrifice technicalities to color in Saturday's performance, and both the lovely andantino and the sparkling final movement were executed with a masterly touch. The beautiful melody which swings from the soloist to the orchestra with such garce, was never more fully interpreted than it was by the Symphony and Serkin on Saturday evening. With the orchestra giving impeccable support under the meticulous baton of the great Munch, the audience arose as one when the concerto was over and enthusiastically applauded all the artists.

The ornamental Symphony No. 5 by Artur Honegger, who died last year, was the opening number following intermission. Munch., with discerning regard for the interesting counterpoint development, gave a most colorful reading of this strangely fascinating work, a commission of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation.

Deburry Work

The exquisite tonal sketches, "La Mer" by Debussy concluded the concert. From the tumultuous dissonance of the Honegger work, the orchestra turned to the placid melodies and full harmonies of Debussy's pictures of the sea. Through the three sketches one could readily visualize the different moods of the sea, now calm, now with a brisk wind whipping up the waves; the turmoil of the sea during a storm and the return again to calm and peace as the work ends.

The Boston Symphony, a special delight to New Haveners, is heard twice each year at Woolsey Hall and it is an interesting experience to see this big organization at work in its summer headquarters in the Berkshires. Many area people journey to Tanglewood each weekend to hear the orchestra and to enjoy watching Charles Munch conduct. After a delightful trip by car of not more than two and a half hours, it is a most rewarding experience. This season's concerts are well on towards the closing programs and already Tanglewood on Parade has been announced for August 9 when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops comes to Tanglewood to share the gala concert program that evening. Other events from 6 to 11 p.m. that day include chamber concerts, opera in the concert hall and a lawn party. Eleazar deCarvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony that night. F.R.J.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Boston Symphony Rated Excellent at Tanglewood

By D. E. RITZ

The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented an intensely interesting program Saturday night in the huge Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the baton of Charles Munch.

* * *

WITH RUDOLF SERKIN as soloist the feature was the Schumann "Pianoforte Concerto in A minor, opus 54" with its intensities. Then there was the magnificent Honegger "Symphony number 5," Debussy's "La Mer" and a Tanglewood premiere of Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky."

The Hanson number opened the program and was given a fine performance. It specializes in string tone and a poignant interlude for wind but its modernity is a bit too forced.

* * *

THE HONEGGER Symphony with its extremes of harshness yet has a reality and an expert workmanship that made it the finest music of the evening.

The Schumann concerto under the combined interpretation of the artists Serkin and Munch became a vivid revelation of the great music. Completed in 1845, the concerto had its first performance on Dec. 4 of that year at Dresden with Clara Schumann as soloist and Ferdinand Hiller as conductor.

On Saturday evening its themes sparkled and sang under Serkin's magic tone. The piano cadenza, provided by the composer, is majestic—for that matter so is the entire work.

* * *

FOLLOWING THE CLOSE of the concerto Mr. Serkin, Dr. Munch and the orchestra received a stupendous ovation.

Also received with unusual enthusiasm, even for Tanglewood, was the Honegger Symphony.

Revealing too was the interpretation of "La Mer" which Dr. Munch gives in a far more virile style than that of most conductors.

* * *

THE BOSTON Symphony with its present almost all-year performances is becoming ever more fluent and we personally doubt if any orchestra elsewhere can achieve the same fine nuance, the full fortes or the amazing tempos.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 30 1956

17,560 Persons At Tanglewood Over Weekend

A record number of 9821 persons for this season at Tanglewood were drawn to Saturday night's concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra, while a disappointing audience of 7739 attended the Sunday afternoon concert although the weather was good.

Rudolf Serkin, pianist, was the drawing card for the Saturday evening performance with Charles Munch conducting. While Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, directed the Sunday afternoon concert.

Brilliant playing by Serkin was heard in the Schumann "Concerto in A Minor for Piano and Orchestra." He delivered an exactness and crispness to the directness and freshness of the piano parts while the orchestra complemented his playing with a refreshingly strong an. bold performance of the work, making it the highlight of the concert.

Another highlight was Munch's interpretation of Debussy's "La Mer" which was colored with fine tonal effects in the flowing melodies and rhythms. The violins played with special adeptness in this work and combined with the full talents of the orchestra under Mr. Munch's sensitive direction.

The concert opened with Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky, Op. 44." which was composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. The varied melodies of the work were taken up by the orchestras with smoothness.

From the opening dissonance of Arthur Honegger's Fifth Symphony to the scherze character of the second movement and the violent third movement, Mr. Munch led the orchestra thru the powerful and intense work admirably.

Soloist for the Sunday performance was violinist Ruth Posselt, wife of Mr. Burgin who directed the orchestra that afternoon. She performed Hindemith's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" while her husband provided the collaboration of the orchestra.

Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet," second Suite, Op. 64, opened the Sunday concert which closed with Mahler's "Symphony No. 1 in D Major."

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Munch Opens Fourth Set Of Tanglewood Concerts

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 28.—It was almost as if the musical thunderclaps of Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 2 could be credited with dispelling the high humidity that enveloped the more than 6,000 listeners at Friday evening's Tanglewood concert, opening the fourth set of week-end concerts. As the music of the program gained in heat, the air cooled with corresponding mercy.

One could safely assume that most of the audience was mentally comparing the second "Leonore" overture with the much better-known third, and finding the comparison instructive as well as revealing of Beethoven's ceaseless search for the most perfect representation of his vision. Charles Munch led the splendid work as if possessed, and one wondered whether he would have energy left for the rest of the demanding program.

"Interesting" is a much overworked term and—when applied to a new work—has acquired a flavor of condescension or lack of sympathy. But Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra is in the best rense interesting. If it is not at all times communicative, it consistently fascinates the ear and mind, that it is sincerely felt and essentially musical cannot be denied even by one who remains largely outside its emotional world.

To judge from this one work—always a risky procedure—Mr. Petrassi is an eclectic composer who does not hesitate to employ twelve-tone rows of Bergian cast in a fairly tonal and accessible idiom, whose music acknowledges its debt to Stravinskian rhythm while exhibiting a thoroughly expressionistic and subjective approach.

His two-movement concerto, in any event, strikes one as an accomplishment of superb intelligence, a mature and inventive grasp of orchestral possibilities. The harmonic texture is high- tension, but colorful and often beautiful. Yet the ear is occupied with so rich a variety of instrumental sonorities and refined blends that the long line—if it is there—is often lost. Toward the end, one may tire a bit; the composer, we understand, is already working on revisions of the score.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 30 1956

Week End at Tanglewood Has a Bit of Everything

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 29.—The Saturday-Sunday concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood had, as the saying goes, everything: music old and new, good and not so good, incomparable orchestral playing, and two top-flight soloists—pianist Rudolf Serkin and violinist Ruth Posselt. The grand total of attendance during the week end reached 23,810: Friday, 6,256; Saturday, 9,821, and Sunday, 7,733.

Saturday's program opened with the "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky," op. 44, by Howard Hanson, another of the Boston orchestra's se.enty-fifth anniversary commissions. The elegy is a well-made piece, rich in texture to the point of opaqueness, and in no wise unpleasant. But, personal in intent as it surely is, it seems oddly impersonal in style.

Schumann's piano concerto in A minor has become a vehicle for so many amateurs and neophytes that it was exciting for a change to have it from the hands of a master. Rudolf Serkin is one of the most dynamic pianists now before the public. Visually, he has all the mannerisms of lunge and crash that have given the virtuoso a bad name, but with him the effort seems justified. He makes music—live, spontaneous, fiery music, and he sweeps the listener along irresistibly. Charles Munch is an accompanying conductor par excellence, and his enjoyment in the collaboration was evident. The audience was duly ecstatic.

Arthur Honegger's fifth symphony, by now familiar to listeners from Boston, is unquestionably a twentieth-century masterpiece. Written as a Koussevitzky Foundation commission and published in 1951, the three-movement symphony sums up the great modern master's production in a dramatic, compact and eminently communicative apotheosis. Mr. Munch conducts this work by his late friend with the most passionate intensity and, unusual for him, without score. The orchestral playing was breathtaking in its security.

The conductor's way with Debussy's three orchestral sketches, "La Mer," is regarded as one of the foremost in the concert hall, and it invariably offers an experience of ravishing sound and keen evocative value. Saturday night's rendition stood up well even after the Honegger symphony—proof of the music's quality and that of its executants.

Sunday afternoon's concert, with the weather remaining delightfully clear and cool, brought Richard Burgin, the concertmaster and associate conductor, to the podium. It may be only this reviewer's imagination, but under Mr. Burgin's leadership the Boston Symphony seemed to sound as mellow and warm as it did under Koussevitzky—quite different from the brilliance and definition Mr. Munch calls for.

Who but Ruth Posselt plays Paul Hindemith's violin concerto in this country? Stand and be counted. She has championed it virtually since its composition in 1939. The first American performance, in fact, was given by her husband, Richard Burgin, in 1950. If RCA-Victor can temporarily abandon its conservatism in repertoire, this concerto—not yet endisked by any one—is respectfully proposed, with these artists as protagonists.

Mr. Burgin has long been an ardent Mahler supporter; he plays his music quite as well as do Walter and Mitropoulos, with perhaps more viable pacing.

[158]

Music Festival Attracts Many To Tanglewood

Over 7,000 people motored to Tanglewood Saturday to hear The Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, perform the 15th program in the current season. Rudolf Serkin, who has appeared several times in Woolsey Hall, returned to the Music Shed in Lenox to play the Piano Concerto in A Minor By Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death on July 29, 1856.

It was a magnificent concert, a most thrilling experience after the motor trip from New Haven through the rolling Connecticut country side. Munch appeared on the podium promptly at 8:30 and raised his baton for the stirring Hanson Elegy in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and played Saturday for the first time at Tanglewood although it was played last year on the orchestra's tour.

Serkin Performs

Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer, gave a brilliant performance in this wonderful bravura work. A technician at heart, he did not sacrifice technicalities to color in Saturday's performance, and both the lovely andantino and the sparkling final movement were executed with a masterly touch. The beautiful melody which swings from the soloist to the orchestra with such garce, was never more fully interpreted than it was by the Symphony and Serkin on Saturday evening. With the orchestra giving impeccable support under the meticulous baton of the great Munch, the audience arose as one when the concerto was over and enthusiastically applauded all the artists.

The ornamental Symphony No. 5 by Artur Honegger, who died last year, was the opening number following intermission. Munch, with discerning regard for the interesting counterpoint development, gave a most colorful reading of this strangely fascinating work, a commission of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation.

Debuury Work

The exquisite tonal sketches, "La Mer" by Debussy concluded the concert. From the tumultuous dissonance of the Honegger work, the orchestra turned to the placid melodies and full harmonies of Debussy's pictures of the sea. Through the three sketches one could readily visualize the different moods of the sea, now calm, now with a brisk wind whipping up the waves; the turmoil of the sea during a storm and the return again to calm and peace as the work ends.

The Boston Symphony, a special delight to New Haveners, is heard twice each year at Woolsey Hall and it is an interesting experience to see this big organization at work in its summer headquarters in the Berkshires. Many area people journey to Tanglewood each weekend to hear the orchestra and to enjoy watching Charles Munch conduct. After a delightful trip by car of not more than two and a half hours, it is a most rewarding experience. This season's concerts are well on towards the closing programs and already Tanglewood on Parade has been announced for August 9 when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops comes to Tanglewood to share the gala concert program that evening. Other events from [illegible] that day include chamber concerts, opera, the concert hall and a lawn par[illegible] Edgar Tchaikovsky will conduct the Boston Symphony [illegible] "5th" F.R.J.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Boston Symphony Rated Excellent at Tanglewood

By D. E. RITZ

The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented an intensely interesting program Saturday night in the huge Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the baton of Charles Munch.

* * *

WITH RUDOLF SERKIN as soloist the feature was the Schumann "Pianoforte Concerto in A minor, opus 54" with its intensities. Then there was the magnificent Honegger "Symphony number 5," Debussy's "La Mer" and a Tanglewood premiere of Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky."

The Hanson number opened the program and was given a fine performance. It specializes in string tone and a poignant interlude for wind but its modernity is a bit too forced.

* * *

THE HONEGGER Symphony with its extremes of harshness yet has a reality and an expert workmanship that made it the finest music of the evening.

The Schumann concerto under the combined interpretation of the artists Serkin and Munch became a vivid revelation of the great music. Completed in 1845, the concerto had its first performance on Dec. 4 of that year at Dresden with Clara Schumann as soloist and Ferdinand Hiller as conductor.

On Saturday evening its themes sparkled and sang under Serkin's magic tone. The piano cadenza, provided by the composer, is majestic—for that matter so is the entire work.

* * *

FOLLOWING THE CLOSE of the concerto Mr. Serkin, Dr. Munch and the orchestra received a stupendous ovation.

Also received with unusual enthusiasm, even for Tanglewood, was the Honegger Symphony.

Revealing too was the interpretation of "La Mer" which Dr. Munch gives in a far more virile style than that of most conductors.

* * *

THE BOSTON Symphony with its present almost all-year performances is becoming ever more fluent and we personally doubt if any orchestra elsewhere can achieve the same fine nuance, the full fortes or the amazing tempos.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 30 1956

17,560 Persons At Tanglewood Over Weekend

A record number of 9821 persons for this season at Tanglewood were drawn to Saturday night's concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra, while a disappointing audience of 7739 attended the Sunday afternoon concert although the weather was good.

Rudolf Serkin, pianist, was the drawing card for the Saturday evening performance with Charles Munch conducting, While Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, directed the Sunday afternoon concert.

Brilliant playing by Serkin was heard in the Schumann "Concerto in A Minor for Piano and Orchestra." He delivered an exactness and crispness to the directness and freshness of the piano parts while the orchestra complemented his playing with a refreshingly strong an. bold performance of the work, making it the highlight of the concert.

Another highlight was Munch's interpretation of Debussy's "La Mer" which was colored with fine tonal effects in the flowing melodies and rhythms. The violins played with special adeptness in this work and combined with the full talents of the orchestra under Mr. Munch's sensitive direction.

The concert opened with Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky, Op. 44." which was composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. The varied melodies of the work were taken up by the orchestras with smoothness.

From the opening dissonance of Arthur Honegger's Fifth Symphony to the scherze character of the second movement and the violent third movement, Mr. Munch led the orchestra thru the powerful and intense work admirably.

Soloist for the Sunday performance was violinist Ruth Posselt, wife of Mr. Burgin who directed the orchestra that afternoon. She performed Hindemith's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" while her husband provided the collaboration of the orchestra.

Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet," second Suite, Op. 64, opened the Sunday concert which closed with Mahler's "Symphony No. 1 in D Major."

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Munch Opens Fourth Set Of Tanglewood Concerts

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 28.—It was almost as if the musical thunderclaps of Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 2 could be credited with dispelling the high humidity that enveloped the more than 6,000 listeners at Friday evening's Tanglewood concert, opening the fourth set of week-end concerts. As the music of the program gained in heat, the air cooled with corresponding mercy.

One could safely assume that most of the audience was mentally comparing the second "Leonore" overture with the much better-known third, and finding the comparison instructive as well as revealing of Beethoven's ceaseless search for the most perfect representation of his vision. Charles Munch led the splendid work as if possessed, and one wondered whether he would have energy left for the rest of the demanding program.

"Interesting" is a much overworked term and—when applied to a new work—has acquired a flavor of condescension or lack of sympathy. But Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra is in the best rense interesting. If it is not at all times communicative, it consistently fascinates the ear and mind, that it is sincerely felt and essentially musical cannot be denied even by one who remains largely outside its emotional world.

To judge from this one work—always a risky procedure—Mr. Petrassi is an eclectic composer who does not hesitate to employ twelve-tone rows of Bergian cast in a fairly tonal and accessible idiom, whose music acknowledges its debt to Stravinskian rhythm while exhibiting a thoroughly expressionistic and subjective approach.

His two-movement concerto, in any event, strikes one as an accomplishment of superb intelligence, a mature and inventive grasp of orchestral possibilities. The harmonic texture is high- tension, but colorful and often beautiful. Yet the ear is occupied with so rich a variety of instrumental sonorities and refined blends that the long line—if it is there—is often lost. Toward the end, one may tire a bit; the composer, we understand, is already working on revisions of the score.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 30 1956

Week End at Tanglewood Has a Bit of Everything

By Klaus George Roy

LENOX, Mass., July 29.—The Saturday-Sunday concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood had, as the saying goes, everything: music old and new, good and not so good, incomparable orchestral playing, and two top-flight soloists—pianist Rudolf Serkin and violinist Ruth Posselt. The grand total of attendance during the week end reached 23,810: Friday, 6,256; Saturday, 9,821, and Sunday, 7,733.

Saturday's program opened with the "Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky," op. 44, by Howard Hanson, another of the Boston orchestra's seventy-fifth anniversary commissions. The elegy is a well-made piece, rich in texture to the point of opaqueness, and in no wise unpleasant. But, personal in intent as it surely is, it seems oddly impersonal in style.

Schumann's piano concerto in A minor has become a vehicle for so many amateurs and neophytes that it was exciting for a change to have it from the hands of a master. Rudolf Serkin is one of the most dynamic pianists now before the public. Visually, he has all the mannerisms of lunge and crash that have given the virtuoso a bad name, but with him the effort seems justified. He makes music—live, spontaneous, fiery music, and he sweeps the listener along irresistibly. Charles Munch is an accompanying conductor par excellence, and his enjoyment in the collaboration was evident. The audience was duly ecstatic.

Arthur Honegger's fifth symphony, by now familiar to listeners from Boston, is unquestionably a twentieth-century masterpiece. Written as a Koussevitzky Foundation commission and published in 1951, the three-movement symphony sums up the great modern master's production in a dramatic, compact and eminently communicative apotheosis. Mr. Munch conducts this work by his late friend with the most passionate intensity and, unusual for him, without score. The orchestral playing was breathtaking in its security.

The conductor's way with Debussy's three orchestral sketches, "La Mer," is regarded as one of the foremost in the concert hall, and it invariably offers an experience of ravishing sound and keen evocative value. Saturday night's rendition stood up well even after the Honegger symphony—proof of the music's quality and that of its executants.

Sunday afternoon's concert, with the weather remaining delightfully clear and cool, brought Richard Burgin, the concertmaster and associate conductor, to the podium. It may be only this reviewer's imagination, but under Mr. Burgin's leadership the Boston Symphony seemed to sound as mellow and warm as it did under Koussevitzky—quite different from the brilliance and definition Mr. Munch calls for.

Who but Ruth Posselt plays Paul Hindemith's violin concerto in this country? Stand and be counted. She has championed it virtually since its composition in 1939. The first American performance, in fact, was given by her husband, Richard Burgin, in 1950. If RCA-Victor can temporarily abandon its conservatism in repertoire, this concerto—not yet endisked by any one—is respectfully proposed, with these artists as protagonists.

Mr. Burgin has long been an ardent Mahler supporter; he plays his music quite as well as do Walter and Mitroupoul[os] with perhaps more viable pa[cing].

[158]

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD,

MASS., MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

TANGLEWOOD'S SUNDAY CROWD DISAPPOINTING

Only 7739 Hear Commendable Concert by Boston Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 29—When a Sunday afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra draws as few as 7739 people, particularly when the weather is ideal, something must be wrong. It would seem that a good Sunday afternoon should bring far more people, in fact it has drawn as many as 15,000 to Tanglewood.

Should Offer Best

With a Sunday afternoon audience from the four points of the compass, and a varied musical level, it seems that every effort should be made to provide the best Tanglewood has to offer; a conductor with audience attraction and a program and soloist of proven appeal.

With all respect to the musicianship and distinguished record of Richard Burgin, his appeal is something less than popular. While a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler can be a magnificent listening experience, it is not the sort of program that attracts the audience one gets here on a Sunday.

Continued On Page 10

Tanglewood's

Continued From Page 1

We heard some commendable performances this afternoon, the Prokofieff "Romeo and Juliet" ballet, second suite is an excitingly orchestrated work, replete with melodies and color. The work needs only the spark of a magnetic conductor to get a great audience reception. Applause this afternoon was more polite than vehement.

Ruth Posselt, wife of Mr. Burgin, has appeared several times at Tanglewood and she has played the Hindemith "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" here before. Her performance this afternoon was a tribute to her musicianship and technical facility. Mr. Burgin provided splendid collaboration and the result was a tightly knit, well integrated performance.

The final work on the program was the "Symphony No. 1 in D major" by Gustav Mahler. This is one of the great symphonies of all times and it was evident that Mr. Burgin had an affection for it. Less lengthy than other Mahler symphonies, its constantly changing moods, its fine melodic content and rhythmic contrast add up to an unforgetable listening experience. We found Mr. Burgin's interpretation lucid, flexible and finely detailed.

Tomorrow night the opera department under Boris Goldovsky, will present a single act from four 19th Century operas. Many members of the department will be heard during the four acts. Wednesday night, Rudof Serkin will appear in the chamber music hall, playing the "Symphonic Etudes, and Carnaval" by Schumann and the Mozart "Quinten for Piano and Wood Winds."

Music Notes

BY HENRY S. WOOTTON JR.

BREVARD PROGRAM:

Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony, will make his annual visit as guest conductor and James Wolfe will be guest pianist on Friday, Aug. 3. The Transylvania Symphony Orchestra will perform the "Concerto in D Major" by K. P. E. Bach-Steinberg; Variations, Chaconne, and Finale by Norman Della Joio; and the Academic Festival Overture by Brahms. Wolfe will play Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4 in G Major."

Saturday, Aug. 4, features the Transylvania Concert Band, directed by Paul Bryan, and the Transylvania Chorus, Gordon Page conducting. The band will perform, among other selections, Darius Milhaud's "Suite Francaise." The chorus will sing Randall Thompson's "The Peaceable Kingdom," the text of which was adapted from the Book of Isaiah.

Sunday, Aug. 5, James Christian Pfohl conducts the Faure Requiem at the morning worship service; and a concert by the Orchestra of the Faculty and Staff in the afternoon, with soloists Mary Davenport, contralto, and James Wolfe, pianist.

TANGLEWOOD:

Young musicians representing 30 states, the District of Columbia and 18 foreign countries have come to Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., for the 14th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center. The summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra provides expert training and teaching in ensemble work, with public performances by the students as often as four times weekly, from July 4 to Aug. 12. Although some 36 per cent of the student body this year attended the Berkshire Music Center previously, the majority of the group are newcomers to Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center. Aaron Copland is assistant director, Ralph Berkowitz is dean and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary. The distinguished faculty includes such notables as Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Boris Goldovsky and Seymour Lipkin. Goffredo Petrassi, composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, is guest composer at Tanglewood this summer, continuing the tradition of having an eminent visiting composer on the faculty each year.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idomeneo," Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot" and, so far as is known, the first American performance of Mozart's unfinished opera "Zaide." The summer of 1955 also witnessed the world premiere of a short opera especially composed at Tanglewood for performance there, "The Rope" by Louis Mannini, from a play by Eugene O'Neill. Sharing honors in this performance was tenor Paul Berry of Greensboro.

North Carolinians who are studying at Tanglewood this summer include Carolyn Warlick of Raleigh, Robert B. Morris, who teaches at the Music School of Woman's College, Greensboro, and Anne C. Rothgeb of Raleigh.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 30 1956

Second Series of Festival Shed Concerts Draws 17,560

The second series of shed concerts at the Berkshire Music festival attracted 17,560 persons to Tanglewood Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon.

Largest Crowd Yet

On Saturday evening the largest crowd of the season to date, 9,821, heard Charles Munch conduct the Boston Symphony and Rudolph Serkin perform as soloist in the Schumann Concerto in A minor for Piano. The program also included Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Honegger's Symphony No. 5 and Debussy's "La Mer."

Yesterday afternoon, Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, was on the podium and his wife, Ruth Posselt, was violin soloist in a performance of Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Others works performed were the "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2, by Prokofieff, and the Symphony No. 1 in D. major, by Mahler. The turnout of 7,739 was disappointing in view of the ideal weather conditions.

Semi-Final Week

The festival now moves into its semi-final week, with regular concerts scheduled Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. This evening the Opera department of the Music center, the summer music school, will present single acts from four 19th century operas. That program will be held in the theater-concert hall and open to those who support the center through its "Friends" organization.

The Wednesday evening chamber music program, also to be held in the theater-concert hall, will be a joint recital of the music of Schumann and Mozart, played by Mr. Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind quartet.

The three week-end concerts in the music shed will be led by different conductors. Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, will be on the podium Friday evening; Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday and Mr. Munch will return on Sunday.

Mr. de Carvalho

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the summer music school at Tanglewood from 1946 to 1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla and Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Joey de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, a pupil of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron. It will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor, Kyrie and Gloria. The Mass will be performed with the assistance of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music center students, trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony. Dr. Munch will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 30 1956

Opera Scenes Due Berkshires, Tonight

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

BOSTON HERALD, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Opera Scenes Due Berkshires, Tonight

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season—Friday, Aug. 3, at 8:30: Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony, with Jocy de Oliveira, piano. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 4, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing the Boston Symphony in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and the Festival Chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 5, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Zino Francescatti, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: A program of chamber music played by Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano. . . . ¶ Thursday, Aug. 9, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesús-María Sanromá, piano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 10, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 11, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 12, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony with Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, [illegible] and the Festival Chorus. (Tanglewood

[159]

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD,

MASS., MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

TANGLEWOOD'S SUNDAY CROWD DISAPPOINTING

Only 7739 Hear Commendable Concert by Boston Symphony

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 29—When a Sunday afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra draws as few as 7739 people, particularly when the weather is ideal, something must be wrong. It would seem that a good Sunday afternoon should bring far more people, in fact it has drawn as many as 15,000 to Tanglewood.

Should Offer Best

With a Sunday afternoon audience from the four points of the compass, and a varied musical level, it seems that every effort should be made to provide the best Tanglewood has to offer; a conductor with audience attraction and a program and soloist of proven appeal.

With all respect to the musicianship and distinguished record of Richard Burgin, his appeal is something less than popular. While a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler can be a magnificent listening experience, it is not the sort of program that attracts the audience one gets here on a Sunday.

Continued On Page 10

Tanglewood's

Continued From Page 1

We heard some commendable performances this afternoon, the Prokofieff "Romeo and Juliet" ballet, second suite is an excitingly orchestrated work, replete with melodies and color. The work needs only the spark of a maghetic conductor to get a great audience reception. Applause this afternoon was more polite than vehement.

Ruth Posselt, wife of Mr. Burgin, has appeared several times at Tanglewood and she has played the Hindemith "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" here before. Her performance this afternoon was a tribute to her musicianship and technical facility. Mr. Burgin provided splendid collaboration and the result was a tightly knit, well integrated performance.

The final work on the program was the "Symphony No. 1 in D major" by Gustav Mahler. This is one of the great symphonies of all times and it was evident that Mr. Burgin had an affection for it. Less lengthy than other Mahler symphonies, its constantly changing moods, its fine melodic content and rhythmic contrast add up to an unforgetable listening experience. We found Mr. Burgin's interpretation lucid, flexible and finely detailed.

Tomorrow night the opera department under Boris Goldovsky, will present a single act from four 19th Century operas. Many members of the department will be heard during the four acts. Wednesday night, Rudof Serkin will appear in the chamber music hall, playing the "Symphonic Etudes, and Carmaval" by Schumann and the Mozart "Quinten for Piano and Wood Winds."

Music Notes

BY HENRY S. WOOTTON JR.

BREVARD PROGRAM:

Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony, will make his annual visit as guest conductor and James Wolfe will be guest pianist on Friday, Aug. 3. The Transylvania Symphony Orchestra will perform the "Concerto in D Major" by K. P. E. Bach-Steinberg; Variations, Chaconne, and Finale by Norman Della Joio; and the Academic Festival Overture by Brahms. Wolfe will play Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4 in G Major."

Saturday, Aug. 4, features the Transylvania Concert Band, directed by Paul Bryan, and the Transylvania Chorus, Gordon Page conducting. The band will perform, among other selections, Darius Milhaud's "Suite Francaise." The chorus will sing Randall Thompson's "The Peaceable Kingdom," the text of which was adapted from the Book of Isaiah.

Sunday, Aug. 5, James Christian Pfohl conducts the Faure Requiem at the morning worship service; and a concert by the Orchestra of the Faculty and Staff in the afternoon, with soloists Mary Davenport, contralto, and James Wolfe, pianist.

TANGLEWOOD:

Young musicians representing 30 states, the District of Columbia and 18 foreign countries have come to Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., for the 14th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center. The summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra provides expert training and teaching in ensemble work, with public performances by the students as often as four times weekly, from July 4 to Aug. 12. Although some 30 per cent of the student body this year attended the Berkshire Music Center previously, the majority of the group are newcomers to Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center. Aaron Copland is assistant director, Ralph Berkowitz is dean and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary. The distinguished faculty includes such notables as Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Boris Goldovsky and Seymour Lipkin. Goffredo Petrassi, composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, is guest composer at Tanglewood this summer, continuing the tradition of having an eminent visiting composer on the faculty each year.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idomeneo," Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot" and, so far as is known, the first American performance of Mozart's unfinished opera "Zaide." The summer of 1955 also witnessed the world premiere of a short opera especially composed at Tanglewood for performance there, "The Rope" by Louis Mennini, from a play by Eugene O'Neill. Sharing honors in this performance was tenor Paul Berry of Greensboro.

North Carolinians who are studying at Tanglewood this summer include Carolyn Warlick of Raleigh, Robert B. Morris, who teaches at the Music School of Woman's College, Greensboro, and Anne C. Rothgeb of Raleigh.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 30 1956

Second Series of Festival Shed Concerts Draws 17,560

The second series of shed concerts at the Berkshire Music festival attracted 17,560 persons to Tanglewood Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon.

Largest Crowd Yet

On Saturday evening the largest crowd of the season to date, 9,821, heard Charles Munch conduct the Boston Symphony and Rudolph Serkin perform as soloist in the Schumann Concerto in A minor for Piano. The program also included Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Honegger's Symphony No. 5 and Debussy's "La Mer."

Yesterday afternoon, Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, was on the podium and his wife, Ruth Posselt, was violin soloist in a performance of Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Others works performed were the "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2, by Prokofieff, and the Symphony No. 1 in D. major, by Mahler. The turnout of 7,739 was disappointing in view of the ideal weather conditions.

Semi-Final Week

The festival now moves into its semi-final week, with regular concerts scheduled Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. This evening the Opera department of the Music center, the summer music school, will present single acts from four 19th century operas. That program will be held in the theater-concert hall and open to those who support the center through its "Friends" organization.

The Wednesday evening chamber music program, also to be held in the theater-concert hall, will be a joint recital of the music of Schumann and Mozart, played by Mr. Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind quartet.

The three week-end concerts in the music shed will be led by different conductors. Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, will be on the podium Friday evening; Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday and Mr. Munch will return on Sunday.

Mr. de Carvalho

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the summer music school at Tanglewood from 1946 to 1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla and Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, a pupil of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron. It will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor, Kyrie and Gloria. The Mass will be performed with the assistance of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music center students, trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony. Dr. Munch will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 30 1956

Opera Scenes Due Berkshires, Tonight

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season—Friday, Aug. 3, at 8:30: Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony, with Jocy de Oliveira, piano. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 4, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing the Boston Symphony in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and the Festival Chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 5, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Zino Francescatti, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: A program of chamber music played by Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano. . . . ¶ Thursday, Aug. 9, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesús-María Sanromá, piano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 10, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 11, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 12, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony, with Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass; and the Festival Chorus. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

BOSTON HERALD, MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

Opera Scenes Due Berkshires, Tonight

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

CULTURAL DIVISION
972 Fifth Avenue
New York 21, N.Y.

MUSIC

New York City

Berlioz song recital

On May 15th, members and friends of the Berlioz Society gathered at the French Institute to hear a unique recital of Berlioz songs by Miss Ruth Lorin, soprano, and composer-accompanist John Cooper. These songs represent part of a "find" by the Society, the discovery in Paris of about thirty Berlioz scores, most of which have never been heard in this country. An enthusiastic audience heard the following songs:

La Mort d'Ophélie (No. 2 of Tristia, Op. 18), Les Champs (from Feuillets d'Album, Op. 19), Le Chasseur Danois (from Feuillets d'Album, Op. 19), La Belle Voyageuse (No. 2 of Melodies Irlandaises, Op. 2), L'Origine de la Harpe (No. 7 of Melodies Irlandaises, Op. 2), Le Matin (No. 1 of Fleurs des Landes, Op. 13), Petit Oiseau (No. 2 of Fleurs des Landes, Op. 13), Je crois en vous (Romance. Words by Leon Guérin), Sur les lagunes (No. 3 of Les Nuits d'Eté, Op. 7).

Monsieur Pierre Donzelot, Permanent Representative of French Universities in the United States, under whose auspices the concert was given, addressed a few introductory remarks and presented M. Duncan S. Robinson, Vice President of the Society, who explained the goals of the Society. Among its impressive accomplishments has been the shipment of all American recordings of Berlioz' music to the Musée Berlioz in France.

A photographic exhibit on the composer presented by the Cultural Division of the French Embassy opened on the same evening.

* * *

The first week of concerts at the Lewisohn Stadium saw Maître Pierre Monteux on the podium. On July 25th he led an all-French program, which marked the world première of Darius Milhaud's Piano Concerto No. 5, played by Stell Anderson.

Lenox, Massachusetts

A number of French works will be performed at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, which is directed by Charles Munch:

July 18 — The Brass Ensemble, under the direction of Roger Voisin, plays a composition by Poulenc, in a varied program.

July 20 — Berlioz: Overture, The Roman Carnival; Debussy: Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel: Rapsodie Espagnole.

July 25 — The Beaux-Arts Trio plays Mendelssohn, Brahms, and Ravel: Trio in A Minor.

July 28 — Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in Symphony No. 5 by Arthur Honegger and La Mer by Debussy.

August 3 — The Ravel Piano Concerto, played by Jocy de Oliveira. Conductor: Eleasar de Carvalho.

August 10 — Haydn, Piston, Strauss, and Dukas: L'Apprenti Sorcier, conducted by Charles Munch.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 184,866
JUL 31 1956

OPERA STUDENTS WIN TANGLEWOOD SUCCESS

By WALTER ALFORD

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, July —Five acts from 19th century ras by Berlioz, Puccini, and di, two of them sung for the time here, were performed tonight by students of the ra department of the Berk- Music Center before a city audience in the Berk- Festival's Theater-Concert opera scenes were per- ed in Italian and in Eng- under the direction of is Goldovsky, who heads the ra department of the Boston mphony Orchestra's summer sic school, with Goldovsky viding piano accompaniment. year ago Goldovsky's New land Opera Company gave erican Premier, in Boston, of Berlioz's massive "The ns," (composed in 1863), tonight Marjorie McClung, prano, of San Antonio, Tex., Robert Nagy, of Lorrain, sang the roles of Dido and from Act Four in an h translation.

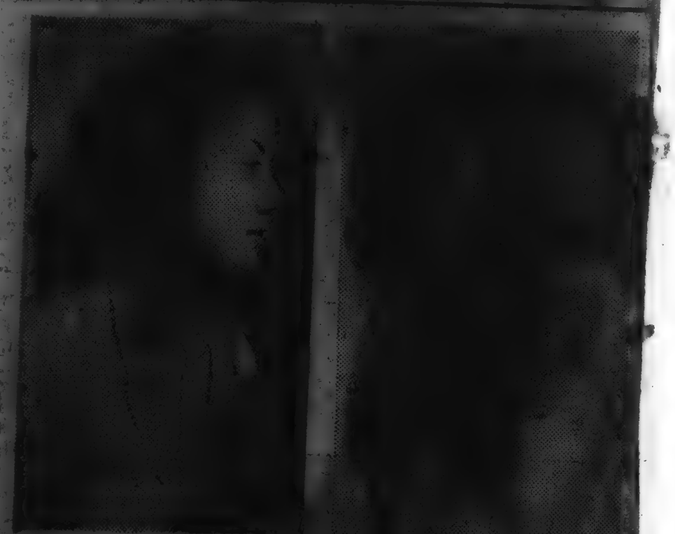
handsome set was de- by Robert O'Hearn and were by Leo Van Puccini's "La Rondine" arlow), in an English version by Robert Hess, was sung by Lynn Rasmussen, Kenosha, Wis.; Polyna Zagarethou, Boston; Harold Johnson, Chicago; and Guy Gardner, Houston; in principal roles. Ed Flesh and Ray Simpson did scenery and custome decor.

Annabelle Bernard of New Orleans was the Aida and Claudia Lourie of New York the Amneris in the second act duet from "Aida." Verdi's "Don Carlo," performed in Italian, featured John Parella and Spellos Constantine of Philadelphia, John McCurdy of Detroit, Donald Henrickson, Conklin, Mich.; Madeleine Palmer, Manchester, N. H., and Shirley Carter, Los Angeles. In the Letter Scene of Act 1 from "Falstaff," Malcolm Bernstein of Baltimore was the Ford; Virginia Babikian, Everett, his wife; Robert Nagy was the Fenton, and Elaine Quint of Syracuse, the Nanetta. Other designers represented on the program were Roger Graef, Tom Degaetani and Laura Zirner.

On Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 6 and 7, Goldovsky will stage winter in condensed form o the major offering of the Tan NBC-TV, now slated for th wood season, Lukas Foss' first time anywhere, with th act opera "Griffelkin," g ser conducting.

28 HERALD-JOURNAL, Tuesday, July 31, 1956



PIANIST AND CONDUCTOR. Joey De Oliveira, left, pianist, and her husband, Eleazar de Cavallo, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will be in "Tanglewood" in concert Friday night, Aug. 3, for a Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed. Miss De Oliveira will play Ravel's Piano Concerto in her North American debut, with the Boston Symphony under direction of de Cavallo.

OPERA SINGERS AT TANGLEWOOD ARE EFFECTIVE

SPR. UNION — 7/31/56

Student Artists Present Five Excerpts Under Goldovsky Direction

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 30—The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center is unusually strong this summer and tonight, under the general direction of Boris Goldovsky, many of the fine singers were heard in five scenes from 19th Century operas. These included "La Rondine" by Puccini, the second act duet from "Aida" by Verdi, the second act of Verdis "Don Carlo," Act 4 of "The Trojans" by Berlioz and a scene from the first act of "Falstaffa" by Verdi.

Style Variety

These scenes were chosen so that the students in the department might get a general view of the different styles in opera during the century. Puccins "La Rondine" is a brilliant, ebullient operetta and it was opulently staged. Lynn Rasmussen, from Kenosha, Wis., was a lovely Magda both in person and voice. Polyna Zegaretou, who hails from Boston, as pert and comical as the maid Lisette. Harold Johnson, as the poet, proved to be an admirable singing-actor from Chicago.

The dramatic duet between Ameris and Aida is practically an act in itself. Annabelle Bernard from New Orleans, who sang so well in Mozarts "Zaide" last week, undertook the role of Aida even though it was a bit heavy for her. Claudia Loure from New York was a strong voice Ameris.

The stark tragedy of Verdis "Don Carlo" was strongly projected by the young singers. John Parella from Philadelphia, handled the taxing role of King Phillip very well. John McMurdy from Detroit was the inquisitor and provided some of the finest singing of the entire evening. Shirley Carter from Los Angeles sang "O Don Fatale" in thrilling manner which earned her well deserved applause. Madeline Palmer was effective as Queen Elizabeth. The opera was handsomely staged and the costumes were eye filling.

"The Trojans" by Berlioz is a particular favorite with Mr. Goldovsky, whose New England Opera Co. gave the first American performance. Some of the finest voices in the department were chosen to sing in this work. There was, for example, the dido of Marjorie McClung, sung with faultless taste, and the clear vocalism of Robert Nagy as Aeneas. Both principals enunciated the English text admirably. Miss McClub comes from San Antonio and Mr. Nagy from Jarain, O. Spelios Constantine of Philadelphia has the making of a fine voice and he has considerable stage sense. Mildred Allen from Gulfport, Miss. was a clear voiced, appealing Ascanius. Robert O'Hearn's scenic design was effective and Leo Van Witten designed handsome costumes.

Know Every Note

The final work, which we did not see, was the second scene of the first act of "Falstaff." Virginia Babikian of Everett, was Mistress Ford, Abby-Maria Byers of Louisville, Ky., was Mistress Page and Rosalind Hupp of Chillicottie, O., was Dame Quickly. Malcom Bernstein of Baltimore sang Ford.

The pupils of Mr. Goldovsky have one thing in common. They know every note of their music and are seldom seen looking at the conductor. They all move easily about the stage and know the trick of under play. The works sung in English tonight found most of the singers able to enunciate clearly. Everything was very professional and effective.

LENOX

Service Tribute To Koussevitsky

Lenox, July 30 — The fifth anniversary of the death of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was observed at the Sunday service at the Church-On-The-Hill. The Tanglewood chorus, accompanied by strings and organ, provided music for the service. Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's choral department directed the chorus. The sermon, by Rev. Harry Trust, was "Songs in the night." Miss Florence Dunn was the guest organist, playing the piano given the church by Madame Koussevitsky in her husband's memory. Dr. Koussevitsky is buried in the Cemetery-On-The-Hill. The chorus sang "Aperite Mihi Portas," a cantata by Buxtehude and two numbers from Bach's "Passion According

[160]

CULTURAL DIVISION OF THE FRENCH EMBASSY
972 Fifth Avenue
New York 21, N. Y.

MUSIC

New York City

Berlioz song recital

On May 15th, members and friends of the Berlioz Society gathered at the French Institute to hear a unique recital of Berlioz songs by Miss Ruth Lorin, soprano, and composer-accompanist John Cooper. These songs represent part of a "find" by the Society, the discovery in Paris of about thirty Berlioz scores, most of which have never been heard in this country. An enthusiastic audience heard the following songs:

La Mort d'Ophélie (No. 2 of Tristia, Op. 18), Les Champs (from Feuillets d'Album, Op. 19), Le Chasseur Danois (from Feuillets d'Album, Op. 19), La Belle Voyageuse (No. 2 of Melodies Irlandaises, Op. 2), L'Origine de la Harpe (No. 7 of Melodies Irlandaises, Op. 2), Le Matin (No. 1 of Fleurs des Landes, Op. 13), Petit Oiseau (No. 2 of Fleurs des Landes, Op. 13), Je crois en vous (Romance. Words by Leon Guérin), Sur les lagunes (No. 3 of Les Nuits d'Eté, Op. 7).

Monsieur Pierre Donzelot, Permanent Representative of French Universities in the United States, under whose auspices the concert was given, addressed a few introductory remarks and presented M. Duncan S. Robinson, Vice President of the Society, who explained the goals of the Society. Among its impressive accomplishments has been the shipment of all American recordings of Berlioz' music to the Musée Berlioz in France.

A photographic exhibit on the composer presented by the Cultural Division of the French Embassy opened on the same evening.

* * *

The first week of concerts at the Lewisohn Stadium saw Maître Pierre Monteux on the podium. On July 25th he led an all-French program, which marked the world première of Darius Milhaud's Piano Concerto No. 5, played by Stell Anderson.

Lenox, Massachusetts

A number of French works will be performed at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, which is directed by Charles Munch:

July 18 — The Brass Ensemble, under the direction of Roger Voisin, plays a composition by Poulenc, in a varied program.

July 20 — Berlioz: Overture, The Roman Carnival; Debussy: Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel: Rapsodie Espagnole.

July 25 — The Beaux-Arts Trio plays Mendelssohn, Brahms, and Ravel: Trio in A Minor.

July 28 — Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in Symphony No. 5 by Arthur Honegger and La Mer by Debussy.

August 3 — The Ravel Piano Concerto, played by Jocy de Oliveira. Conductor: Eleasar de Carvalho.

August 10 — Haydn, Piston, Strauss, and Dukas: L'Apprenti Sorcier, conducted by Charles Munch.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 31 1956

OPERA STUDENTS WIN TANGLEWOOD SUCCESS

By WALTER ALFORD

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, July 30—Five acts from 19th century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them sung for the first time here, were performed here tonight by students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center before a capacity audience in the Berkshire Festival's Theater-Concert Hall.

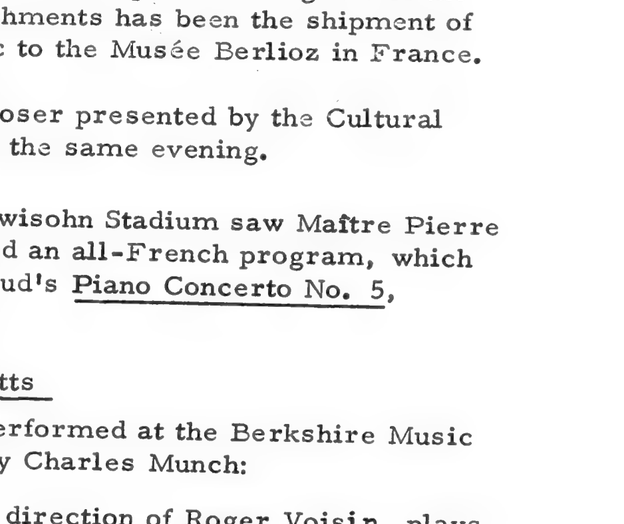
The opera scenes were performed in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, with Goldovsky providing piano accompaniment.

A year ago Goldovsky's New England Opera Company gave American Premier, in Boston, of Hector Berlioz's massive "The Trojans," (composed in 1863), and tonight Marjorie McClung, soprano, of San Antonio, Tex., and Robert Nagy, of Lorrain, Ohio, sang the roles of Dido and Aeneas from Act Four in an English translation.

The handsome set was designed by Robert O'Hearn and costumes were by Leo Van Witzen. Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), in an English version by Robert Hess, was sung by Lynn Rasmussen, Kenosha, Wis.; Polyna Zagarethou, Boston; Harold Johnson, Chicago; and Guy Gardner, Houston; in principal roles. Ed Flesh and Ray Simpson did scenery and custome decor.

Annabelle Bernard of New Orleans was the Aida and Glaudia Lourie of New York the Amneris in the second act duet from "Aida." Verdi's "Don Carlo," performed in Italian, featured John Parella and Spelios Constantine of Philadelphia, John McCurdy of Detroit, Donald Henrickson, Conklin, Mich.; Madeleine Palmer, Manchester, N. H., and Shirley Carter, Los Angeles. In the Letter Scene of Act 1 from "Falstaff," Malcolm Bernstein of Baltimore was the Ford; Virginia Babikian, Everett, his wife; Robert Nagy was the Fenton, and Elaine Quint of Syracuse, the Nanetta. Other designers represented on the program were Roger Graef, Tom Degaetani and Laura Zirner.

On Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 6 and 7, Goldovsky will stage the major offering of the Tanglewood season, Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin," given last winter in condensed form on NBC-TV, now staged for the first time anywhere, with the composer conducting.



PIANIST AND CONDUCTOR. Joey De Oliveira, left, pianist, and her husband, Eleazar de Cavallo, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will be in "Tanglewood" in concert Friday night, Aug. 3, for a Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed. Miss De Oliveira will play Ravel's Piano Concerto in her North American debut, with the Boston Symphony under direction of de Cavallo.

[160]

OPERA SINGERS AT TANGLEWOOD ARE EFFECTIVE

SPR. UNION — 7/31/56

Student Artists Present Five Excerpts Under Goldovsky Direction

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 30—The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center is unusually strong this summer and tonight, under the general direction of Boris Goldovsky, many of the fine singers were heard in five scenes from 19th Century operas. These included "La Rondine" by Puccini, the second act duet from "Aida" by Verdi, the second act of Verdis "Don Carlo," Act 4 of "The Trojans" by Berlioz and a scene from the first act of "Falstaffa" by Verdi.

Style Variety

These scenes were chosen so that the students in the department might get a general view of the different styles in opera during the century. Puccins "La Rondine" is a brilliant, ebullient operetta and it was opulently staged. Lynn Rasmussen, from Kenosha, Wis., was a lovely Magda both in person and voice. Polyna Zagaretou, who hails from Boston, as pert and comical as the maid Lisette. Harold Johnson, as the poet, proved to be an admirable singing-actor from Chicago.

The dramatic duet between Ameris and Aida is practically an act in itself. Annabelle Bernard from New Orleans, who sang so well in Mozarts "Zaide" last week, undertook the role of Aida even though it was a bit heavy for her. Claudia Loure from New York was a strong voice Ameris.

The stark tragedy of Verdis "Don Carlo" was strongly projected by the young singers. John Parella from Philadelphia, handled the taxing role of King Philip very well. John McMurdy from Detroit was the inquisitor and provided some of the finest singing of the entire evening. Shirley Carter from Los Angeles sang "O Don Fatale" in thrilling manner which earned her well deserved applause. Madeline Palmer was effective as Queen Elizabeth. The opera was handsomely staged and the costumes were eye filling.

"The Trojans" by Berlioz is a particular favorite with Mr. Goldovsky, whose New England Opera Co. gave the first American performance. Some of the finest voices in the department were chosen to sing in this work. There was, for example, the dido of Marjorie McClung, sung with faultless taste, and the clear vocalism of Robert Nagy as Aeneas. Both principals enunicated the English text admirably. Miss McClub comes from San Antonio and Mr. Nagy from Jarain, O. Spelios Constantine of Philadelphia has the making of a fine voice and he has considerable stage sense. Mildred Allen from Gulfport, Miss. was a clear voiced, appealing Ascanius. Robert O'Hearn's scenic design was effective and Leo Van Witten designed handsome costumes.

Know Every Note

The final work, which we did not see, was the second scene of the first act of "Falstaff." Virginia Babikian of Everett, was Mistress Ford, Abby-Maria Byers of Louisville, Ky., was Mistress Page and Rosalind Hupp of Chillicottie, O., was Dame Quickly. Malcom Bernstein of Baltimore sang Ford.

The pupils of Mr. Goldovsky have one thing in common. They know every note of their music and are seldom seen looking at the conductor. They all move easily about the stage and know the trick of under play. The works sung in English tonight found most of the singers able to enunciate clearly. Everything was very professional and effective.

LENOX

Service Tribute To Koussevitsky

Lenox, July 30 — The fifth anniversary of the death of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was observed at the Sunday service at the Church-On-The-Hill. The Tanglewood chorus, accompanied by strings and organ, provided music for the service. Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's choral department directed the chorus. The sermon, by Rev. Harry Trust, was "Songs in the night." Miss Florence Dunn was the guest organist, playing the piano given the church by Madame Koussevitsky in her husband's memory. Dr. Koussevitsky is buried in the Cemetery-On-The-Hill. The chorus sang "Aperite Mihi Portas," a cantata by Buxtehude and two numbers from Bach's "Passion According to St. John."

INFORMATION OBSCURED

RECORDINGS

Classical Music

Emmanuel, 10 Pièces Pittoresques, performed by pianist
nette Doyen. (Westminster)

briel, Theme and Variations; Barcarolle (Op. 70); five Impron d a Nocturne, with Joerg Demus at the piano. (Westminster)

ésar, Rédemption; Chasseur Maudit; Psyché. André Cluytens Paris Conservatory Orchestra. (Angel)

artet in D Major for Strings, executed by the Loewenguth Qua pic)

hansons. Delightful music of the high Renaissance sung by the usica Antiqua of Brussels, led by Safford Cape. (German Gra ophon Gesellschaft, distributed through Decca) uard, Namouna Ballet Suites Nos. 1 and 2. Jean Martinon con e London Philharmonic. (London)

de Machaur, La Messe de Notre-Dame and Ten Secular Work ro Musica Antiqua of Brussels under Safford Cape. (German G ophon Gesellschaft, distributed through Decca)

Five French Dances; Suite in D Minor and Suites Nos. 1 and 2 b
'Hervelois. Paul Doktor, violist, and Fernando Valenti, harpsi Westminster)

Jean-Philippe, Premier livre de pièces de clavecin (1706); Piè lavecin (17240); Suite No. 1 in E Major; Suite No. 2 in D Major.
r the Suite in E Major, these are all first long-playing perform
y French harpsichordist Marcelle Charbonnier. (Epic)

Miscellaneous

ngs from French Canada. Twenty songs interpreted by a group rench-Canadian youngsters, recorded by Sam Gesser in Montre Folkways)

tes Maudits. Poems from Baudelaire's Les Fleurs du Mal and Petits Poèmes en Prose; Rimbaud's Les Illuminations and Une S n enfer, recited by Jean-Louis Barrault. (London) par Madeleine Renaud. Vierge à Midi by Claudel, and poems by Verlaine, Péguy, la Comtesse de Noailles and Desbordes-Valmo re recited by Mme Renaud on this ten-inch disk. (London)

*

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 184,866

JUL 31 1956

OPERA STUDENTS WIN TANGLEWOOD SUCCESS

By WALTER ALFORD

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, July
Five acts from 19th century as by Berlioz, Puccini, and rdi, two of them sung for the t time here, were performed re tonight by students of the ra department of the Berkcity audience in the Berka Festival's Theater-Concert

he opera scenes were pered in Italian and in Eng-under the direction of is Goldovsky, who heads the ra department of the Boston phony Orchestra's summer ic school, with Goldovsky ding piano accompaniment. year ago Goldovsky's New land Opera Company gave erican Premier, in Boston, of or Berlioz's massive "The ns." (composed in 1863), onight Marjorie McClung,
o, of San Antonio, Tex.,
Robert Nagy, of Lorrain, sang the roles of Dido and s from Act Four in an h translation.

handsome set was de-
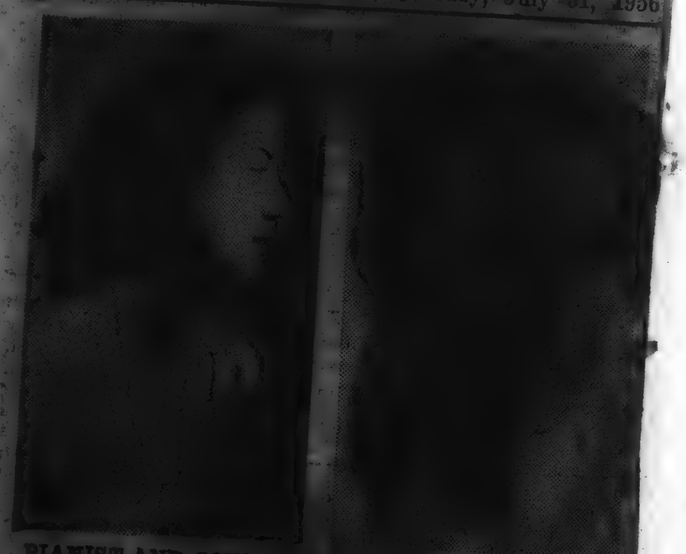
by Robert O'Hearn and were by Leo Van uccini's "La Rondine" now), in an English version by Robert Hess, was sung by Lynn Rasmussen, Kenosha, Wis.; Polyna Zagarethou, Boston; Harold Johnson, Chicago; and Guy Gardner, Houston; in principal roles. Ed Flesh and Ray Simpson did scenery and custome decor.

Annabelle Bernard of New Orleans was the Aida and Claudia Lourie of New York the Amneris in the second act duet from "Aida." Verdi's "Don Carlo," performed in Italian, featured John Parella and Spellos Constantine of Philadelphia, John McCurdy of Detroit, Donald Henrickson, Conklin, Mich.; Madeleine Palmer, Manchester, N. H., and Shirley Carter, Los Angeles. In the Letter Scene of Act 1 from "Falstaff," Malcolm Bernstein of Baltimore was the Ford; Virginia Babikian, Everett, his wife; Robert Nagy was the Fenton, and Elaine Quint of Syracuse, the Nanetta. Other designers represented on the program were Roger Graef, Tom Degaetani and Laura Zirner.

On Monday and Tuesday, Aug 6 and 7, Goldovsky will stage winter in condensed form o the major offering of the T NBC-TV, now slated for th wood season, Lukas F line a with the act opera "Griffelkin,"

[160]

28 HERALD-JOURNAL, Tuesday, July 31, 1956



PIANIST AND CONDUCTOR. Joey De Oliveira, left, pianist, and her husband, Eleazar de Cavallo, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will be in "Tanglewood" in concert Friday night, Aug. 3, for a Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed. Miss De Oliveira will play Ravel's Piano Concerto in her North American debut, with the Boston Symphony under direction of de Cavallo.

...ston (Mistress Ford, Abby-Maria Byers of Louisville, Ky., was Mistress Page and Rosalind Hupp of Chillicottie, O., was Dame Quickly. Malcom Bernstein of Baltimore sang Ford.

The pupils of Mr. Goldovsky have one thing in common. They know every note of their music and are seldom seen looking at the conductor. They all move easily about the stage and know the trick of under play. The works sung in English tonight found most of the singers able to enunciate clearly. Everything was very professional and effective.

LENOX

Service Tribute To Koussevitsky

Lenox, July 30 — The fifth anniversary of the death of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was observed at the Sunday service at the Church-On-The-Hill. The Tanglewood chorus, accompanied by strings and organ, provided music for the service. Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's choral department directed the chorus. The sermon, by Rev. Harry Trust, was "Songs in the night." Miss Florence Dunn was the guest organist, playing the piano given the church by Madame Koussevitsky in her husband's memory. Dr. Koussevitsky is buried in the Cemetery-On-The-Hill. The chorus sang "Aperite Mini Portas," a cantata by Buxtehude and two numbers from Bach's "Passion According ..."

Advertiser Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 31 1956

VOICES AT TANGLEWOOD
Operatic Vignettes

LENOX, July 30—Student singers from the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school here tonight gave first performances in the Berkshires of acts of two little-known stage works on a program of five acts from the repertory of 19th Century opera.

An overflow audience were especially attracted to the unfamiliar "La Rondine" (The Swallow), a late work of Puccini, of which Act I in an English version by Robert Hess was performed in an attractive setting by Ed Wittstein, costumed by Ray Simpson. Leading roles were, Magda, sung by Lynn Rasmussen; Lisette, performed by Polyna Zagarethou; Perunier, sung by Harold Johnsrud and Rambaldo, played by Guy Gardner.

The other novelty was Act IV of the 1863 Berlioz "The Trojans," sung in English, in which Marjorie McClung was the Dido and Robert Nagy the Aeneas. Robert O'Hearn designed the setting, and Leo Van Witsen the costumes.

Together with scenes from "Aida" (the duet from Act II); "Don Carlo, Act II; and the letter scene from Act I of "Falstaff," the opera scenes were given under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center here, with Goldovsky introducing each scene and providing piano accompaniment.

Next Monday and Tuesday, Goldovsky's students will offer the complete three-act version of "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, who teaches composition at Tanglewood, with the composer conducting a student orchestra. Although "Griffelkin" was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Co. and nationally telecast last November, it has never been given on a stage.

W. A.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

JUL 31 1956

Tanglewood Bills Three Conductors

Three different conductors will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Series C main concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler"; the Ravel Piano Concerto with Jocy de Oliveira as soloist, and Stravinsky's complete score for the ballet "Petrouchka."

Saturday evening at the same hour, Leonard Bernstein will conduct a program in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, long head of the Boston Symphony. The music will include Moevs' Variations for Orchestra; the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's C Minor Mass, with Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, as soloists; and Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch will lead the orchestra in a Symphonic Ode by Aaron Copland; Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti as soloist; and Schumann's Second Symphony.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 31 1956

OPERATIC EXCERPTS OFFERED AT LENOX

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 30—Five acts from nineteenth-century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi were given here tonight.

Students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center performed the excerpts before a capacity audience in the Berkshire festival's theatre-concert hall. Boris Goldovsky directed the performance and provided piano accompaniment.

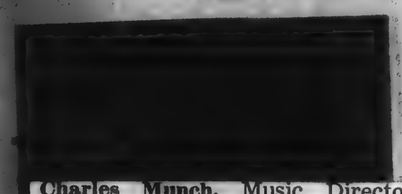
The excerpts offered were from Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine" and Verdi's "Aida," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff."

Next Monday and Tuesday Mr. Goldovsky will stage the major offering of the Tanglewood season, Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin." The opera, given last winter in condensed form on television, will be staged for the first time. The composer will conduct.

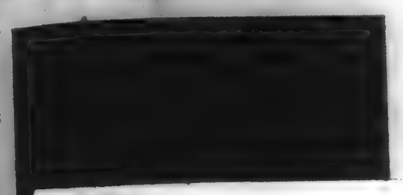
MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)

JUL 1956

...n. o Autori, Asso...
...e N. Y. Philharm...
...e his debut ...
...es conducte...
...ca de la ...
...concerts a...
...nos Aires. ...
...fine com...
The Boston ...
...during its ...
...and Septem...
...can symphor...
...sia. The Ru...
...involved ...
...addition to ...
...hin Soviet ...



Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, was recently awarded three honorary degrees in less than a week by three Greater Boston institutions of higher learning. Tufts University made him a Doctor of Humane Letters; Boston College and Harvard University conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Music. . . . Emerson Buckley, New York-born and American-trained conductor, has been appointed Musical Administrator for the Chicago Theatre Assn., successor to the Chicago Lyric Theatre, for the fall 1956 season.



BOSTON

■ It may be said that the people of Boston are sacrificing a full week of their favorite summer musical fare for the cause of improved international relations. Since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has added five days to its European tour because of the series of concerts in Russia, Charles Munch and his men will have to leave immediately after the close of the Tanglewood Festival on August 12. Moving the Berkshire concerts one week ahead of the customary dates means that the Esplanade Concerts in Boston will last only two weeks this summer.

As many as 25,000 persons throng the Charles River Embankment on a good night; many thousands of Esplanade enthusiasts will have to get along with less this year. These free open-air concerts were founded and are still conducted by Arthur Fiedler, although these last few years have seen many guest conductors serving in place of the regular conductor, who can scarcely begin to satisfy the demand for his services elsewhere.

One encouraging and significant factor in this year's Esplanade series has been the way in which New England business and industry is helping out financially. A beginning was made last summer when several firms donated the costs of one concert each. This year the number has increased to the point where twelve evening concerts and two Wednesday afternoon childrens' program are almost completely sponsored. These excellent results have been obtained almost singlehandedly by a retired member of the orchestra who is spending his far from declining years for the good of the ensemble in which he served forty years as violinist. Last year, when Carlos Pinfield faced the end of his active days with the orchestra he volunteered to stay on to help in every way he could. It was found that he had a particular talent for convincing such shrewd and practical men as owners of department stores and executives of insurance and banking firms that investment in musical culture pays off for everyone concerned—the donors, the public, the community, and the orchestra.

It was Henry B. Cabot, president of the BSO trustees, who formulated the plan that business should support the orchestra much in the same way and for the same basic reasons that it helps support educational institutions. Thus a Cabot planned the strategy and a Pinfield executed the plans. And so the old quatrain—

Here's to Dear Old Boston,
Home of the Bean and the Cod,
Where the Cabots speak only to Lowells,
And the Lowells speak only to God.

now has to be considerably revised because Henry Cabot will speak to anybody who will help the orchestra's finances, and Ralph Lowell figuratively speaks to everybody since he is president of the council which sponsors educational radio and television in the Boston area.

■ Coming back now to musicians, Arthur Fiedler scored his usual success with the Pops, which has consistently performed for capacity houses that unique blend of the best of the lighter and the lighter of the best which gives Pops its unique and inimitable flavor.

As always, there have been a variety of soloists, with Ozan Marsh lead-

Berkshire Music Festival
"Bach-Mozart" Concerts, July 13 and 14

By Marlene A. Burns

The July 12th all-Mozart Tanglewood concert was memorable for the varied and interesting interpretation given to three piano concertos by guest artists Genia Nemenoff, Pierre Luboshutz, and Boris Goldovsky.

The program opened with a spirited performance of the March, Andantino, and Finale from the Serenade in D Major, as conducted by Mr. Goldovsky. The Concerto for Three Pianos and Orchestra, played by the soloists and also conducted by Mr. Goldovsky, was characterized by its vital but somewhat understated interpretation. Each movement was cut off crisply and naturally as if the thematic development and orchestration had merely ceased to flow because each element had become complete. The Piano Concerto in A Major, played by Mr. Goldovsky and conducted by Mr. Luboshutz, had the same clarity of expression as the first concerto, but, in addition, a brilliant exploitation of the Mozartian orchestration, which stemmed from a continuous melodic piano flow contrasted by the predominant staccato plucking of the violins. The Concerto in E flat major for Two Pianos and Orchestra was superb in the rapport between soloists Luboshutz and Nemenoff and the orchestra. The pianists deftly explored the recurrent themes, which were further developed by the orchestra.

Unfortunately, all that was heard of the first half of the July 14th all-Bach program in the Tanglewood theatre-concert ball were the closing strains of the Concerto No. 2 in E major for violin and orchestra.

The literally resounding hit of the evening was Doriot Anthony Dwyer's sensitive and dextrous soloing in the Suite No. 2 in B minor, for Flute and Strings. The Bach work changes pace from movement to movement, and Mrs. Dwyer surpassed all the technical demands, much to the audience's delight. The peak of her triumph was with the last movement, Badinerie, which demands sustained breath control and aconstantly fast rhythm. These demands serve as bases for intricate variations which also presuppose a phenomenal delicacy and assurance in playing. In the Badinerie, Mrs. Dwyer was the master of her instrument to such an extent that after the first applause had subsided, Dr. Munch took the baton again and the exquisitely perfected final movement was repeated.

Perhaps the Suite No. 3 in D Major, for Orchestra, suffered by comparison with Mrs. Dwyer's previous triumph. The solo horn at first sounded rather unsteady and at moments was drowned out by the orchestra. This first lack of rapport and assurance gave was to a more controlled yet almost rollicking performance of the musically colorful suite, as conducted by Dr. Munch.

[161]

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 31 1956

VOICES AT TANGLEWOOD
Operatic Vignettes

LENOX, July 30—Student singers from the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school here tonight gave first performances in the Berkshires of acts of two little-known stage works on a program of five acts from the repertory of 19th Century opera.

An overflow audience were especially attracted to the unfamiliar "La Rondine" (The Swallow), a late work of Puccini, of which Act I in an English version by Robert Hess was performed in an attractive setting by Ed Flesh, costumed by Ray Simpson. Leading roles were, Magda, sung by Lynn Rasmussen; Lisette, performed by Polyna Zagarethou; Perunier, sung by Harold Johnson; and Rambaldo, played by Guy Gardner.

The other novelty was Act IV of the 1863 Berlioz "The Trojans," sung in English, in which Marjorie McClung was the Dido and Robert Nagy the Aeneas. Robert O'Hearn designed the setting, and Leo Van Witsen the costumes.

Together with scenes from "Aida" (the duet from Act II); "Don Carlo, Act II; and the letter scene from Act I of "Falstaff," the opera scenes were given under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center here, with Goldovsky introducing each scene and providing piano accompaniment.

Next Monday and Tuesday, Goldovsky's students will offer the complete three-act version of "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, who teaches composition at Tanglewood, with the composer conducting a student orchestra. Although "Griffelkin" was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Co. and nationally telecast last November, it has never been given on a stage.

W. A.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

JUL 31 1956

Tanglewood Bills Three Conductors

Three different conductors will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Series C main concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler"; the Ravel Piano Concerto with Jocy de Oliveira as soloist; and Stravinsky's complete score for the ballet "Petrouchka."

Koussevitzky Memorial

Saturday evening at the same hour, Leonard Bernstein will conduct a program in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, long head of the Boston Symphony. The music will include Moevs' Variations for Orchestra; the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's C Minor Mass, with Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, as soloists; and Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch will lead the orchestra in a Symphonic Ode by Aaron Copland; Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti as soloist; and Schumann's Second Symphony.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 31 1956

OPERATIC EXCERPTS OFFERED AT LENOX

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 30—Five acts from nineteenth-century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi were given here tonight.

Students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center performed the excerpts before a capacity audience in the Berkshire festival's theatre-concert hall. Boris Goldovsky directed the performance and provided piano accompaniment.

The excerpts offered were from Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine" and Verdi's Aïda," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff."

Next Monday and Tuesday Mr. Goldovsky will stage the major offering of the Tanglewood season, Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin." The opera, given last winter in condensed form on television, will be staged for the first time. The composer will conduct.

MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)

JUL 1956

MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)

JUL 1956

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, was recently awarded three honorary degrees in less than a week by three Greater Boston institutions of higher learning. Tufts University made him a Doctor of Humane Letters; Boston College and Harvard University conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Music. . . . Emerson Buckley, New York-born and American-trained conductor, has been appointed Musical Administrator for the Chicago Theatre Assn., successor to the Chicago Lyric Theatre, for the fall 1956 season.

BOSTON

■ It may be said that the people of Boston are sacrificing a full week of their favorite summer musical fare for the cause of improved international relations. Since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has added five days to its European tour because of the series of concerts in Russia, Charles Munch and his men will have to leave immediately after the close of the Tanglewood Festival on August 12. Moving the Berkshire concerts one week ahead of the customary dates means that the Esplanade Concerts in Boston will last only two weeks this summer.

As many as 25,000 persons throng the Charles River Embankment on a good night; many thousands of Esplanade enthusiasts will have to get along with less this year. These free open-air concerts were founded and are still conducted by Arthur Fiedler, although these last few years have seen many guest conductors serving in place of the regular conductor, who can scarcely begin to satisfy the demand for his services elsewhere.

One encouraging and significant factor in this year's Esplanade series has been the way in which New England business and industry is helping out financially. A beginning was made last summer when several firms donated the costs of one concert each. This year the number has increased to the point where twelve evening concerts and two Wednesday afternoon childrens' program are almost completely sponsored. These excellent results have been obtained almost singlehandedly by a retired member of the orchestra who is spending his far from declining years for the good of the ensemble in which he served forty years as violinist. Last year, when Carlos Pinfield faced the end of his active days with the orchestra he volunteered to stay on to help in every way he could. It was found that he had a particular talent for convincing such shrewd and practical men as owners of department stores and executives of insurance and banking firms that investment in musical culture pays off for everyone concerned - the donors, the public, the community, and the orchestra.

It was Henry B. Cabot, president of the BSO trustees, who formulated the plan that business should support the orchestra much in the same way and for the same basic reasons that it helps support educational institutions. Thus a Cabot planned the strategy and a Pinfield executed the plans. And so the old quatrain—

Here's to Dear Old Boston,
Home of the Bean and the Cod,
Where the Cabots speak only to Lowells,
And the Lowells speak only to God.

now has to be considerably revised because Henry Cabot will speak to anybody who will help the orchestra's finances, and Ralph Lowell figuratively speaks to everybody since he is president of the council which sponsors educational radio and television in the Boston area.

■ Coming back now to musicians, Arthur Fiedler scored his usual success with the Pops, which has consistently performed for capacity houses that unique blend of the best of the lighter and the lighter of the best which gives Pops its unique and inimitable flavor.

As always, there have been a variety of soloists, with Ozan Marsh lead-

Berkshire Music Festival
"Bach-Mozart" Concerts, July 13 and 14

By Marlene A. Burns

The July 12th all-Mozart Tanglewood concert was memorable for the varied and interesting interpretation given to three piano concertos by guest artists Genia Nemenoff, Pierre Luboshutz, and Boris Goldovsky.

The program opened with a spirited performance of the March, Andantino, and Finale from the Serenade in D Major, as conducted by Mr. Goldovsky. The Concerto for Three Pianos and Orchestra, played by the soloists and also conducted by Mr. Goldovsky, was characterized by its vital but somewhat understated interpretation. Each movement was cut off crisply and naturally as if the thematic development and orchestration had merely ceased to flow because each element had become complete. The Piano Concerto in A Major, played by Mr. Goldovsky and conducted by Mr. Luboshutz, had the same clarity of expression as the first concerto, but, in addition, a brilliant exploitation of the Mozartian orchestration, which stemmed from a continuous melodic piano flow contrasted by the predominant staccato plucking of the violins. The Concerto in E flat major for Two Pianos and Orchestra was superb in the rapport between soloists Luboshutz and Nemenoff and the orchestra. The pianists deftly explored the recurrent themes, which were further developed by the orchestra.

Unfortunately, all that was heard of the first half of the July 14th all-Bach program in the Tanglewood theatre-concert ball were the closing strains of the Concerto No. 2 in E major for violin and orchestra.

The literally resounding hit of the evening was Doriot Anthony Dwyer's sensitive and dextrous soloing in the Suite No. 2 in B minor, for Flute and Strings. The Bach work changes pace from movement to movement, and Mrs. Dwyer surpassed all the technical demands, much to the audience's delight. The peak of her triumph was with the last movement, Badinerie, which demands sustained breath control and a constantly fast rhythm. These demands serve as bases for intricate variations which also presuppose a phenomenal delicacy and assurance in playing. In the Badinerie, Mrs. Dwyer was the master of her instrument to such an extent that after the first applause had subsided, Dr. Munch took the baton again and the exquisitely perfected final movement was repeated.

Perhaps the Suite No. 3 in D Major, for Orchestra, suffered by comparison with Mrs. Dwyer's previous triumph. The solo horn at first sounded rather unsteady and at moments was drowned out by the orchestra. This first lack of rapport and assurance gave was to a more controlled yet almost rollicking performance of the musically colorful suite, as conducted by Dr. Munch.

Autori, Associate
Y. Philharmonic-
s debut in South conductor of the de la Radio del
certs at the Uni-
Aires. Works by composers were Boston Symphony
ng its European September. It is mphony ever to e Russians will ved in this part on to a stipend viet territory....

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 14 1956

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 12 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel. 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts Wed. 8:30 p.m. Sat. 2:30. Chamber Orch. Fri. 8:30 Sun 2:30. $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Central Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General admission $2 on sale day of concert. Thru July 8—Concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 11-Aug. 12 in Music Shed. Berkshire Hills Music Center Hall. Berkshire Hills on account... Fri. July 13—Conference, Prof. ... Lobositz cond. Louis Goldenberg, ... Concerto No. 2. Sat. July 14—Mozart pro... Concerto in A. ... Concerto in E-flat. ... Sat. July 14—... Charles Munch cond. Bach program: ... Brandenburg Concerto No. ... in F; Violin Concerto in E; Suite No. ... in B minor for ... Strauss, Suite No. ... Ralph Gomberg; ... soloists: Ru... Tony Dever... William Kroll; ... Sun. July 15—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Passion According to St. John." Soloists: Phyllis Addison, David Lloyd; Mae Morgan, Soprano. Wed. July 18—Chamber Music. Brass Ensemble directed by Roger Voisin; Margaret Harshaw, soloist. ... Boston Symphony Orchestra bow July 20—Charles Munch, cond. Berlioz, Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy, Prelude to "Afternoon of a Faun"; Ravel, Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms, Symphony No. 2 in D. ... Sat. July 21—Charles Munch cond. Wagner, ... Overture"; "Waldweber" from Siegfried; ... and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; "Die Walkure" (Act I). Soloists: Margaret Harshaw; Albert DaCosta; James Pease.

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Morn.)
Circ. D. 126,015
JUN 16 1956

Three Honorary Degrees Conferred on Symphony Conductor Charles Munch

Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has concluded a two-day return visit to Boston from his Paris home during which time he became one of the most honored men in musical and academic circles. Between Sunday and Thursday Dr. Munch was the recipient of honorary degrees from three Greater Boston institutions of higher learning.

On Sunday, Tufts University made him a Doctor of Humane Letters; on Wednesday Boston College granted him the degree of Doctor of Music; and at the Commencement at Harvard University Thursday the degree of Doctor of Music was again conferred upon him. In 1955 Boston University also awarded him the degree of Doctor of Music.

Last night Dr. Munch returned to Paris, but he will fly back to the United States in two weeks to open the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox, Sunday afternoon, July 1. During the six weeks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Dr. Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts.

Immediately after the Festival, on Aug. 12, Dr. Munch will again return to Europe, this time accompanied by all 104 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will begin their five-week tour of Europe with a concert in Cork, Ireland on Aug. 24.

Highlights of the European tour, in which Pierre Monteux will share some of the conducting burden with Dr. Munch, will be five performances climaxing the 1956 Edinburgh Festival, and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union, marking the first time an American symphony orchestra will have played in Russia.

Dr. Munch and the orchestra will return to Boston in time to start rehearsals on Oct. 1 for the orchestra's 76th season, which will begin on Oct. 5.

THE LENINGRAD IN VIENNA

By JOSEPH WECHSBERG

VIENNA, AUSTRIA.

VIENNA'S venerable Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (Society of Friends of Music) whose arch-conservative subscribers consider every post-Brahms composer an atonal noisemaker and every orchestra inferior to the Wiener Philharmoniker, recently surprised itself and Vienna's music-lovers during the Festwochen with a Mozart Festival of considerable scope—even considering this year's abundance of Mozart festivals. The Society invited four orchestras of international repute to play the kind of music which they play best, and to make just a polite bow to Mozart. It was a great success, and long overdue in Vienna where too many experts and critics, cut off for years from musical life abroad, display a tendency toward provincialism and insularity. They are so convinced of the superiority of certain Viennese musical monuments—the Philharmoniker, the Staatsoper, the zitherplayer Toni Karas, the Saengerknaben, Irmgard Seefried and Wolfgang Schneiderhan, Eduard Strauss, to name only a few—that criticism of these institutions is considered heresy.

Now the Berliner Philharmoniker under Karajan, the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam under van Beinum, the Prague Philharmonic under Ancerl, and the Leningrad Philharmonic under Mrawinsky and Sanderling have performed a number of concerts at the beautiful, acoustically large hall of the Musikverein, and even the rabid musical isolationists admit that there are good orchestras beside the Vienna Philharmonic. A tournament of great orchestras necessarily leads to absurd comparisons, since orchestras are not ball clubs. It also creates mutual inspiration and seems a fine way of educating both audiences and orchestras. Each of the orchestras contributed something of its own: the Berlin Philharmonic displayed precision and a magnificent brass section; the Concertgebouw had dynamic force and a sense of tradition; the Prague musicians "made music," playing Dvořák and Smetana with their typical brio. But the greatest impact was made by the Leningrad Philharmonic. They played more beautifully than any other orchestra that performed here in the past years, including the New York Philharmonic under Mitropoulos and the Philadelphia under Ormandy.

After three concerts, it is certain that the Leningrad Philharmonic, said to be the outstanding orchestra in the Soviet Union, must be included on anybody's list of the world's great half-dozen orchestras. Everything is big about the Leningrad: size (eighteen first violins), tonal volume, and discipline. They march up on the stage from left and right with synchronized steps and the stiff faces of soldiers on the parade ground, and whole sections sit down at the same moment. This display of rigid discipline was particularly striking on the third evening, a few hours after a concert of the Vienna Philharmonic under Bruno Walter, when a cello-playing latecomer appeared just as Walter began Mozart's G Minor symphony.

Fortunately, the precision lost its rigidity the moment the Leningrad orchestra began to play. The exactness was flexible, never stiff. The orchestra is made up of first-rate musicians. The violin section seems to be composed of distant relatives of Messrs. Heifetz, Oistrakh, Milstein, Menuhin, and other great fiddlers, originating directly or indirectly from a rather small area in Southern Russia, and of Jewish ancestry. They played with a full, strong, sensuous tone and their bowing was incisive; even difficult staccato passages were performed as by one man. The strings generally have the force and brilliance of the best American orchestras but surpass them in emotional intensity. Despite the heavy pathos in Tchaikowsky's "Pathetique" the laws of good taste were never violated; if you must play the "Pathetique" at all, this was the way to play it. The second foundation of the orchestra is the brass section; metallic and soft at the same time, strong and muted, the perfect silver tone. In the final movements of Tchaikowsky's "Fifth" the horn players turn their instruments toward the ceiling; an effect which, oldtimers here remember, was much liked by Gustav Mahler. Even during the fortissimo sweeps there was a velvety sound about the brass. The woodwinds are slightly nasal (they play French instruments) and the tonal shades of both flutes and clarinets seemed somewhat limited compared to Western orchestras. The oboe players are first rate. The whole group has an astonishing ability for dynamic sweep and fine tonal nuances. The technique has become a matter of fact and at their best these musical thoroughbreds give the impression of performing under a sudden inspiration, although this impression has been created after hundreds of painstaking rehearsals.

THE Leningrad Philharmonic is conducted by Eugen Mrawinsky and by Kurt Sanderling. Mrawinsky, a blond, tall man of elegant bearing, powerful gestures, and great concentration, has been with the orchestra for thirty years, a great educator. Kurt Sanderling, born in Germany and educated in Berlin, came to Leningrad in 1941. He impressed by his clear, precise beat and his sense of dynamics. The orchestra gives about ten concerts (with five different programs) every month in Leningrad, and a number of concerts in the Caucasus and Black Sea resorts during the summer months. They have a large orchestra and a somewhat smaller one which performs in Leningrad when the large ensemble is touring. (Leningrad also has two opera houses, each with its own orchestra.) There are subscriptions for ten different cycles. The programs are made up mostly of old and new Russian music, and of Western music. Bach, Brahms, Richard Strauss, and Bartók are as popular as the classics. Special concerts are given on anniversaries; this year they played six Mozart concerts and special Grieg, Sibelius and Schumann concerts. Strict discipline is the off-stage rule. In Vienna, the musicians were taken to and from the concert hall in buses. On concert days they were not permitted to drink beer and other alcoholic beverages, and did not attend receptions in their honor.

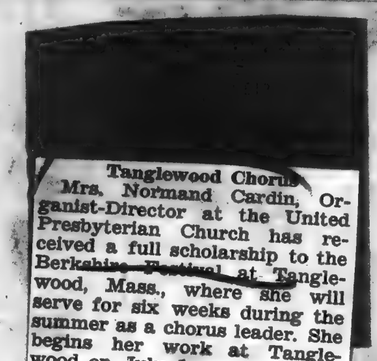
DECATUR, ILL.
HERALD
Circ. D. 35,340
JUN 19 1956

CAROLYN BACKUS ENTERS NORFOLK MUSIC SCHOOL

Miss Carolyn Backus, 236 N. Dennis Ave., left yesterday to enter the Norfolk Music School of Yale University, Norfolk, Conn., for advanced study of piano and voice for six weeks on a scholarship. Miss Backus attended Tanglewood as an auditor in the opera department during the summer vacation of 1955.

She will be a senior at the University of Illinois in the fall. During the past year, she was with the University of Illinois orchestra under the direction of Sir Thomas Beecham, Bart. She played the part of Cerubino in "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart. She also was in Junior Recital, Opera Workshop Evening of Scenes, Collegium Concert of Renaissance.

Miss Backus was president of Mu Phi Epsilon sorority and recently was elected to the national honorary music group for both men and women, Pi Kappa Lambda.



Tanglewood Chorus

Mrs. Normand Cardin, Organist-Director at the United Presbyterian Church has received a full scholarship to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., where she will serve for six weeks during the summer as a chorus leader. She begins her work at Tanglewood on July 1.

Residents of this area will attend concerts in Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra near Lenox, Mass., in July and until mid-August. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school in connection with Tanglewood, opens Sunday when more than four hundred students will arrive from many states, from Canada and from foreign lands for study. There will be a number of concerts in the Theater Concert Hall and in the Music Shed [illegible]

[162]

THE LENINGRAD IN VIENNA

By JOSEPH WECHSBERG

VIENNA, AUSTRIA.

VIENNA'S venerable Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (Society of Friends of Music) whose arch-conservative subscribers consider every post-Brahms composer an atonal noisemaker and every orchestra inferior to the Wiener Philharmoniker, recently surprised itself and Vienna's music-lovers during the Festwochen with a Mozart Festival of considerable scope—even considering this year's abundance of Mozart festivals. The Society invited four orchestras of international repute to play the kind of music which they play best, and to make just a polite bow to Mozart. It was a great success, and long overdue in Vienna where too many experts and critics, cut off for years from musical life abroad, display a tendency toward provincialism and insularity. They are so convinced of the superiority of certain Viennese musical monuments—the Philharmoniker, the Staatsoper, the zitherplayer Toni Karas, the Saengerknaben, Irmgard Seefried and Wolfgang Schneiderhan, Eduard Strauss, to name only a few—that criticism of these institutions is considered heresy.

Now the Berliner Philharmoniker under Karajan, the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam under van Beinum, the Prague Philharmonic under Ančerl, and the Leningrad Philharmonic under Mrawinsky and Sanderling have performed a number of concerts at the beautiful, acoustically large hall of the Musikverein, and even the rabid musical isolationists admit that there are good orchestras beside the Vienna Philharmonic. A tournament of great orchestras necessarily leads to absurd comparisons, since orchestras are not ball clubs. It also creates mutual inspiration and seems a fine way of educating both audiences and orchestras. Each of the orchestras contributed something of its own: the Berlin Philharmonic displayed precision and a magnificent brass section; the Concertgebouw had dynamic force and a sense of tradition; the Prague musicians "made music," playing Dvořák and Smetana with their typical brio. But the greatest impact was made by the Leningrad Philharmonic. They played more beautifully than any other orchestra that performed here in the past years, including the New York Philharmonic under Mitropoulos and the Philadelphia under Ormandy.

After three concerts, it is certain that the Leningrad Philharmonic, said to be the outstanding orchestra in the Soviet Union, must be included on anybody's list of the world's great half-dozen orchestras. Everything is big about the Leningrad: size (eighteen first violins), tonal volume, and discipline. They march up on the stage from left and right with synchronized steps and the stiff faces of soldiers on the parade ground, and whole sections sit down at the same moment. This display of rigid discipline was particularly striking on the third evening, a few hours after a concert of the Vienna Philharmonic under Bruno Walter, when a cello-playing latecomer appeared just as Walter began Mozart's G Minor symphony.

Fortunately, the precision lost its rigidity the moment the Leningrad orchestra began to play. The exactness was flexible, never stiff. The orchestra is made up of first-rate musicians. The violin section seems to be composed of distant relatives of Messrs. Heifetz, Oistrakh, Milstein, Menuhin, and other great fiddlers, originating directly or indirectly from a rather small area in Southern Russia, and of Jewish ancestry. They played with a full, strong, sensuous tone and their bowing was incisive; even difficult staccato passages were performed as by one man. The strings generally have the force and brilliance of the best American orchestras but surpass them in emotional intensity. Despite the heavy pathos in Tchaikowsky's "Pathetique" the laws of good taste were never violated; if you must play the "Pathetique" at all, this was the way to play it. The second foundation of the orchestra is the brass section; metallic and soft at the same time, strong and muted, the perfect silver tone. In the final movements of Tchaikowsky's "Fifth" the horn players turn their instruments toward the ceiling; an effect which, oldtimers here remember, was much liked by Gustav Mahler. Even during the fortissimo sweeps there was a velvety sound about the brass. The woodwinds are slightly nasal (they play French instruments) and the tonal shades of both flutes and clarinets seemed somewhat limited compared to Western orchestras. The oboe players are first rate. The whole group has an astonishing ability for dynamic sweep and fine tonal nuances. The technique has become a matter of fact and at their best these musical thoroughbreds give the impression of performing under a sudden inspiration, although this impression has been created after hundreds of painstaking rehearsals.

THE Leningrad Philharmonic is conducted by Eugen Mrawinsky and by Kurt Sanderling. Mrawinsky, a blond, tall man of elegant bearing, powerful gestures, and great concentration, has been with the orchestra for thirty years, a great educator. Kurt Sanderling, born in Germany and educated in Berlin, came to Leningrad in 1941. He impressed by his clear, precise beat and his sense of dynamics. The orchestra gives about ten concerts (with five different programs) every month in Leningrad, and a number of concerts in the Caucasus and Black Sea resorts during the summer months. They have a large orchestra and a somewhat smaller one which performs in Leningrad when the large ensemble is touring. (Leningrad also has two opera houses, each with its own orchestra.) There are subscriptions for ten different cycles. The programs are made up mostly of old and new Russian music, and of Western music. Bach, Brahms, Richard Strauss, and Bartók are as popular as the classics. Special concerts are given on anniversaries; this year they played six Mozart concerts and special Grieg, Sibelius and Schumann concerts. Strict discipline is the off-stage rule. In Vienna, the musicians were taken to and from the concert hall in buses. On concert days they were not permitted to drink beer and other alcoholic beverages, and did not attend receptions in their honor.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUN 14 1956

MUSIC

[illegible] FESTIVAL [illegible] Thurs. Aug. 12 — [illegible] Boston [illegible] concert: [illegible] open Fri: [illegible] excerpts from [illegible] Lenox. [illegible] on sale day [illegible] Theatre-[illegible] Music Shed. [illegible] Mt. Wilson Hills Fri. July 13— [illegible] Szantz cond. [illegible] in F, K. 242: [illegible] in B-flat, K. [illegible] Munch cond, [illegible] Concerto No. [illegible] Suite No. 2 [illegible]s, Suite No. [illegible]th Gomberg: [illegible] Dwyer. . . .

[illegible] cond. Bach. [illegible] Soloists. [illegible] Morgan [illegible] Music Brass En-[illegible] Marcare: [illegible] Boston Symphony [illegible] Munch, cond. [illegible] Carnival"; [illegible] of a Faun: [illegible]ons. Symphony [illegible] Charles Munch [illegible]; "Wald-[illegible] and "Love-[illegible] Isolde; "Die [illegible] Harshaw:

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Morn.)
Circ. D. 126,015
JUN 16 1956

Three Honorary Degrees Conferred on Symphony Conductor Charles Munch

Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has concluded a five-day return visit to Boston from his Paris home during which time he became one of the most honored men in musical and academic circles. Between Sunday and Thursday Dr. Munch was the recipient of honorary degrees from three Greater Boston institutions of higher learning.

On Sunday, Tufts University made him a Doctor of Humane Letters; on Wednesday Boston College granted him the degree of Doctor of Music; and at the Commencement at Harvard University Thursday the degree of Doctor of Music was again conferred upon him. In 1955 Boston University also awarded him the degree of Doctor of Music.

Last night Dr. Munch returned to Paris, but he will fly back to the United States in two weeks to open the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox on Sunday afternoon, July 1. During the six weeks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Dr. Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts.

Immediately after the Festival, on Aug. 12, Dr. Munch will again return to Europe, this time accompanied by all 104 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will begin their five-week tour of Europe with a concert in Cork, Ireland on Aug. 24.

Highlights of the European tour, in which Pierre Monteux will share some of the conducting burden with Dr. Munch, will be five performances climaxing the 1956 Edinburgh Festival, and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union, marking the first time an American symphony orchestra will have played in Russia.

Dr. Munch and the orchestra will return to Boston in time to start rehearsals on Oct. 1 for the orchestra's 76th season, which will begin on Oct. 5.

DECATUR, ILL.
HERALD
Circ. D. 35,340
JUN 19 1956

CAROLYN BACKUS ENTERS NORFOLK MUSIC SCHOOL

Miss Carolyn Backus, 236 N. Dennis Ave., left yesterday to enter the Norfolk Music School of Yale University, Norfolk, Conn., for advanced study of piano and voice for six weeks on a scholarship. Miss Backus attended Tanglewood as an auditor in the opera department during the summer vacation of 1955.

She will be a senior at the University of Illinois in the fall. During the past year, she was with the University of Illinois orchestra under the direction of Sir Thomas Beecham, Bart. She played the part of Cerubino in "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart. She also was in Junior Recital, Opera Workshop Evening of Scenes, Collegium Concert of Renaissance.

Miss Backus was, president of Mu Phi Epsilon sorority and recently was elected to the national honorary music group for both men and women, Pi Kappa Lambda.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
NEWS
Circ. W. 1,519
JUN 28 1956

Tanglewood Chorus

Mrs. Normand Cardin, Organist-Director at the United Presbyterian Church has received a full scholarship to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., where she will serve for six weeks during the summer as a chorus leader. She begins her work at Tanglewood on July 1.

DELMAR, N. Y.
ALBANY [illegible] POST
Circ. W. [illegible]
JUN 29 1956

Residents of this area will attend concerts in Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra near Lenox, Mass., in July and until mid-August. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school in connection with Tanglewood, opens Sunday when more than four hundred students will arrive from many states, from Canada and from foreign lands for study. There will be a number of concerts in the Theater Concert Hall and in the Music Shed there.

[162]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205
JUN 30 1956

The Summer Circuit

Drama, Music, Dance

By ORMONDE PLATER

THERE is something in austerity that enobles man. It does not always have to do with the subject: revenge, anger, murder, hatred—all these and more when expressed in understatements rise above themselves.

Austerity is the quality, a classic quality, which is the essence of the Japanese dance dramas. There is motion in them, but it is studied, graceful and appropriate. As performed by Japanese dancers of skill, it is never wasted.

Sahomi Tachibana is such a dancer. In a performance which will be repeated tonight, she opened the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival yesterday with four of her native dances, examples of an art that, coming from the conquered, is conquering our country in return.

The highlight of her performance was "Goro," a tragic drama in which a young Samurai, member of the warrior class, struggles with himself. Like Hamlet, he must decide to revenge the murder of his father.

She applied the same manner of dancing to less austere types of the art—two dances of laughter and one of beauty.

One of the former, to music vaguely resembling that of a square dance, concerns a young fishing gal, who capers about with joy. In the other, another girl twits her beau.

Miss Tachibana goes through the motions of a wisteria tree blown by the wind in the dance of beauty. Her body sways, her limbs flutter.

Also starring at the festival's first night was Mia Slavenska, a classic ballerina. She acted with sensitivity through the feelings of [illegible] anger and insanity in the ballet "Medea."

Her performance of the "Nutcracker" [illegible] was precise and beautiful. That of Robert Lindner, her partner and [illegible] to starring role, was precise.

The program was rounded out by the Modern Dance Group of Connecticut State College for Women. The ladies were lively in a number of dances on folk themes.

• • •

FOR THE [illegible] statistics, let's [illegible] Berkshire Festival, which opens next week for six weeks of the classics, in two portions—the Wednesday night chamber music and the Friday-Saturday-Sunday concerts.

In the latter portion, the first two weeks will be devoted to two masters, Bach and Mozart, and the final four weeks to full-scale concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

SAHOMI TACHIBANA
Japanese Dancerne

The big attraction Friday will be Benny Goodman, who will stop swinging and swaying long enough to solo in Mozart's popular Clarinet Concerto. More about Benny next week.

The Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello) will initiate the Festival, which incidentally is celebrating its diamond jubilee this summer, at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday in the concert hall at Tanglewood.

The program: Mozart's Quartet in C Major (K. 465), Prokofieff's Quartet No. 1 (Op. 50) and Beethoven's Quartet (Op. 59, No. 3).

The Boston Symphony, in addition to conducting a festival on a par with those of Holland and Salzburg, maintains a music school at Tanglewood. The students wil give some 25 concerts.

The first will be Thursday night. Student conductors will lead a student orchestra in Beethoven's "Egmont" overture, Barber's "Essay No. 1" and Brahms' "Variations on a Theme of Haydn." Eleazer de Carvalho, director of the school in the absence of Leonard Bernstein, will conduct a final symphony.

• • •

MONDAY'S theater openings are:

Berkshire — Marcelle Maurette's "Anastasia"; opened Dec. 30, 1954, at Lyceum Theater, for 271 performances, with Viveca Lindfors; despite melodrama, critics liked it, especially the actors' performances. Anastasia, heir to the Russian throne, wins the recognition and love of the dowager empress, leaves the scoundrels who would exploit her and retires from the scene with the man she loves. Lydia St. Clair stars.

Sacandaga—George S. Kaufman and Howard Teichman's "The Solid Gold Cadillac"; Nov. 5, 1953, Belasco Theater, with Josephine Hull, 66 weeks; critics enjoyed it. Based on Mrs. Wilma Soss, nightmare of stockholders' meetings. Gertrude (Mollie Goldberg) Berg stars.

Spa—George Axelrod's "The Seven Year Itch"; Nov. 20, 1952, Fulton Theater, with Tom Ewell, 1,114 performances; critics laughted. Summer bachlor plus girl upstairs. George Keane stars.

Tuesday openings:

Shelley Players, New Scotland — John Van Druten's "Voice of the Turtle"; Dec. 8, 1943, Morosco Theater, with Margaret Sullavan, 1,657 performances, with one exception (Alton Cook of the World Telegram), critics loved it. Soldier stood up by girl, falls in love with her friend.

Williamstown and Malden Bridge — Sally Bensen's "The Young and the Beautiful," based on F. Scott Fitgerald stories; Oct. 1, 1955, 65 performances, with Lois Smith; critics liked it, with reservations. Young flirt seeks excitement, is sent to the country.

Woodstock — Robert Anderson's "Tea and Sympathy"; Sept. 30, 1953, Ethel Barrymore Theater, 667 performances, with Deborah Kerr; rave notices. Sensitive prep school youth finds sympathy in teacher's wife.

Green Mountain — Richard Nash's "The Rainmaker"; Oct. 28, 1954, Cort Theater, with Geraldine Paige; barring romantic scenes, critics were refreshed. A swindler makes plain girl [illegible]

ROCKFORD, ILL.
STAR
Circ. D. 45,179 - S. 61,137
JUN 27 1956

Sylvia Sandeen Spends Summer At East School

Spending the summer in Cambridge, Mass., is Sylvia Sandeen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Sandeen, 1115 Guilford rd. Sylvia has just completed her third year at Radcliffe college, Cambridge.

Sylvia and a classmate, Julia Ward Picknor, have taken an apartment for the summer. She is attending summer school at Harvard university, where she is taking a course in 19th century English romantic poetry.

On weekends Sylvia travels across the state to attend the Berkshire festival in Tanglewood.

In late August Mr. and Mrs. Sandeen will motor east to bring their daughter back for a vacation before the regular term begins again in late September.

The Sandeens plan to spend the weekend of Aug. 18 in Ephraim, Wis., attending the Peninsula festival. Donald Gramm, a friend of the Sandeens, will be one of the festival soloists.

AT TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns to Tanglewood, Mass., next week for the Berkshire Festival. Dr. Munch will step to the podium Friday to lead a chamber group, including Benny Goodman, in Mozart.

Berkshire Museum to Hold Classes

The Berkshire Museum at Pittsfield has announced a summer program embracing art exhibitions, sculpture and art classes, and motion pictures.

Five exhibits of paintings, stage designs, prints and photographs are scheduled in July. A display of photographs by Sydney R. Kanter will open Sunday and paintings by Ralph Berkowitz of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be on view beginning Tuesday.

The original drawing in Oskar Kokoschka for the stage settings of the "Magic Flute," will be exhibited beginning Wednesday. Art works by the late Albert Sterner and prints lent by Abraham Kamberg will be shown starting next Saturday. All exhibitions will continue through the month.

A sculpture summer school for beginners and advanced students will open Monday with Peter Abate as instructor. Mr. Abate is head of the department of sculpture at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. The school will continue through Aug. 24.

An adult painting class will open July 12 under the direction of Paul Decker.

The museums' theater, "The Little Cinema," is presenting nightly performances.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
GRAPHIC
W.
JUN 27 1956

An Editorial:

Enjoy Staying Home This Summer

Since summertime is synonymous, in our minds, with vacationtime, we often fail to realize that most of us won't be away—at the country or seashore—for the entire summer. Staying home for a major part of the summer months ahead, is the lot of many job holders, who find that they can't get more than a week or two off from their jobs.

So, instead of just planning ahead for your vacation, it might be worthwhile to plan, also, for the long weeks you will spend at home. The wise person will try to make these weeks as enjoyable as possible. Scores of amusement and athletic facilities are at your disposal this summer. All you have to do is to make use of them.

For athletic individuals, neighborhood parks provide tennis courts, handball courts and baseball fields. These facilities are available for public use—free of charge. Just get a permit from the Dept. of Parks and you may enjoy playing your favorite sport.

On those torturous hot summer days, the best way to cool off is to swim at the beach. Coney Island is the favorite beach of many, but if you find it too crowded (and who doesn't) you can frequent other beaches. Reese Park and Jones Beach are two beautiful and clean beaches. Some of us hate to come home wet and dirty from the beach. Well, you don't have to! Just rent a cabana or locker at any one of numerous bath houses.

Enjoy summer evenings at an air-conditioned movie or theatre. You will be surprised to learn that you can get tickets to many hit shows during the summer. Excellent productions are presented at the summer stock theatres in Long Island and Westchester. You can see your favorite stars in famous plays.

Intellectuals will enjoy the outdoor concerts given at Lewisohn Stadium. Music lovers would also enjoy the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, right near Pittsfield, Mass. Go to Tanglewood for a weekend and stay at the Avaloch Inn, across the road from the music festival. At Avaloch you will meet the famous musicians, who play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. At night, Avaloch features the finest jazz concerts.

Staying home this summer can be a lot of fun, if you plan ahead. You can even fortify yourself against the heat by installing an air conditioner, which isn't as expensive as most people think. On a hot summer evening, an air conditioner is far more essential than a television set.

We hope that you will go out and have a lot of fun this summer. Try not to think about the heat and you will find it quite tolerable.

[illegible]

MUNCIE, IND.
PRESS
Circ. D. 19,607

JUN 29 1956

"Parable of Death" Unique Performance

... persons watched ... rmance of "A Parade of ... Thursday night, the cli... f Ball State's first art fes... "Crossroads of America." The work was directed by the composer himself, Lukas Foss, one of America's outstanding modern composers.

But the performance was ... ue because "A Parable" was ... for the first time with ... ed background and lighting ... ets and a dance interpreta... a climactic blend of all the elements of the week-long festival.

THE WORK has been widely performed throughout the country under the direction of both Foss and Robert Shaw, but without the special stage effects.

The story of a man and woman who imprison themselves in life in order to escape death was narrated by Edward Strother, associate professor of English at Ball State. Interpretive interjections into the narrative were by a special chorus combined for the event and a tenor, Carroll Alexander, a Ball State student.

Miss Gertrude Lippincott, Minneapolis dancer and choreographer wkho was featured on the festival program earlier in the week, did the dance interpretation. John and Betse Lewis, Kokomo artists, designed the stage sets.

FOSS BUILT the story underlying his music from a collection of excerpts from nine works by Rainer Maria Rilke. The music, a brilliant weaving together of orchestral music and choral asides, was played by a 30-piece orchestra of Muncie and college musicians.

The music, the lights and the words ended subtly in complete silence and darkness, leaving its stunned audience completely stilled for several moments.

"It was a unique event—one that we'll have a hard time matching here," Dr. Robert Hargreaves, head of the college music department, said later.

Foss left the campus this morning to begin production of his latest opera at Tanglewood, Lennox, Mass.

here during the festival were Paul Engle, Iowa poet and novelist; Leon Golub, Chicago artist; Miss Betty Esman, New York City artist, and Guy Fraser Harrison, musical director of Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestra.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUN 28 1956

400 Students To Study Music At Tanglewood

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, July 4-August 12, has passed the 325 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, Register, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached. To date, students have been enrolled from 37 states, Canada and thirteen foreign countries.

The Berkshire Music Center, founded in 1940, will open its fourteenth session on Sunday afternoon, July 1, when students will be welcomed by Dr. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as Director of the summer music school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean; and Gail W. Recter, assistant manager of the orchestra, is executive secretary.

Students at Tanglewood study orchestra playing and conducting under Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, while department head Leonard Bernstein is on leave of absence; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from Mr. Copland and Italian modern composer Goffredo Petrassi; opera under Boris Goldovsky; or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl. Since enrollment in the latter may be for either the full six weeks or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted. Study Group students, professional and amateur, have an opportunity to spend their vacations in extensive chamber orchestra reading and to sing in the Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony in Berkshire Festival concerts. Tanglewood Study Group registration to date accounts for 65 students, 29 of whom are registered for the six-week term, five for four weeks, 27 for two weeks.

The 325 students to date have been chosen from 600 applications, which resulted from some 1,500 inquiries, of which 680 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 175, including 100 who comprise the student symphony orchestra which gives weekly full-scale symphonic concerts to which the public is invited through membership in the society of Friends, whose contributions help the support of the school. Although eligible for scholarship, so far twenty-three students have declined tuition assistance, twelve in the orchestra, three in composition, four in choral conducting, one in opera dramatics.

The bulk of Tanglewood's young musicians come from New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois, New Jersey, with impressive enrollment also from Ohio, California, Maryland, Michigan, Virginia, Connecticut and Iowa.

The twenty-eight foreign students to date come from Canada, six; England, four; the Argentine, three; Cuba, Japan, Puerto Rico, two each; and one each from Australia, Egypt, Peru, Germany, Columbia, Brazil, Finland, Uruguay and West Germany.

A calendar listing the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations to be given by Tanglewood students during the course of the Berkshire Festival may be obtained by writing to the Friends' office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREENSBORO, N. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 80,002 - S. 88,830

JUN 25 1956

Music Notes

BY HENRY S. WOOTTON JR.

SCHUMANN GRANDSON: Two weeks ago, Doris Heinz, a pupil of Dr. Clarence Adler, played a recital at New York's Lotus Club. Since 1956 marks the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, Miss Heinz included in her program Schumann's "Carnival Jest from Vienna."

The recital was attended by the grandson of the famous composer, Robert Sommerhoff. He told the audience a few details of the personal and musical life of his grandparents and his association with Johannes Brahms. There are few remaining descendants of the Schumanns still living. Sommerhoff lives in Poughkeepsie and works at packaging articles at 90 cents an hour, and despite his famed forebearers, he is very poor. Perhaps the spiritual wealth of re-living the memories of the great music that must have filled his childhood years, compensates for today's poverty.

BACK FROM EUROPE: Paul Berry, young Greensboro tenor, has returned to homeground after a year's study and travel in Europe. While in Europe, Paul studied voice with Dr. Ernest Reichert, well-known teacher and a Bach and Mozart authority. While studying in Salzburg with Dr. Reichert, Paul had the pleasure of studying some unpublished Mozart songs which Dr. Reichert introduced him to. While in Athens, Paul met a young composer whose symphony is to be premiered by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the N.Y. Philharmonic Symphony this coming season. Right now Paul's plans are to work here for about a year and then go back for more study in Europe. If anyone needs a good tenor soloist, Paul Berry seems a good bet.

THE BERKSHIRES: The programs for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch are to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, in Lennox, Mass., on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony players in the Theater on the grounds will precede these, July 6-15. Chamber groups will give concerts on six Wednesday evenings.

Guest conductors at the festival will be Pierre Monteux (July 22 and Aug. 11); Richard Burgin (July 29); Eleazer de Carvalho (Aug. 3); and Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4). Charles Munch will conduct the concerts of July 20, 21, 27, 28, and Aug. 5, 10, and 12.

Among the soloists for the festival will be Rudolph Serkin, Zino Francescatti, and the following singers: Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd and Margaret Willauer. A program of Mozart piano concertos will be presented by Boris Goldovsky, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz.

ALBENERI TRIO: To fill the gap left by the recent passing of Erich Itor Kahn, the Albeneri Trio has now acquired Ward Devenny as its pianist. The other members of the trio are Giorgio Ciompi, violinist and Bernar Heifetz, cellist.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUN 28 1956

mainly things

by ED MERRITT

No doubt the summer season has finally arrived. Our sunburn is beginning to peel. . . . Anniversary number 23 of graduation from school has been heralded by the arrival of a neat invitation. . . . Monday and Tuesday the Berkshire Playhouse and The Malden Bridge Summer Theatre opened their respective doors, to be followed closely by the rest of the summer features. Everything seems to make good sense, except for the graduation anniversary.

By this time we had hoped for definite word on the schedule at Music Inn, Lenox, where the jazz and the musical talk will flow during a goodly part of the summer. Unfortunately, not anymore than a brief notice of their opening has blown across the desk. We do know it's a big season. . . . We'll report details as soon as available. On the other hand, plenty of dope on the upcoming doings at Tanglewood. This would be a big year for familiar composers and familiar music. Also a group of features by contemporary composers written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be celebrated this year. Crowds can be expected for many events on the programs, particularly such items as the Benny Goodman appearances with both orchestra and chamber groups. Mr. G., fresh from the triumphs of "The Benny Goodman Story," a wonderful engagement at the Cafe Rouge in New York, and a swing across the country with his band, will make music in the Berkshire Hills July 6 and 11. In addition to these concerts, this department looks forward with great anticipation to a pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of the fabulous octogenarian, Pierre Monteux. These musical events July 22 and August 11 will again afford a wonderful opportunity to see and hear one of the greatest musicians of our time in action.

Bulked into the summer plans of most everyone . . . a chance to get close to some of the books we've been promising ourselves all winter long. We'd like to suggest a couple here . . . one mighty serious and the other fairly relaxed. Here at home we have the ever present headlines to remind us of the problem of race relations, a problem spread around the world, unfortunately. Most pressing and alarming conditions probably are found in South Africa where a conservative guess would suggest the clock has been turned back 200 years. Recent telecast by Edward R. Murrow, in the fine journalistic tradition, has brought this situation close to the attention of Americans. Now, further and distressing enlightment to be found in a book by one of Murrow's guests, Father Trevor Huddleston, "Naught For Your Comfort." This one aptly titled . . . some find the volume exciting and moving. We find it horrifying. If you want to know a bit about the madness which sometimes seizes human beings, if you want to see how and why the actions of people, thousands of miles away, stir up a witches' brew, which well may plague us here, don't fail to read this distressing story.

Number two book . . . "H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Memory" by Charles Angoff. Catch a close-up glimpse of one of the most interesting and controversial men of the Twenties. Perhaps you'll not care for the manners, but the man is terrific.

Just a pair of record selections this week. In the popular department . . . Elliott Lawrence on the Fantasy label with a fine set of tunes as arranged by Tiny Kahn and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable big band playing. Then, halfway between the popular and the concert world comes pianist, Pablo Flores. MGM releases his recording of "Memories of Mexico." May not be profound, but one of the best listening items to come along in quite a while. So . . . more later!

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 66,426 - S. 70,008

JUN 30 1956

Berkshire Festival Opens 19th Season July Fourth

LENOX, Mass. — Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in western Massachusetts with the opening next week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch.

For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathanial Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts begins Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String [illegible]. On Friday evening, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club.

On Sunday afternoon a co[illegible] of Haydn and Bach, including [illegible] three contemporary works by [illegible]ving Fine, Alexei Haieff [illegible] Charles Ives will be led by Lu[illegible] Foss, a member of the comp[illegible]tion department of the Berks[illegible] Music Center, the Boston Sym[illegible]ny Orchestra's, summer m[illegible] school at Tanglewood, and F[illegible] will be piano soloist.

[16-]

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUN 30 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Opening performances of the season, which will run through Sunday, Aug. 12—Wednesday, July 4, at 8:30: A chamber-music program by the Kroll String Quartet. . . . Friday, July 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the chamber section of the Boston Symphony in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman, clarinet. . . . Saturday, July [redacted] conducting the [redacted] Yale Glee Club. . . . Sunday, July [redacted] conducting [redacted] as piano [redacted]

CASTLE [redacted] June [redacted] band. . . . Simon [redacted] Eccentric [redacted]

MUSIC MOUNTAIN [redacted] Bruce Simonds, piano [redacted] Conn. Sunday, July 1, at [redacted]

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN—Sept. [redacted] Armstrong and his [redacted] July 4, [redacted] 10: Count Basie [redacted] Joe [redacted] Saturday, July [redacted] Pete Seeger, folk singer. (Lenox, [redacted]

SAN JOSE CALIF.
MERCURY-NEWS

JUN 24 1956

Music Center Will Stage 'Griffelkin'

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

Opera, which will be performed Aug. 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of this summer school of music—maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

In three acts, the opera is the composer's largest stage work to date. It is based on a little-known German folk tale which the composer first heard from his mother and promptly set as an opera at the age of eight. Foss again turned to the same story 23 years later, writing a synopsis and asking the British poet, Alastair Reid, to write a rhymed libretto.

In the words of the composer, 'Griffelkin' is the story of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil . . . to change the world into hell. When he arrives in the world, he sees for the first time 'the blue sky.' This is his 'discovery.' In the course of the day he discovers many things human—love, death, a mother with her children. With each discovery he becomes himself more human, and even falls in love. Finally, just before midnight, he commits a good deed and at the stroke of the clock he finds himself surrounded by his hell companions and put on trial for committing a good deed. 'Griffelkin' is expelled from hell and grows up as a mortal—a little [redacted]

'Griffelkin" is Lukas Foss' second opera. His first, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," enjoyed a genuine success both in this country and abroad.

SAN JOSE CALIF.
MERCURY-NEWS

JUN 24 1956

Chorals Again Figure In Festival of Music

Large-scale choral compositions, always an important part of the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., again figure prominently in the plans for the 1956 Festival this summer, which opens July 15 and will continue through Aug. 12.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Festival and music director of the Boston Symphony, has scheduled Bach's Passion According to St. John July 15 with the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass, as soloists.

Aug. 4, in observance of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Mozart, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from the composer's Mass in C minor with soloists including Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor.

Two concerts devoted to the music of Wagner will present extended concert performances of passages from the music dramas. On July 21 Munch will conduct Act I of "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor and James Pease, bass and the Festival will conclude Aug. 12 with scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger" with Messrs. Pease and Da Costa and Marguerite Willauer, soprano, along with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two week-ends will include Benny Goodman, clarinet, July 6 (Mozart's Clarinet Concerto); four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, July 7 (Mozart's Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante); Lukas Foss, piano, July 8 (Bach's Concerto in D minor); Lubitsch and Neeman and Boris Goldovsky, July 13 (Mozart Concerto for 1, 2 and 3 pianos); William Kroll, violin, July 14 (Bach's Concerto in E) and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 14 (Bach's Suite No. 2).

Concerts in the Music Shed through the last four week-ends (July 20-Aug. 12) will include Rudolf Serkin, July 28 (Schumann's Piano Concerto); Ruth Gerstell, July 29 (Hindemith's Violin Concerto); Jocy de Oliveira, Aug. 4 (Ravel's Piano Concerto) and Zino Francescatti, Aug. 5 (Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto).

Guest conductors, in addition to Hugh Ross and Leonard Bernstein, will include Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss and Pierre Monteux.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.
FREE PRESS
Circ. D. 5,620

JUN 22 1956

Lynn Detwiler Gets Master Of Arts Degree From Boston University

A master of fine arts degree was conferred upon Lynn Detwiler, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Detwiler, 2212 17th Ave., during commencement exercises at Boston university's school of fine and applied arts this month.

A graduate of Altoona High school class of 1946, he received a bachelor of arts degree in voice at Brigham Young university in 1950. After two years of military service Mr. Detwiler studied voice and opera in Boston. He has sung oratorio throughout New England and has been tenor soloist at the First Unitarian church in Chestnut Hill for the past three years.

The summer of 1955 he was awarded a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and appeared in five of the seven operas. Last year he was a graduate assistant in the Boston University opera theatre.

His first opera role was Sellem in the "Rake's Progress," under the personal direction of the composer, Igor Stravinsky. This year he appeared as the Archbishop of Maine in the American premiere of "Mathis der Maler," by Hindemith and as Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, German composer who attended the performances. In June Mr. Detwiler will sing in the "Saint of Bleecker Street," at the Boston Arts Festival and in August in Pittsburg with Boris Goldovsky where some educational opera films for the Ford Foundation will be made.

DOWNBEAT
(Chicago)

JUN 27

More Goodman Dates

New York — The Benny Goodman itinerary for the next few weeks includes appearances at Dayton, Ohio (June 22), Cleveland (23), Canton (24), Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony (July 6) and with a chamber unit (July 11), and back with his band at the Carter Barron amphitheater in Washington, D. C. (July 14-17). Goodman has been recording his orchestra under his own license with no indications at presstime as to which company will eventually release the sides.

AUGUSTA, GA.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 47,817

JUL 1 1956

Soviets to hear Bostonian group

BOSTON, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to include Soviet Russia in its European tour during August and September. The orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, will be the first American symphonic group to play in Russia.

The famous Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston concert last year and made a recording with the Symphony for RCA Victor. The European tour will take place at the conclusion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., whose dates are July 4 through Aug. 12. Pierre Monteux will share conducting honors with Munch in Europe.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUN 23 1956

Bonus Concerts Set at Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall of Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony orchestra and guest artists. Each program will included two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday night, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York City; and "Saprina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday night, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

Long Island City, N. Y.
STAR-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 83,056

JUN 23 1956

GLORIA VANDERBILT showdoll sports [redacted] trinket from Ben [redacted] Sixteen-karat [redacted] diamond sparkler [redacted] to light a room[redacted] Per paid $2 million for 5[redacted] interest in Figaro, Inc., Joseph Mankiewicz's independent film firm headquartered [redacted] . . . Eydie Gorme, Steve Allen songstress, and David Hart, solvent and eligible, [redacted] at Chateau Madrid . . . Merrick Hamilton, actor, and [redacted] Terri De Marco, of singing sisters, clefted "I Never Meant To Get Serious," about to be published.

PETER HOLMES, [redacted] heir, and Sally Andrews, his intended, a starry-eyed duo at Voyager Room . . . Richard Widmarks bought a farm in North Barrington, Mass. If nothing else, they're near Berkshire Music Festival! . . . George Jessel [redacted] producing [redacted] berth with Hecht-Lancaster . . . Tin Pan Alley's Ivan Mogul rushing Kay Starr . . . And Ron Donald, artist, courtin' Diana Rufere, writer . . . Marqueed: " 'Picnic' — 'Anything Goes' "

ALTAMONT, N. Y.
ENTERPRISE
Circ. W. 3,000

JUN 29 1956

[redacted] in the Waldorf Astoria.

Residents of this area will attend concerts in Tanglewood, summer home of Boston Symphony Orchestra near Lenox, Mass., in July and until mid-August. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school in connection with Tanglewood, opens Sunday when more than 400 students will arrive from many states, Canada and from foreign lands for study. There will be a number of concerts in the Theatre Concert Hall and in the Music Shed there.

[165]

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUN 30 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Opening performances of the season, which will run through Sunday, Aug. 12—Wednesday, July 4, at 8:30: A chamber-music program by the Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, July 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the chamber section of the Boston Symphony in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman, clarinet. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 7, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra, with the Yale Glee Club. . . . ¶ Sunday, at 2:30: Lukas Foss conducting the Chamber Orchestra and acting as piano soloist. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

Castle Hill Center—Friday and Saturday, June [illegible], at 8:30: Basie and his band. . . . ¶ Friday and Saturday, July [illegible], at 8:30: José Limón and his Dance Company. (Ipswich, Mass. Evenings at [illegible].)

Music Mountain—The Berkshire Quartet, with Bruce Simonds, piano. (Falls Village, Conn. Sunday, July 1, at 4.)

Berkshire Music Barn—Sunday, July 1, at 8:40: Louis Armstrong and his band. . . . Wednesday, July 4, at 8:40: Count Basie and his band, with Joe Williams. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 7, at 4: Pete Seeger, folk singer. (Lenox, Mass.)

SAN JOSE CALIF.
MERCURY-NEWS

JUN 24 1956

Music Center Will Stage 'Griffelkin'

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

Opera, which will be performed Aug. 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of this summer school of music—maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

In three acts, the opera is the composer's largest stage work to date. It is based on a little-known German folk tale which the composer first heard from his mother and promptly set as an opera at the age of eight. Foss again turned to the same story 23 years later, writing a synopsis and asking the British poet, Alastair Reid, to write a rhymed libretto.

In the words of the composer: " 'Griffelkin' is the story of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil . . . to change the world into hell. When he arrives in the world, he sees for the first time 'the blue sky.' This is his 'discovery.' In the course of the day he discovers many things human—love, death, a mother with her children. With each discovery he becomes himself more human, and even falls in love.

Finally, just before midnight he commits a good deed and at the stroke of the clock he finds himself surrounded by his hell companions and put on trial for committing a good deed. 'Griffelkin' is expelled from hell and grows up as a mortal—a little girl."

"Griffelkin" is Lukas Foss' second opera. His first, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," enjoyed a genuine success both in this country and abroad.

SAN JOSE CALIF.
MERCURY-NEWS

JUN 24 1956

Chorals Again Figure In Festival of Music

Large-scale choral compositions, always an important part of the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., again figure prominently in the plans for the 1956 Festival this summer, which opens July 15 and will continue through Aug. 12.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Festival and music director of the Boston Symphony, has scheduled Bach's Passion According to St. John July 15 with the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass, as soloists.

Aug. 4, in observance of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Mozart, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from the composer's Mass in C minor with soloists including Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor.

Two concerts devoted to the music of Wagner will present extended concert performances of excerpts from the music dramas: On July 21 Munch will conduct Act I of "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor and James Pease, bass and the Festival will conclude Aug. 12 with scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger" with Messrs. Pease and Da Costa and Marguerite Willauer, soprano, along with the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two week-ends will include Benny Goodman, clarinet, July 6 (Mozart's Clarinet Concerto); four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, July 7 (Mozart's Woodwind Sonfonia Concertante); Lukas Foss, piano, July 8 (Bach's Concerto in D minor); Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky, July 13 (Mozart Concertos for 1, 2 and 3 pianos); William Kroll, violin, July 14 (Bach's Concerto in E) and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 14 (Bach's Suite No. 2).

Concerts in the Music Shed through the last four week-ends (July 20-Aug. 12) will include Rudolf Serkin, July 28 (Schumann's Piano Concerto); Ruth Posselt, July 29 (Hindemith's Violin Concerto); Jocy de Oliveira, Aug. 3 (Ravel's Piano Concerto) and Zino Francescatti Aug. 5 (Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto).

Guest conductors, in addition to Hugh Ross and Leonard Bernstein, will include Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss and Pierre Monteux.

QUAKERTOWN, PA.
FREE PRESS
Circ. D. 5,620

JUN 22 1956

Lynn Detwiler Gets Master Of Arts Degree From Boston University

A master of fine arts degree was conferred upon Lynn Detwiler, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Detwiler, 2212 17th Ave., during commencement exercises at Boston university's school of fine and applied arts this month.

A graduate of Altoona High school, class of 1946, he received a bachelor of arts degree in voice at Brigham Young university in 1950. After two years of military service Mr. Detwiler studied voice and opera in Boston. He has sung oratorio throughout New England and has been tenor soloist at the First Unitarian church in Chestnut Hill for the past three years.

The summer of 1955 he was awarded a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and appeared in five of the seven operas. Last year he was a graduate assistant in the Boston University opera theatre.

His first opera role was Sellem in the "Rake's Progress," under the personal direction of the composer, Igor Stravinsky. This year he appeared as the Archbishop of Maine in the American premiere of "Mathis der Maler," by Hindemith and as Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, German composer who attended the performances. In June Mr. Detwiler will sing in the "Saint of Bleecker Street," at the Boston Arts Festival and in August in Pittsburg with Boris Goldovsky where some educational opera films for the Ford Foundation will be made.

DOWN BEAT
(Chicago, Ill.)

JUN 27 1956

More Goodman Dates

New York — The Benny Goodman itinerary for the next few weeks includes appearances at Dayton, Ohio (June 22), Cleveland (23), Canton (24), Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony (July 6) and with a chamber unit (July 11), and back with his band at the Carter Barron amphitheater in Washington, D. C. (July 14-17). Goodman has been recording his orchestra under his own license with no indications at presstime as to which company will eventually release the sides.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUN 23 1956

Bonus Concerts Set at Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall of Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony orchestra and guest artists. Each program will included two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday night, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York City; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford Colege of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday night, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

Long Island City, N. Y.
STAR-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 83,056

JUN 23 1956

GLORIA [illegible] showdoll sports [illegible] trinket from Ben [illegible] Sixteen-karat [illegible] diamond sparkler [illegible] to light a room [illegible] paid $2 million for 50 per cent interest in Figaro, Inc., Joseph Mankiewicz's independent film firm headquartered [illegible] . . . Eydie Gorme, Steve Allen songstress, and David Hart, solvent and eligible, emerging at Chateau Madrid . . . Murray Hamilton, actor, and [illegible] Terri De Marco, of singing sisters, cleffed "I Never Meant To Get Serious," about to be published.

PETER HOLMES, [illegible]eir, and Sally Andrews, his intended, a starry-eyed duo at Voyager Room . . . Richard Widmarks bought a farm in North Barrington, Mass. If nothing else, they're near Berkshire Music Festival! . . . George Jessel offered producing berth with Hecht-Lancaster . . . Tin Pan Alley's Ivan Mogul rushing Kay Starr . . . And Ron Donald, artist, courtin' Diana Rufere, writer . . . Marqueed: " 'Picnic' — 'Anything Goes'! "

AUGUSTA, GA.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 47,817

JUL 1 1956

Soviets to hear Bostonian group

BOSTON, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to include Soviet Russia in its European tour during August and September. The orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, will be the first American symphonic group to play in Russia.

The famous Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston concert last year and made a recording with the Symphony for RCA Victor. The European tour will take place at the conclusion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., whose dates are July 4 through Aug. 12. Pierre Monteux will share conducting honors with Munch in Europe.

ALTAMONT, N. Y.
ENTERPRISE
Circ. W. 3,000

JUN 28 1956

Residents of this area will attend concerts in Tanglewood, summer home of Boston Symphony Orchestra near Lenox, Mass., in July and until mid-August. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school in connection with Tanglewood, opens Sunday when more than 400 students will arrive from many states, Canada and from foreign lands for study. There will be a number of concerts in the Theatre Concert Hall and in the Music Shed there.

DAVENPORT, IA.
TIMES
JUL 1 1956

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer—
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony orchestra for its 75th anniversary last season will be played at the annual Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood, Mass. this summer. The series of festival concerts in the music shed will begin Friday, July 20 and continue through August 21. The works are Petrassi's Concerto for orchestra; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Sergei Koussevitsky; Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode," and Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony.

CHARLES MUNCH

. . .Conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will direct seven of the 12 concerts; Pierre Monteux will conduct two and and Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein will conduct one concert each. Concerts are scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Many soloists will appear at the concerts. Ruth Posselt will play the Hindemith Violin Concerto; Rudolf Serkin, the Schumann Piano Concerto; Jocy de Oliveria, the Ravel Piano Concerto and Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello. Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts and David Lloyd will sing in the Mozart C Minor Mass and Margaret Harshaw, Albert DaCosta and James Pease will appear in two programs of Wagnerian excerpts.

THERE WILL BE

.chamber music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood between July 4 and Aug 8. Goodman, the Kroll String quartet; Beaux Arts Trio; Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Woodwind Quintet; the Yale Glee Club; Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists and Mr. Serkin and Miss Harshaw. There will be two weeks of "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Intimate Theater on the two week-ends preceding the regular festival concerts. The entire series will benefit the Revolving Scholarship Fund for students at the Berkshire Music Center, the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony in connection with the music festival.

MILWAUKEE

...has a unique plan in raising funds for its Milwaukee Pops orchestra. The committee in charge was divided and each had a division to solicit. One group sought $8,000 from among 45 medium sized manufacturing, processing and wholesale firms. Another had the corporation division, which had a goal of $20,000 among about 30 corporations. Sponsors of the orchestra hope to endow 66 chairs in the orchestra at a cost of $1,000 to $3,000 each. A concertmaster's chair will cost $5,000 and the chair for the resident conductor will cost $7,500. More than one donor may subscribe to the same chair.

THE ACCENT

...will be on youth for next season for the Milwaukee Pops orchestra. Seven of the 14 scheduled concerts planned will be youth concerts. These will be held in various parts of the city and afterward it is planned that part of the orchestra will play for dancing. The campaign for next season's budget will be to raise about $100,000. Prominent business men of the city headed the various committees for each division.

CONCERTS

...at Grant Park, Chicago, this week include the winner of the Michaels Award to play with the orchestra this evening. Wednesday and Friday nights, Leo Kopp will conduct the "Holiday Pops" with Seymour Lipkin, pianist and Saturday and Sunday nights will be Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights with well known vocalists. "Hit the Deck" will be the offering at the St. Louis Municipal opera beginning tomorrow (Monday) night and continuing until July 8.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
JUL 1 1956

Music 'On the Town' Takes Over in Lyric July 3

By E. V. W.

From Carnegie Hall through Manhattan night clubs to Coney Island is the course of "On the Town," the lively Leonard Bernstein show to open in the Finger Lakes Lyric Circus near Skaneateles Tuesday night. Show time is 8:30 in the big blue tent, except Sundays when the time is an hour earlier. Tonight marks final performance of the Rodgers & Hammerstein hit musical, "The King and I," with Erik Rhodes and Janet Medlin in leading roles.

Footloose and fancy free are three sailors in "On the Town," searching for Miss Subways. Betty Comden and Adolph Green wrote the story and the gifted Bernstein, the score. These three wrote another Lyric Circus hit, "Wonderful Town," presented last season.

Cynthia Scott, principal dancer for two years in the TV "Hit Parade," comes to Skaneateles to play Miss Subways in "On the Town;" Patrick Welch leading the sailor trio in the hunt for her. William Pierson, known both on the stage and in motion pictures, and the Lyric Circus gifted young director-actor David Davis help Patrick Welch in the quest.

Others in the all-Broadway cast of principals are Joan Coburn and Betty Winsett, respectively, of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "Lend an Ear," and the New York City Opera Co. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director.

Erik Rhodes is due in Atlanta, Ga., tomorrow for performances of "The King and I," his role for the entire summer by R. & H. choice; Janet Medlin goes to Kansas City, Mo., to rehearse at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow for "Desert Song." Anita Darian, who plays Tuptim will leave for Nassau, B. I., for a night club engagement, from there goes to Cape Cod for another.

CYNTHIA SCOTT

PATRICK-WELCH

This date in music: 1867, "Beautiful Blue Danube," first played in the United States by the Theodore Thomas Orchestra in New York, about four and a half months following its first performance under Composer Strauss in Vienna.

Works commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be performed in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood" near Lenox, Mass., in the 1956 Berkshire Festival season. Among them will be the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 on July 27; the Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky by Hanson on July 28; Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" on Aug. 5 and Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony" on Aug. 10.

Conductors for the Shed Concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12, will be Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Festival and of the Berkshire Music Festival; and Guest conductors Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Eleazar De Carvalho, and Leonard Bernstein. The concert in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky is set for Aug. 4, Bernstein conducting the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mozart Mass in C Minor with Chorus and soloists. In the Chamber Music Series, July 6-15, music of Bach and Mozart will predominate.

Next Friday night in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a Mozart concert. Soloist will be Benny Goodman, to play the Concerto for Clarinet K 622. Other numbers by members of the Boston Symphony: The Symphony in G Minor K 550 and the Symphony in D Major ("Prague") K 504.

The Friends of Music in Cornell University, founded in 1951, and representing both town and gown, has voted $500 to commission a work for small orchestras by Prof. Karel Husa of the university's music faculty. Prof. Husa will conduct the premiere of his composition next spring during Cornell's Festival XI of Contemporary Arts. Gilbert M. Weeks is chairman of the Friends of Music at Cornell.

Prof. Husa, who was born in Czechoslovakia, is a French citizen. He came to the States in 1954 and teaches courses in composition and orchestration in Cornell. He has composed a number of commissioned works and has won several prizes, including the Prague Academy of Fine Arts Award for his "Sinfoniette" and the Prix Lili Boulanger for his String Quartet.

Projects of Cornell Friends of Music include prizes for student compositions and performance, grants to Cornell music students, purchase of a piano for the music department, and aid in bringing Ralph Vaughan Williams, noted English composer to Cornell as a visiting professor a few years ago.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
Circ. D. 76,513 - S. 102,138
JUL 1 1956

Berkshire Festival Starts Wednesday

Times Special

LENOX, Mass., June 30 — The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, will open at Tanglewood next Wednesday evening.

A series of 24 concerts of symphonic, choral and chamber music will continue through Aug. 12.

This year's program will include some novelties, such as the appearance of Benny Goodman, jazz clarinetist, as soloist program next Friday evening, with Mr. Munch and a chamber orchestra in an all-Mozart

Last summer's festival rolled up an all-time attendance record of 136,087 with total box-office of $307,665.

SARASOTA, FLA.
NEWS
D.
JUL 1 1956

Orchestra To Play Concerts

Boston Symphony Due At Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer festival in the Berkshire Hills at Tanglewood, Mass. is the orchestra's 19th season of summer concerts.

On the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales," symphony, choral, chamber music and student concerts with noted guest artists will echo into the surrounding hills as some 137,00 music lovers gather to listen.

The full 104-piece orchestra will move to Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts from July 20-August 12 in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one third again the capacity of the Music Shed was noted at these programs.

The opening two week-ends of the Festival, July 6,7,8 and July 13,14 and 15, Dr. Charles Munch will conduct chamber music concerts in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

As planned by Munch, Festival concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber music series and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs with the assistance of Metropolitan stars and soloists and the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students.

Immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season the orchestra will make a five and one half week tour of thirteen countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

[166]

DAVENPORT, IA.
TIMES
JUL 1 1956

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
'With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer—
When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony orchestra for its 75th anniversary last season will be played at the annual Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood, Mass. this summer. The series of festival concerts in the music shed will begin Friday, July 20 and continue through August 21. The works are Petrassi's Concerto for orchestra; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Sergei Koussevitsky; Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode," and Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony.

CHARLES MUNCH

. . Conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will direct seven of the 12 concerts; Pierre Monteux will conduct two and and Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein will conduct one concert each. Concerts are scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Many soloists will appear at the concerts. Ruth Posselt will play the Hindemith Violin Concerto; Rudolf Serkin, the Schumann Piano Concerto; Jocy de Oliveria, the Ravel Piano Concerto and Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello. Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts and David Lloyd will sing in the Mozart C Minor Mass and Margaret Harshaw, Albert DaCosta and James Pease will appear in two programs of Wagnerian excerpts.

THERE WILL BE

chamber music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood between July 4 and Aug 8. Goodman, the Kroll String quartet; Beaux Arts Trio; Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Woodwind Quintet; the Yale Glee Club; , Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists and Mr. Serkin and Miss Harshaw. There will be two weeks of "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Intimate Theater on the two week-ends preceding the regular festival concerts. The entire series will benefit the Revolving Scholarship Fund for students at the Berkshire Music Center, the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony in connection with the music festival.

MILWAUKEE

...has a unique plan in raising funds for its Milwaukee Pops orchestra. The committee in charge was divided and each had a division to solicit. One group sought $8,000 from among 45 medium sized manufacturing, processing and wholesale firms. Another had the corporation division, which had a goal of $20,000 among about 30 corporations. Sponsors of the orchestra hope to endow 66 chairs in the orchestra at a cost of $1,000 to $3,000 each. A concertmaster's chair will cost $5,000 and the chair for the resident conductor will cost $7,500. More than one donor may subscribe to the same chair.

THE ACCENT

...will be on youth for next season for the Milwaukee Pops orchestra. Seven of the 14 scheduled concerts planned will be youth concerts. These will be held in various parts of the city and afterward it is planned that part of the orchestra will play for dancing. The campaign for next season's budget will be to raise about $100,000. Prominent business men of the city headed the various committees for each division.

CONCERTS

...at Grant Park, Chicago, this week include the winner of the Michaels Award to play with the orchestra this evening. Wednesday and Friday nights, Leo Kopp will conduct the "Holiday Pops" with Seymour Lipkin, pianist and Saturday and Sunday nights will be Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights with well known vocalists. "Hit the Deck" will be the offering at the St. Louis Municipal opera beginning tomorrow (Monday) night and continuing until July 8.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
JUL 1 1956

Music 'On the Town' Takes Over in Lyric July 3

By E. V. W.

From Carnegie Hall through Manhattan night clubs to Coney Island is the course of "On the Town," the lively Leonard Bernstein show to open in the Finger Lakes Lyric Circus near Skaneateles Tuesday night. Show time is 8:30 in the big blue tent, except Sundays when the time is an hour earlier. Tonight marks final performance of the Rodgers & Hammerstein hit musical, "The King and I," with Erik Rhodes and Janet Medlin in leading roles.

Footloose and fancy free are three sailors in "On the Town," searching for Miss Subways. Betty Comden and Adolph Green wrote the story and the gifted Bernstein, the score. These three wrote another Lyric Circus hit, "Wonderful Town," presented last season.

Cynthia Scott, principal dancer for two years in the TV "Hit Parade," comes to Skaneateles to play Miss Subways in "On the Town;" Patrick Welch leading the sailor trio in the hunt for her. William Pierson, known both on the stage and in motion pictures, and the Lyric Circus gifted young director-actor David Davis help Patrick Welch in the quest.

Others in the all-Broadway cast of principals are Joan Coburn and Betty Winsett, respectively, of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "Lend an Ear," and the New York City Opera Co. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director.

Erik Rhodes is due in Atlanta, Ga., tomorrow for performances of "The King and I," his role for the entire summer by R. & H. choice; Janet Medlin goes to Kansas City, Mo., to rehearse at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow for "Desert Song." Anita Darian, who plays Tuptim will leave for Nassau, B. I., for a night club engagement, from there goes to Cape Cod for another.

CYNTHIA SCOTT

PATRICK-WELCH

This date in music: 1867, "Beautiful Blue Danube," first played in the United States by the Theodore Thomas Orchestra in New York, about four and a half months following its first performance under Composer Strauss in Vienna.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
Circ. D. 96,513 - S. 102,338
JUL 1 1956

Berkshire Festival Starts Wednesday

Times Special

LENOX, Mass., June 30 — The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, will open at Tanglewood next Wednesday evening.

A series of 24 concerts of symphonic, choral and chamber music will continue through Aug. 12.

This year's program will include some novelties, such as the appearance of Benny Goodman, jazz clarinetist, as soloist program next Friday evening. with Mr. Munch and a chamber orchestra in an all-Mozart

Last summer's festival rolled up an all-time attendance record of 136,087 with total box-office of $307,665.

Works commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be performed in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood" near Lenox, Mass., in the 1956 Berkshire Festival season. Among them will be the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 on July 27; the Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky by Hanson on July 28; Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" on Aug. 5 and Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony" on Aug. 10.

Conductors for the Shed Concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12, will be Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Festival and of the Berkshire Music Festival; and Guest conductors Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Eleazar De Carvalho, and Leonard Bernstein. The concert in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky is set for Aug. 4, Bernstein conducting the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mozart Mass in C Minor with Chorus and soloists. In the Chamber Music Series, July 6-15, music of Bach and Mozart will predominate.

Next Friday night in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a Mozart concert. Soloist will be Benny Goodman, to play the Concerto for Clarinet K 622. Other numbers by members of the Boston Symphony: The Symphony in G Minor K 550 and the Symphony in D Major ("Prague") K 504.

The Friends of Music in Cornell University, founded in 1951, and representing both town and gown, has voted $500 to commission a work for small orchestras by Prof. Karel Husa of the university's music faculty. Prof. Husa will conduct the premiere of his composition next spring during Cornell's Festival XI of Contemporary Arts. Gilbert M. Weeks is chairman of the Friends of Music at Cornell.

Prof. Husa, who was born in Czechoslovakia, is a French citizen. He came to the States in 1954 and teaches courses in composition and orchestration in Cornell. He has composed a number of commissioned works and has won several prizes, including the Prague Academy of Fine Arts Award for his "Sinfonietta" and the Prix Lili Boulanger for his String Quartet.

Projects of Cornell Friends of Music include prizes for student compositions and performances, grants to Cornell music students, purchase of a piano for the music department, and aid in bringing Ralph Vaughan Williams, noted English composer to Cornell as a visiting professor a few years ago.

SARASOTA, FLA.
NEWS
D.
JUL 1 1956

Orchestra To Play Concerts

Boston Symphony Due At Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer festival in the Berkshire Hills at Tanglewood, Mass. is the orchestra's 19th season of summer concerts.

On the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales," symphony choral, chamber music and student concerts with noted guest artists will echo into the surrounding hills as some 137,00 music lovers gather to listen.

The full 104-piece orchestra will move to Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts from July 20-August 12 in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one third again the capacity of the Music Shed was noted at these programs.

The opening two week-ends of the Festival, July 6,7,8 and July 13,14 and 15, Dr. Charles Munch will conduct chamber music concerts in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

As planned by Munch, Festival concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber music series, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs with the assistance of Metropolitan stars and soloists and the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students.

Immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season the orchestra will make a five and one half week tour of thirteen countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

[166]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254
JUL 1 1956

Overtones

Music Season Shifts Into High This Week

By WILLIAM FLEMING

The coming week will see the summer music season shifting into high gear. Lured by symphonic sounds, many motorists, who couldn't quite fit Salzburg or Bayreuth into their schedules, will find that with the Thruway at least four major domestic festivals are within a comfortable day's driving distance.

Fleming

Chautauqua to the west with its wealth of musical, educational, theatrical and religious activities, together with Tanglewood to the east, are the closest to Syracuse. Recitals at Chautauqua will be launched July 3 by the Metropolitan Opera Quintet, Jerome Hines while the Symphony Orchestra opens its season Friday evening, July 6. Walter Hendl, regular director of the Dallas (Texas) Symphony, will again officiate as conductor. In addition he will be heard as piano soloist in an all-Gershwin and an all-Mozart program.

Two of the orchestra's first desk men—Mischa Mischakoff, violinist, and Lazlo Varga, cellist—will also occupy solo spots. The orchestra plays regularly on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings as well as on Sunday afternoons for a total of 28 programs over a period of seven weeks.

Opera at Chautauqua

Opera productions at Chautauqua this year will include Johann Strauss' The Bat, an English version of Fledermaus (July 13); Rigoletto (July 20 and 23); Mozart's Cosi fan Tutte (July 27 and 30); the double bill Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, known in the trade as "Cav and Pag" (Aug. 3 and 6); De Koven's light opera Robin Hood (Aug. 10 and 13), and Rossini's Barber of Seville (Aug. 17 and 29).

The theater productions on this year's list are A Room Full of Roses (July 4 and 5), The Reclining Figure (July 26 and 28), Much Ado About Nothing (Aug. 2 and 4), and The Solid Gold Cadillac (Aug. 9 and 11).

Important Chautauqua speakers this year include Dr. G. L. Mehta, India's ambassador to the United States and Mexico (July 27), and Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense (Friday evening, Aug. 10).

Credit Courses

University credit courses by the Chautauqua Center of Syracuse University have been expanded to encompass a wide variety of art subjects and many education courses that meet requirements for state certification. Liberal arts courses offered by SU faculty members will include one on Shakespeare's plays by Warren Shepard, another on the Soviet Union and world affairs by Donald Bishop, and a discussion of modern European political theory by Marguerite Fisher.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood is accessible to motorists via the Thruway since Lenox, Mass. is but 35 miles beyond Albany. Together with the activities of its educational counterpart, the Berkshire Music Center, there will be nearly 50 scheduled public events, which are expected to top last pear's record attendance of 136,087. The regular Wednesday evening chamber concerts get underway with the Kroll Quartet on July 4.

Symphonic Attractions

On the six successive Friday and Saturday nights plus Sunday afternoons come the main symphonic attractions. The full Boston Symphony, however, does not arrive until July 20. From then until Aug. 12 Charles Munch will lead his men in the Big Shed. Unusual items this summer include performances of Martinu's Field Mass, Bach's St. John Passion, Mozart's Mass in C Minor, and the first stage production of Lucas Foss' fairytale opera, Griffelkin (Aug. 6 and 7).

Four of the works commissioned by the Boston Symphony for its 75th anniversary season also will be heard in the shed concerts—Howard Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky, Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, and Villa-Lobos Eleventh Symphony.

The Empire State Music Festival at Ellenville in the Catskills a little over 100 miles away, get started on the afternoon of July 4 with a big historical pageant designed to recreate the colorful scenes of the early Dutch settlers. Mayors of all the Catskill communities will be on hand and will Gov. Harriman. The concerts of the Symphony of the Air begin that evening and alternate with opera and ballet productions for a full four weeks.

Conductors Listed

Conductors will include Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Orchestra; Leopold Stokowski, Igor Markevitch and Lucas Foss. Highlights here include Villa-Lobos new ballet The Emperor Jones, based on Eugene O'Neill's play and danced by Jose Limon and his company (July 12 and 14); Leopold Stokowski conducting the American premiere of Carl Orff's setting of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream (July 19, 20, and 21); and Bizet's Carmen (July 26 and 28).

The Thruway as far as Buffalo brings the musical phase of the Stratford (Ontario) Shakespeare Festival closer than ever. Beginning July 7 with Benjamin Britten's opera, The Rape of Lucretia, this series of symphony concerts, outstanding recitals and jazz jam sessions continues until Aug. 11. Britten's two-act opera with its libretto based on the ancient Roman legend and taken from the French play of Andre Obey, is highly appropriate for performance at the side of the Shakespearean productions, since a poem of that name was the bard's first published work.

Nights and Programs

Tuesday nights are reserved for opera; Monday, Thursday and Saturdays are recital and orchestra nights with appearances by pianists Claudio Arrau and Rudolf Serkin, baritone Martial Singher, soprano Jennie Tourel, and the Stratford Orchestra under Reginald Stewart and Heinz Under. Wednesday and Fridays are jazz nights with Duke Ellington and his orchestra, Dave Brubeck and his quartet, Art Tatum and his trio, and Willie "The Lion" Smith, pianist.

Meanwhile the theater productions continue with the bard's Merry Wives of Windsor and Henry V on the boards. The latter has turned out to be an enormous success with Canadian-born and Broadway-bred Christopher Plummer in the title role. He has been hailed by New York critic Walter F. Kerr as "the most promising classic actor on this continent today."

MAMARONECK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 7,211
JUL 2 1956

Mr. Kohloff Tympanist At Mall Concerts

Roland Kohloff, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kohloff of 122 Osborn Avenue, Mamaroneck, has joined the Edwin Franko Goldman band as tympanist, playing four nights a week on the Mall at Central Park and two nights a week at Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

Both series are sponsored by the Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, annual Summer gift to the people of New York in memory of Daniel and Florence Guggenheim.

A special program of patriotic music, in observance of the Fourth of July holiday, will be held tonight at 8:30 on the Mall at Central Park. The concerts are broadcast Friday and Sunday nights at 8:30 from WNYC. Mr. Kohloff, snare drummer and mallet man for the Goldman Band. Mr. Kohloff who plays the xylophone, cymbals, chimes, bells, wood blocks, triangle and castanets, has also joined the staff of the Summer Music Center which opened last week at the Mamaroneck Avenue School in White Plains. It is under the auspices of the Westchester County Recreation Commission in cooperation with the County School Music Association. He teaches beginners and advanced students tympani, drums and mallet instruments.

A scholarship student for four years at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, studying with Saul Goodman of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Mr. Kohloff served last Summer as tympanist and head of the percussion section of the Aspen Festival Orchestra in Colorado. He has also played in 12 concerts with the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Music Festival and has appeared frequently at Westchester, New York and Connecticut churches and clubs.

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
ADVANCE
Circ. D. 43,537
JUL 3 1956

Barbara Cole To Study at Tanglewood

A music major at Wagner College, Miss Barbara Cole has been accepted for study and participation in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass. She is the daghter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cole of 180 Campus road, Grymes Hill.

Miss Cole

The Berkshire Music Center is a six-week summer school of music which opened yesterday and will close Aug. 15 under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It provides opportunity for music study in connection with the Berkshire Festival Concerts under direction of Charles Munch.

• • •

THE SCHOOL'S PUPILS are selected among young musicians of high skill as orchestral players, conductors, singers and composers from the entire United States and Europe.

Miss Cole, a soprano, is a junior at Wagner, where she belongs to the choir and the Varsity Players.

She is corresponding secretary of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, secretary of the student body and has been on the dean's list since her freshman year.

The Island girl is soloist with the choir of St. Teresa's Church, Castleton Corners, and she is a graduate of St. Joseph Hill Academy.

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,130
JUL 6 1956

Berkshire Festival

This weekend's opening Festival concerts of four by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, are: Saturday, July 7: Charles Munch conducting Mozart's Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385, and Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante with Obo, Clarinet, Horn, Bassoon; Hugh Ross conducting Martinu"s Military Mass and the world premiere of Henry Colwell's A Thanksgiving Psalm, from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," with the Yale Glee Club. Sunday, July 8: Lukas Foss conducting Haydn: Symphony No. 86 in D major; Fine: Serious Song, for Strings; Haieff: Divertimento; Ives: "The Unanswered Question"; Bach: Piano Concerto in D minor, with Mr. Foss.

UTICA, N. Y.
PRESS
Circ. D. 25,906
JUL 4 1956

Annual Berkshire Festival Opens in Bay State Today

The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, music director, will open today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The symphony, choral and chamber music concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to Aug. 12, on the spacious estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales," a century ago.

The Kroll String Quartet will open the concert season tonight with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Friday evening Benny Goodman will make his Tanglewood debut as soloist on the orchestra program, and Saturday the Yale Glee Club will assist the orchestra in two Mozart works.

The concerts through July 15 will be given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

For the four final weekends of the festival, July 20 to Aug. 12, the orchestra moves to the 6,000-seat Music Shed for 12 concerts. The Shed is open on three sides so the overflow crowds may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns.

This year's concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs. Concert versions of "Die Walkure," Act I, and the opening and final scenes of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars and other soloists, and the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The Shed series also will feature Tanglewood first performances commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary year. They will be symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston.

These symphonies will be taken by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after the close of the Tanglewood season. The orchestra will make a five-week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival, and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

KOKOMO, IND.
TRIBUNE
JUL 2 1956

Local Artists Studying At Ball State

John Chase Lewis and Betse Lewis, his wife, are attending summer classes at Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, where he is taking graduate courses for a master's degree.

The two local artists, who teach at IU Center and at Lewis Workshop Studios here, have presented a class demonstration at Ball State on painting techniques. Additionally, John has a one-man show of sculpture, paintings and drawings on display in Ball State's art museum at present.

Last week, the two designed and produced "A Parable of Death" at the college's arts festival conducted by Lukas Foss, Beverly Hills, Calif., composer. Foss, well-known in music as a composer of operas, oratorios and symphonies, formerly was pianist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258
JUL 2 1956

Berkshire Music Festival Will Open July 4th

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, July 6, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening, July 7, concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon, July 8, a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p. m.

[167]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254

JUL 1 1956

Overtones

Music Season Shifts Into High This Week

By WILLIAM FLEMING

The coming week will see the summer music season shifting into high gear. Lured by symphonic sounds, many motorists, who couldn't quite fit Salzburg or Bayreuth into their schedules, will find that with the Thruway at least four major domestic festivals are within a comfortable day's driving distance.

Fleming

Chautauqua to the west with its wealth of musical, educational, theatrical and religious activities, together with Tanglewood to the east, are the closest to Syracuse. Recitals at Chautauqua will be launched July 3 by the Metropolitan Opera basso, Jerome Hines, while the Symphony Orchestra opens its season Friday evening, July 6. Walter Hendl, regular director of the Dallas (Texas) Symphony, will again officiate as conductor. In addition he will be heard as piano soloist in an all-Gershwin and an all-Mozart program.

Two of the orchestra's first desk men—Mischa Mischakoff, violinist, and Lazlo Varga, 'cellist—will also occupy solo spots. The orchestra plays regularly on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings as well as on Sunday afternoons for a total of 28 programs over a period of seven weeks.

Opera at Chautauqua

Opera productions at Chautauqua this year will include Johann Strauss' The Bat, an English version of Fledermaus (July 13); Rigoletto (July 20 and 23); Mozart's Cosi fan Tutte (July 27 and 30); the double bill Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, known in the trade as "Cav and Pag" (Aug. 3 and 6); De Koven's light opera Robin Hood (Aug. 10 and 13), and Rossini's Barber of Seville (Aug. 17 and 29).

The theater productions on this year's list are A Room Full of Roses (July 4 and 5), The Reclining Figure (July 26 and 28), Much Ado About Nothing (Aug. 2 and 4), and The Solid Gold Cadillac (Aug. 9 and 11).

Important Chautauqua speakers this year include Dr. G. L. Mehta, India's ambassador to the United States and Mexico (July 27), and Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense (Friday evening, Aug. 10).

Credit Courses

University credit courses by the Chautauqua Center of Syracuse University have been expanded to encompass a wide variety of art subjects and many education courses that meet requirements for state certification. Liberal arts courses offered by SU faculty members will include one on Shakespeare's plays by Warren Shepard, another on the Soviet Union and world affairs by Donald Bishop, and a discussion of modern European political theory by Marguerite Fisher.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood is accessible to motorists via the Thruway since Lenox, Mass. is but 35 miles beyond Albany. Together with the activities of its educational counterpart, the Berkshire Music Center, there will be nearly 50 scheduled public events, which are expected to top last pear's record attendance of 136,087. The regular Wednesday evening chamber concerts get underway with the Kroll Quartet on July 4.

Symphonic Attractions

On the six successive Friday and Saturday nights plus Sunday afternoons come the main symphonic attractions. The full Boston Symphony, however, does not arrive until July 20. From then until Aug. 12 Charles Munch will lead his men in the Big Shed. Unusual items this summer include performances of Martinu's Field Mass, Bach's St. John Passion, Mozart's Mass in C Minor, and the first stage production of Lucas Foss' fairytale opera, Griffelkin (Aug. 6 and 7).

Four of the works commissioned by the Boston Symphony for its 75th anniversary season also will be heard in the shed concerts—Howard Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky, Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, and Villa-Lobos Eleventh Symphony.

The Empire State Music Festival at Ellenville in the Catskills a little over 100 miles away, get started on the afternoon of July 4 with a big historical pageant designed to recreate the colorful scenes of the early Dutch settlers. Mayors of all the Catskill communities will be on hand as will Gov. Harriman. The concerts of the Symphony of the Air begin that evening and alternate with opera and ballet productions for a full four weeks.

Conductors Listed

Conductors will include Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Orchestra; Leopold Stokowski, Igor Markevitch and Lucas Foss. Highlights here include Villa-Lobos new ballet The Emperor Jones, based on Eugene O'Neill's play and danced by Jose Limon and his company (July 12 and 14); Leopold Stokowski conducting the American premiere of Carl Orff's setting of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream (July 19, 20, and 21); and Bizet's Carmen (July 26 and 28).

The Thruway as far as Buffalo brings the musical phase of the Stratford (Ontario) Shakespeare Festival closer than ever. Beginning July 7 with Benjamin Britten's opera, The Rape of Lucretia, this series of symphony concerts, outstanding recitals and jazz jam sessions continues until Aug. 11. Britten's two-act opera with its libretto based on the ancient Roman legend and taken from the French play of Andre Obey, is highly appropriate for performance at the side of the Shakespearean productions, since a poem of that name was the bard's first published work.

Nights and Programs

Tuesday nights are reserved for opera; Monday, Thursday and Saturdays are recital and orchestra nights with appearances by pianists Claudio Arrau and Rudolf Serkin, baritone Martial Singher, soprano Jennie Tourel, and the Stratford Orchestra under Reginald Stewart and Heinz Under. Wednesday and Fridays are jazz nights with Duke Ellington and his orchestra, Dave Brubeck and his quartet, Art Tatum and his trio, and Willie "The Lion" Smith, pianist.

Meanwhile the theater productions continue with the bard's Merry Wives of Windsor and Henry V on the boards. The latter has turned out to be an enormous success with Cahadian-born and Broadway-bred Christopher Plummer in the title role. He has been hailed by New York critic Walter F. Kerr as "the most promising classic actor on this continent today."

MAMARONECK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 7,211

JUL 2 1956

Mr. Kohloff Tympanist At Mall Concerts

Roland Kohloff, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kohloff of 122 Osborn Avenue, Mamaroneck, has joined the Edwin Franko Goldman band as tympanist, playing four nights a week on the Mall at Central Park and two nights a week at Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

Both series are sponsored by the Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, annual Summer gift to the people of New York in memory of Daniel and Florence Guggenheim.

A special program of patriotic music, in observance of the Fourth of July holiday, will be held tonight at 8:30 on the Mall at Central Park. The concerts are broadcast Friday and Sunday nights at 8:30 from WNYC. Mr. Kohloff, snare drummer and mallet man for the Goldman Band. Mr. Kohloff who plays the xylophone, cymbals, chimes, bells, wood blocks, triangle and castanets, has also joined the staff of the Summer Music Center which opened last week at the Mamaroneck Avenue School in White Plains. It is under the auspices of the Westchester County Recreation Commission in cooperation with the County School Music Association. He teaches beginners and advanced students tympani, drums and mallet instruments.

A scholarship student for four years at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, studying with Saul Goodman of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Mr. Kohloff served last Summer as tympanist and head of the percussion section of the Aspen Festival Orchestra in Colorado. He has also played in 12 concerts with the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Music Festival and has appeared frequently at Westchester, New York and Connecticut churches and clubs.

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
ADVANCE
Circ. D. 43,537

JUL 3 1956

Barbara Cole To Study at Tanglewood

A music major at Wagner College, Miss Barbara Cole has been accepted for study and participation in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. She is the daghter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cole of 180 Campus road, Grymes Hill.

Miss Cole

The Berkshire Music Center is a six-week summer school of music which opened yesterday and will close Aug. 15 under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It provides opportunity for music study in connection with the Berkshire Festival Concerts under direction of Charles Munch.

• • •

THE SCHOOL'S PUPILS are selected among young musicians of high skill as orchestral players, conductors, singers and composers from the entire United States and Europe.

Miss Cole, a soprano, is a junior at Wagner, where she belongs to the choir and the Varsity Players.

She is corresponding secretary of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, secretary of the student body and has been on the dean's list since her freshman year.

The Island girl is soloist with the choir of St. Teresa's Church, Castleton Corners, and she is a graduate of St. Joseph Hill Academy.

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,130

JUL 6 1956

Berkshire Festival

This weekend's opening Festival concerts of four by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, are: Saturday, July 7: Charles Munch conducting Mozart's Symphony in D major, "Haffner," K. 385, and Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante with Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, Bassoon; Hugh Ross conducting Martinu's Military Mass and the world premiere of Henry Colwell's A Thanksgiving Psalm, from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," with the Yale Glee Club. Sunday, July 8: Lukas Foss conducting Haydn: Symphony No. 86 in D major; Fine: Serious Song, for Strings; Haieff: Divertimento; Ives: "The Unanswered Question"; Bach: Piano Concerto in D minor, with Mr. Foss.

UTICA, N. Y.
PRESS
Circ. D. 25,906

JUL 4 1956

Annual Berkshire Festival Opens in Bay State Today

The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, music director, will open today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The symphony, choral and chamber music concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to Aug. 12, on the spacious estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales," a century ago.

The Kroll String Quartet will open the concert season tonight with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Friday evening Benny Goodman will make his Tanglewood debut as soloist on the orchestra program, and Saturday the Yale Glee Club will assist the orchestra in two Mozart works.

The concerts through July 15 will be given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

For the four final weekends of the festival, July 20 to Aug. 12, the orchestra moves to the 6,000-seat Music Shed for 12 concerts. The Shed is open on three sides so the overflow crowds may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns.

This year's concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs. Concert versions of "Die Walkure," Act I, and the opening and final scenes of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars and other soloists, and the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The Shed series also will feature Tanglewood first performances commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary year. They will be symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston.

These symphonies will be taken by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after the close of the Tanglewood season. The orchestra will make a five-week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival, and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

KOKOMO, IND.
TRIBUNE

JUL 2 1956

Local Artists Studying At Ball State

John Chase Lewis and Betse Lewis, his wife, are attending summer classes at Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, where he is taking graduate courses for a master's degree.

The two local artists, who teach at IU Center and at Lewis Workshop Studios here, have presented a class demonstration at Ball State on painting techniques. Additionally, John has a one-man show of sculpture, paintings and drawings on display in Ball State's art museum at present.

Last week, the two designed and produced "A Parable of Death" at the college's arts festival conducted by Lukas Foss, Beverly Hills, Calif., composer. Foss, well-known in music as a composer of operas, oratorios and symphonies, formerly was pianist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUL 2 1956

Berkshire Music Festival Will Open July 4th

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, July 6, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening, July 7, concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon, July 8, a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p. m.

[167]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704

JUL 4 1956

TALKING IT OVER

'Ring Bells and Tell People,' Is G.O.P. Women's '56 Slogan

By Emma Van Wormer

Following the theme of the summer conference of the Republican women of New York State and the Federation of Women's Republican Clubs of New York State, Inc., Onondaga women working in the 1956 election campaign will emphasize "Ring the Bells and Tell the People."

This word comes from Mrs. Norma W. Stone, vice chairman of the Onondaga County Republican Committee and Mrs. Marion Harrison Greene, president of the County Women's Club. Among social events of the autumn, in connection with the campaign, will be a benefit card party, an evening program Oct. 10, planned by the club, with local candidates present.

The nominating committee of the State Federation of GOP Clubs for elections next Jan. 31-Feb. 1 in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, during the winter conference, comprises: Miss Elizabeth Case, Jefferson County; Miss Judy Gregg, New York County; Mrs. Melissa Russell, Broome County; Mrs. Grant Johnson, Essex County; Mrs. Guy K. Simmons, Genesee County. The Committee was named at the recent summer conference in Cooperstown by Miss Jane H. Todd, Federation president and vice chairman of the New York State Republican Committee.

The judicial district directors of the Federation: first district, Mrs. Adele F. Hahn; second, Mrs. Marguerite B. Kuhn; third, Mrs. Harry E. Nash; fourth, Mrs. L. Judson Morhouse (wife of the State Committee chairman); fifth, Miss Elizabeth L. Case; sixth, Mrs. Richard C. Lounsberry; seventh, Mrs. Joseph H. Berdel; eighth, Mrs. Katherine Norton Britt; ninth, Mrs. John A. Britz; tenth, Mrs. Hazel B. Sands.

The Third Ward Women's Republican Club will have its annual picnic luncheon at Drumlins next Wednesday, July 11 at 12:30 o'clock. Reservations must be made by July 7 by calling Mrs. Alice Dailey, the chairman. Mrs. Alwine Conrad will assist during the social hour. The membership drive will be continued in the fall.

* * *

matched by the Rockefeller Foundation under terms of its five-year grant to this summer school of music by the Boston Symphony with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Since its founding in 1945 by William Kroll, the Kroll Quartet has given some 50 New York Town Hall recitals, as official quartet of the Musicians Guild in New York. On Friday night, July 6, Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and of Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a Chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the first of six Bach-Mozart concerts, these events scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons during the next two weekends.

* * *

Here and there: Roland E. Chesley of Utica, president of the Concert Managers Association of America, was in town recently. Mr. Chesley, whose concert series is known as Great Artists, is passing part of the summer in his cottage on Lake Moraine . . . Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Unterfort, on their way to Cape Cod to join Mrs. Unterfort's mother, will attend Berkshire Festival Concerts. Mr. and Mrs. Unterfort have been among regular attendants in "Tanglewood" for some years.

Mrs. Dinwiddie Smith (Jean Wheaton), was among the Canterbury Singers making recordings in Manhattan recently under direction of Charles Dodsley Walker. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will visit the latter's mother, Mrs. Lewis Underwood Wheaton of Cambridge, Mass. at her summer home at Lyme, Conn. this month and next. Mrs. Wheaton, a head resident in Radcliffe College, is visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Roy O. Sykes here and will go on to her former home in Buffalo before going to Connecticut.

Chamber Music to Open Berkshire Music Festival

The 1956 Berkshire Music Festival opens tonight in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. The justly-famous Kroll Quartet will play compositions by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Now in their third season, these Wednesday night Chamber Music concerts have attracted capacity audiences. Last year, nearly 10,000 attended the six events. The Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted last year by approximately $10,000, an amount

AURORA, ILL.
BEACON-NEWS
Circ. D. 28,746 - S. 29,929

JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Fete On Radio Series

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on WMAQ on Monday, July [illegible]. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned musical festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

The recorded broadcasts will continue thru Oct. 1 while the actual concerts at Tanglewood run only for six weeks.

SHREVEPORT LA. TIMES

JUL 5 1956

PLANNING A MONTH OF MUSIC STUDY in New York City during August is Mrs. Hunter Bridges who will spice her serious work with a weekend at the Berkshire Festival which opened July 4, in Tanglewood, Mass., and one at the Shakespeare Festival in Connecticut. She will end her summer with a relaxing cruise up the St. Lawrence River.

KUTZTOWN, PA.
PATRIOT
Circ. W. 3,305

JUL 5 1956

FOR THE COST OF ONE BOMBER

"For the cost of one bomber," Vice President Richard M. Nixon said recently, in reference to international exchange visits, "we can make friendships that will benefit the free world for generations to come."

Witness our own Joan Frey in Munich; M. Grace Wible, of the KSTC Art Education faculty, attending the wedding in Glasgow Cathedral, of a Scotch friend; and this summer, Boston Symphony concerts in the Soviet Union!

Remember also that during "Religion in Life Week" at KSTC, the students were thrilled by a panel of internationalists? Dieu Huu Kuong, a Vietnam, who received a fellowship to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was top man in Lafayette's senior class in mechanical engineering, and he earned his way through. Chrussoula Counelaki, Athens, Greece, another panelist, was recently graduated with magna cum laude honors at Cedar Crest.

And had you sensed that through our Folk Festival we may spread that same goodwill? "Outlanders" from every state in the Union, and Canada are among us, many of them with Old World backgrounds. Genuine Pennsylvania Dutch hospitality not only on the Fairgrounds but on Main Street, in our homes and in our stores, is bound to build new friends not only for the Festival but for . . . Kutztown.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.
CITIZEN-NEWS
Circ. D. 35,217

JUL 6 1956

MUSICAL SCORE

Starlight Bowl Opens With 'Naughty Marietta'

Burbank's Starlight Bowl begins its summer "pops" concert season tonight with the presentation of Victor Herbert's operetta "Naughty Marietta" by the Burbank Civic Light Opera Chorus.

The program will be repeated tomorrow night with curtain time slated for 8 p.m. Lead roles will be sung by Elaine Moss, Lee Miro, June Zemblidge, Ray Mullen, Jerry Blatner, and Carl Frain under the direction of John Ellis.

The chorus will be supported by the Burbank Symphony Orchestra and the Prival Ballet.

Future offerings in the city's open-air amphitheater include Gershwin Night, July 15; A Night in Italy, July 29; the Panaieff Ballet Concerto, Aug. 12; and American Folk Music, Aug. 26. Tickets are available for individual concerts or for the season. Further information may be obtained by telephoning THornwall 2-4635.

* * *

The 53rd annual season of the Coleman Chamber Music Assn. at the Pasadena Playhouse will begin in November and will include: Juilliard String Quartet, Parrenin String Quartet, cellist Joseph Schuster, pianist Leonard Pennario, harpsichordist Ralph Kirkpatrick, Trio di Bolzano, Quartetto Italiano, and the Coleman Audition Winners.

The group continues its Twilight Garden Concerts Sunday with the Trojan String Quartet at 6:30 p.m. For information, telephone SYcamore 3-5721.

* * *

The Berkshire Festival begins this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as mainstays. The event continues until Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch.

* * *

BRIEFS — A Hollywood Bowl Certificate of Merit was presented yesterday to Cathy Eros, 7, piano pupil of Norman Lesser. . . . Composer Aaron Copland has recently acquired three honors: honorary Doctor of Music degree from Princeton, the Gold Medal for Music from the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and honorary membership in the National Academy of St. Cecilia of Rome. . . . The Trojan String Quartet will go to Italy late this summer for advance study. . . . New officers of the Music Guild are Mac Benoff, president; Dr. Raymond Kendall, vice president; Mrs. Bertram Allenberg, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert Cox, recording secretary, and Warner Heineman, treasurer.

* * *

The 12th annual George Gershwin Memorial Contest for composers under 30 years of age has begun. It closes Aug. 31. Winner receives $1,000 and his orchestral composition is premiered at Carnegie Hall by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos. Entry blanks are available from B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, 165 W. 46th St., New York, N.Y.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 5 1956

BENNY GOODMAN will make his Tanglewood debut on Friday, July [illegible] (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 7 1956

Day Commemorating Missions Announced By Jubilee Leaders

Gov. Christian A. Herter's proclamation of July [illegible] as American Foreign Missions day was announced today by Henry N. Flynt, Jr., and George W. Schryver, co-chairmen of the Haystack Jubilee, which will be held later this month.

The jubilee will include a prominent speaker and music by the Boston Symphony orchestra's brass section which recently returned from a tour of England.

Gov. Herter's proclamation relates the story of the Haystack monument which is located near Williams college. At the site in 1806, five Williams college students discussed the need and the possibility of carrying the Christian message to foreign lands. They later formed a group devoted to the encouragement of foreign missions, and the result was the establishment in 1810 of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

[168]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 4 1956

TALKING IT OVER

'Ring Bells and Tell People,' Is G.O.P. Women's '56 Slogan

By Emma Van Wormer

Following the theme of the summer conference of the Republican women of New York State and the Federation of Women's Republican Clubs of New York State, Inc., Onondaga women working in the 1956 election campaign will emphasize "Ring the Bells and Tell the People."

This word comes from Mrs. Norma W. Stone, vice chairman of the Onondaga County Republican Committee and Mrs. Marion Harrison Greene, president of the County Women's Club. Among social events of the autumn, in connection with the campaign, will be a benefit card party, an evening program Oct. 10, planned by the club, with local candidates present.

The nominating committee of the State Federation of GOP Clubs for elections next Jan. 31-Feb. 1 in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, during the winter conference, comprises: Miss Elizabeth Case, Jefferson County; Miss Judy Gregg, New York County; Mrs. Melissa Russell, Broome County; Mrs. Grant Johnson, Essex County; Mrs. Guy K. Simmons, Genesee County. The Committee was named at the recent summer conference in Cooperstown by Miss Jane H. Todd, Federation president and vice chairman of the New York State Republican Committee.

The judicial district directors of the Federation: first district, Mrs. Adele F. Hahn; second, Mrs. Marguerite B. Kuhn; third, Mrs. Harry E. Nash; fourth, Mrs. L. Judson Morhouse (wife of the State Committee chairman); fifth, Miss Elizabeth L. Case; sixth, Mrs. Richard C. Lounsberry; seventh, Mrs. Joseph H. Berdel; eighth, Mrs. Katherine Norton Britt; ninth, Mrs. John A. Britz; tenth, Mrs. Hazel B. Sands.

The Third Ward Women's Republican Club will have its annual picnic luncheon at Drumlins next Wednesday, July 11 at 12:30 o'clock. Reservations must be made by July 7, by calling Mrs. Alice Dalley, the chairman. Mrs. Alwine Conrad will assist during the social hour. The membership drive will be continued in the fall.

* * *

matched by the Rockefeller Foundation under terms of its five-year grant to this summer school of music by the Boston Symphony with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Since its founding in 1945 by William Kroll, the Kroll Quartet has given some 50 New York Town Hall recitals, as official quartet of the Musicians Guild in New York. On Friday night, July 6, Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and of Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a Chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the first of six Bach-Mozart concerts, these events scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons during the next two weekends.

* * *

Here and there: Roland E. Chesley of Utica, president of the Concert Managers Association of America, was in town recently. Mr. Chesley, whose concert series is known as Great Artists, is passing part of the summer in his cottage on Lake Moraine . . . Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Unterfort, on their way to Cape Cod to join Mrs. Unterfort's mother, will attend Berkshire Festival Concerts. Mr. and Mrs. Unterfort have been among regular attendants in "Tanglewood" for some years.

Mrs. Dinwiddie Smith (Jean Wheaton), was among the Canterbury Singers making recordings in Manhattan recently under direction of Charles Dodsley Walker. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will visit the latter's mother, Mrs. Lewis Underwood Wheaton of Cambridge, Mass. at her summer home at Lyme, Conn. this month and next. Mrs. Wheaton, a head resident in Radcliffe College, is visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Roy O. Sykes here and will go on to her former home in Buffalo before going to Connecticut.

Chamber Music to Open Berkshire Music Festival

The 1956 Berkshire Music Festival opens tonight in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. The justly-famous Kroll Quartet will play compositions by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Now in their third season, these Wednesday night Chamber Music concerts have attracted capacity audiences. Last year, nearly 10,000 attended the six events. The Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted last year by approximately $10,000, an amount

AURORA, ILL.
BEACON-NEWS
Circ. D. 28,746 - S. 29,929
JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Fete On Radio Series

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on WMAQ on Monday, July 9 at 8:30 p.m. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned musical festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

The recorded broadcasts will continue thru Oct. 1 altho the actual concerts at Tanglewood run only for six weeks.

SHREVEPORT LA. TIMES
JUL 1956

PLANNING A MONTH OF MUSIC STUDY in New York City during August is Mrs. Hunter Bridges who will spice her serious work with a weekend at the Berkshire Festival which opened July 4, in Tanglewood, Mass., and one at the Shakespeare Festival in Connecticut. She will end her summer with a relaxing cruise up the St. Lawrence River.

KUTZTOWN, PA.
PATRIOT
Circ. W. 3,305
JUL 5 1956

FOR THE COST OF ONE BOMBER

"For the cost of one bomber," Vice President Richard M. Nixon said recently, in reference to international exchange visits, "we can make friendships that will benefit the free world for generations to come."

Witness our own Joan Frey in Munich; M. Grace Wible, of the KSTC Art Education faculty, attending the wedding in Glasgow Cathedral, of a Scotch friend; and this summer, Boston Symphony concerts in the Soviet Union!

Remember also that during "Religion in Life Week" at KSTC, the students were thrilled by a panel of internationalists? Dieu Huu Kuong, a Vietnam, who received a fellowship to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was top man in Lafayette's senior class in mechanical engineering, and he earned his way through. Chrussoula Counelaki, Athens, Greece, another panelist, was recently graduated with magna cum laude honors at Cedar Crest.

And had you sensed that through our Folk Festival we may spread that same goodwill? "Outlanders" from every state in the Union, and Canada are among us, many of them with Old World backgrounds. Genuine Pennsylvania Dutch hospitality not only on the Fairgrounds but on Main Street, in our homes and in our stores, is bound to build new friends not only for the Festival but for . . . Kutztown.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.
CITIZEN-NEWS
Circ. D. 35,217
JUL 6 1956

MUSICAL SCORE

Starlight Bowl Opens With 'Naughty Marietta'

Burbank's Starlight Bowl begins its summer "pops" concert season tonight with the presentation of Victor Herbert's operetta "Naughty Marietta" by the Burbank Civic Light Opera Chorus.

The program will be repeated tomorrow night with curtain time slated for 8 p.m. Lead roles will be sung by Elaine Moss, Lee Miro, June Zemblidge, Ray Mullen, Jerry Blatner, and Carl Frain under the direction of John Ellis.

The chorus will be supported by the Burbank Symphony Orchestra and the Prival Ballet.

Future offerings in the city's open-air amphitheater include Gershwin Night, July 15; A Night in Italy, July 29; the Pavlaieff Ballet Concerto, Aug. 12; and American Folk Music, Aug. 26. Tickets are available for individual concerts or for the season. Further information may be obtained by telephoning THornwall 2-4635.

* * *

The 53rd annual season of the Coleman Chamber Music Assn. at the Pasadena Playhouse will begin in November and will include: Juilliard String Quartet, Parrenin String Quartet, cellist Joseph Schuster, pianist Leonard Pennario, harpsichordist Ralph Kirkpatrick, Trio di Bolzano, Quartetto Italiano, and the Coleman Audition Winners.

The group continues its Twilight Garden Concerts Sunday with the Trojan String Quartet at 6:30 p.m. For information, telephone SYcamore 3-5721.

* * *

The Berkshire Festival begins this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as mainstays. The event continues until Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch.

* * *

BRIEFS — A Hollywood Bowl Certificate of Merit was presented yesterday to Cathy Eros, 7, piano pupil of Norman Lesser. . . . Composer Aaron Copeland has recently acquired three honors: honorary Doctor of Music degree from Princeton, the Gold Medal for Music from the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and honorary membership in the National Academy of St. Cecilia of Rome. . . . The Trojan String Quartet will go to Italy late this summer for advance study. . . . New officers of the Music Guild are Mac Benoff, president; Dr. Raymond Kendall, vice president; Mrs. Bertram Allenberg, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert Cox, recording secretary, and Warner Heineman, treasurer.

* * *

The 12th annual George Gershwin Memorial Contest for composers under 30 years of age has begun. It closes Aug. 31. Winner receives $1,000 and his orchestral composition is premiered at Carnegie Hall by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos. Entry blanks are available from B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, 165 W. 46th St., New York, N.Y.

* * *

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 5 1956

BENNY GOODMAN will make his Tanglewood debut on Friday, July 13 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 7 1956

Day Commemorating Missions Announced By Jubilee Leaders

Gov. Christian A. Herter's proclamation of July 28 as American Foreign Missions day was announced today by Henry N. Flynt, Jr., and George W. Schryver, co-chairmen of the Haystack jubilee, which will be held later this month.

The jubilee will include a prominent speaker and music by the Boston Symphony orchestra's brass section which recently returned from a tour of England.

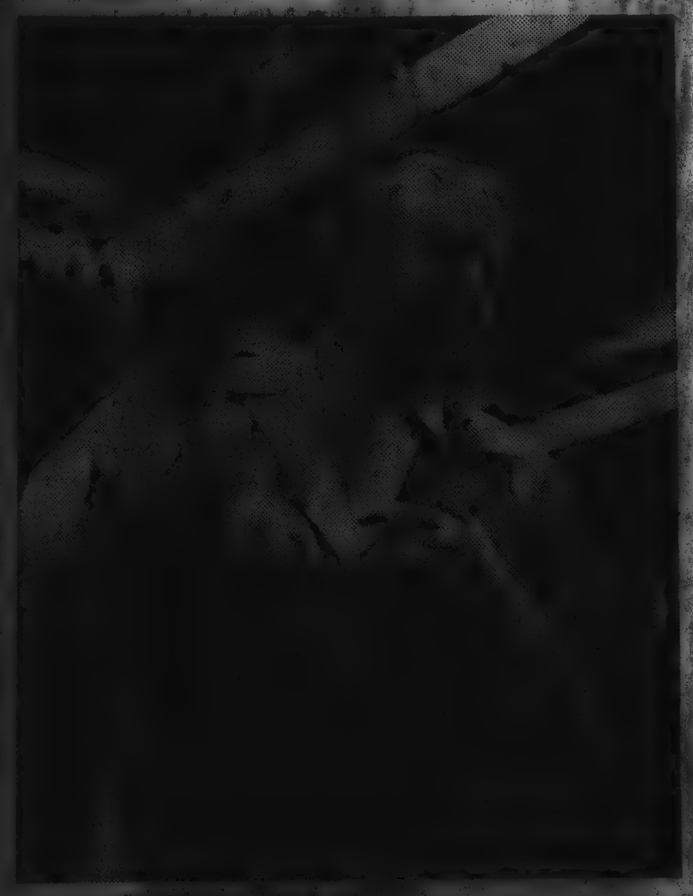
Gov. Herter's proclamation relates the story of the Haystack monument which is located near Williams college. At the site in 1806, five Williams college students discussed the need and the possibility of carrying the Christian message to foreign lands. They later formed a group devoted to the encouragement of foreign missions, and the result was the establishment in 1810 of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER DISPATCH
Circ. D. 23,886
JUL 6 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will engage disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dekoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Millie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Will.

OPERA

AMATO OPERA THEATRE—159 Bleecker St. OR 7-2844. Adm. free. Reservations must be made in advance at theatre or by mail (enclose stamped self-addressed envelope). Mon.-Sun. July 6-8 & 13-15—"Barber of Seville." Extra perf. July 10.

MUSIC

(continued)

Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 p.m. $2 & $3. Chamber Orch, Fri. Sat. 8:30 Sun. 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm. to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. Thru July 15 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall.

HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 6 1956

TALKING IT OVER

Dr. Irving Cheyette to Lecture In Oswego on 'Music of Japan'

By Emma Van Wormer

In the New York State College for Teachers in Oswego at 8 o'clock tonight, Dr. Irving Cheyette, professor of Music and Education in the University of Buffalo, will present a lecture recital on "The Music of Japan."

Dr. Cheyette, who passed a year studying music and certain related arts in Japan, will wear traditional costume of kimono and hakama. Formerly professor of Syracuse University music education, Dr. Cheyette also was known as a cellist. His family was active in cultural circles during their residence here, moving to Buffalo last summer, on Dr. Cheyette's return from Japan.

Tonight Dr. Cheyette will perform on the samisen, koto, tzuzumi and teiko, and will show such other instruments as the shakuhachi and cherumera flue (bamboo flutes). He will follow the performance with recordings illustrated with color slides of court music, Kabuki and Noh Theater music, folk music and popular music. The lecture will close with the showing of the film on "The Arts of Japan." In 1954-55 Dr. Cheyette as Fulbright professor in the Toyko Imperial University of Arts lectured on "Methods in Music Education," and studied Japanese music in the Department of Oriental Music at that University. Since return to the States he has presented lectures for the Erie County Music Educators, the New York State School Music Association, the Music Educators National Conference in St. Louis, the University of Buffalo. He is scheduled for additional lectures in other colleges this fall.

* * * *

In mid-March, 1955, Shinjiro Noro, music editor and critic of Toyko, Japan, accompanied by Joseph A. Sano of the U. S. Department of State, acting as interpreter, came to Syracuse and was a dinner guest in the Cheyette home. He had become acquaintanced with Dr. Cheyette then in Japan, and the Syracuse music scholar and the Oriental music authority met almost daily for coffee and toast, while noting improvement in Dr. Cheyette's mastery of Japanese. Mr. Noro was on a U. S. Government arranged coast-to-coast tour of the States. His visit in Syracuse included a tour of Syracuse University College of Fine Arts.

Chamber Concert in 'Tanglewood' Offers 'Dead Sea Scrolls'

The world premiere of the first musical setting of "Dead Sea Scrolls," with debut by the Yale Choristers, is scheduled for tomorrow night in the theater-concert hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the first half of the concert to be played by members of the orchestra. Works by Mozart will comprise the chamber group's selections.

Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This number, with Martinu's "Military Mass" will enlist, in addition to orchestral forces, the Yale singers, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath.

Millar Burrows, Winkley Professor of Biblical Theology in Yale, translated the Dead Sea Scrolls text from Aramaic into English for Mr. Cowell. This score, composed in New York City last spring, was written for and dedicated to Mr. Ross, who has led several first performances of Composer Cowell's works. This, however, is the first Cowell composition to be given in the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Cowell will be present.

The opening concert of the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra season will take place tonight in the 8,000-seat amphitheater, Walter Hendl, conducting. There will be a total of 28 symphonic programs, four more than in previous years. The concert season in Chautauqua will continue through Aug. 22.

* * * *

Krasner Quartet Gives Concert in S. U. 'Pinebrook'

Prof. Louis Krasner and his String Quartet performed chamber music recently in Syracuse University College Pinebrook Camp, playing works by Haydn, Beethoven, Mozart and Hugo Wolff. The artists, in addition to Violinist Krasner: Mrs. Krasner (Adrienne Galimir) who also plays violin, Claude Bortel, violist and Alfreds Ozolins, cellist.

Vivian Krasner and Elsa Krasner, daughters of Prof. and Mrs. Krasner, played the flute, piano and violin. The audience comprised invited groups from the Pinebrook area, including those from Deerwood music camp. Carole Leland, 1953 S.U. graduate, is singing this summer in Deerwood's chorus which will present the Strauss operetta, "Die Fledermaus" this summer.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 7 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman, clarinet. ¶ Saturday, July 7, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra, with the Yale Glee Club. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 8, at 8:30: Lukas Foss conducting the chamber or[illegible]

[illegible] along court con[illegible]ns. . . . Munch all-[illegible]olin. Sun[illegible]irect[illegible]stival John[illegible] soprano David Lloyd, [illegible] Joyce, basses. [illegible] Lenox, Mass. Through Sun[illegible]

[169]

INFORMATION OBSCURED

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER DISPATCH
Circ. D. 23,886

JUL 6 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

JUL 7 1956

OPERA

AMATO OPERA THEATRE—159 Bleecker St. OR 7-2844. Adm. free. Reservations must be made in advance at theatre or by mail (enclose stamped self-addressed envelope). Fri.-Sun. July 6-8 & 13-15—"Barber of Seville." Extra perf. July 10.

MUSIC

[redacted] (continued)

Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 p.m. $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri. Sat. 8:30 Sun. 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm. to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. Thru July 15 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 20-Aug. 12 in [redacted] on accommodations [redacted] Fri. July [redacted] Conference, Pittsfield, [redacted] Goodman, soloist; Charles Munch cond. [redacted] K 550. Concerto [redacted] Symphony [redacted] K 422; Symphony in [redacted] Prague [redacted] and [redacted] July 7—Chamber [redacted]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704

JUL 6 1956

TALKING IT OVER

Dr. Irving Cheyette to Lecture In Oswego on 'Music of Japan'

By Emma Van Wormer

In the New York State College for Teachers in Oswego at 8 o'clock tonight, Dr. Irving Cheyette, professor of Music and Education in the University of Buffalo, will present a lecture recital on "The Music of Japan."

Dr. Cheyette, who passed a year studying music and certain related arts in Japan, will wear traditional costume of kimono and hakama. Formerly professor of Syracuse University music education, Dr. Cheyette also was known as a cellist. His family was active in cultural circles during their residence here, moving to Buffalo last summer, on Dr. Cheyette's return from Japan.

Dr. Cheyette

Tonight Dr. Cheyette will perform on the samisen, koto, tzuzumi and teiko, and will show such other instruments as the shakuhachi and cherumera fue, (bamboo flutes). He will follow the performance with recordings illustrated with color slides of court music, Kabuki and Noh Theater music, folk music and popular music. The lecture will close with the showing of the film on "The Arts of Japan." In 1954-55 Dr. Cheyette as Fulbright professor in the Toyko Imperial University of Arts lectured on "Methods in Music Education," and studied Japanese music in the Department of Oriental Music at that University. Since return to the States he has presented lectures for the Erie County Music Educators, the New York State School Music Association, the Music Educators National Conference in St. Louis, the University of Buffalo. He is scheduled for additional lectures in other colleges this fall.

* * *

In mid-March, 1955, Shinjiro Noro, music editor and critic of Toyko, Japan, accompanied by Joseph A. Sano of the U. S. Department of State, acting as interpreter, came to Syracuse and was a dinner guest in the Cheyette home. He had become acquintanced with Dr. Cheyette, then in Japan, and the Syracuse music scholar and the Oriental music authority met almost daily for coffee and toast, while noting improvement in Dr. Cheyette's mastery of Japanese. Mr. Noro was on a U. S. Government arranged coast-to-coast tour of the States. His visit in Syracuse included a tour of Syracuse University College of Fine Arts.

* * *

Chamber Concert in 'Tanglewood' Offers 'Dead Sea Scrolls'

The world premiere of the first musical setting of 'Dead Sea Scrolls," with debut by the Yale Choristers, is scheduled for tomorrow night in the theater-concert hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the first half of the concert to be played by members of the orchestra. Works by Mozart will comprise the chamber group's selections.

Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This number, with Martinu's "Military Mass" will enlist, in addition to orchestral forces, the Yale singers, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath.

Millar Burrows, Winkley Professor of Biblical Theology in Yale, translated the Dead Sea Scrolls text from Aramaic into English for Mr. Cowell. This score, composed in New York City last spring, was written for and dedicated to Mr. Ross, who has led several first performances of Composer Cowell's works. This, however, is the first Cowell composition to be given in the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Cowell will be present.

The opening concert of the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra season will take place tonight in the 8,000-seat amphitheater, Walter Hendl, conducting. There will be a total of 28 symphonic programs, four more than in previous years. The concert season in Chautauqua will continue through Aug. 22.

* * *

Krasner Quartet Gives Concert in S. U. Pinebrook

Prof. Louis Krasner and his String Quartet performed chamber music recently in Syracuse Universty College Pinebrook Camp, playing works by Haydn, Beethoven, Mozart and Hugo Wolff. The artists, in addition to Violinist Krasner: Mrs. Krasner (Adrienne Galimir) who also plays violin; Claude Bortel, violist and Alfreds Ozolins, cellist.

Vivian Krasner and Elsa Krasner, daughters of Prof. and Mrs. Krasner, played the flute, piano and violin. The audience comprised invited groups from the Pinebrook area, including those from Deerwood music camp. Carole Leland, 1956 S.U. graduate, is singing this summer in Deerwood's chorus which will present the Strauss operetta, "Die Fledermaus" this summer.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 7 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman, clarinet. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 7, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra, with the Yale Glee Club. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 8, at 2:30: Lukas Foss conducting the chamber orchestra and acting as piano soloist. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 11 [redacted] chamber music by Benny Goodman, clarinet, and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. . . . ¶ Fri[redacted] at 8:30: the chamber orchestra conducted by Boris [redacted] who, along with Genia [redacted] Mozart concertos for [redacted] pianos. . . . [redacted] Munch [redacted] an all-program, with [redacted] Kroll, violin, [redacted] Anthony Dworkin, flute. . . . ¶ Sunday [redacted] Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra and the Festival Chorus in a performance of Bach's [redacted] John [redacted] with Adele Addison, soprano; [redacted] Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; [redacted] Morgan and James Joyce, basses. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 12.)

[16]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

JUL 8 1956

Music Young Entertainers In Lyric 'On the Town'

By E. V. W.

Youth will be served and the Lyric Circus production "On the Town" which opened last week and which runs through July 15 with nightly performances except tomorrow, has a young-in-years-cast, to appeal to both young-in-years and young-in-heart. Several of the dancers have had Broadway experience, others having been featured in TV shows.

There's Soprano Betty Winsett, alumna of Texas U. Acting School and the Neighborhood Playhouse, who has been on tour with the National Company of "High Button Shoes." She has been co-starred with Tenor Robert Rounseville of operatic fame and has appeared with the New York City Opera Company, both in Manhattan and in Chicago.

David Davis, stage director of the Lyric, with a multiple of duties through the season, has made a decided hit as Ozzie in "On the Town" which has a score by the eminent young American composer, Leonard Bernstein. The dancing of Cynthia Scott, of TV experience, and of the Lyric's own Dance Ensemble, is graceful and well-timed.

WINSETT & DAVIS
... 'Carried Away'

Maestro Thomas Philip Martin, musical director of the Lyric, and Choreographer Diane March rightfully earn praise for their share in this entertainment in this Theater-in-the-Round near Skaneateles. Tonight's show time is seven-thirty.

A look ahead in the Lyric's schedule points to "Naughty Marietta," Victor Herbert's tuneful operetta, starting July 17 and continuing through July 22. The numbers which linger on with this show are "Neath the Southern Moon," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "The Italian Melody," "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" and the rousing marching song "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp."

Christine Mathews, who appeared with the original Broadway Company in "Kiss Me, Kate" will sing the title roles. In private life, Miss Mathews is Mrs. David Davis, a recent bride in Manhattan. Since her marriage she has been singing leading roles in summer theaters in the middle west.

This date in music: 1882, Percy Grainger, Australian composer-pianist, born. Since 1919 he has been a citizen of the United States. He played with the old Syracuse Symphony some years ago.

This afternoon in the Theater-Concert Hall in Tanglewood, Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty in Berkshire Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to this noted beauty and cultural center near Lenox, Mass. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song, for Strings" by Mr. Foss' colleague on the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, Irving Fine; "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff, and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives.

The program will begin with Haydn's Smphony No. 88 in G Major, and conclude with Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Mr. Foss as soloist conducting from the keyboard. Lukas Foss, at one time was a student in the Berkshire Music Center and who returns to its faculty this year after a summer's leave of absence, has become one of the busiest men of music in the country. He lives in Los Angeles, where he is Associate Professor at the University of California in charge of composition, and music director of the U.C.L.A. Symphony Orchestra. He also is conductor of the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony Orchestra.

Later in the season (on Aug. 6, 7) the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the stage premier of his opera, "Griffelkin," which was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company television network and telecast nationally last November. The composer will conduct those two performances, which will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

DETROIT, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 442,665 - S. 549,629

JUL 8 1956

NEWS OF RADIO

By BETTY HYDE

WITH CHARLES MUNCH the conductor, broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., begin on WWJ at 8:15 Monday night.

Although the Tanglewood concerts only run six weeks, this series of recorded highlights will be on the air through Oct. 1. Ben Grauer will be the commentator and there will be guest conductors and well-known vocal and instrumental soloists. First concert will be an all-Mozart program.

The announcement that NBC had gained exclusive radio and TV rights to the World Series and the All-Star baseball games for the next five years, 1957 to 1961, means that Mutual has lost two of its prize sports plums. NBC has not carried World Series broadcasts since 1938.

The World Series has been on MBS for 17 straight years and the All-Star game for 13.

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHTS

GOV. A. B. (HAPPY) Chandler will "Meet the Press" at 6:35 p.m. on WWJ.

WWJ's "Monitor" hears talking mynah birds at 3:30; goes to Kronberg Castle in Denmark, setting for "Hamlet" at 5:30; covers the wind-up of the Canadian Open Golf Championship and the Syracuse, N.Y. Women's Open at 6; talks with Bing Crosby at 7, Kay Thompson at 8, Alfred Hitchcock at 8:30 and Shirley Yamagouchi at 9.

Functions and contributions of the Detroit Council of Churches are discussed on WJR at 12:30 . . . "Vacations in the Americas" is the musical theme for the "Woolworth Hour" at 1 on WJR and at 3 on CKLW. Doretta Morrow, Edith Adams, Julius LaRosa guest.

First broadcast from the Los Angeles Music Festival is aired on WJR's "World Music Festivals" at 2:05. Works by two contemporary American composers, John Vincent and Franz Waxman, are featured.

White Sox-Tigers on WJBK and WKMH at 1:30 . . . Vivian Blaine and Joey Bushkin visit Mitch Miller at his new time, 7, on WJR . . . "FBI in Peace and War" moves to a new time, 6:05, on WJR, with "The Cross-Country" expose of a vacation swindle . . . "Summer in St. Louis" returns at 9:05 on WJR with mezzo-soprano Claramae Turner, the guest soloist.

Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice" is on "Opera Playhouse" at 5:30 on WDET . . . Beethoven's third symphony is played at 4 on WDET . . . WJBK's "What's New?," at 11:05 on WJBK, has a broadcast of an actual moot court trial . . . "The Ballad of Grass" is dramatized on CBE at 8.

"Current Antarctic Expeditions" is the post-news talk on CBE at 9:20 . . . Mendelssohn's first symphony is performed on CBE at 10 on the Winnipeg Pop Concert.

TULSA, OKLA. WORLD

JUL 8 1956

Music on the Air

Music on High

Music on High will feature hymns of praise from three different centuries and three different countries, on its KVOO broadcast at 10:45 a. m. Sunday. A recording of the "Te Deum Laudamus" from the 4th century, from Serbia, will be heard from the Episcopal Liturgy. The Robert Shaw chorale will sing a recording of St. Francis of Assisi's hymn from the 13th century from Italy, "All Creature of Our God and King." The St. Olaf Lutheran college choir of Northfield, Minn., will sing Neander's hymn of praise from 17th century Germany, "Praise to the Lord, the Almighty," a Christiansen arrangement.

Music of the Masters

Music of the Masters, heard nightly over KWGS-FM at 7 o'clock, Sunday will feature violinist David Oistrakh playing Prokofiev's Sonata No. 2, Leclair's Sonata No. 3, and Locatelli's Sonata in F Minor. Monday Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops orchestra from NBC at 7:15. Tuesday Fritz Heitmann plays Bach's Organ Toccata and Fugue in D Minor and Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor, and the Roger Wagner chorale sings Palestrina's Missa Papae Marcelli. Toscanini leads the NBC Symphony orchestra Wednesday in the second act of Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice" with Nan Merriman and Barbara Gibson singing the title roles. Thursday Artur Rubinstein plays Franck's Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, and Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra play Serradel's "La Golondrina" and Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne."

Friday Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Queen Mab Scherzo from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," Guido Cantelli leads the Philharmonia orchestra in Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture-Fantasy," and cellist Mstislav Rostropovich is featured in Miaskovsky's Concerto in C. Saturday the Boston Pops is heard in ballet music excerpts, and Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra play Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Don Quixote," with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Music Hall of Fame

Music Hall of Fame, on KVOO at 11:30 p. m. Sunday will feature piano music by Sergei Rachmaninoff and two short pieces by the French composer, Francois Couperin. Opening the concert, a performance will be heard of Sergei Rachmaninoff in his own "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini," accompanied by the Philadelphia orchestra under Leopold Stokowski. Also, Harpsichordist Wanda Landowska will be heard in two short pieces by Francois Couperin, his "Les Barricades Mysterieuses," and "L'Arlequine."

Featuring a program of the music of three composers, Schubert, Rossini and Beethoven, Music Hall of Fame will be heard at 11 p. m. Tuesday. Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra will open the program with "Entr' Acte" and "Minores" I and II, from Schubert's "Rosamunde" music. Rossini's "William Tell Overture" will be heard, next, performed by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony orchestra. Concluding the concert will be the feature of the evening, Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony in A," played by the NBC Symphony orchestra under the baton of Arturo Toscanini.

phony orchestra. Concluding the concert will be the feature of the evening, Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony in A," played by the NBC Symphony orchestra under the baton of Arturo Toscanini.

Boston Symphony

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start at 7:15 p. m. Monday over KVOO and NBC. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

Telephone Hour

Jose Iturbi, the internationally famous pianist, will play selections from Falla and Beethoven on his appearance on the Telephone Hour at 8 p. m. Monday over KVOO.

Iturbi will play three selections from Falla's "El Amor Brujo." First will be an excerpt from the tango-like "Pantomine." Second will be the colorful "Dance of Terror." The group will close with the exciting "Ritual Fire Dance," one of Mr. Iturbi's finest interpretations.

For the concluding number on the broadcast, Mr. Iturbi has chosen the gay finale from Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4 in G Major."

Magic Window

KVOO will present The Magic Window at 10:30 p. m. Monday night with harp and organ music by Lorraine Byman, harpist, and Morris Billington, organist. Miss Byman will play an harp solos "The Girl With the Flaxen Hair" by DeBussy, and "Roses of Picardy" by Haydn Wood. Billington will play two organ solos including "In the Gloaming" by Harrison and "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows."

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR

JUL 8 1956

Radio Notes This Week.

THE ANNUAL broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on N. B. C. and WDAF at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony orchestra will be directed by Charles Munch, its regular conductor, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate. The recorded broadcasts will continue through October 1 although the actual concerts at Tanglewood run only [illegible]

Munch will devote the opening concert entirely to music of Mozart, including the finale movement of "Symphony in D Major" (Haffner) and the Sinfonia Concertante, with Oboe, Horn, Clarinet and Bassoon [illegible]

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR

JUL 8 1956

THE international exchange program is flourishing, Kaye reports . . . By early next year this artistic propaganda movement will have sent to other lands Richard Tucker, Metropolitan opera tenor; Marian Anderson, famed contralto; Eleanor Steber, also of the "Met"; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Eugene List, pianist; Carol Glenn, violinist; William Warfield, baritone; the Ballet Theater, New York City Ballet, the New York Woodwind quintet and the Boston Symphony . . . The woodwinds will be touring Latin America, the dancers will be in Europe, List and Glenn demonstate their art in Indonesia, Piatigorsky will be in the Far East, Miss Steber in the Near East, Miss Anderson in the Far East. . . . The Boston orchestra will play in Europe and Russia . . . A. N. T. A. has sponsored tours of some 60 artists and musical organizations since the program went into effect in 1954, and Kaye observes that propaganda has had no fairer use [170]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

JUL 8 1956

MUSIC Young Entertainers In Lyric 'On the Town'

By E. V. W.

Youth will be served and the Lyric Circus production "On the Town" which opened last week and which runs through July 15 with nightly performances except tomorrow, has a young-in-years-cast, to appeal to both young-in-years and young-in-heart. Several of the dancers have had Broadway experience, others having been featured in TV shows.

There's Soprano Betty Winsett, alumna of Texas U. Acting School and the Neighborhood Playhouse, who has been on tour with the National Company of "High Button Shoes." She has been co-starred with Tenor Robert Rounseville of operatic fame and has appeared with the New York City Opera Company, both in Manhattan and in Chicago.

David Davis, stage director of the Lyric, with a multiple of duties through the season, has made a decided hit as Ozzie in "On the Town" which has a score by the eminent young American composer, Leonard Bernstein. The dancing of Cynthia Scott of TV experience, and of the Lyric's own Dance Ensemble, is graceful and well-timed.

WINSETT & DAVIS
. . . 'Carried Away'

Maestro Thomas Phillip Martin, musical director of the Lyric, and Choreographer Diane Marsh rightfully earn praise for their share in this entertainment in this Theater-in-the-Round near Skaneateles. Tonight's show time is seven-thirty.

A look ahead in the Lyric's schedule points to "Naughty Marietta," Victor Herbert's tuneful operetta, starting July 17 and continuing through July 22. The numbers which linger on with this show are "Neath the Southern Moon," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "The Dream Melody," "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" and the rousing march song "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp."

Christine Mathews, who appeared with the original Broadway Company in "Kiss Me, Kate" will sing the title role. In private life, Miss Mathews is Mrs. David Davis, a recent bride in Manhattan. Since her marriage she has been singing leading roles in summer theaters in the middle west.

This date in music: 1882, Percy Grainger, Australian composer-pianist, born. Since 1919 he has been a citizen of the United States. He played with the old Syracuse Symphony some years ago.

This afternoon in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty in Berkshire Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to this noted beauty and cultural center near Lenox, Mass. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song, for Strings" by Mr. Foss' colleague on the Berkshire Music Center's faculty Irving Fine; "Divertimento by Alexei Haieff; and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives.

The program will begin with Haydn's Smphony No. 86 in D Major, and conclude with Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Mr. Foss as soloist conducting from the keyboard. Lukas Foss, at one time was a student in the Berkshire Music Center and who returns to its faculty this year after a summer's leave of absence, has become one of the busiest men of music in the country. He lives in Los Angeles, where he is Associate Professor at the University of California in charge of composition, and music director of the U.C.L.A. Symphony Orchestra. He also is conductor of the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony Orchestra.

Later in the season (on Aug. 6, 7) the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the stage premier of his opera, "Griffelkin," which was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company television network and telecast nationally last November. The composer will conduct those two performances, which will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

DETROIT, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 442,665 - S. 549,629

JUL 8 1956

NEWS OF RADIO

By BETTY HYDE

WITH CHARLES MUNCH the conductor, broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., begin on WWJ at 8:15 Monday night.

Although the Tanglewood concerts only run six weeks, this series of recorded highlights will be on the air through Oct. 1. Ben Grauer will be the commentator and there will be guest conductors and well-known vocal and instrumental soloists. First concert will be an all-Mozart program.

The announcement that NBC had gained exclusive radio and TV rights to the World Series and the All-Star baseball games for the next five years, 1957 to 1961, means that Mutual has lost two of its prize sports plums. NBC has not carried World Series broadcasts since 1938.

The World Series has been on MBS for 17 straight years and the All-Star game for 13.

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHTS

GOV. A. B. (HAPPY) Chandler will "Meet the Press" at 6:35 p.m. on WWJ.

WWJ's "Monitor" hears talking mynah birds at 3:30; goes to Kronberg Castle in Denmark, setting for "Hamlet" at 5:30; covers the wind-up of the Canadian Open Golf Championship and the Syracuse, N.Y. Women's Open at 6; talks with Bing Crosby at 7, Kay Thompson at 8, Alfred Hitchcock at 8:30 and Shirley Yamagouchi at 9.

Functions and contributions of the Detroit Council of Churches are discussed on WJR at 12:30 . . . "Vacations in the Americas" is the musical theme for the "Woolworth Hour" at 1 on WJR and at 3 on CKLW. Doretta Morrow, Edith Adams, Julius LaRosa guest.

First broadcast from the Los Angeles Music Festival is aired on WJR's "World Music Festivals" at 2:05. Works by two contemporary American composers, John Vincent and Franz Waxman, are featured.

White Sox-Tigers on WJBK and WKMH at 1:30 . . . Vivian Blaine and Joey Bushkin visit Mitch Miller at his new time, 7, on WJR . . . "FBI in Peace and War" moves to a new time, 6:05, on WJR, with "The Cross-Country" expose of a vacation swindle . . . "Summer in St. Louis" returns at 9:05 on WJR with mezzo-soprano Claramae Turner, the guest soloist.

Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice" is on "Opera Playhouse" at 5:30 on WDET . . . Beethoven's third symphony is played at 4 on WDET . . . WJBK's "What's New?," at 11:05 on WJBK, has a broadcast of an actual moot court trial . . . "The Ballad of Grass" is dramatized on CBE at 8.

"Current Antarctic Expeditions" is the post-news talk on CBE at 9:20 . . . Mendelssohn's first symphony is performed on CBE at 10 on the Winnipeg Pop Concert.

TULSA, OKLA. WORLD
JUL 8 1956

Music on the Air

Music on High

Music on High will feature hymns of praise from three different centuries and three different countries, on its KVOO broadcast at 10:45 a. m. Sunday. A recording of the "Te Deum Laudamus" from the 4th century, from Serbia, will be heard from the Episcopal Liturgy. The Robert Shaw chorale will sing a recording of St. Francis of Assisi's hymn from the 13th century from Italy, "All Creature of Our God and King." The St. Olaf Lutheran college choir of Northfield, Minn., will sing Neander's hymn of praise from 17th century Germany, "Praise to the Lord, the Almighty," a Christiansen arrangement.

Music of the Masters

Music of the Masters, heard nightly over KWGS-FM at 7 o'clock, Sunday will feature violinist David Oistrakh playing Prokofiev's Sonata No. 2, Leclair's Sonata No. 3, and Locatelli's Sonata in F Minor. Monday Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops orchestra from NBC at 7:15. Tuesday Fritz Heitmann plays Bach's Organ Toccata and Fugue in D Minor and Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor, and the Roger Wagner chorale sings Palestrina's Missa Papae Marcelli. Toscanini leads the NBC Symphony orchestra Wednesday in the second act of Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice" with Nan Merriman and Barbara Gibson singing the title roles. Thursday Artur Rubinstein plays Franck's Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, and Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra play Serradel's "La Golondrina" and Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne."

Friday Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Queen Mab Scherzo from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," Guido Cantelli leads the Philharmonia orchestra in Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture-Fantasy," and cellist Mstislav Rostropovich is featured in Miaskovsky's Concerto in C. Saturday the Boston Pops is heard in ballet music excerpts, and Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra play Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Don Quixote," with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Music Hall of Fame

Music Hall of Fame, on KVOO at 11:30 p. m. Sunday will feature piano music by Sergei Rachmaninoff and two short pieces by the French composer, Francois Couperin. Opening the concert, a performance will be heard of Sergei Rachmaninoff in his own "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini," accompanied by the Philadelphia orchestra under Leopold Stokowski. Also, Harpsichordist Wanda Landowska will be heard in two short pieces by Francois Couperin, his "Les Barricades Mysterieuses," and "L'Arlequine."

Featuring a program of the music of three composers, Schubert, Rossini and Beethoven, Music Hall of Fame will be heard at 11 p. m. Tuesday. Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra will open the program with "Entr' Acte" and "Minores" I and II, from Schubert's "Rosamunde" music. Rossini's "William Tell Overture" will be heard, next, performed by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony orchestra. Concluding the concert will be the feature of the evening, Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony in A," played by the NBC Symphony orchestra under the baton of Arturo Toscanini.

phony orchestra. Concluding the concert will be the feature of the evening, Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony in A," played by the NBC Symphony orchestra under the baton of Arturo Toscanini.

Boston Symphony

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start at 7:15 p. m. Monday over KVOO and NBC. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

Telephone Hour

Jose Iturbi, the internationally famous pianist, will play selections from Falla and Beethoven on his appearance on the Telephone Hour at 8 p. m. Monday over KVOO.

Iturbi will play three selections from Falla's "El Amor Brujo." First will be an excerpt from the tango-like "Pantomine." Second will be the colorful "Dance of Terror." The group will close with the exciting "Ritual Fire Dance," one of Mr. Iturbi's finest interpretations.

For the concluding number on the broadcast, Mr. Iturbi has chosen the gay finale from Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4 in G Major."

Magic Window

KVOO will present The Magic Window at 10:30 p. m. Monday night with harp and organ music by Lorraine Byman, harpist, and Morris Billington, organist. Miss Byman will play as harp solos "The Girl With the Flaxen Hair" by DeBussy, and "Roses of Picardy" by Haydn Wood. Billington will play two organ solos including "In the Gloaming" by Harrison and "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows."

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR

JUL 8 1956

Radio Notes This Week.

THE ANNUAL broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on N. B. C. and WDAF at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony orchestra will be directed by Charles Munch, its regular conductor, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate. The recorded broadcasts will continue through October 1 although the actual concerts at Tanglewood run only for six weeks.

Munch will devote the opening concert entirely to music of Mozart, including the finale movement of "Symphony in D Major" (Haffner) and the "Sinfonia Concertante, with Oboe, Horn, Clarinet and Bassoon."

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR

JUL 8 1956

THE international exchange program is flourishing, Kaye reports . . . By early next year this artistic propaganda movement will have sent to other lands Richard Tucker, Metropolitan opera tenor; Marian Anderson, famed contralto; Eleanor Steber, also of the "Met"; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Eugene List, pianist; Carol Glenn, violinist; William Warfield, baritone; the Ballet Theater, New York City Ballet, the New York Woodwind quintet, and the Boston Symphony . . . The woodwinds will be touring Latin America, the dancers will be in Europe, List and Glenn demonstate their art in Indonesia, Piatigorsky will be in the Far East, Miss Steber in the Near East, Miss Anderson in the Far East. . . . The Boston orchestra will play in Europe and Russia . . . A. N. T. A. has sponsored tours of some 60 artists and musical organizations since the program went into effect in 1954, and Kaye observes that propaganda has had no fairer use.

[170]

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 160,452 - S. 299,263
JUL 8 1956

Berkshire Festival Opens Next Week; Charles Munch on Podium

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Next week on the 200-acre pine-clad estate of Tanglewood, at Lenox, Mass., the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch, and the 400 students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, will commence the annual program of 24 public concerts and some 30 student demonstrations. The programs have made the Berkshire Hills a mecca for more than 130,000 music lovers each summer for the past decade and a half during the concentrated six weeks in July and early August of the Berkshire Festival. Munch has been music director for seven years.

C. Munch

Classical and modern symphonic music, works for chamber orchestra, choral pieces, chamber music and opera will lure the tourist to the cool green of the Berkshires, until Aug. 12.

This year marks the 16th summer, since 1937, that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has directed the Berkshire Festival. The Festival grew from a local project for outdoor concerts first undertaken in 1934, under canvas by citizens of Berkshire county. It now sets the pace throughout this country for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude.

Six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will feature noted soloists and ensembles.

THRONGS ATTEND—In 1955 these performances, once considered for special tastes only, attracted a total of 9,561 persons, to average 1,593 or more than the capacity of the auditorium.

Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart series," performed in the same auditorium by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Munch, are given during the first two weekends in July. Last year, attendance at these six events totaled 18,910, an average of 3,032, again considerably above average.

In the final four weekends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony assembles at Tanglewood for twelve weekend concerts, and in 1955, attendance totaled 108,336, an average of 9,028 persons, more than one-third again the capacity of the 6,000-seat Shed.

In addition, 27,080 persons attended 32 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, attendance at which is possible through membership in the society of Friends of the B.M.C. There were 4,875 registered Friends in 1955 and their contributions totaling $46,094 help support the music school.

SYMPHONY TRIBUTE — The Berkshire Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to the current season's 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in performance for the first time at Tanglewood of four works commissioned by the orchestra. The works include symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi (the noted modern Italian who is composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer), Aaron Copland (assistant director of the Music School), Howard Hanson and Walter Piston.

The three American symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after Tanglewood's season ends, when the orchestra makes a five-and-a-half week tour of thirteen countries, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

The Boston Symphony will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in the U.S.S.R. The commissioned symphonies are: Petrassi, "Concerto for Orchestra No. 3," Copland, "Symphonic Ode," Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," and Piston, "Symphony No. 6."

FIRST TIME—Tanglewood premieres—music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire hills—will include this summer a number of works performed in observance of the worldwide celebration of Mozart's bicentennial.

B. Goodman

They are the Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622, in which the soloist will be the celebrated jazz musician, Benny Goodman, in his Tanglewood debut; the Sinfonia Concertante featuring Boston Symphony first-desk men, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon; the Concerto in A major for piano, K. 488, in which the soloist will be the Berkshire Music Center's opera department head, Boris Goldovsky.

The Concerto in F major for three pianos, K. 242, featuring Mr. Goldovsky and duo-pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and the massive Mass in C Minor, K. 427. Kyrie and Gloria, which Leonard Bernstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra.

LINWOOD SCHOOL—The six-week session of the Linwood Music School, Linwood (N.Y.), got off to a promising start last week, with 20 children enrolled in the Tuesday classes and more expected this week.

The Sunday Evening Concerts will be resumed again this season with the opening concert tonight at 7 p.m., and it is to be the special Children's Concert which is offered every year. The program is being given by the Clan McNaughton Pipe Band of Rochester.

The Clan McNaughton Pipe Band has been playing together for seven years and on Aug. 11, they are entering the Central New York Scottish Games competition for the first time. They will give a preview of their marches, reel and strathpeys at Linwood. They are also bringing with them Margaret Reynolds, a Scotch girl now living in Scottsville, who will sing Highland folk songs for the children. These concerts are open to the public without charge.

SUMMER POPS — Tuesday night, the opening concert of the Buffalo Philharmonic Pops season features an all-Gershwin evening, a long-time favorite of Buffalo Pops audiences. The concert will be in Kleinhans Music Hall.

Alberta Pinkard

The program will be of special interest to Buffalonians, for the soloists are two well-known local musicians who are familiar to lovers of good popular music here.

Alberta Pinkard, a petite mezzo-soprano, studied in New York City, and has appeared successfully on several television programs. She will sing many of Gershwin's most popular songs, including "Someone to Watch Over Me," "The Man I Love," and "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess."

Robert Schulz, Buffalo piano personality, will be keyboard soloist. He will perform with the orchestra, under the baton of Willis Page, "Concerto in F" and the beloved "Rhapsody in Blue."

The orchestra will do several of Gershwin's instrumental works, including "Strike Up the Band," "I Got Rhythm," and "Embraceable You."

IN THE PARKS—City Parks Concerts commence this week in three permanent outdoor locations. Each Sunday there will be programs in the Delaware Park Zoo at 3 p.m. and at Humboldt Park at 9 p.m.

On Wednesday, the concerts will take place at the Albright Art Gallery in Delaware Park at 9 p.m.

Jan Wolanek will conduct the Buffalo Civic Orchestra in these presentations by appointment of the City Parks Commission.

Area singers and instrumentalists will assist as guest soloists.

EDUCATION—A bulletin from the National Assn. of Teachers of Singing announces a series of summer workshops for vocalists and teachers.

The six locations and their terms are as follows:

Willamette University, Salem, Ore., July 29-Aug. 3.

Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., Aug. 6-10.

Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Tex., Aug. 6-11.

University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo., Aug. 12-17.

Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., Aug. 19-24.

George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 20-24.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 9 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Foss Features Modern Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Lukas Foss featured three fine examples of modern music in the Berkshire Festival program he conducted with the Boston Symphony Chamber group in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon.

Set within a framework of Haydn and Bach, they made the concert as provocative as the older masters made it satisfying.

A beautifully sustained piece of melodic writing gave character to Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra." Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra, it should rank as one of the project's more successful shorter pieces.

The performance marked the first time one of Fine's works had been played by the Boston Symphony. He has been a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center since 1947.

Alexei Haiff's "Divertimento" proved as excellent an expression of its title as one might ask in the contemporary idiom.

It has wit, flavor, and style. The orchestration is spicy, its syncopation welcome, its general good spirits delightful, all of which the performance highlighted persuasively.

Takes Dual Role

Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" may be almost a half century old, but it remains one of the most original of contemporary works. It found the audience questioning but nevertheless drawn to its mystic concept. One is most grateful to Foss for reviving interest in it.

That Foss did much for these scores was obvious. He is a meticulous conductor, keenly concerned with clean-cut performance. This he achieved throughout the afternoon from Haydn's Symphony No. 86 through the Bach concerto in D Minor in which he doubled as piano soloist.

At the moment he appears a better pianist than conductor, technically most adept in both fields. As his playing in the Bach was sculptured with fingers of steel, so his Haydn was finely chiseled in performance.

2,167 at Concert

Perhaps a little less vigor and bounce would result in more-rounded interpretations. with his throbbing rhythmic pulse he did attain a special kind of exhilaration in the fast movements of the Bach which gave the audience a thrill. Haydn did not yield so agreeably to this approach.

The concert drew 2,167 people. This was considerably less than the 9,000 who attended the Saturday night program conducted by Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The weather was fine for both events.

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and "Sinfonia Concertante" K. 297 fell to Munch; Martinu's "Military Mass" and the first performance of Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from The Dead Sea Scrolls" comprised Ross's assignment.

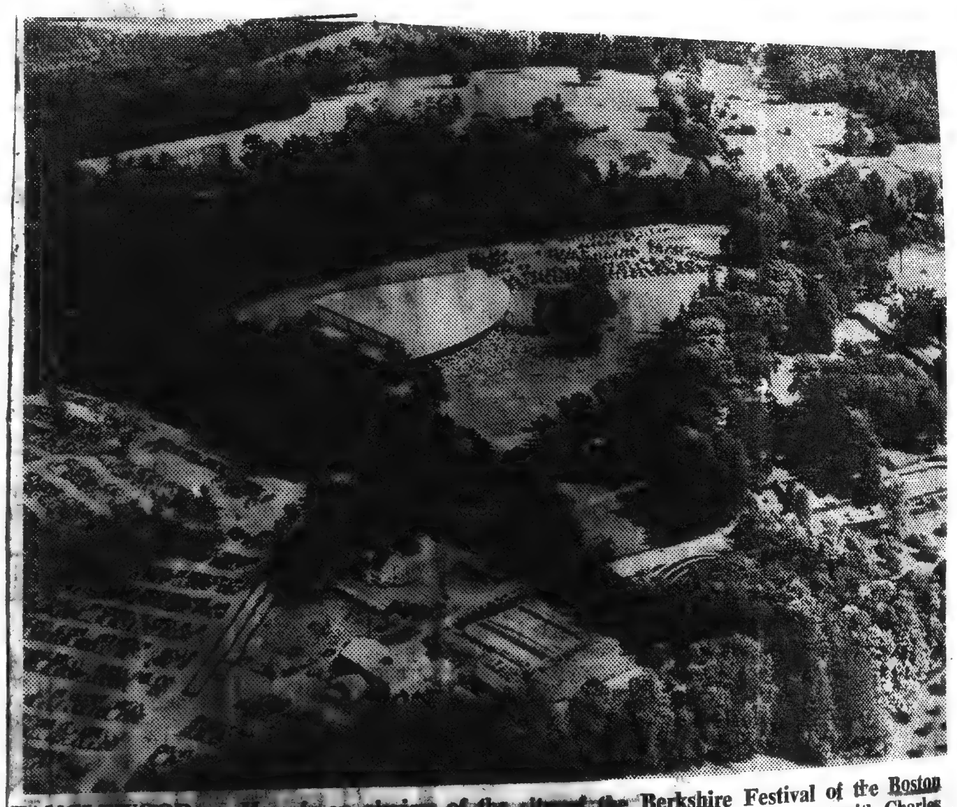
The men's choruses were sung by the Yale Glee Club.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502
JUL 9 1956

Goodman at Tanglewood

Appearing as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Wednesday at Tanglewood will be Benny Goodman. Charles Munich will conduct the Mozart Clarinet Concerto.

NEWBURGH, N. Y. NEWS
JUL 9 1956



TANGLEWOOD — Here is an airview of the shed of the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra near Lenox, Mass. The 16th season opened on July 4 with Charles Munch directing, and will continue until Aug. 12. The Music Shed has a capacity of 6,000 people and audiences regularly overflow on the lawns giving the Festival concerts an average attendance of 9,000. The 1955 attendance record totalled 136,987.

[17]

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 160,452 - S. 299,263

JUL 8 1956

Berkshire Festival Opens Next Week; Charles Munch on Podium

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Next week on the 200-acre pine-clad estate of Tanglewood, at Lenox, Mass., the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch, and the 400 students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, will commence the annual program of 24 public concerts and some 30 student demonstrations. The programs have made the Berkshire Hills a mecca for more than 130,000 music lovers each summer for the past decade and a half during the concentrated six weeks in July and early August of the Berkshire Festival. Munch has been music director for seven years.

C. Munch

Classical and modern symphonic music, works for chamber orchestra, choral pieces, chamber music and opera will lure the tourist to the cool green of the Berkshires, until Aug. 12.

This year marks the 9th summer, since 1937, that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has directed the Berkshire Festival. The Festival grew from a local project for outdoor concerts first undertaken in 1934, under canvas by citizens of Berkshire county. It now sets the pace throughout this country for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude.

Six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will feature noted soloists and ensembles.

THRONGS ATTEND—In 1955 these performances, once considered for special tastes only, attracted a total of 9,561 persons, to average 1,593 or more than the capacity of the auditorium.

Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart series," performed in the same auditorium by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Munch, are given during the first two weekends in July. Last year attendance at these six events totaled 18,910, an average of 3,032, again considerably above average.

In the final four weekends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony assembles at Tanglewood for twelve weekend concerts, and in 1955, attendance totaled 108,336, an average of 9,028 persons, more than one-third again the capacity of the 6,000-seat Shed.

In addition, 27,080 persons attended 32 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, attendance at which is possible through membership in the society of Friends of the B.M.C. There were 4,675 registered Friends in 1955 and their contributions totaling $46,094 help support the music school.

SYMPHONY TRIBUTE — The Berkshire Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to the current season's 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in performance for the first time at Tanglewood of four weeks commissioned by the orchestra. The works include symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi (the noted modern Italian who is composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer), Aaron Copland (assistant director of the Music School), Howard Hanson and Walter Piston.

The three American symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after Tanglewood's season ends, when the orchestra makes a five-and-a-half week tour of thirteen countries, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

The Boston Symphony will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in the U.S.S.R. The commissioned symphonies are: Petrassi, "Concerto for Orchestra No. 5," Copland, "Symphonic Ode," Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," and Piston, "Symphony No. 6."

FIRST TIME—Tanglewood premieres—music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire hills—will include this summer a number of works performed in observance of the worldwide celebration of Mozart's bicentennial.

B. Goodman

They are the Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622, in which the soloist will be the celebrated jazz musician, Benny Goodman, in his Tanglewood debut; the Sinfonia Concertante featuring Boston Symphony first-desk men, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon; the Concerto in A major for piano, K. 488, in which the soloist will be the Berkshire Music Center's opera department head, Boris Goldovsky.

The Concerto in F major for three pianos, K. 242, featuring Mr. Goldovsky and duo-pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff; and the massive Mass in C Minor, K. 427, Kyrie and Gloria, which Leonard Bernstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra.

LINWOOD SCHOOL—The six-week session of the Linwood Music School, Linwood (N.Y.), got off to a promising start last week, with 20 children enrolled in the Tuesday classes and more expected this week.

The Sunday Evening Concerts will be resumed again this season with the opening concert tonight at 7 p.m., and it is to be the special Children's Concert which is offered every year. The program is being given by the Clan McNaughton Pipe Band of Rochester.

The Clan McNaughton Pipe Band has been playing together for seven years and on Aug. 11, they are entering the Central New York Scottish Games competition for the first time. They will give a preview of their marches, reel and strathpeys at Linwood. They are also bringing with them Margaret Reynolds, a Scotch girl now living in Scottsville, who will sing Highland folk songs for the children. These concerts are open to the public without charge.

SUMMER POPS — Tuesday night, the opening concert of the Buffalo Philharmonic Pops season features an all-Gershwin evening, a long-time favorite of Buffalo Pops audiences. The concert will be in Kleinhans Music Hall.

Alberta Pinkard

The program will be of special interest to Buffalonians, for the soloists are two well-known local musicians who are familiar to lovers of good popular music here.

Alberta Pinkard, a petite mezzo-soprano, studied in New York City, and has appeared successfully on several television programs. She will sing many of Gershwin's most popular songs including "Someone to Watch Over Me," "The Man I Love," and "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess."

Robert Schulz, Buffalo piano personality, will be keyboard soloist. He will perform with the orchestra, under the baton of Willis Page, "Concerto in F" and the beloved "Rhapsody in Blue."

The orchestra will do several of Gershwin's instrumental works, including "Strike Up the Band," "I Got Rhythm," and "Embraceable You."

IN THE PARKS—City Parks Concerts commence this week in three permanent outdoor locations. Each Sunday there will be programs in the Delaware Park Zoo at 3 p.m. and at Humboldt Park at 9 p.m.

On Wednesday, the concerts will take place at the Albright Art Gallery in Delaware Park at 9 p.m.

Jan Wolanek will conduct the Buffalo Civic Orchestra in these presentations by appointment of the City Parks Commission.

Area singers and instrumentalists will assist as guest soloists.

EDUCATION—A bulletin from the National Assn. of Teachers of Singing announces a series of summer workshops for vocalists and teachers.

The six locations and their terms are as follows:

Willamette University, Salem, Ore., July 29-Aug. 3.

Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., Aug. 6-10.

Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Tex., Aug. 6-11.

University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo., Aug. 12-17.

Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., Aug. 19-24.

George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 20-24.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 9 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Foss Features Modern Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Lukas Foss featured three fine examples of modern music in the Berkshire Festival program he conducted with the Boston Symphony Chamber group in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon.

Set within a framework of Haydn and Bach, they made the concert as provocative as the older masters made it satisfying.

A beautifully sustained piece of melodic writing gave character to Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra." Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra, it should rank as one of the project's more successful shorter pieces.

The performance marked the first time one of Fine's works had been played by the Boston Symphony. He has been a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center since 1947.

Alexei Haiff's "Divertimento" proved as excellent an expression of its title as one might ask in the contemporary idiom.

It has wit, flavor, and style. The orchestration is spicy, its syncopation welcome, its general good spirits delightful, all of which the performance highlighted persuasively.

Takes Dual Role

Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" may be almost a half century old, but it remains one of the most original of contemporary works. It found the audience questioning but nevertheless drawn to its mystic concept. One is most grateful to Foss for reviving interest in it.

That Foss did much for these scores was obvious. He is a meticulous conductor, keenly concerned with clean-cut performance. This he achieved throughout the afternoon from Haydn's Symphony No. 86 through the Bach concerto in D Minor in which he doubled as piano soloist.

At the moment he appears a better pianist than conductor, technically most adept in both fields. As his playing in the Bach was sculptured with fingers of steel, so his Haydn was finely chiseled in performance.

2,167 at Concert

Perhaps a little less vigor and bounce would result in more-rounded interpretations. with his throbbing rhythmic pulse he did attain a special kind of exhilaration in the fast movements of the Bach which gave the audience a thrill. Haydn did not yield so agreeably to this approach.

The concert drew 2,167 people. This was considerably less than the 3,000 who attended the Saturday night program conducted by Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The weather was fine for both events.

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and "Sinfonia Concertante" K. 297 fell to Munch; Martinu's "Military Mass" and the first performance of Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from The Dead Sea Scrolls" comprised Ross's assignment.

The men's choruses were sung by the Yale Glee Club.

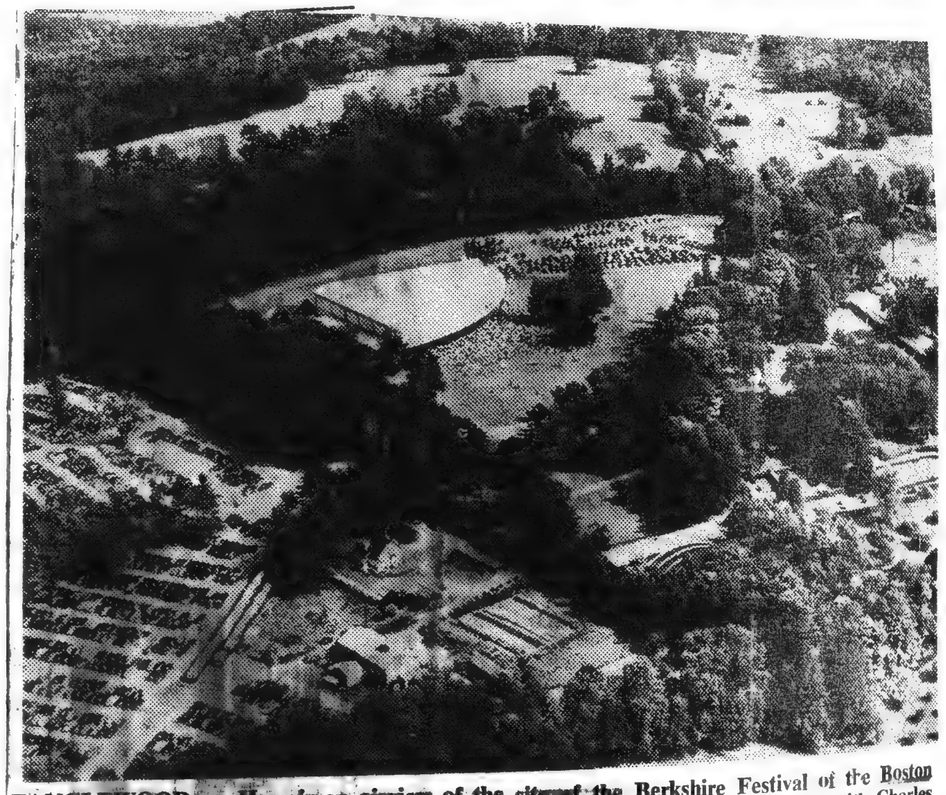
NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502

JUL 9 1956

Goodman at Tanglewood

Appearing as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Wednesday at Tanglewood will be Benny Goodman. Charles Munich will conduct the Mozart Clarinet Concerto.

NEWBURGH, N. Y. NEWS
JUL 9 1956



TANGLEWOOD — Here is an airview of the site of the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra near Lenox, Mass. The 19th season opened on July 4 with Charles Munch directing, and will continue until Aug. 12. The Music Shed has a capacity of 6,000 people and audiences regularly overflow on the lawns giving the Festival concerts an average attendance of 9,000. The 1955 attendance record totalled 136,987.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
STAR
Circ. D. 245,642 - S. 273,244

JUL 8 1956

TURNTABLE TALK

Three Sibelius Discs A Refreshing Splash

By JAMES G. DEANE

Practically a deluge of Sibelius symphones has just been poured forth by Angel, four of them, to be exact.

Dipping into them, one is reminded that their composer, like Stravinsky and a good many others, is really well known through a singularly small proportion of his total output. Of the present Angel issues, only the second is heard in local concerts with any frequency, and presumably the circumstance is not solely local.

The third symphony, a delightful, melodious affair unavoidably suggesting Dvorak and Brahms, is the one of Angel's group whose neglect is most unaccountable. It is as readily ingratiating as a Hungarian or Slavonic dance.

Paul Kletzki and the Philharmonic Orchestra are responsible for the performance of this and the second symphony on two of Angel's discs. The third has a magnetic bonus in a performance by David Oistrakh, with Sixten Ehrling and the Stockholm Festival Orchestra, of the violin concerto, a performance impeccable in the best Oistrakh manner.

Herbert von Karajan is the leader of the also unfamiliar sixth symphony and the more austere but for some reason not quite so neglected seventh on the third disc. Von Karajan is not so enlivening as Beecham (whose advent on the Angel label was presumably not anticipated when this series was planned), but as his visits have proved he is a first-class colorist, and the sixth symphony in particular supplies a suitable palette.

The sound of these discs is largely excellent.

* * * *

FROM RETIREMENT

One of the pleasures of being a Bostonian lately (or a summer visitor to Tanglewood) has been the opportunity of witnessing Pierre Monteaux in "retirement." For the venerable ex San Franciscan it is a rather active state.

The latest evidence is a Victor recording in which agency, subject matter and baton seem ideally conjoined. Debussy's three Nocturnes and "La Mer" are the offering, and they have rarely sounded forth more enticingly. The reproduction is not the least of the disc's assets, a surprise if, as the notes suggest, part of the contents emanated from the Tanglewood shed.

If a conductor has a Parisian origin it is perhaps an asset in matters of the kind, but an Epic disc demonstrates that it is not essential. Eduard Van Beinum and the Amsterdam Concertgebouw are involved in Debussy's "Iberia," "Gigues" and "Rondes de printemps" in a very first-class way, including the sonics.

* * * *

HAYDNISTS

There are more good Haydn conductors around than concert programs would indicate. George Szell, whom one would expect to be one, has essayed the 88th and 104th as one of the first of a new Epic series emanating from Cleveland. Both are forceful, sinewy productions. Has anyone ever seen No. 88 labeled "Paris" before?

Igor Markevitch, who somehow seems quite unlikely as a Haydn man, proves one nonetheless in the 101st and 102nd symphonies on an Angel disc. (No. 101, if anyone needs to know, is famous as the "Clock.") The French orchestra (of the national radio) which officiates plays with more than expectable precision, also no discredit to the conductor.

After Eric Leinsdorf finishes the Mozart symphonies is he turning to Haydn? Another "Clock" and the "Surprise" (inevitable) are coupled in Columbia's Entre series, Mr. Leinsdorf and the Rochester Philharmonic being involved. These are vigorous and just a bit four-square.

On Camden come a Viennese performance of the "Military" and a Parisian of the "Oxford," both heirlooms from 78 r.p.m. days and the baton, one suspects, of Bruno Walter. Neither offers much enticement in the sound, however.

* * * *

FANCY FIDDLING

Anyone in need of either the Mendelssohn violin concerto or Mozart's fourth need not look far. Columbia enlisted Mr. Oistrakh while he and the Philadelphia Orchestra were both accessible, and the resultant coupling is one of the higher peaks in all three sequences of record-making activity.

Mr. O. is not the most dynamic of fiddlers, but he is surely one of history's smoothest.

DETROIT, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 442,665 - S. 549,629

JUL 9 1956

NEWS OF RADIO

By BETTY HYDE

THE 23rd All-Star Baseball Game, to be played tomorrow at Washington's Griffith Stadium, will be carried in its entirety by CKLW, starting at 11:45 a.m.

Describing the 1956 sports classic will be Mutual announcers Bob Neal and Bob Wolff. Their account also will be carried to American military personnel by the Armed Forces Radio Services. Latin and South American baseball fans may pick up the game by short wave.

A note from Detroit soprano Marguerite Kozenn, now on a concert tour of Europe, reports that she gave a recital over Radio RAI in Rome recently and was scheduled to appear as soloist with the Radio Vienna orchestra yesterday and today.

Just to show what big plans the networks have for the August conventions, NBC, CBS and ABC are sending staffs of more than 300 technicians, broadcasters and production specialists for their radio and TV coverage. Mutual will have 150.

COUNTRY TREND?

DOES THE introduction of new network shows this last week point to a revival of country-style broadcasts? First the ABC "Country Show" on Sundays, and then came the new Pat Buttram and Eddy Arnold folk humor and music programs on CBS.

A Minneapolis-St. Paul broadcaster must have a score of grateful listeners at the Minnesota State Prison. He has found jobs for 20 inmates, who needed employers as a condition for parole, by interviewing them in a weekly radio series.

TONIGHT'S HIGHLIGHTS

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of a series of concerts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Massachusetts, at 8:15 on WWJ. All-Mozart program includes the finale from the "Haffner" Symphony.

Pianist Jose Iturbi plays the finale to Beethoven's fourth concerto and excerpts from Falla's "El Amor Brujo," on WWJ's "Telephone Hour" at 9 . . . On the "Voice of Firestone," WXYZ at 8:30, mezzo-soprano Mildred Miller sings two songs from "South Pacific" and "Voi che Sapete" from "Marriage of Figaro" . . . Hanson's third symphony is aired by WDET at 8 . . . "Formation of American Government" is discussed on WDET at 7:30 in new government series at 5:35 CBE carries a talk by the Duke of Edinburgh on the opening of the Study Conference on Human Problems in Industrial Communities.

Senator Neuberger (D-Ore.) is interviewed on "Reporters' Roundup" at 9 on CKLW.

Pianist Glenn Gould is soloist on the "Stratford Music Festival" at 8 on CBE.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.
DEMOCRAT
Circ. D. 80,196 - S. 91,187

JUL 8 1956

Radio Opera Switches To Sundays

Claramae Turner On First of New Series Today

"Summer in St. Louis," the weekly summer concert by stars of the St. Louis Municipal Opera, will be heard on KTHS in a new time spot, beginning at 8:05 p. m., today.

Claramae Turner, mezzosoprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will be guest soloist, and will be heard in an aria from "Carmen" and favorite songs of Cole Porter and Victor Herbert. The program has been heard previously at 7:30 p. m. each Saturday.

Another time change on KTHS this week will be "The FBI in Peace and War," which will be heard at 5:05 p. m. each Sunday, beginning today. The program formerly was heard on Wednesdays. Today's episode is "Cross-Country," the story of a vacation swindle.

Monitor Interviews Stars

Featured on KARK's "Monitor" today will be interviews with such entertainment personalities as Janet Blair, Tyrone Power, Bing Crosby, Alfred Hitchcock, Kay Thompson and Stan Freberg.

Other "Monitor" features will include on-the-spot broadcasts of the Canadian Open Golf Championship at Montreal and the Syracuse, N. Y., Women's Open Tournament. Visits to Daytona Beach, Fla., Lititz, Pa., and Denmark, also, will be included.

On KLRA today, "Disaster!" will be heard at 4:05 p. m. in "The Navajo Indian Operation," the story of the nine-state blizzard of 1949. Also on this station will be a weekly travel program, "Travel Talk," at 9:15 p. m., titled "Vacation on the Island of Jamaica and in Costa Rica."

Other features of today's radio schedules include:

KTHS: "The Music Room," 8:15 a. m.; Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir, 10:30 a. m.; "The Woolworth Hour," with Julius La Rosa and Edith Adams as soloists, 12 noon, and the Los Angeles Music Festival at 1:05 p. m. Guests on the "Mitch Miller Show" at 6:05 p. m. will include Vivian Blaine, star of the Broadway drama, "A Hatful of Rain." "Invitation to Learning" at 9:30 tonight will discuss Thackeray's "The Rose and the Ring."

KLRA: "Voice of Prophecy," 8:30 a. m., and "Old Fashioned Revival Hour," 3 p. m., originating in Long Beach, Calif.; "All Star Country Show" will be heard from 7:05 p. m. to 9:55 p. m. today on this station, with Faron Young as one of the emcees.

Iturbi on KARK

Jose Iturbi, internationally popular pianist, will be soloist on "The Telephone Hour" at 8 p. m. tomorrow on KARK. At 7:30 p. m. tomorrow, mezzosoprano Mildred Miller of the Metropolitan Opera will be heard on "Voice of Firestone" on KLRA.

Another outstanding musical event on tomorrow's airwaves will be Berkshire Festival broadcast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, at 7:15 p. m. on KARK.

Monday - through - Friday broadcasts on KLRA will include "My True Story" at 9 a. m., "When a Girl Marries" at 9:30 a. m., and Edward P. Morgan's newscasts at 6 p. m.

"Blue Ribbon Bouts" at 8:05 p. m. Wednesday on KLRA will feature a 10-round heavyweight match between Eddie Machen, Redding, Calif., and Nino Valdes, Havana, Cuba.

The Chautauqua Student Symphony will be heard in its annual Saturday series of seven summer concerts, at 10:05 a. m., and continuing through August 18 on KLRA. The "Live" broadcast comes from Chautauqua, N. Y. Also on the air as a standard summer feature will be the Chautauqua symphony on "Festival," at 3:05 p. m. each Saturday on this station.

"It's Your Business," sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers, will be heard at 7:30 p. m. Saturday.

PADUCAH, KY.
SUN-DEMOCRAT
Circ. D. 29.100 - S. 28,439

JUL 8 1956

Berkshire Festival To Be On WKYB

The annual broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concerts in Tanglewood will start on NBC Radio and WKYB at 7:15 p. m., CDT. The concerts will include many of the highlights of the world-renowned music festival in Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be directed by its regular conductor, Charles Munch, with guest directors for several of the concerts. Distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists will participate.

The recorded broadcasts will continue through Oct. 1 although the actual concerts at Tanglewood run only for six weeks.

Charles Munch will devote the opening concert entirely to music of Mozart, including the finale movement of the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major (K385) and the "Sinfonia Concertante, with oboe, horn, clarinet and bassoon." Ben Grauer will be commentator for the series.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,678

JUL 9 1956

Goodman to Be Soloist at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 9—The first of four concerts during the Berkshire Festival's second week at nearby Tanglewood will be given Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet will present Mozart's "Clarinet Quintet, K. 581." Also on the program will be Haydn's "String Quartet in E Flat Major" and Brahm's "String Quintet in G Major."

Duo-pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will perform with the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra Friday at 8:30 p.m., playing Mozart's "Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos." Three other Mozart numbers will complete the program. One will be the "Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos," with the duo-pianists and Boris Goldovsky as soloists.

An all-Bach concert will be given by the chamber orchestra Saturday at 8:30 p.m. under the direction of Charles Munch. William Kroll will be soloist for the "Violin Concerto in E Major," and Doriot Anthony Dwyer will perform the flute solo in "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings."

The Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" will be presented by the chamber orchestra Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The chorus will be made up of students of the Berkshire Music Center. Soloists will be Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, MacMorgan and James Joyce, all of whom are former students of the Berkshire Music Center. Munch will conduct.

A special extra concert of modern chamber music will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall tonight at 8:30. Music by Stravinsky, Weber, Hutten, Schoenberg, Webern, Alvin Etler and Aaron Copland will make up the program.

[172]

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 23 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

2 Programs Well Played

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Two contemporary masterpieces occupied an important place in the Berkshire Festival programs of the weekend. Charles Munch included Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" in the Saturday night concert. Pierre Monteux played Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" yesterday afternoon. They pointed up the Boston Symphony's first weekend in the famous music shed, which drew a total audience of 18,851 people, and were well received.

Munch brought the Martinu work to Carnegie Hall last March after it had won the Music Critics Circle award. Hearing it then confirmed first impressions of its significance. Still further acquaintance underlines its beauty, unfolds more revealingly its world of fantasy, and places it at the head of a list of Martinu's works. The Bostonians' performance has grown richer and Munch's interpretation enhances both Martinu's workmanship and the considerable substance of the work.

Abreast of Times

Monteux shows how abreast of the times he is at the age of 81 when he elects to offer the Bartok masterpiece. It has been interpreted with more freedom and flavor but probably with no more precision. A dozen years have found it gain favor with audiences. Yesterday's was most enthusiastic.

Otherworldliness and fantasy are common to both the Martinu and Bartok. So, too, are originality and communicative power. Both composers gave something of themselves that singles out these works as representative of our times. Each stood in direct contrast to the other major items of these programs.

The Saturday night concert featured a performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding.

Yesterday Monteux offered Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

Both works bathed the listener in the effulgence of 19th Century romanticism, taking him into quite a different world from the 20th Century so graphically represented by Martinu and Bartok.

Munch paced his Wagner somewhat deliberately but drew sensuous sounds from the orchestra. The soloists gave outstanding accounts of themselves and the music. Miss Harshaw has seldom sung better; Da Costa qualifies potentially as a top-rank heldentenor; Pease has returned with a new sense of authority in voice and in manner. Never having sung his role before, Da Costa brought special distinction to himself.

Barber's "Adagio for Strings" provided the keynote for the Saturday program. It stands as a thing of beauty, its quality undiminished with the passing years. Monteux opened gaily with Rossini's overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" and let the Schubert flow mellifluously to its joyous conclusion.

The weekend weather was damp and cold until the sun finally came through yesterday afternoon. It cut attendance noticeably, with only 5,753 attending Saturday and 6,995 coming for yesterday's event.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

WED., Aug. 1 (Theatre) at 8:30—RUDOLF SERKIN, Piano

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet

FRI., Aug. 3, 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Iracy de Oliveira, Piano

SAT., Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)

SUN., Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin

Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9

Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 690
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 5 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts On At Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music came again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks which started July 4, and will continue to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commenced on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6), Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p.m.

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000 seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

TANGLEWOOD CRITICIZED
—Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Festival are taking some [illegible] this season from the audiences which continue strong at every performance, but from some of the critics.

These are writers who have finally spoken up against the same [illegible] of programs. The greatest cry [illegible] for the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch to depart from the re-playing of the standards season after season and adventure into the unknown as an example to the other orchestras of the nation.

Charles Munch

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 2

New Shadowbrook Ground-Breaking Rites on Tuesday

Church dignitaries from all New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground-breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit novitiate at Lenox which will replace the building destroyed by fire on March 10.

1,500 Expected

More than 1,500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood, facilities provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Berkshire Music festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground-breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England hierarchy will be present.

Ground-breaking will be performed by Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Springfield diocese.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., provincial of the New England province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

400th Anniversary

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Shadowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin on Tuesday—a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31 will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced yesterday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and co-chairmen.

Following the ground-breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

CHARLES MUNCH DOES A SPLENDID JOB IN 'LEONORE'

Special to The Buffalo Evening News

LENOX, Mass., July 30—It was almost as if the musical thunderclaps of Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 2 could be credited with dispelling the high humidity that enveloped the more than 6000 listeners at Friday evenings Tanglewood concert, opening the fourth set of weekend concerts. As the music of the program gained in heat, the air cooled with corresponding mercy.

One could safely assume that most of the audience was mentally comparing the second "Leonore" overture with the much better-known third, and finding the comparison instructive as well as revealing of Beethoven's ceaseless search for the most perfect representation of his vision. Charles Munch led the splendid work as if possessed.

Goffredo Petrassi's Fifth concerto for Orchestra is in the best sense interesting. If it is not at all times communicative, it consistently fascinates the ear and mind.

To judge from this one work—always a risky procedure—Mr. Petrassi is an eclectic composer who does not hesitate to employ twelve-tone rows of Bergian cast in a fairly tonal and accessible idiom, whose music acknowledges its debt to Stravinskian rhythm while exhibiting a thoroughly expressionistic and subjective approach.

[173]

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 23 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

2 Programs Well Played

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Two contemporary masterpieces occupied an important place in the Berkshire Festival programs of the weekend. Charles Munch included Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" in the Saturday night concert. Pierre Monteux played Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" yesterday afternoon. They pointed up the Boston Symphony's first weekend in the famous music shed, which drew a total audience of 18,951 people, and were well received.

Munch brought the Martinu back to Carnegie Hall last March after it had won the Music Critics Circle award. Hearing it then confirmed first impressions of its significance. Still further acquaintance underlines its beauty, unfolds more revealingly its world of fantasy, and places it at the head of a list of Martinu's works. The Bostonians' performance has grown richer and Munch's interpretation enhances both Martinu's workmanship and the considerable substance of the work.

Abreast of Times

Monteux shows how abreast of the times he is at the age of 81 when he elects to offer the Bartok masterpiece. It has been interpreted with more freedom and flavor but probably with no more precision. A dozen years have found it gain favor with audiences. Yesterday's was most enthusiastic.

Otherworldliness and fantasy are common to both the Martinu and Bartok. So, too, are originality and communicative power. Both composers gave something of themselves that singles out these works as representative of our times. Each stood in direct contrast to the other major items of these programs.

The Saturday night concert featured a performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding.

Yesterday Monteux offered Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

Both works bathed the listener in the effulgence of 19th Century romanticism, taking him into quite a different world from the 20th Century so graphically represented by Martinu and Bartok.

Munch paced his Wagner somewhat deliberately but drew sensuous sounds from the orchestra. The soloists gave outstanding accounts of themselves and the music. Miss Harshaw has seldom sung better; Da Costa qualifies potentially as a top-rank heldentenor; Pease has returned with a new sense of authority in voice and in manner. Never having sung his role before, Da Costa brought special distinction to himself.

Barber's "Adagio for Strings" provided the keynote for the Saturday program. It stands as a thing of beauty, its quality undiminished with the passing years. Monteux opened gaily with Rossini's overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" and let the Schubert flow mellifluously to its joyous conclusion.

The weekend weather was damp and cold until the sun finally came through yesterday afternoon. It cut attendance noticeably, with only 5,753 attending Saturday and 6,995 coming for yesterday's event.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

WED., Aug. 1 (Theater) at 8:30—RUDOLF SERKIN, Piano

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet

FRI., Aug. 3, 8:30—BARBAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO)
Soloist: Joey de Oliveira, Piano
SAT., Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN., Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 5 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts On At Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music came again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks which started July 4, and will continue to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commenced on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6), Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p.m.

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000 seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

TANGLEWOOD CRITICIZED—Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Festival are taking some knocks this season. Not from their audiences, which continue strong at every performance, but from some of the critics.

Charles Munch

These are writers who have finally spoken up against the sameness of programs. The greatest cry is for the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch to depart from the re-playing of the standards season after season and adventure into the unknown as an example to the other orchestras of the nation.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 2

New Shadowbrook Ground-Breaking Rites on Tuesday

Church dignitaries from all New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground-breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit novitiate at Lenox which will replace the building destroyed by fire on March 10.

1,500 Expected

More than 1,500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood, facilities provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Berkshire Music festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground-breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England hierarchy will be present.

Ground-breaking will be performed by Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Springfield diocese.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., provincial of the New England province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

400th Anniversary

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Shadowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin on Tuesday—a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31 will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced yesterday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and co-chairmen.

Following the ground-breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

CHARLES MUNCH DOES A SPLENDID JOB IN 'LEONORE'

Special to The Buffalo Evening News

LENOX, Mass., July 30—It was almost as if the musical thunderclaps of Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 2 could be credited with dispelling the high humidity that enveloped the more than 6000 listeners at Friday evenings Tanglewood concert, opening the fourth set of weekend concerts. As the music of the program gained in heat, the air cooled with corresponding mercy.

One could safely assume that most of the audience was mentally comparing the second "Leonore" overture with the much better-known third, and finding the comparison instructive as well as revealing of Beethoven's ceaseless search for the most perfect representation of his vision. Charles Munch led the splendid work as if possessed.

Gottfredo Petrassi's Fifth concerto for Orchestra is in the best sense interesting. If it is not at all times communicative, it consistently fascinates the ear and mind.

To judge from this one work—always a risky procedure—Mr. Petrassi is an eclectic composer who does not hesitate to employ twelve-tone rows of Bergian cast in a fairly tonal and accessible idiom, whose music acknowledges its debt to Stravinskian rhythm while exhibiting a thoroughly expressionistic and subjective approach.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020
AUG 1 1956

GROUND-BREAKING CEREMONIES — Archbishop Cushing turns shovel of earth at ground-breaking ceremonies for new Jesuit Shadowbrook Novitiate at Lenox. (AP Photo)

7 Prelates Turn Earth At Novitiate

LENOX, July 31—Seven Catholic prelates from New England each turned a spade of earth today to start ground-breaking exercises for a new Jesuit Shadowbrook novitiate in West Stockbridge. The building will replace the one destroyed by a fire March 10 in which four Jesuits died.

Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of Springfield was first to break soil for the new building. He was followed by Archbishop Cushing, Bishop Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, Bishop John J. Wright of Worcester, Bishop Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich Auxiliary Bishop Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston and Auxiliary Bishop John F. Hackett of Hartford.

To Raise Chapel Fund

At formal exercises attended by more than 4000 persons before the ground-breaking ceremonies Archbishop Cushing announced he would sponsor a campaign in the Boston archdiocese to raise $500,000 in a separate fund for a new chapel at the novitiate.

The Rev. George W. McCabe, S. J., executive chairman of a drive to raise $3 million for the new novitiate, said $2,158,522 has already been collected.

At the formal exercises at the Tanglewood Music Shed, Archbishop Cushing also announced he plans to link the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Boston diocese with the 400th anniversary of the Society of Jesus. Both events will be celebrated in 1958.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, S. J., New England provinvial, said today was chosen for the ground-breaking exercises because it marks the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuit Order.

Following the exercises a memorial service was held at the graves of the four Jesuits who died in the fire.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 25 1956

Beaux Arts Trio Will Be Featured

The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox will be given tonight in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D Minor), Ravel (in A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air. Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second weekend of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schuman Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

Berkshire Music Center

Miss Barbara Hansen (left), daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred A. Hansen of Red Oak, is an associate in the opera department this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass. in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival Concerts. The school runs July 2-Aug. 12. Shown with Miss Hansen are the other Iowans at the school. Left to right from Miss Hansen are seated Robert Granner of Eldora and Rolanda Ringer of Iowa City. Standing left to right are Mrs. Betty Crossley of Grinnell and Rosemary Ducommun of Sioux City.—Photo furnished.

[174]

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 30,429
JUL 10 1956

McCollum Replaces Lloyd For Tanglewood Concert

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist at the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

DR. CHARLES MUNCH will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Other soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Mr. Loyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement. Mr. McCollum will also assume Mr. Lloyd's role in the Mozart "Mass in C minor on Aug. 4.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts will open tomorrow with a chamber music program of music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. The program will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the Tanglewood Opera department, will appear as conductor and piano soloist on the Friday evening program assisted by Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff.

JOHN McCOLLUM
Takes Tenor Role

William Kroll, violinist; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, are soloist in the all-Bach program Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. The Sunday program will be given over entirely to the Tanglewood premiere of the Bach "Passion According to St. John."

* * *

TICKETS ARE available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. Programs and a calendar of the more than 30 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information of how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

NYACK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-NEWS
Circ. D. 9,620
JUL 10 1956

Travel

Canterbury To Hold Midsummer Festival

By TEMPLE MANNING

MUSIC and art festivals, both at home and abroad, draw tourists like magnets. At home, there's Tanglewood and the dance festival at Jacob's Pillow; abroad, there are such events as Salzburg, Edinburgh and Arles.

This year there is to be a festival at Canterbury, that ancient English cathedral town, and it will revolve around a permanent exhibit, the Living [illegible].

Ancient Edifice

The exhibit has been set up beneath the spires of the ancient edifice at Burgate House. The cathedral itself is a prime exhibit of the ancient past. Since Roman times it has been built, burned down, rebuilt, destroyed, rebuilt, enlarged and always improved.

The Famous Canterbury Cathedral, England.

On view also will be a replica of a Saxon Cathedral which has been erected over the spot where the Saint Augustine baptized King Ethelbert in 597 A.D. The high spot, of course, is the miniature replica that relates the story of the murder of Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, by Henry II. Before the jewel-studded, canopied Becket Shrine, stand figures of Chaucer and some of the folks from his immortal tales.

During the midsummer festival this year, there is to be a ballet based on the Canterbury Tales, instead of the famous Elliot play, "Murder in the Cathedral," which has been given so many times.

A new play, starring famous actors, will be presented in the beautiful Archdeacon's garden and there will be many other attractions.

The ancient Chapter House will be the setting for chamber music concerts and after dark the Norman walls and moats, the bastions, the cathedral itself will all be flood-lit. The setting is certainly there for a wonderful and moving experience in music, drama and dance, not to mention history and legend.

This cathedral town is set in a sweet green countryside and is surrounded with towns and hamlets rich in history and fame. The town itself is in the heart of Kent, a county less than 60 miles from London. Chartwell, the home of Sir Winston Churchill, is also in Kent and nearby is Knole Castle, an enormous gem of Elizabethan architecture set in park-like grounds.

Near Chartwell is Westerham, where General Wolfe was born. Quebec House, where he spent his early years, was bought and presented by some folks in Montreal as a national monument.

At Hayes, is the old home of William Pitt, the parliamentarian who opposed the taxation on the American colony. And at the fine Manor House at Farningham dwelt Captain Richard Bligh of "Mutiny on the Bounty" repute.

Kent, too, was the stamping ground of Charles Dickens, and there are many associations of him in houses and inns.

Many villages in the vicinity of Canterbury were purchased as national monuments. Complete with rows of real Tudor cottages, inns, village greens and stores, all covered with flowers, they make a picture that only time and nature, with a little assist by man, could create.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
UNION
Circ. D. 69,790 - S. 150,605
JUL 10 1956

Concert High Point Of Convention Here

By CONSTANCE STERRENBURG

The 46th annual convention for the Music Teachers Association of California got underway officially yesterday at El Cortez Hotel and kept delegates busy from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Most of the instructive meetings were attended by the 265 association members already registered, and by many non-members who have bought series tickets for convention events.

For the most part the music teachers were faithful to their trust but occasionally a covey of adult delinquents would slip out to the pool for a breather.

One of the most stimulating events of the afternoon was the concert played by Joseph Eger, young French horn virtuoso, with Charles Shatto at the piano. Eger's horn playing was beautiful. It was also a pleasure to hear his entertaining, unacademic talk on how to play the horn, most difficult of instruments.

Eger, an American by birth, is descended from Hungarian, Rumanian and Czech ancestry. He studied here at Curtis Institute and at Tanglewood. He tours with his own concert group and appears frequently as a soloist with major orchestras. Eger is a member of the summer music faculty at Aspen, Colo.

Some of his finest performances yesterday were heard in a Handel Concerto in G minor, composed originally for oboe, and in two Schubert songs, "My Favorite Color's Green," and in that remarkable, blood-chilling song, "der Doppelganger. Eger and Shatto conjured up some extremely ghostly sounds in this number. Eger also played some of Bartok's "Pieces for Children," and an early Mozart horn concerto.

A lecture and concer by Bartlett and Robertson, duo-pianists, drew a capacity audience to the El Cortez ballroom last night.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 11 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO FLY TO EUROPE

Orchestra Will Begin 6-Week Tour of 13 Countries at End of Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will fly to Europe for a six-week tour at the conclusion of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 12. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, is scheduled to play twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries.

The tour will begin with two concerts in Ireland, the first in Cork on Aug. 24, with a matinee in Dublin next day. The orchestra will play five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 25 to 30, as part of the Edinburgh Festival.

After a four-day visit to the Scandinavian countries, the orchestra will spend six days in the Soviet Union, Sept. 5 through 10. It will be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R.

The Boston Symphony will play two concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, and also will pay the orchestra a fee for the concerts.

Thereafter the orchestra is to perform in Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Bern, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

It will return to Boston at the end of September to begin rehearsals for its fall season.

Pierre Monteux, who was musical director of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, will accompany the orchestra on tour and will conduct ten of its twenty-seven concerts abroad.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American artists to tour abroad.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 496
JUL 11 1956

At Berkshire Festival

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her hit performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 44,429
JUL 10 1956

McCollum Replaces Lloyd For Tanglewood Concert

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist at the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

DR. CHARLES MUNCH will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Other soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Mr. Loyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement. Mr. McCollum will also assume Mr. Lloyd's role in the Mozart "Mass in C minor on Aug. 4.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts will open tomorrow with a chamber music program of music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. The program will be held in the Theater Concert Hall at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the Tanglewood Opera department, will appear as conductor and piano soloist on the Friday evening program assisted by Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff.

JOHN McCOLLUM
Takes Tenor Role

William Kroll, violinist; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, are soloist in the all-Bach program Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. The Sunday program will be given over entirely to the Tanglewood premiere of the Bach "Passion According to St. John."

* * *

TICKETS ARE available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. Programs and a calendar of the more than 30 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information of how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

NYACK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-NEWS
Circ. D. 9,620
JUL 10 1956

Travel

Canterbury To Hold Midsummer Festival

By TEMPLE MANNING

MUSIC and art festivals, both at home and abroad, draw tourists like magnets. At home, there's Tanglewood and the dance festival at Jacob's Pillow; abroad, there are such events as Salzburg, Edinburgh and Arles.

This year there is to be a festival at Canterbury, the ancient English cathedral town, and it will revolve around a permanent exhibit, the Living Past.

Ancient Edifice

The exhibit has been set up beneath the spires of the ancient edifice at Burgate House. The cathedral itself is a prime exhibit of the ancient past. Since Roman times it has been built, burned down, rebuilt, destroyed, rebuilt, enlarged and always improved.

The Famous Canterbury Cathedral, England.

On view also will be a replica of a Saxon Cathedral which has been erected over the spot where the Saint Augustine baptized King Ethelbert in 597 A.D. The high spot, of course, is the miniature replica that relates the story of the murder of Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, by Henry II. Before the jewel-studded, canopied Becket Shrine, stand figures of Chaucer and some of the folks from his immortal tales.

During the midsummer festival this year, there is to be a ballet based on the Canterbury Tales, instead of the famous Elliot play, "Murder in the Cathedral," which has been given so many times.

A new play, starring famous actors, will be presented in the beautiful Archdeacon's garden and there will be many other attractions.

The ancient Chapter House will be the setting for chamber music concerts and after dark the Norman walls and moats, the bastions, the cathedral itself will all be flood-lit. The setting is certainly there for a wonderful and moying experience in music, drama and dance, not to mention history and legend.

This cathedral town is set in a sweet green countryside and is surrounded with towns and hamlets rich in history and fame. The town itself is in the heart of Kent, a county less than 60 miles from London. Chartwell, the home of Sir Winston Churchill, is also in Kent and nearby is Knole Castle, an enormous gem of Elizabethan architecture set in park-like grounds.

Near Chartwell is Westerham, where General Wolfe was born. Quebec House, where he spent his early years, was bought and presented by some folks in Montreal as a national monument.

At Hayes, is the old home of William Pitt, the parliamentarian who opposed the taxation on the American colony. And at the fine Manor House at Farningham dwelt Captain Richard Bligh of "Mutiny on the Bounty" repute.

Kent, too, was the stamping ground of Charles Dickens, and there are many associations of him in houses and inns.

Many villages in the vicinity of Canterbury were purchased as national monuments. Complete with rows of real Tudor cottages, inns, village greens and stores, all covered with flowers, they make a picture that only time and nature, with a little assist by man, could create.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
UNION
Circ. D. 69,790 - S. 150,605.
JUL 10 1956

Concert High Point Of Convention Here

By CONSTANCE HERRESHOFF

The 46th annual convention for the Music Teachers Association of California got underway officially yesterday at El Cortez Hotel and kept delegates busy from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Most of the instructive meetings were attended by the 268 association members already registered, and by many non-members who have bought series tickets for convention events.

For the most part the music teachers were faithful to their trust, but occasionally a covey of adult delinquents would slip out to the pool for a breather.

One of the most stimulating events of the afternoon was the concert played by Joseph Eger, young French horn virtuoso, with Charles Shatto at the piano. Eger's horn playing was beautiful. It was also a pleasure to hear his entertaining, unacademic talk on how to play the horn, most difficult of instruments.

Eger, an American by birth, is descended from Hungarian, Romanian and Czech ancestry. He studied horn at Curtis Institute and at Tanglewood. He tours with his own concert group and appears frequently as a soloist with major orchestras. Eger is a member of the summer music faculty at Aspen, Colo.

Some of his finest performances yesterday were heard in a Handel Concerto in G minor, composed originally for oboe, and in two Schubert songs, "My Favorite Color's Green," and in that remarkable, blood-chilling song, "der Doppelganger." Eger and Shatto conjured up some extremely ghostly sounds in this number. Eger also played some of Bartok's "Pieces for Children," and an early Mozart horn concerto.

A lecture and concer by Bartlett and Robertson, duo-pianists, drew a capacity audience to the El Cortez ballroom last night.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 11 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO FLY TO EUROPE

Orchestra Will Begin 6-Week Tour of 13 Countries at End of Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will fly to Europe for a six-week tour at the conclusion of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 12. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, is scheduled to play twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries.

The tour will begin with two concerts in Ireland, the first in Cork on Aug. 24, with a matinee in Dublin next day. The orchestra will play five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 to 30, as part of the Edinburgh Festival.

After a four-day visit to the Scandinavian countries, the orchestra will spend six days in the Soviet Union, Sept. 5 through 10. It will be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R.

The Boston Symphony will play two concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, and also will pay the orchestra a fee for the concerts.

Thereafter the orchestra is to perform in Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Bern, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

It will return to Boston at the end of September to begin rehearsals for its fall season.

Pierre Monteux, who was musical director of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, will accompany the orchestra on tour and will conduct ten of its twenty-seven concerts abroad.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American artists to tour abroad.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 496
JUL 11 1956

At Berkshire Festival

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her fine performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 11 1956

TALKING IT OVER

Young Couple, in Europe, Has Yarn Dolls as Travel Mascots

By Emma Van Wormer

Some years ago, about two weeks or so apart, a son, named Ronald, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Homer Ackles of Rose Hill, and a daughter, named Carol Joy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Orville S. Osborne of Syracuse.

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

Mr. and Mrs. Ackles have made their home through the years in the spacious white house on their farm at Rose Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne now live near Skaneateles where they bought a place some years ago. When Ronald Ackles was a few weeks old, Mrs. Ackles wrote in her diary: "Took the baby to see Baby Osborne today. Hope they will be as good friends as they grow up as our families have been." About a fortnight later, this entry appeared in the Ackles diary: "Took Ronald over to see Baby Osborne today with a gift—a pair of yarn dolls".

Both the Ackles and Osborne families are widely known in area musical circles. For some years, Mrs. Ackles was tenor in Park Presbyterian Church Quartet here. He now is chairman of the music committee of the Skaneateles Presbyterian church. Mrs. Osborne, soprano, is a member of the board of Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., and is known as a Chorus director. This summer she is taking a course in conducting under Prof. Frank Hakanson, Syracuse University.

Ronald Ackles was graduated from Clarkson and Carol Joy Osborne from Syracuse University. Their wedding took place in Hendricks Chapel on S. U. Campus and they later went north to teach. Meantime, as her wedding day approached, Carol Joy had seen the diary in Rose Hill and had made a pair of yarn dolls as travel mascots. Ronald Ackles went in U. S. Army uniform and was sent to Germany, his young wife following as soon as possible. They expect to be back in the States by late 1956, but for the last three weeks, on leave, have been touring Italy and expect to go to Switzerland. They also have visited Holland since Mrs. Ackles' arrival in Germany a year ago.

The house at Rose Hill is one of many rooms, several with handmade rugs, evidence of Mrs. Ackles skill. There are numbers of fine old pieces of furniture and some fascinating old dishes, including flowing blue and Ironstone, all family pieces. Also glass and a notable array of plates and pitchers.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 11 1956

Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Jive Routine for Goodman

Benny Goodman, who had been one-nighting with his new swing band for the past six months, has now gone temporarily longhair. He appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony in the Mozart clarinet Concerto at the Tanglewood Festival in Mass. and repeats the performance today (Wed.) under Charles Munch's baton.

Following the classical stint, Goodman resumes with the jive at the Carter Barron Amphitheatre in Washington, D. C., in a series of four jazz concerts, July 14-17. He will premiere a new jazz concerto by Morton Gould, "Derivations for Clarinet and Band," a piece written especially for the Goodman crew.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,519
JUL 11 1956

Benny Goodman at Berkshire Festival Tonight

Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet will inaugurate the second week of the Berkshire Festival tonight with a chamber music concert in the Theatre Concert Hall. The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively, Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola, and Samuel Mayes, solo cello.

It has also been announced that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in [illegible] in August and Sept[illegible] under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director during the past seven years. The BSO players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on August 12.

String Quartet From The Boston In 'Tanglewood'

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival begins tonight in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. with a chamber music concert in the Theater Concert Hall. The Boston Symphony String Quartet will play Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, assisted by Clarinetist Benny Goodman and Violist Eugen Lehner. The Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant, respectively, Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. This Ensemble's recent recording debut was on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ".

Four more Wednesday night concerts of chamber music are set for this summer's Berkshire Festival. Artists include Roger Voisin conducting the Brass Ensemble of The Boston and Metropolitan Opera Soprano Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano on July 18; the Beaux Arts Trio July 25; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1 and Zino Francescotti violin, Artur Balsam, piano, Aug. 8.

A program of piano concertos by Mozart will mark the final Bach-Mozart concerts on Friday night, July 13. Soloists will be the eminent Duo-Pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Center opera department, opera productor, pianist and commentator. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard. The program will begin with three movements from Mozart's "Posthorn" Serenade. Luboshutz and Nemenoff are known to Syracuse audiences having played in Central High School on several occasions. Their last appearance, for Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., was a gala event with a reception in the home of Mrs. G. Norman Knauf the previous evening. Following their down town concert, the duo pianists, in private life Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Luboshutz, with Miss Elsie Illingworth, NAC vice president, were guests at supper in the Liederkranz Club.

Goldovsky will come to Syracuse University later this month to give a lecture during the week of lectures-recitals arranged by the School of Music and the Division of Summer Sessions. Late in the fall, he will bring the Cimarosa opera "The Secret Marriage" to Syracuse, the production known as the Goldovsky Opera Theater, directed and conducted by Goldovsky. This is substituted for "Lucia di Lammermoor," due to the passing of Mr. C. L. Wagner. The Goldovsky Opera will be sung in English. Famous Artists have brought Goldovsky productions on two previous occasions; this late 1956 engagement is in Civic Morning Musicals Series. Famous Artists will bring the Boston Symphony in October, Dr. Charles Munch conducting. Dr. Munch, director of the Orchestra, is music director of Berkshire Center, summer home of the Boston Symphony. In "Tanglewood" on Aug. 6-7, Boris Goldovsky will stage Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin."

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 486
JUL 11 1956

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood

—o—

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

The second week of the four Berkshire Festival weeks [illegible] evening of chamber music by Mozart and Brahms performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet, on Wednesday (July 11) and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the piano services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services to Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo-pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14) [illegible] chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by chorus department head Hugh Ross.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. E. 34,678
JUL 7 1956

World Premiere Slated At Tanglewood Tonight

LENOX, Mass., July 7—Charles Munch will conduct the first half and Hugh Ross the second half of the second chamber orchestra concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near here, tonight.

A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This and Martinu's "Military Mass" will enlist, in addition to the orchestra, the services of the Yale Glee Club.

Also on the program will be two works by Mozart: the "Haffner" symphony and the "Wood-wind Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b."

Tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. Lukas Foss will conduct five works three of which are new to Tanglewood. They are Irving Fine's "Serious Song for Strings," Alex Haieff's "Divertimento" and Charles Ives' "Unanswered Question."

[176]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 11 1956

TALKING IT OVER

Young Couple, in Europe, Has Yarn Dolls as Travel Mascots

By Emma Van Wormer

Some years ago, about two weeks or so apart, a son, named Ronald, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Homer Ackles of Rose Hill, and a daughter, named Carol Joy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Orville S. Osborne of Syracuse.

Mr. and Mrs. Ackles have made their home through the years in the spacious white house on their farm at Rose Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne now live near Skaneateles where they bought a place some years ago. When Ronald Ackles was a few weeks old, Mrs. Ackles wrote in her diary: "Took the baby to see Baby Osborne today. Hope they will be as good friends as they grow up as our families have been." About a fortnight later, this entry appeared in the Ackles diary: "Took Ronald over to see Baby Osborne today with a gift—a pair of yarn dolls".

Both the Ackles and Osborne families are widely known in area musical circles. For some years, Mrs. Ackles was tenor in Park Presbyterian Church Quartet here. He now is chairman of the music committee of the Skaneateles Presbyterian church. Mrs. Osborne, soprano, is a member of the board of Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., and is known as a Chorus director. This summer she is taking a course in conducting under Prof. Frank Hakanson, Syracuse University.

Ronald Ackles was graduated from Clarkson and Carol Joy Osborne from Syracuse University. Their wedding took place in Hendricks Chapel on S. U. Campus and they later went north to teach. Meantime, as her wedding day approached, Carol Joy had seen the diary in Rose Hill and had made a pair of yarn dolls as travel mascots. Ronald Ackles went in U. S. Army uniform and was sent to Germany, his young wife following as soon as possible. They expect to be back in the States by late 1956, but for the last three weeks, on leave, have been touring Italy and expect to go to Switzerland. They also have visited Holland since Mrs. Ackles' arrival in Germany a year ago.

The house at Rose Hill is one of many rooms, several with handmade rugs, evidence of Mrs. Ackles skill. There are numbers of fine old pieces of furniture and some fascinating old dishes, including flowing blue and Ironstone, all family pieces. Also glass and a notable array of plates and pitchers.

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

String Quartet From The Boston In 'Tanglewood'

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival begins tonight in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. with a chamber music concert in the Theater Concert Hall. The Boston Symphony String Quartet will play Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, assisted by Clarinetist Benny Goodman and Violist Eugen Lehner. The Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant, respectively, Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. This Ensemble's recent recording debut was on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ".

Four more Wednesday night concerts of chamber music are set for this summer's Berkshire Festival. Artists include Roger Voisin conducting the Brass Ensemble of The Boston and Metropolitan Opera Soprano Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano on July 18; the Beaux Arts Trio July 25; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1 and Zino Francescotti violin, Artur Balsam, piano, Aug. 6.

A program of piano concertos by Mozart will mark the final Bach-Mozart concerts on Friday night, July 13. Soloists will be the eminent Duo-Pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Center opera department, opera productor, pianist and commentator. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard. The program will begin with three movements from Mozart's "Posthorn" Serenade. Luboshutz and Nemenoff are known to Syracuse audiences having played in Central High School on several occasions. Their last appearance, for Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., was a gala event with a reception in the home of Mrs. G. Norman Knaus the previous evening. Following their down town concert, the duo pianists, in private life Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Luboshutz, with Miss Elsie Illingworth, NAC vice president, were guests at supper in the Liederkranz Club.

Goldovsky will come to Syracuse University later this month to give a lecture during the week of lectures—recitals arranged by the School of Music and the Division of Summer Sessions. Late in the fall, he will bring the Cimarosa opera "The Secret Marriage" to Syracuse, the production known as the Goldovsky Opera Theater, directed and conducted by Goldovsky. This is substituted for "Lucia di Lammermoor," due to the passing of Mr. C. L. Wagner. The Goldovsky Opera will be sung in English. Famous Artists have brought Goldovsky productions on two previous occasions; this late 1956 engagement is in Civic Morning Musicals Series. Famous Artists will bring the Boston Symphony in October, Dr. Charles Munch conducting. Dr. Munch, director of the Orchestra, is music director of Berkshire Center, summer home of the Boston Symphony. In "Tanglewood" on Aug. 6-7, Boris Goldovsky will stage Lukas Foss' opera "Griffeltkim."

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 496
JUL 11 1956

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood

—o—

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

—o—

The second week of the four Berkshire [illegible] Tanglewood, [illegible] evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11), and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo-pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14.) Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by chorus department head Hugh Ross.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 11 1956

Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Jive Routine for Goodman

Benny Goodman, who had been one-nighting with his new swing band for the past six months, has now gone temporarily longhair. He appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony in the Mozart clarinet Concerto at the Tanglewood Festival in Mass. and repeats the performance today (Wed.) under Charles Munch's baton.

Following the classical stint, Goodman resumes with the jive at the Carter Barron Amphitheatre in Washington, D. C., in a series of four jazz concerts, July 14-17. He will premiere a new jazz concerto by Morton Gould, "Derivations for Clarinet and Band," a piece written especially for the Goodman crew.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,619
JUL 11 1956

Benny Goodman at Berkshire Festival Tonight

Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet will inaugurate the second week of the Berkshire Festival tonight with a chamber music concert in the Theatre Concert Hall. The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively, Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello.

It has also been announced that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 33 programs in August and September, under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years. The 105 players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on August 12.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 34,678
JUL 7 1956

World Premiere Slated At Tanglewood Tonight

LENOX, Mass., July 7—Charles Munch will conduct the first half and Hugh Ross the second half of the second chamber orchestra concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near here, tonight.

A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This and Martinu's "Military Mass" will enlist, in addition to the orchestra, the services of the Yale Glee Club.

Also on the program will be two works by Mozart: the "Haffner" symphony and the "Wood-wind Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b."

Tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. Lukas Foss will conduct five works, three of which are new to Tanglewood. They are Irving Fine's "Serious Song for Strings," Alex Haleff's "Divertimento" and Charles Ives' "Unanswered Question."

[176]

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 5 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts On At Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music came again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks which started July 4 and will continue to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commenced on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6), Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p.m.

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000 seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,152 - S. 116,397

JUL 7 1956

OUTSTANDING PLAYS OFFERED IN AREA

The Sacandaga Summer Theatre, Tony Farrell, producer, will present its second musical of the 1956 season when Irving Berlin's hit, "Call Me Madam" opens Monday night, starring Jeffrey Lynn and Brenda Lewis. The Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse play centers around the social and political affairs of a newly-appointed Madam Ambassador to a small province in Europe. The orchestra and chorus will be under the direction of the distinguished conductor Sylvan Levin. Matinees are Wednesday and Saturday.

Paula Trueman, who played the Josephine Hull role on Broadway, will take over the same assignment for "The Solid Gold Cadillac" as the third play of the current season at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass. Others in the cast include Reynolds Evans, William Shannon, Bruce Hall, Joyce Jordan, Patricia Lannan, Jerry Hanley and Elizabeth Walden. Performances are given nightly, except Sunday, at 8:45 with Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2:30.

"TEA AND SYMPATHY"

"Tea and Sympathy," a moving study of adolescence, will be the third production at the Spa Summer Theatre opening Monday night on the Saratoga Reservation. Mary Fickett and other members of the Broadway cast will be featured. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

The Malden Bridge Playhouse, opening Tuesday, will offer the drama, "The Desperate Hours," which starred Humphrey Bogart in the movie version. Paul Bressoud, the managing director and producer at Malden Bridge will play the role of the inoffensive citizen whose home is invaded by three escaped convicts. Others in the cast are Carolyn Sullivan, Foy Storey, Joan Gainesley, Edgar Beach, Stanley Beck and Lou Benedict. The play runs through Sunday night, with a special 7 P. M. Sunday curtain.

ARENA COMING

This [illegible] year of the Arena Theatre at New York State College for Teachers will open Wednesday evening with Sidney Howard's comedy, "They Knew What They Wanted," from which was made the current smash Broadway hit musical, "The Most Happy Fella."

Paul Bruce Petit, who introduced the Arena Theatre to Albany audiences, five years ago, will direct. The play runs through July 14.

The second week of the Berkshire Music Festival in the Theatre-Music Hall, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Wednesday evening, continuing Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon. Wednesday night's concert will feature Benny Goodman, clarinetist and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. On Friday night the world-famous piano duo Luboschutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky, will be the soloists. Saturday afternoon William Kroll, violinist of the Kroll String Quartet will be the assisting artist.

SUNDAY PROGRAM

On Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch will conduct a performance of the Passion According to St. John, by Bach with Adele Addison, soprano; John McCullum tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan, and James Joyce, basses.

The third week of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, under the direction of Ted Shawn, will feature the Ballet Theatre stars, Sonia Arova and Jon Sanders in the classic idiom, Merce Cunningham and Company in the modern vein and Carol Goya and Matteo in the dances of Spain. Matinees are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at 4 P. M. and evening performances, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, at 9 o'clock.

YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
Circ. D. 36,669

JUL 6 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hate after", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus [illegible] solos and "Giselle's Revenge" contemporary spoof on the [illegible] of romantic ballet after the manner of Chas. Addams [illegible] cartoonist. In the [illegible] William Millie will [illegible] brecht, and Ruth Alexander contribute to the [illegible] ings as Wil[illegible]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

JUL 9 1956

FEATURED AT TANGLEWOOD—The celebrated two-piano team of Luboschutz and Nemenoff will return to Tanglewood Friday for the first time in six years for an all-Mozart concert. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at Berkshire Music Center, also will appear as a soloist.

[177]

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 5 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts On At Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music came again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks which started July 4, and will continue to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commenced on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6), Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p.m.

For the final four week end of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000 seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,152 - S. 116,397

JUL 7 1956

OUTSTANDING PLAYS OFFERED IN AREA

The Sacandaga Summer Theatre, Tony Farrell, producer, will present its second musical of the 1956 season when Irving Berlin's hit, "Call Me Madam" opens Monday night, starring Jeffrey Lynn and Brenda Lewis. The Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse play centers around the social and political affairs of a newly-appointed Madam Ambassador to a small province in Europe. The orchestra and chorus will be under the direction of the distinguished conductor Sylvan Levin. Matinees are Wednesday and Saturday.

Paula Trueman, who played the Josephine Hull role on Broadway, will take over the same assignment for "The Solid Gold Cadillac" as the third play of the current season at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass. Others in the cast include Reynolds Evans, William Sharon, Bruce Hall, Gaye Jordan, Patricia Lamson, Jerry Kernitye and Elizabeth Walden. Performances are given nightly, except Sunday, at 8:45 with Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2:30.

"TEA AND SYMPATHY"

"Tea and Sympathy," a moving study of adolescence, will be the third production at the Spa Summer Theatre opening Monday night on the Saratoga Reservation. Mary Fickett and other members of the Broadway cast will be featured. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

The Malden Bridge Playhouse, opening Tuesday will offer the drama, "The Desperate Hours," which starred Humphrey Bogart in the movie version. Paul Bressoud, the managing director and producer at Malden Bridge will play the role of the inoffensive citizen whose home is invaded by three escaped convicts. Others in the cast are Carolyn Sullivan, Toy Storey, Joan Gainesley, Edward Beach, Stanley Beck and Leon Benedict. The play runs through Sunday night with a special 7 P. M. Sunday curtain.

ARENA CONCERT

[illegible] anniversary year of the Arena Theatre at New York State College for Teachers will open Wednesday evening with Sidney Howard's comedy, "They Knew What They Wanted," from which was made the current smash Broadway hit musical, "The Most Happy Fella."

Paul Bruce Petit, who introduced the Arena Theatre to Albany audiences, five years ago, will direct. The play runs through July 14.

The second week of the Berkshire Music Festival in the Theatre-Music Hall, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Wednesday evening, continuing Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon. Wednesday night's concert will feature Benny Goodman, clarinetist and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. On Friday night the world-famous piano duo Luboschutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky will be the soloists. Saturday afternoon William Kroll, violinist of the Kroll String Quartet will be the assisting artist.

SUNDAY PROGRAM

On Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch will conduct a performance of the Passion According to St. John, by Bach with Adele Addison, soprano; John McCullum tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan, and James Joyce, basses.

The third week of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, under the direction of Ted Shawn, will feature the Ballet Theatre stars, Sonia Arova and Jon Sanders in the classic idiom; Merce Cunningham and Company in the modern field and Carol Goya and Matteo in the dances of Spain. Matinees are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at 4 P. M. and evening performances, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, at 9 o'clock.

YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
Circ. D. 36,669

JUL 6 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

• • • •

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee [illegible] On Sunday afternoon [illegible] a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

• • • •

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the [illegible] program at Jacob's Pillow near [illegible] Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky Strawinsky Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The [illegible]" (Alexandre Tcherepnine). Ruth St. Denis, [illegible] the 50th anniversary [illegible] concert appearance [illegible] four of her [illegible] ing "Cobra" [illegible] seen in 1906 [illegible] has appeared [illegible] after [illegible] collection [illegible] solos and [illegible] content [illegible] of romantic [illegible] manner [illegible] cartoonist [illegible] William [illegible] brochure [illegible] contributions [illegible]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

JUL 9 1956

FEATURED AT TANGLEWOOD—The celebrated two-piano team of Luboshutz and Nemenoff will return to Tanglewood Friday for the first time in six years for an all-Mozart concert. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at Berkshire Music Center, also will appear as a soloist.

RALEIGH, N. C.
NEWS & OBSERVER
Circ. D. 129,607

JUL 9 1956

What's Doing

Charlotte has been included on the itinerary of the NBC Opera Company which, for the first time, takes to the road this fall on a tour of 47 cities.

The company's repertoire will consist of "Madame Butterfly" and "The Marriage of Figaro," both of which will be sung in English. The company will present "Butterfly" in Charlotte on Friday night, October 19.

Other appearances in this vicinity will include Norfolk, October 16 (Figaro); Richmond, Oct. 17 (Butterfly) and October 18 (Figaro).

Questions and Answers.

Q.: Was Maurice Gosfield, who plays Pfc. Doberman on "You'll Never Get Rich" ever in the Army?

A.: Playing an enlisted man in the Phil Silvers show comes easy for Maurice. He served more than three years in the Army during World War II. He was discharged a technical sergeant after service with the 8th Armored Division. Maurice claims his "patsy" characterization, the yard-bird who gets stuck with the short end in jobs, is a composite of his former Army buddies.

Q.: When did Douglas Edwards begin broadcasting for CBS?

A.: Doug joined the CBS Radio News staff in December, 1942, and was heard during the war on "Report to the Nation" and "The World Today." He went overseas in 1945 on an 8,000-mile roving assignment. On V-E Day he broadcast from London and on V-J Day from Paris. Recently, his CBS-TV news program received the Peabody Award.

TELEVISION.

"Class of '58" is the title of the play that will be given on Matinee Theater this afternoon at 2 o'clock over WTVD, WITN, WMFD-TV, WFLB, and WXEX. About an obnoxious college freshman, who has been expelled and is on his way home when he meets a man who changes his life.

Singer Jan Clayton will be the guest of Gordon MacRae tonight at 6:30 o'clock over WXEX.

Mildred Miller, Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano, will be the guest soloist on the Voice simulcast tonight at 7:30 o'clock over TV Stations WNAO-TV, WCSC and WTVR and at 8:30 o'clock over Radio WKIX.

Vic Damone's guests tonight will be Rocky Graziano, Delores Gray and Paul Newman. At 8:30 o'clock over WNAO-TV, WTAR, WNCT, WCSC, WBTV and WBTW.

Robert Montgomery will present "A Matter of Conscience," starring Charles Drake and Mary K. Wells, tonight at 8:30 o'clock over WTVD, WITN and WXEX. The drama of a doubting wife and an indifferent husband.

"Song for A Summer Night" will be given on Summer Theater tonight at 9 o'clock over WNCT, WTAR, WFMY, WBTV and WCSC. Stars Kenneth Utt. About a man approaching middle age who realizes his youthful dreams will never come true.

C. R. "Jack Preddy Jr. has joined the administration department of Durham's WTVD, according to an announcement by Station President Harmon Duncan. Preddy, a native of Rocky Mount and a graduate of Raleigh's Broughton High School, moved to Durham in 1925. He served in the U. S. Army from 1941 to 1946 and was discharged with the rank of major. Until recently, he served as office manager for W. C. Lyon Company. He is married to the former Margaret Poe of Durham.

AT THE THEATERS.

"Mohawk," at the Ambassador.

"The Fastest Gun Alive," at the Colony. Glenn Ford, Jeanne Crain.

"Trapeze," at the State. Top circus film. Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis, Gina Lollobrigida.

"The Birds and the Bees," at the Varsity. TV Comedian George Gobel tries his hand at a motion picture.

"Foreign Intrigue," at the Village. Cloak-and-dagger work in foreign parts, with Robert Mitchum.

"Three Musketeers" at the Wake.

Director John Huston denies he has anything against men who can walk on their own two feet, despite the fact he had Jose Ferrer walking on his knees in "Moulin Rouge," while in "Moby Dick" Gregory Peck stumps about on a peg leg.

Bill Parker, Denver Post newsman who "broke" the Bridey Murphy story, and plays himself in Paramount's "The Search for Bridey Murphy," has taped the story of his Irish investigation for NBC.

ON THE AIR.

The Berkshire Festival concerts, featuring the Boston Symphony under the baton of Conductor Charles Munch, will be heard over Radio WPTF tonight at 6:15 o'clock and each Monday night thereafter at the same hour over the local station. Tonight's opening festival concert will be devoted to music by Mozart, including the final movement of the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major and the "Sinfonia Concertante, with Obe, Horn, Clarinet and Bassoon."

NBC-TV's "Project 20," which already has turned out "The Twisted Cross" (about Hitler) and "Nightmare in Red" (about Communist Russia) both of which won acclaim, is now completing a trio of documentaries designed to give a complete socio-political picture of the United States from the outbreak of World War I in 1914 to the beginning of U. S. Participation in World War II in 1941.

Under the direction of Henry Salomon, the project crew has almost completed "The Jazz Age," narrated by the late Fred Allen, and is moving into "The Great War" and "The '30s." Also on the agenda is "Four Kings, Two Queens," a history of Great Britian from Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee to the Coronation of Elizabeth II.

RALEIGH RECREATION DEPT. TODAY (all events at Pullen Park Community Center unless otherwise noted): 9 a.m. to 12 noon, weaving class; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., ceramic workshop; 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., tennis courts; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., swimming pool; 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., ceramic workshop; 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., softball, Red Diamond, Chavis Park; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., swimming pool; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., tennis court; 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., games; 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., leather class; 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., arts and crafts for adults.

The North Carolina Museum of Art on East Morgan Street will be closed today.

The 12 top films at the nation's box office in June, according to Variety, were: The Searchers, Bhowani Junction, The Man Who Knew Too Much, D-Day, the Sixth of June, The Wonders of the World, Oklahoma, Cine Holiday, Safari, Crime in the Streets, The Ladykillers, The Toy Tiger, and The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit.

JANE HALL.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

JUL 9 1956

Tanglewood Music Fans Give Ovation to Goodman

By D. E. RITZ

The Tanglewood debut of clarinetist Benny Goodman highlighted the opening program in the Bach-Mozart series at the Theatre-Concert hall at Lenox, Mass., Friday evening.

* * *

GOODMAN APPEARED as soloist in the "Concerto for Clarinet in A major, K. 82" with the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra conducted by Dr. Charles Munch.

The all-Mozart program opened with the "Symphony in G minor, K. 550" and closed with the "Prague Symphony in D major, K. 504."

It was a cool evening and almost clear. The instruments sounded fine. The program was the first directed by Dr. Munch since his return from a Paris vacation. Every member of the ensemble was at top pitch and the program was a glorious opening for the 19th season of the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

GOODMAN RECEIVED a hearty reception when he came on and at the end of the concerto received an outstanding ovation.

Dr. Munch and the orchestra also received ovations following the performances of the symphonies from the large audience which filled every chair in the auditorium and overflowed onto the grounds.

Goodman proved himself a master of the instrument in the classical idiom and his clear tone and fast articulation made the rapid passages most attractive. The orchestral background formed a fine foil to the instrument, and under Dr. Munch's direction the whole performance proved a remarkable tribute to its composer.

* * *

WE HAS KNOWN many musicians who have left the classic field for jazz but we will admit that Friday evening was the first time that we had heard one of the finest of the jazz men demonstrate that he is also a classicist. The program notes inform us that Goodman studied with Reginald Kell; also that he commissioned "such works as 'Contrasts' by Bartok and the concertos for his instrument by Copland and by Hindemith, and played in each of them." Our first hearing of Goodman in person was a revelation.

The clarinetist also is scheduled to appear in a special program Wednesday evening with the Boston Symphony String Quartet including Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violinist; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello, Eugen Lehner, viola, will assist in one of the numbers.

* * *

ON SATURDAY evening, the symphonic program included two Mozart numbers directed by Dr. Munch and two modern numbers conducted by Hugh Ross. Lukas Foss conducted yesterday afternoon's program.

The Tanglewood season is in full swing and again we add our tribute to an enterprise which enables many to share in Boston's fine musical fare. The season at Tanglewood will continue through Aug. 12.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

JUL 6 1956

Modern Chamber Music Scheduled at Tanglewood

Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music at the Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p.m. Monday.

* * *

THE PROGRAM is the first of two being given under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. The second program will be presented July 23. The brace of concerts is open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school at Tanglewood, and to the public.

Monday evening's program will include Igor Stravinsky, "Duo Concertante (1932)"; Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings," (1956); Benjamin Britten's "Canticle II, opus 51" (1953); Arnold Schoenberg's "Klavierstucke, opus 33 a and b," (1929, 1932); Anton Webern, "Variations, opus 27," (1926); Alvin Epstein's "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs (1956); and Aaron Copland's "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme," (1929).

* * *

MEMBERS of the Boston Symphony participating include Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; and Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos and Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; and Arthur Schoep, tenor.

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be presented tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall with Charles Munch directing a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program featuring the Tanglewood debut of jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman.

* * *

OTHER PROGRAMS this weekend will include one tomorrow evening with Dr. Munch and Hugh Ross sharing conducting honors. A highlight of tomorrow's program will be the world premiere of Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from the "Dead Sea Scrolls." The program will also include the "Military Mass" by Martinu.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Lukas Foss will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to Tanglewood.

Remaining tickets for the Berkshire Festival concerts may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office.

---

[178]

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD

JUL 12 1956

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Goes Into Second Week Of Concerts

—o—

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

—o—

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Hayden, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the pedium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfredo Kripa, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared in a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14.) Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross.

At Berkshire Festival

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m.) Theatre Concert Hall).

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

JUL 12 1956

Drama, Music, Dance

(Today's "Summer Circuit" column is written by Duane LaFleche, Oscar Barker and David H. Beetle, substituting for Ormonde Plater.)

The gentleman who prepares printed programs at Tanglewood knows just how to put things.

He wrote, in bringing to attention that the feature work of last night's chamber music concert would be the Mozart "Clarinet Quintet," that the work would be performed by the Boston Symphony String Quartet "assisted by Benny Goodman."

And may it be said in Mr. Goodman's praise that he proved again to be both too fine a musician and too much of a gentleman to seek to do anything more than assist.

It was a very jittery Mr. Goodman who walked on stage with the cellist, violist and two violinists. Never one to be calm and collected, Benny Goodman's jitters last night were king-sized.

His musicianship perhaps did not reach quite the same proportions but he played very well indeed.

The audience loved him. He was modest, but he let the quintet be a quintet, and made no effort to make it a solo work. If the performance was perhaps not quite so Mozartian as the purist would like it, it was still a very good performance, and one that made a pleasant evening.

Also heard on last night's program were the Haydn "String Quartet in E-Flat Major" and the Brahms "String Quartet in G-Major." (D. LaF.)

• • •

George Bernard Shaw was once walking along a street when he was approached by a stranger who asked: "Are you Shaw?" The lively old man promptly replied: "Positive."

For a positive account of Shaw, his devastating writticisms and comments on life, see "Misalliance" being presented through Saturday by the Coventry Players at Siena College.

The listener has to be alert because GBS jams this play with comments on every conceivable subject, from vegetarianism to socialism, from a discussion on turn-of-the-century sanitary system to aims and purposes of the theater. . . . All this in two hours.

One of the characters says "All I hear is talk, talk, talk." How true for the playgoer. But such witty chatter.

One must remember in discussing the Coventry Players that all, except their leader Martin Kelly, are novices and it would be unfair to compare them to professionals on the summer circuit. They good naturedly lock horns with Shaw and have come up with a spritely production.

A low bow to Mr. Kelly for his interpretation of "John Tarleton the great John Tarleton of Tarleton's underwear." Richard Harte is good as the infantile Bexley Summerhays.

Suffice to say, the entire cast, who yackety-yack throughout the play, do all that can be expected of them. (O. B.)

• • •

Maybe rusticity goes over bigger with some people than with others. Anyway after dropping in at Malden Bridge the other night, we decided the theater was one everyone should see once, even though the play was one you were trying to avoid. In this case though, we got a bonus. The play (it was "The Young and the Beautiful" then) was good, too. Maybe they all are; Ormonde and Oscar would know.

Somehow big, thick hand-sewn beams attract us (even though had we been around when the hewing was going on we probably wouldn't have wanted to participate). We also like the idea of lemonade under the summer stars (even though it may be chilly enough for hot chocolate). The road there is attractive; looked so much like something leading up to a Vermont ski development, we were sort of surprised not to find snow. Anyway if you run into any friends from abroad who wonder what a summer theater is like, that's the place to take them.

Reminded us a little of seeing "Wuthering Heights" at Cooperstown — with bats flying around. What atmosphere!

• • •

Reports from Williamstown are that this week's play, "The Philadelphia Story," is not one you should bother about if you saw the original New York production, but that otherwise it's a good bet. It's a Philip Barry-ish (it ought to be, he wrote it) drawing room comedy about Main Line life and times.

AT MUSIC BARN — Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitarist, will be the second attraction in the weekly Folk Music Series at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass., at 4 p. m. Saturday. He will be accompanied by his wife, the Spanish dancer Trianita.

You come away feeling that all the families who have been living on the right side of the track since the invention of the railroad aren't per se decadent; all the Horatio Alger boys aren't necessarily heroes. Some have suspected it already; for them this is a clincher.

We're told (and it was certainly true at "The Chalk Garden") that you'd better sit still and listen; either the acoustics are uncertain or the cast needs a few lessons from Ethel Merman. With both these plays, lines are important; if they were giving something like "Detective Story" or "My Sister Eileen" you might get an inkling of what's going on just visually. (D. H. B.)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 12 1956

2 PROGRAMS REVISED

Tanglewood Concerts July 21 and Aug. 12 List Works

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced revisions yesterday in its Berkshire Festival programs for the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Mass. The concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12.

The revised July 21 program will offer Barber's Adagio for Strings; Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," commissioned for the Boston Symphony's seventy-fifth anniversary last season, and Act I of "Die Walkuere," with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

The Aug. 12 program lists the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony and Act III of "Die Meistersinger," with Margaret Williams and Messrs. Pease and Da Costa as soloists.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502

JUL 12 1956

ADELE ADDISON returns to Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., as one of the soloists Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

[179]

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
JUL 12 1956

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Goes Into Second Week Of Concerts

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Hayden, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

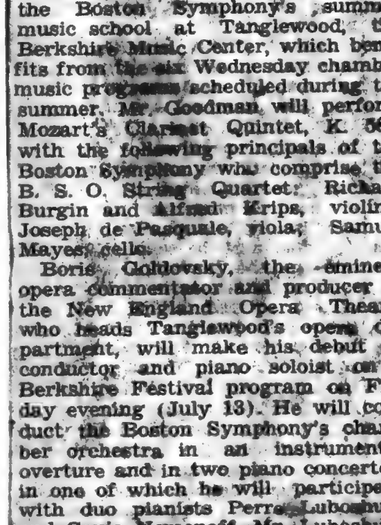
The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theare, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Perre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14.) Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross.

At Berkshire Festival



Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her hit performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692
JUL 12 1956

Drama, Music, Dance

(Today's "Summer Circuit" column is written by Duane LaFleche, Oscar Barker and David H. Beetle, substituting for Ormonde Plater.)

The gentleman who prepares printed programs at Tanglewood knows just how to put things.

He wrote, in bringing to attention that the feature work of last night's chamber music concert would be the Mozart "Clarinet Quintet," that the work would be performed by the Boston Symphony String Quartet "assisted by Benny Goodman."

And may it be said in Mr. Goodman's praise that he proved again to be both too fine a musician and too much of a gentleman to seek to do anything more than assist.

It was a very jittery Mr. Goodman who walked on stage with the cellist, violist and two violinists. Never one to be calm and collected, Benny Goodman's jitters last night were king-sized.

His musicianship perhaps did not reach quite the same proportions but he played very well indeed.

The audience loved him. He was modest, but he let the quintet be a quintet, and made no effort to make it a solo work. If the performance was perhaps not quite so Mozartian as the purist would like it, it was still a very good performance, and one that made a pleasant evening.

Also heard on last night's program were the Haydn "String Quartet in E-Flat Major" and the Brahms "String Quartet in G-Major." (D. LaF.)

• • •

George Bernard Shaw was once walking along a street when he was approached by a stranger who asked: "Are you Shaw?" The lively old man promptly replied: "Positive."

For a positive account of Shaw, his devastating writticisms and comments on life, see "Misalliance" being presented through Saturday by the Coventry Players at Siena College.

The listener has to be alert because GBS jams this play with comments on every conceivable subject, from vegetarianism to socialism, from a discussion on turn-of-the-century sanitary system to aims and purposes of the theater. . . . All this in two hours.

One of the characters says "All I hear is talk, talk, talk." How true for the playgoer. But such witty chatter.

One must remember in discussing the Coventry Players that all, except their leader Martin Kelly, are novices and it would be unfair to compare them to professionals on the summer circuit. They good naturedly lock horns with Shaw and have come up with a spritely production.

A low bow to Mr. Kelly for his interpretation of "John Tarleton the great John Tarleton of Tarleton's underwear." Richard Harte is good as the infantile Behtley Summerhays.

Suffice to say, the entire cast, who yackety-yack throughout the play, do all that can be expected of them. (O. B.)

• • •

Maybe rusticity goes over bigger with some people than with others. Anyway after dropping in at Malden Bridge the other night, we decided the theater was one everyone should see once, even though the play was one you were trying to avoid. In this case though, we got a bonus. The play (it was "The Young and the Beautiful" then) was good, too. Maybe they all are; Ormonde and Oscar would know.

Somehow big, thick hand-sewn beams attract us (even though had we been around when the hewing was going on we probably wouldn't have wanted to participate). We also like the idea of lemonade under the summer stars (even though it may be chilly enough for hot chocolate). The road there is attractive; looked so much like something leading up to a Vermont ski development, we were sort of surprised not to find snow. Anyway if you run into any friends from abroad who wonder what a summer theater is like, that's the place to take them.

Reminded us a little of seeing "Wuthering Heights" at Cooperstown — with bats flying around. What atmosphere!

• • •

Reports from Williamstown are that this week's play, "The Philadelphia Story," is not one you should bother about if you saw the original New York production, but that otherwise it's a good bet. It's a Philip Barry-ish (it ought to be, he wrote it) drawing room comedy about Main Line life and times.

AT MUSIC BARN — Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitarist, will be the second attraction in the weekly Folk Music Series at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass., at 4 p. m. Saturday. He will be accompanied by his wife, the Spanish dancer Trianita.

You come away feeling that all the families who have been living on the right side of the track since the invention of the railroad aren't per se decadent; all the Horatio Alger boys aren't necessarily heroes. Some have suspected it already; for them this is a clincher.

We're told (and it was certainly true at "The Chalk Garden") that you'd better sit still and listen; either the acoustics are uncertain or the cast needs a few lessons from Ethel Merman. With both these plays, lines are important; if they were giving something like "Detective Story" or "My Sister Eileen" you might get an inkling of what's going on just visually. (D. H. B.)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 12 1956

2 PROGRAMS REVISED

Tanglewood Concerts July 21 and Aug. 12 List Works

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced revisions yesterday in its Berkshire Festival programs for the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Mass. The concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12.

The revised July 21 program will offer Barber's Adagio for Strings; Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," commissioned for the Boston Symphony's seventy-fifth anniversary last season, and Act I of "Die Walkuere," with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

The Aug. 12 program lists the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony and Act III of "Die Meistersinger," with Margaret Willauer and Messrs. Pease and Da Costa as soloists.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502
JUL 12 1956

ADELE ADDISON returns to Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., as one of the soloists Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

[179]

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390

JUL 11 1956

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 19th season at Tanglewood, Mass. with three concerts this past weekend. Charles Munch, Music Director, was on the podium for the opening Friday evening concert which was devoted entirely to the work of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. The program opened with an even, clearly defined performance of the Symphony in G minor, K. 550. The Boston strings were, as usual, of top calibre in the performance of the work. Soloist of the evening was Benny Goodman, in a performance of the A Major Clarinet, K. 622. Mr. Goodman, known for his renditions of popular music, proved himself a most adequate musician in the classical field as well. He showed a clear understanding of style, excellent technical skill and a large, clear clarinet tone. The program closed with a gay, spritely reading of the "Prague" Symphony, K. 504.

Saturday's program was divided between two conductors: Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The opening "Haffner" Symphony of Mozart was given a masterful performance under the direction of Mr. Munch. Every nuance, every accent, every phrase seemed to have the right inflection. Especially effective was the delicacy of the andante and the finesse displayed in the minuetto. Four members of the Boston Symphony showed their skill and capabilities as soloists in a well-rounded version of Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b. They were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, horn; Gino Cioffi, clarinet, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Although the performance was marked by a certain unevenness between soloists and orchestra, it was warmly received by the audience. The second half of the program was devoted to two contemporary works by Bohuslav Martinu and Henry Cowell. The "Military Mass" of Martinu appeared disjointed and fragmentary with little continuity to make it interesting listening. The only redeeming factor seemed to be the reverent a cappella portion at the very end of the mass which was extremely effective. The composition was sung by the Yale Glee Club with Mac Morgan as bass soloist. Their diction was clear and precise, but because of extreme tonality problems, entrance and attacks seemed uncertain and weak. On the other hand, Henry Cowell's "Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scrolls' " revealed itself as a tightly-woven, carefully thought-out composition. (It was also scored for male voices.) In comparison to the Martinu mass, the Cowell composition was melodic, harmonically interesting, rhythmically diverse, and compact in form. It was by far the more mature of the two 20th century works. Both were capably conducted by Hugh Ross.

Sunday's program was under the baton of the 34-year old conductor, Lukas Foss. He led the orchestra in a light-handed, driving performance of the Haydn Symphony No. 86 in D Major. It was followed by the short, melancholy "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" by Irving Fine. The "Divertimento" by the Siberian composer, Alexei Haieff was a work that did not take heavy concentration to enjoy. It was a light-hearted piece in five sections, each short, to the point, and easy listening. The second portion of the program opened with the rarely performed "The Unanswered Question" by the late Charles Ives. I'm sure that after listening to its dissonant harmonies of Ives, its puzzling trumpet question, and its muted strings, most of the audience believed that the enigma of the music had remained unsolved.

Lukas Foss showed his versatility both as conductor and pianist in the Bach D minor Piano Concerto which closed the program. He displayed impeccible technique, complete understanding of the content of the score and for good measure, maintained a careful balance and blend between the piano and orchestra.

The first weekend at Tanglewood showed that a high standard of performance has been set for this year. For those music lovers in the area, the short trip to this summer music mecca is well worthwhile. You have until Aug. 12 to do so.

—Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

PASSAIC-CLIFTON, N. J.
HERALD-NEWS
Circ. D. 60,613

JUL 12 1956

Henry Janiec Will Direct Charlotte Opera Orchestra

Farmer Passaic Man Turns Down Year's Music Fellowship Abroad to Accept Post

Henry Janiec, a native of Passaic, has accepted the position of music director of the Charlotte Opera Orchestra, in North Carolina.

Henry Janiec

Professor at Converse

Mr. Janiec, an assistant professor in the School of Music at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., has been conductor of the Spartanburg Symphony Orchestra since 1952.

In accepting the appointment, Mr. Janiec passed up a year's study-work fellowship in opera houses in Germany and France. He had been selected for the fellowship by Boris Goldovsky, Tanglewood (Mass.) opera director and radio commentator for the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts.

During this summer, Mr. Janiec will direct opera in Pittsburgh with Mr. Goldovsky. He also will attend the convention of the American Symphony League in Rhode Island.

Conducts Spartanburg Festival

Mr. Janiec, 26 years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec, 186 Columbia Avenue. He is conductor of the Spartanburg Music Festival and music director of the Converse College Opera Workshop, the Spartanburg Little Theater, and the Spartanburg High School Orchestra.

He received bachelor and master's degrees in music education at Oberlin Conservatory of Music, and later studied with Maurice Kessler, Jean Paul Morel and Leonard Bernstein. He studied locally with George Keller, of Paterson.

At Tanglewood Last Summer

Last summer Mr. Janiec assisted Mr. Bernstein in directing the premiere performance of "The Rope" at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. It was his second year as assistant director at the festival.

In November, the young conductor directed the massed choruses at the fifth Industrial Choir Festival in Passaic.

Highlights in his career include an engagement as guest conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra in 1953 and the direction of music for a movie short.

Mr. Janiec is the brother of Edward Janiec, director of the Chopin Singing Society, Passaic.

Circ. D. 372,[illegible]

JUL 12 1956

Camp Moves to Conn.; Expands Activities Program

Camp Isabella Freedman, formerly Camp Lehman, a co-ed camp for unmarried young adults, is now located in Falls Village, Conn.

The move from Big Indian, N. Y., has enhanced the camp program, which will now include trips to the Berkshire Music Festival, the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, the Sharon Playhouse and lovely New England trails for biking and hiking. The camp site consists of 450 acres including a mountain and two lakes with boats.

While offering all the activities that young men and women of 18 to 28 seek for a satisfying vacation, Camp Isabella Freedman is non-profit.

For a registration appointment, write Camp Isabella Freedman, 1395 Lexington Av., New York 28.

COLUMBUS, OHIO
CITIZEN
Circ. D. 91,273 [illegible] 104,943

JUL 12 1956

Bostonians Go Abroad

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., July 12.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

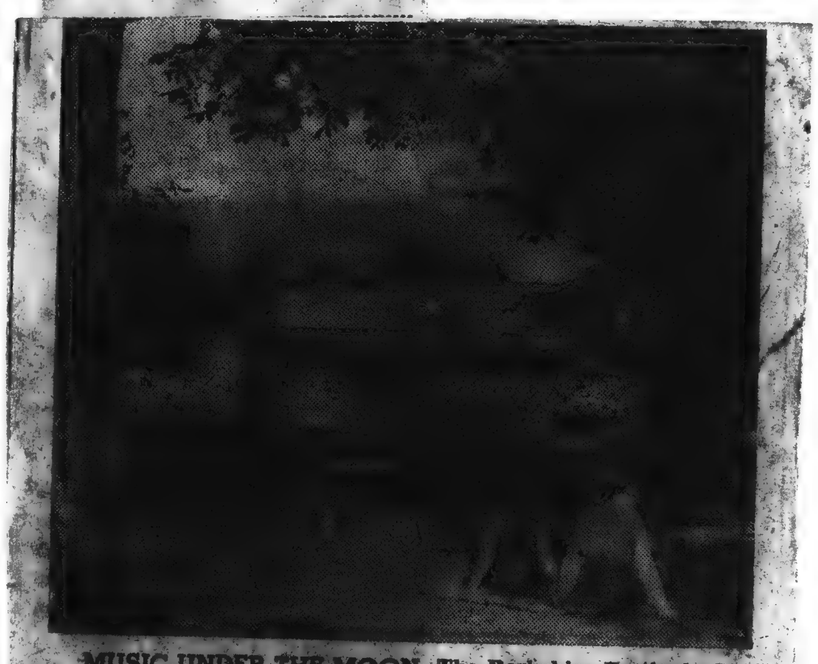
JUL 12 1956

At Berkshire Festival

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her performance of last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 12 1956



MUSIC UNDER THE MOON: The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates on Friday evening, July 20, the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteaux will share the conductor's podium.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390

JUL 11 1956

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 19th season at Tanglewood, Mass. with three concerts this past weekend. Charles Munch, Music Director, was on the podium for the opening Friday evening concert which was devoted entirely to the work of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. The program opened with an even, clearly defined performance of the Symphony in G minor, K. 550. The Boston strings were, as usual, of top calibre in the performance of the work. Soloist of the evening was Benny Goodman, in a performance of the A Major Clarinet, K. 622. Mr. Goodman, known for his renditions of popular music, proved himself a most adequate musician in the classical field as well. He showed a clear understanding of style, excellent technical skill and a large, clear clarinet tone. The program closed with a gay, spritely reading of the "Prague" Symphony, K. 504.

Saturday's program was divided between two conductors: Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The opening "Haffner" Symphony of Mozart was given a masterful performance under the direction of Mr. Munch. Every nuance, every accent, every phrase seemed to have the right inflection. Especially effective was the delicacy of the andante and the finesse displayed in the minuetto. Four members of the Boston Symphony showed their skill and capabilities as soloists in a well-rounded version of Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b. They were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, horn; Gino Cioffi, clarinet, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Although the performance was marked by a certain unevenness between soloists and orchestra, it was warmly received by the audience. The second half of the program was devoted to two contemporary works by Bohuslav Martinu and Henry Cowell. The "Military Mass" of Martinu appeared disjointed and fragmentary with little continuity to make it interesting listening. The only redeeming factor seemed to be the reverent a cappella portion at the very end of the mass which was extremely effective. The composition was sung by the Yale Glee Club with Mac Morgan as bass soloist. Their diction was clear and precise, but because of extreme tonality problems, entrance and attacks seemed uncertain and weak. On the other hand, Henry Cowell's "Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scrolls' " revealed itself as a tightly-woven, carefully thought-out composition. (It was also scored for male voices.) In comparison to the Martinu mass, the Cowell composition was melodic, harmonically interesting, rhythmically diverse, and compact in form. It was by far the more mature of the two 20th century works. Both were capably conducted by Hugh Ross.

Sunday's program was under the baton of the 34-year old conductor, Lukas Foss. He led the orchestra in a light-handed, driving performance of the Haydn Symphony No. 86 in D Major. It was followed by the short, melancholy "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" by Irving Fine. The "Divertimento" by the Siberian composer, Alexei Haieff was a work that did not take heavy concentration to enjoy. It was a light-hearted piece in five sections, each short, to the point, and easy listening. The second portion of the program opened with the rarely performed "The Unanswered Question" by the late Charles Ives. I'm sure that after listening to its dissonant harmonies of Ives, its puzzling trumpet question, and its muted strings, most of the audience believed that the enigma of the music had remained unsolved.

Lukas Foss showed his versatility both as conductor and pianist in the Bach D minor Piano Concerto which closed the program. He displayed impeccible technique, complete understanding of the content of the score and for good measure, maintained a careful balance and blend between the piano and orchestra.

The first weekend at Tanglewood showed that a high standard of performance has been set for this year. For those music lovers in the area, the short trip to this summer music mecca is well worthwhile. You have until Aug. 12 to do so.

—Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

PASSAIC-CLIFTON, N. J.
HERALD-NEWS
Circ. D. 60,613

JUL 12 1956

Henry Janiec Will Direct Charlotte Opera Orchestra

Former Passaic Man Turns Down Year's Music Fellowship Abroad to Accept Post

Henry Janiec, a native of Passaic, has accepted the position of music director of the Charlotte Opera Orchestra, in North Carolina.

Henry Janiec

Professor at Converse

Mr. Janiec, an assistant professor in the School of Music at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., has been conductor of the Spartanburg Symphony Orchestra since 1952.

In accepting the appointment, Mr. Janiec passed up a year's study-work fellowship in opera houses in Germany and France. He had been selected for the fellowship by Boris Goldovsky, Tanglewood (Mass.) opera director and radio commentator for the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts.

During this summer, Mr. Janiec will direct opera in Pittsburgh with Mr. Goldovsky. He also will attend the convention of the American Symphony League in Rhode Island.

Conducts Spartanburg Festival

Mr. Janiec, 26 years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec, 186 Columbia Avenue. He is conductor of the Spartanburg Music Festival and music director of the Converse College Opera Workshop, the Spartanburg Little Theater, and the Spartanburg High School Orchestra.

He received bachelor and master's degrees in music education at Oberlin Conservatory of Music, and later studied with Maurice Kessler, Jean Paul Morel and Leonard Bernstein. He studied locally with George Keller, of Paterson.

At Tanglewood Last Summer

Last summer Mr. Janiec assisted Mr. Bernstein in directing the premiere performance of "The Rope" at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. It was his second year as assistant director at the festival.

In November, the young conductor directed the massed choruses at the fifth Industrial Choir Festival in Passaic.

Highlights in his career include an engagement as guest conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra in 1953 and the direction of music for a movie short.

Mr. Janiec is the brother of Edward Janiec, director of the Chopin Singing Society, Passaic.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,593 - S. 247,755

JUL 12 1956

Camp Moves to Conn.; Expands Activities Program

Camp Isabella Freedman, formerly Camp Lehman, a co-ed camp for unmarried young adults, is now located in Falls Village, Conn.

The move from Big Indian, N. Y., has enhanced the camp program, which will now include trips to the Berkshire Music Festival, Jacobs Pillow Dance Festival, the Sharon Playhouse and lovely New England trails for biking and hiking. The camp site consists of 450 acres including a mountain and two lakes with boats.

While offering all the activities that young men and women of 18 to 28 seek for a satisfying vacation, Camp Isabella Freedman is non-profit.

For a registration appointment, Write Camp Isabella Freedman, 1395 Lexington Av., New York 28.

COLUMBUS, OHIO
CITIZEN
Circ. D. 91,273 - S. 104,943

JUL 12 1956

Bostonians Go Abroad

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., July 12.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

JUL 12 1956

At Berkshire Festival

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 12 1956

MUSIC UNDER THE MOON: The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates on Friday evening, July 20, the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteaux will share the conductor's podium.

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415
JUL 12 1956

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Goes Into Second Week Of Concerts

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Hayden, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will present Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14). Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 . S. 528,253
JUL 13 1956

5 Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will present scenes from five operas at 8:30 p. m. Monday, July 30, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The works to be represented are Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Falstaff" and "Aida." Boris Goldovsky will double as conductor and pianist. The department will also offer excerpts from fourteen Mozart operas Tuesday night, July 24, weekly afternoon recitals of opera scenes, beginning tomorrow; a full-scale production of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, and a special production for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Information about tickets is available from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center office at Tanglewood (telephone Lenox 600.)

In the second week end of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood tonight Mr. Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians in Mozart piano concertos.

PITTSFIELD, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390
JUL 12 1956

Changes Made At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act 1 of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act, III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scenes), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguertie Willauer in solo roles.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500
JUL 12 1956

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her hit performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 . S. 247,755
JUL 12 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch to Lead Bach at Tanglewood

With the Berkshire Festival now in its second week, concerts at Tanglewood over the week-end will be devoted exclusively to Mozart and Bach and will be held in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall which seats approximately 1,200. The four weeks of events in the 6,000-seat Music Shed begins Jul. 20.

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, the ensemble which plays the concerts, will conduct two all-Bach concerts Saturday night and Sunday at 2:30. Saturday's program will include the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major; the Violin Concerto in E Major with William Kroll as soloist, and the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and strings with the Bostonian's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. Sunday's event will be the "Passion According to St. John" with these soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, bassos. Hugh Ross has trained the chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Mozart Concertos Tomorrow

Tomorrow's concert finds three Mozart Concertos scheduled, each for a different combination. The well-known duo pianists, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz, will perform the Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos, K. 365. These two, together with Boris Goldovsky, conductor-pianist, will perform the Concerto in F Major for three pianos, K. 242. Goldovsky will lead this, as well, and also will be soloist in the Concerto in A Major for Piano, K. 488. Luboshutz will conduct this latter work, while Goldovsky will be on the podium for the two-piano concerto.

All-Wagner Changed

The all-Wagner program, which Munch had originally announced for July 21, has been changed within the last few days to only half Wagner. The major work on the initial portion will be Martinu's, "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the Music Critics Circle of New York Award for 1955 as the outstanding new orchestral work performed during the year. Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" is the other substitution.

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano; Albert De Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, will be the soloists in the concert version of Wagner's "Die Walkuere," which completes the program.

For further information concerning the Festival, which continues through Aug. 12, call Lenox 600 or write the Festival at Lenox, Mass.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500
JUL 12 1956

Bach, Mozart Program at Tanglewood Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises three concerts of chamber music by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evening, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Piere Luboshutz.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening, July 14.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon, July 15, will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center.

[181]

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

JUL 12 1956

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Goes Into Second Week Of Concerts

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Hayden, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Hripa, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theare, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Perre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14). Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 13 1956

5 Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will present scenes from five operas at 8:30 p. m. Monday, July 30, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The works to be represented are Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Falstaff" and "Aida." Boris Goldovsky will double as conductor and pianist. The department will also offer excerpts from fourteen Mozart operas Tuesday night, July 24; weekly afternoon recitals of opera scenes, beginning tomorrow; a full-scale production of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, and a special production for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Information about tickets is available from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center office at Tanglewood (telephone, Lenox 600.)

In the second week end of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood tonight Mr. Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians in Mozart piano concertos.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390

JUL 12 1956

Changes Made At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Mumurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act 1 of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act. III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final sceen), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguertie Willauer in solo roles.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 12 1956

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her hit performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B. minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755

JUL 12 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch to Lead Bach at Tanglewood

With the Berkshire Festival now in its second week, concerts at Tanglewood over the week-end will be devoted exclusively to Mozart and Bach and will be held in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall which seats approximately 1,200. The four weeks of events in the 6,000-seat Music Shed begins July 20.

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, the ensemble which plays the events, will conduct two all-Bach concerts Saturday night and Sunday at 2:30. Saturday's program will include the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major; the Violin Concerto in E Major with William Kroll as soloist, and the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and strings with the Bostonian's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. Sunday's event will be the "Passion According to St. John" with these soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, bassos. Hugh Ross has trained the chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Mozart Concertos Tomorrow

Tomorrow's concert finds three Mozart Concertos scheduled, each for a different combination. The well-known duo pianists, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz, will perform the Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos, K. 365. These two, together with Boris Goldovsky, conductor-pianist, will perform the Concerto in F Major for three pianos, K. 242. Goldovsky will lead this, as well, and also will be soloist in the Concerto in A Major for Piano, K. 488. Luboshutz will conduct this latter work, while Goldovsky will be on the podium for the two-piano concerto.

All-Wagner Changed

The all-Wagner program, which Munch had originally announced for July 21, has been changed within the last few days to only half Wagner. The major work on the initial portion will be Martinu's, "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the Music Critics Circle of New York Award for 1955 as the outstanding new orchestral work performed during the year. Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" is the other substitution.

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, will be the soloists in the concert version of Wagner's "Die Walkuere," which completes the program.

For further information concerning the Festival, which continues through Aug. 12, call Lenox 600 or write the Festival at Lenox, Mass.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 12 1956

Bach, Mozart Program at Tanglewood Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises three concerts of chamber music by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evening, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Piere Luboshutz.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening, July 14.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon, July 15 will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center.

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673
JUL 12 1956

Boston Symphony Will Open Music Shed Series At Tanglewood on July 20

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western

Margaret Harshaw

Massachusetts to join the 36 principles who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this, its 75th Anniversary season, from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 18-22) comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening (July 18), in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch (July 20); Dr. Munch conducting an all Wagner program, featuring the first act of "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease (July 21); and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Pierre Monteux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951 (Sunday afternoon, July 22).

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 21), for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,152 - S. 116,397
JUL 13 1956

Tanglewood Features Family of Pianists

Three pianists of the same family are featured at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 P. M. (July 13) as the second of two weekends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Scheduled for performance at tonight's concert are Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos with duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff as soloists, along with thier nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Tonight's Mozart concert will begin with three movements from the "Post-horn" Serenade, followed by the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488, and the Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct all except the A Major Concerto, for which he and his uncle, Pierre Luboshutz, will exchange places—the former playing the solo piano part, the latter conducting.

Saturday night's concert at 8:30 P. M. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the first chair men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Sunday afternoon's concert is devoted entirely to "The Passion According to St. John," by Bach, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses, as soloists.

All reserved seats for tonight's concert have been sold, but $2.00 general admission tickets will be on sale all day today at the Tanglewood box office, as well as tickets for all succeeding concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival. Telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox (Mass.) 600. In case of rain the progress will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the overflow lawn audience.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,619
JUL 13 1956

Family Affair Tonight at Tanglewood; Luboshutz, Nemenoff and Nephew to Appear

Three pianists of the same family are featured at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 as the second of two weekends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra gets under way. Scheduled for performance at tonight's concert are Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos with duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Tonight's Mozart concert will begin with three movements—the March, Andantino and Finale—from the "Posthorn" Serenade, and then will come the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488; and the Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct all except the A Major Concerto, for which he and his uncle, Pierre Luboshutz, will exchange places—the former playing the solo piano part, the latter conducting.

Pierre Luboshutz is a Russian by birth and a graduate of the Conservatory of Moscow. He made his debut there as soloist at the Koussevitzky concerts. Genia Nemenoff, his wife, was born in Paris of Russian parents and studied at the Paris Conservatoire under Isidor Philipp. The two artists began playing music for two pianos for the entertainment of their friends. From this association their joint public concerts developed. They last appeared at Tanglewood during the course of the Berkshire Festival of 1950.

Boris Goldovsky, born in Moscow in 1908, is the son of violinist Lea Luboshutz, the sister of Pierre Luboshutz. At the time of the Russian Revolution in 1917 he was taken by his family to Germany, where he studied with Artur Schnabel. He also studied in Budapest with such masters as Leo Weiner and Ernst Dohnanyi. He came to this country in 1930, studied conducting with Fritz Reiner at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and later became his assistant. He went to Cleveland as assistant to Artur Rodzinski, then conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra, and directed the Opera Department at the Cleveland Institute of Music. He has been on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center since its inception in 1940, and in 1946 founded the New England Opera Theatre which has made three consecutive national tours under his direction.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.
RECORDER
Circ. D. 13,295
JUL 14 1956

Sings at Tanglewood

Albert DaCosta

Metropolitan Tenor Albert DaCosta of Amsterdam will be one of the featured artists at this season Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., it has been announced.

Appearing as guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Conductor Charles Munch, DaCosta will sing selections from "Die Waulkere" at the evening performance at Tanglewood Saturday, July 21 and on a return engagement Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, will recreate his role in the last act of "Die Meistersinger".

Between his studies in New York in preparation for the fall season at the Metropolitan Opera, DaCosta is making a number of concert appearances and will go on a tour in the Middle West in August.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 14 1956

Music: Mozart Concert

Duo-Pianists Are Heard at Tanglewood —Joined by Nephew as Conductor

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 13—Despite chill, damp weather tonight, the sixth program of the Berkshire Music Festival attracted an audience of about 2,200 listeners, which is double the seating capacity of the small concert hall for which the event was first scheduled.

Normally overflow listeners sit on the lawn, but not in weather such as tonight's. The difficulty was solved easily enough by moving the performance to the Tanglewood Shed, with more than ample seating capacity for the unexpectedly large audience.

The attraction was an all-Mozart concert, with the duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff playing the Two-Piano Concerto in E flat (K.365), and joining their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, in the Three-Piano Concerto in F (K.242), with Mr. Goldovsky conducting from the piano. Mr. Goldovsky also was soloist in the A major Concerto (K.488), with Mr. Luboshutz conducting.

Mr. Goldovsky thus was the center of interest at tonight's concert, and gave a highly creditable account of himself. As a part-time pianist, so to speak, he directs the New England Opera Company during the winter and stages opera at Tanglewood in the summer. Mr. Goldovsky, however, somehow finds time to keep his fingers in excellent performance condition.

Conducting from the piano is a tour de force ventured by only a few conductor-pianists of our time. To be concerned in addition with two other soloists, interweaving Mozart's tightly wrought music with them as well as keeping the whole performance going, is quite an impressive feat. The experience and assurance gained by Mr. Goldovsky as an opera conductor obviously stood him in good stead tonight.

It was not to be expected that Mr. Goldovsky's playing as a soloist would surpass that of virtuosos who work at their trade full-time. But his playing was accurate and well thought out. The whole program made one marvel at an artist capable of doing so many things so well.

Luboshutz and Nemenoff revealed their usual excellent ensemble and sensitive musicianship in the two-piano concerto. The concert began with a spirited performance of the March, Andantino and Finale from the Serenade in D (K.320).

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

JUL 12 1956

Boston Symphony Will Open Music Shed Series At Tanglewood on July 20

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western

Margaret Harshaw

Massachusetts to join the 36 principles who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this, its 75th Anniversary season, from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 18-22) comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening (July 18), in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch (July 20); Dr. Munch conducting an all Wagner program, featuring the first act of "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease (July 21); and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Pierre Monteux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951 (Sunday afternoon, July 22).

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 21), for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,152 - S. 116,397

JUL 13 1956

Tanglewood Features Family of Pianists

Three pianists of the same family are featured at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 P. M. (July 13) as the second of two weekends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Scheduled for performance at tonight's concert are Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos with duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff as soloists, along with thier nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Tonight's Mozart concert will begin with three movements from the "Posthorn" Serenade, followed by the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488, and the Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct all except the A Major Concerto, for which he and his uncle, Pierre Luboshutz, will exchange places —the former playing the solo piano part, the latter conducting.

Saturday night's concert at 8:30 P. M. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the first chair men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Sunday afternoon's concert is devoted entirely to "The Passion According to St. John," by Bach, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses, as soloists.

All reserved seats for tonight's concert have been sold, but $2.00 general admission tickets will be on sale all day today at the Tanglewood box office, as well as tickets for all succeeding concerts by the Boston Symphtony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival. Telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox (Mass.) 600. In case of rain the progress will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the overflow lawn audience.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,619

JUL 13 1956

Family Affair Tonight at Tanglewood; Luboshutz, Nemenoff and Nephew to Appear

Three pianists of the same family are featured at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 as the second of two weekends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra gets under way. Scheduled for performance at tonight's concert are Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos with duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Tonight's Mozart concert will begin with three movements—the March, Andantino and Finale—from the "Posthorn" Serenade, and then will come the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488; and the Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct all except the A Major Concerto, for which he and his uncle, Pierre Luboshutz, will exchange places —the former playing the solo piano part, the latter conducting.

Pierre Luboshutz is a Russian by birth and a graduate of the Conservatory of Moscow. He made his debut there as soloist at the Koussevitzky concerts. Genia Nemenoff, his wife, was born in Paris of Russian parents and studied at the Paris Conservatoire under Isidor Philipp. The two artists began playing music for two pianos for the entertainment of their friends. From this association their joint public concerts developed. They last appeared at Tanglewood during the course of the Berkshire Festival of 1950.

Boris Goldovsky, born in Moscow in 1908, is the son of violinist Lea Luboshutz, the sister of Pierre Luboshutz. At the time of the Russian Revolution in 1917 he was taken by his family to Germany, where he studied with Artur Schnabel. He also studied in Budapest with such masters as Leo Weiner and Ernst Dohnanyi. He came to this country in 1930, studied conducting with Fritz Reiner at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and later became his assistant. He went to Cleveland as assistant to Artur Rodzinski, then conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra, and directed the Opera Department at the Cleveland Institute of Music. He has been on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center since its inception in 1940, and in 1946 founded the New England Opera Theatre which has made three consecutive national tours under his direction.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.
RECORDER
Circ. D. 13,295

JUL 14 1956

Sings at Tanglewood

Albert DaCosta

Metropolitan Tenor Albert DaCosta of Amsterdam will be one of the featured artists at this season Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., it has been announced.

Appearing as guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Conductor Charles Munch, DaCosta will sing selections from "Die Waulkere" at the evening performance at Tanglewood Saturday, July 21 and on a return engagement Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, will recreate his role in the last act of "Die Meistersinger".

Between his studies in New York in preparation for the fall season at the Metropolitan Opera, DaCosta is making a number of concert appearances and will go on a tour in the Middle West in August.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 14 1956

Music: Mozart Concert

Duo-Pianists Are Heard at Tanglewood —Joined by Nephew as Conductor

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 13—Despite chill, damp weather tonight, the sixth program of the Berkshire Music Festival attracted an audience of about 2,200 listeners, which is double the seating capacity of the small concert hall for which the event was first scheduled.

Normally, overflow listeners sit on the lawn, but not in weather such as tonight's. The difficulty was solved easily enough by moving the performance to the Tanglewood Shed, with more than ample seating capacity for the unexpectedly large audience.

•

The attraction was an all-Mozart concert, with the duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff playing the Two-Piano Concerto in E flat (K.365), and joining their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, in the Three-Piano Concerto in F (K.242), with Mr. Goldovsky conducting from the piano.

Mr. Goldovsky also was soloist in the A major Concerto (K.488), with Mr. Luboshutz conducting.

Mr. Goldovsky thus was the center of interest at tonight's concert, and gave a highly creditable account of himself. As a part-time pianist, so to speak, he directs the New England Opera Company during the winter and stages opera at Tanglewood in the summer. Mr. Goldovsky, however, somehow finds time to keep his fingers in excellent performance condition.

Conducting from the piano is a tour de force ventured by only a few conductor-pianists of our time. To be concerned in addition with two other soloists, interweaving Mozart's tightly wrought music with them as well as keeping the whole performance going, is quite an impressive feat. The experience and assurance gained by Mr. Goldovsky as an opera conductor obviously stood him in good stead tonight.

It was not to be expected that Mr. Goldovsky's playing as a soloist would surpass that of virtuosos who work at their trade full-time. But his playing was accurate and well thought out. The whole program made one marvel at an artist capable of doing so many things so well.

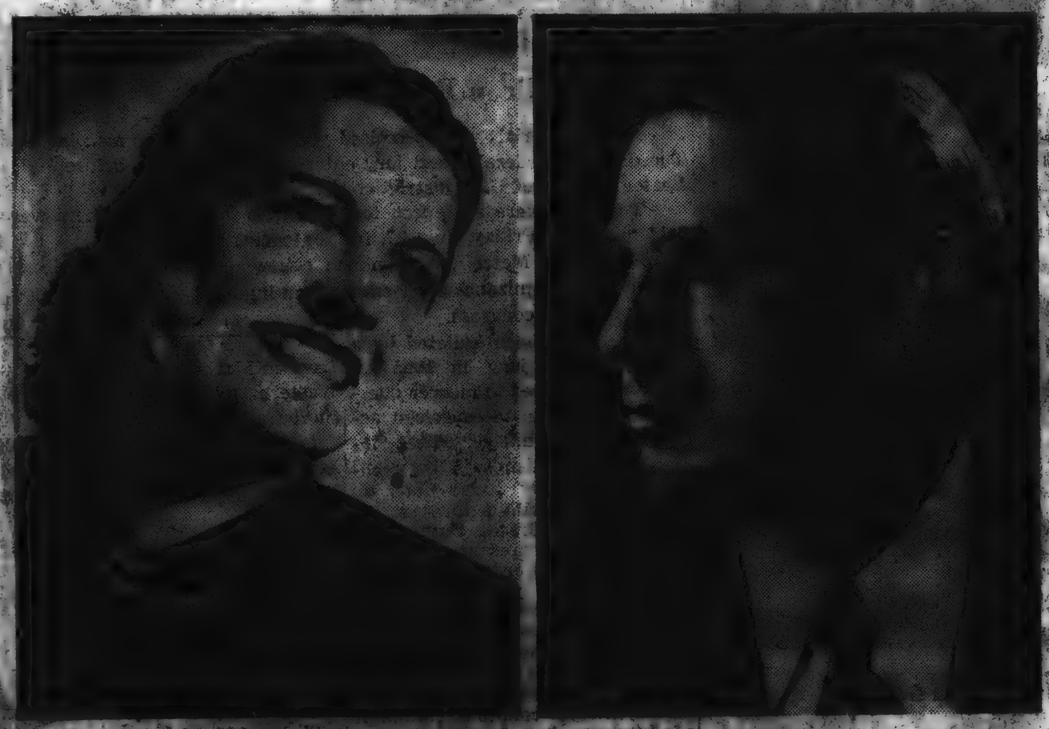
•

Luboshutz and Nemenoff revealed their usual excellent ensemble and sensitive musicianship in the two-piano concerto. The concert began with a spirited performance of the March, Andantino and Finale from the Serenade in D (K. 320).

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD
Circ. D.-88,500
JUL 14 1956

Music, Art and Books

Merab Eberle, Editor



HERVA NELLI, left, and Charles Kullman will sing at the Cincinnati Zoo Opera. The former, one of the Metropolitan's foremost sopranos, returns to summer opera for Verdi's "Aida," July 20 and 22. Mr. Kullman, Metropolitan tenor, will sing Don Jose opposite Rise Stevens' "Carmen."

"Marriage Of Figaro" Headed By Italo Tajo

"Carmen", "Aida" To Be Presented In Cincinnati Zoo Theater

Puccini's spectacular "Turandot" is to be presented in the Cincinnati Zoo theater tonight by the Cincinnati Summer Opera company.

Frances Yend is to sing the name role. Other artists to appear are Ruggero Schileo, Frank Valentino, William Wilderman and Helen Greco.

"Carmen" is to be performed tomorrow evening with Rise Stevens in the name role. Supporting her will be Charles Kullman, Cesare Bardelli and Helen George.

Thursday and Saturday, July 21, Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" is to be presented. Eva Likova will appear as the Countess; Laurel Hurley, as Susanna; Jarmila Novotna, as Cherubino. Italo Tajo, baritone of distinction, will sing the role of Figaro and Salvatore Baccaloni, that of Bartolo. Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, is to direct the Mozart score.

Friday evening and Sunday, July 22, Verdi's "Aida" will be performed with Herva Nelli, Nell Rankin, Cesare Bardelli, William Wilderman and Charles Kullman in leading roles.

"Carmen" is to be conducted by Fausto Cleva and "Aida" by Carlo Moresco. The Cincinnati Opera Ballet headed by Lydia Arlova and Lucien Prideaux, will appear in "Carmen" and "Aida."

Tickets may be purchased in Dayton from Ann Kirk, Charles McLean Bookseller, 11 North Jefferson street.

Cloister Concert

The fourth in the series of Cloister concerts, Dayton Art institute, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Robert Downing, whose baritone voice has gained him a wide following in Dayton, will sing, among other selections, Edwards' "Into the Night" and Charles' "Thank God for a Garden."

Gustave Rabson, classical guitarist, will play "Four Toyes" from Jane Pickering's "Lute Book," Lozy's "Partita in A Minor," "Lagrima" by Tarrego and three brief preludes by Porce.

Mr. Rabson is associate professor of mathematics at Antioch college. Versatile, he has appeared for the Dayton Chamber Music society as pianist, and with the Classic Guitar society as guitarist.

Marjorie Kline, well-known Dayton violinist, heads a trio which is to present "Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn" by Brahms. Lawrence Tagg will play the horn and Veryl Zech, the piano. Mr. Tagg has taught voice at the University of Dayton for three years and Mr. Zech instructs in piano and theory at the university.

Goes To Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly Aug. 12, to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival, near Lenox, Massachusetts.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

An invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, will make the Boston Symphony the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR.

During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts each will be given in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral, Leeds and London.

HERALD-NEWS
W.
JUL 14 1956

The PARADE

BY DEWEY ACKIS

The Shriners' "Talent and Beauty" contest to select the state winner will be held this Friday nite July 13, at Arts High School, High and William Sts, Newark. . . . Lewisohn Stadium, City College, New York, "all jazz" concert is this Saturday nite. Performers will be Louis Armstrong's all-star show with Velma Middleton and Dave Brubeck Quartet . . . It will be the first all-jazz concert in the 39 years of Lewisohn Stadium history . . . On Monday nite July 16, at this stadium, Alexander Smallens will conduct a program of highlights from "Porgy and Bess" with Leontyne Price and Willard Warfield. The first half of the all-Gershwin program will feature the "Rhapsody in Blue" with Earl Wilde as soloist . . . Benny Goodman, his clarinet and the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood-Concert Theatre, Lenox, Mass., last Friday nite July 6, in Lenox, Mass. . . . RCA Victor sent an entire recording crew to Rome, Italy, for a recording date with Lena Horne . . . Ted Lewis' "Is Everybody Happy" opened his 46th year in show business on the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria Monday nite July 2nd . . . Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense, does not scare easily.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 14 1956

BRIEF NOTES

WABC abandoned all but twenty-five minutes of its scheduled nearly two-hour "All Star Country Show" before it even started. Instead, the station substituted the "Bill Brophy Show," a program of the usual services and popular records. It's probably just as well though, 'cause we don't particularly think this here country stuff makes very relaxed Sunday evening listening.

Two fine summer music series are back for the season, we're happy to say. The Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch and various guests is being carried by NBC (Mondays, 8:15 p.m.). Also the Chautauqua Symphony concerts, conducted by Walter Hendl and hosted by Milton Cross, returns this Saturday, July 14th (ABC, 4:05 p.m.).

We rather enjoy "Recollections Live" (NBC, Wednesdays, 11:30 p.m.). Excerpts of great moments in past broadcasting in observance of NBC's 30th anniversary. However, we could take short things. Just snatches, or some of Jolson's vocals. "Easy Aces" with Jolson, Fred Allen, too much is being covered in the hour.

The closer we get to convention time the more we'll be hearing about the political happenings in the various camps. The latest addition is "Listening Post" (ABC, Sundays, 7:30 p.m.). . . . Conventions are again upon us, the season of the quadrennial season during the summer months (NBC, Thursdays, 8:30 p.m.).

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,678
JUL 16 1956

Tanglewood Music Series Begins Friday

LENOX, Mass., July 16—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening the annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed. With Charles Munch as conductor, the program will include Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D Major," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe, Suite No. 2" and music by Debussy and Berlioz.

Saturday night the orchestra, also under Munch's direction, will present the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," as well as Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques."

The program Sunday afternoon, with Pierre Monteux as conductor, will consist of Schubert's "Symphony, No. 7 in C Major," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Rossini's "L'Italiana in Algeri" overture.

A joint recital by the Boston Symphony's brass ensemble, Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Henshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday night. Music by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc and Berezowsky will be played by the ensemble. Miss Henshaw will sing songs by Wagner and Brahms.

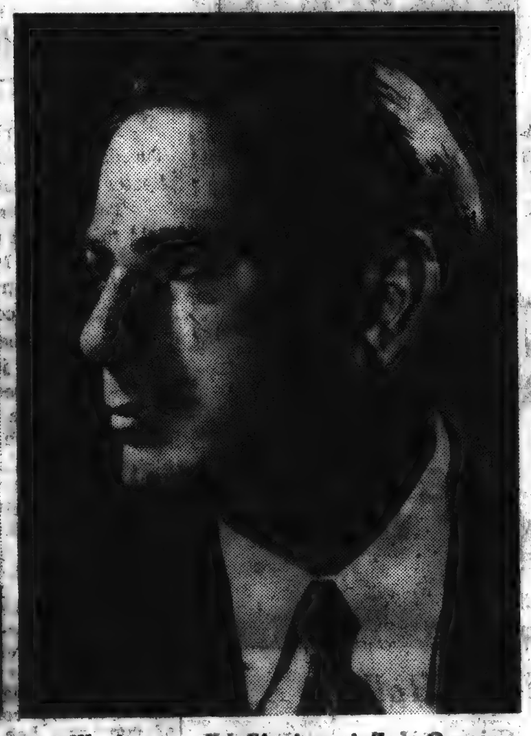
The first of four public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Music Shed.

[183]

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD
Circ. D. 88,500
JUL 14 1956

Music, Art and Books

Merab Eberle, Editor



HERVA NELLI, left, and Charles Kullman will sing at the Cincinnati Zoo Opera. The former, one of the Metropolitan's foremost sopranos, returns to summer opera in Verdi's "Aida," July 20 and 22. Mr. Kullman, Metropolitan tenor, will sing Don Jose opposite Rise Stevens' "Carmen" tomorrow evening.

"Marriage Of Figaro" Headed By Italo Tajo

"Carmen", "Aida" To Be Presented In Cincinnati Zoo Theater

Puccini's spectacular "Turandot" is to be presented in the Cincinnati Zoo theater tonight by the Cincinnati Summer Opera company.

Frances Yend is to sing the name role. Other artists to appear are Ruggero Schileo, Frank Valentino, William Wilderman and Helen Greco.

"Carmen" is to be performed tomorrow evening with Rise Stevens in the name role. Supporting her will be Charles Kullman, Cesare Bardelli and Helen George.

Thursday and Saturday, July 21, Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" is to be presented. Eva Likova will appear as the Countess; Laurel Hurley, as Susanna; Jarmila Novotna, as Cherubino. Italo Tajo, baritone of distinction, will sing the role of Figaro and Salvatore Baccaloni, that of Bartolo. Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, is to direct the Mozart score.

Friday evening and Sunday, July 22, Verdi's "Aida" will be performed with Herva Nelli, Nell Rankin, Cesare Bardelli, William Wilderman and Charles Kullman in leading roles.

"Carmen" is to be conducted by Fausto Cleva and "Aida" by Carlo Moresco. The Cincinnati Opera Ballet headed by Lydia Arlova and Lucien Prideaux, will appear in "Carmen" and "Aida."

Tickets may be purchased in Dayton from Ann Kirk, Charles McLean Bookseller, 11 North Jefferson street.

Cloister Concert

The fourth in the series of Cloister concerts, Dayton Art institute, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Robert Downing, whose baritone voice has gained him a wide following in Dayton, will sing, among other selections, Edwards' "Into the Night" and Charles' "Thank God for a Garden."

Gustave Rabson, classical guitarist, will play "Four Toyes" from Jane Pickering's "Lute Book," Lozy's "Partita in A Minor," "Lagrina" by Tarrego and three brief preludes by Porce.

Mr. Rabson is associate professor of mathematics at Antioch college. Versatile, he has appeared for the Dayton Chamber Music society as pianist, and with the Classic Guitar society as guitarist.

Marjorie Kline, well-known Dayton violinist, heads a trio which is to present "Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn" by Brahms. Lawrence Tagg will play the horn and Veryl Zech, the piano. Mr. Tagg has taught voice at the University of Dayton for three years and Mr. Zech instructs in piano and theory at the university.

Goes To Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly Aug. 12, to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival, near Lenox, Massachusetts.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

An invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, will make the Boston Symphony the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR.

During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts each will be given in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral, Leeds and London.

NEWARK, N. J.
HERALD-NEWS
W
JUL 14 1956

The PARADE
BY DEWEY ACKIS

The Shriners' "Talent and Beauty" contest to select the state winner will be held this Friday nite July 13, at Arts High School, High and William Sts, Newark . . . Lewisohn Stadium, City College, New York, "all jazz" concert is this Saturday nite. Performers will be Louis Armstrong's all-star show with Velma Middleton and Dave Brubeck Quartet . . . It will be the first all-jazz concert in the 39 years of Lewisohn Stadium history . . . On Monday nite July 16, at this stadium, Alexander Smallens will conduct a program of highlights from "Porgy and Bess" with Leontyne Price and William Warfield. The first half of the all-Gershwin program will feature the "Rhapsody in Blue" with Earl Wide as soloist . . . Benny Goodman, his clarinet and the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood-Concert Theatre Hall, last Friday nite July 6, in Lenox, Mass. . . . RCA Victor sent an entire recording crew to Rome, Italy, for a recording date with Lena Horne . . . Ted Lewis "Is Everybody Happy" opened his 46th year in show business on the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria Monday nite July 2nd . . . Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense, does not scare easily.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 14 1956

BRIEF NOTES

WABC abandoned all but twenty-five minutes of its scheduled nearly two-hour "All Star Country Show" before it even started. Instead, the station substituted the "Bill Brophy Show," a program of the usual services and popular records. It's probably just as well though, 'cause we don't particularly think this here country stuff makes very relaxed Sunday evening listening.

Two fine summer music series are back for the season, we're happy to say. The Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch and various guests is being carried by NBC (Mondays, 8:15 p.m.). Also the Chautauqua Symphony concerts, conducted by Walter Hendl and hosted by Milton Cross, returns this Saturday, July 14th (ABC, 4:05 p.m.).

We rather enjoy "Recollections of Thirty" (NBC, Wednesdays, 8:30 p.m.), excerpts of great moments in past broadcasting in observance of NBC's 30th anniversary. However, we would like more than just snatches of some of radio's greats—"Easy Aces," Al Jolson, Fred Allen—too much is being covered in the half-hour.

The closer we get to convention time the more we'll be hearing about the political happenings in the various camps. The latest addition is "Listening Post" (ABC, Sundays, 7:30 p.m.). . . . "Conversation" is again repeating the best of the past season during the summer months (NBC, Thursdays, 8:30 p.m.).

FRANK GIBSON

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,678
JUL 16 1956

Tanglewood Music Series Begins Friday

LENOX, Mass., July 16—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening the annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed. With Charles Munch as conductor, the program will include Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D Major," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe, Suite No. 2" and music by Debussy and Berlioz.

Saturday night the orchestra, also under Munch's direction, will present the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," as well as Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques."

The program Sunday afternoon, with Pierre Monteux as conductor, will consist of Schubert's "Symphony, No. 7 in C Major." Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Rossini's "L'Italiana in Algeri" overture.

A joint recital by the Boston Symphony's brass ensemble, Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Henshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday night. Music by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc and Berezowsky will be played by the ensemble. Miss Henshaw will sing songs by Wagner and Brahms.

The first of four public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Music Shed.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502
JUL 14 1956

Theaters

Off-Broadway Lures Them off the Train

By WILLIAM PEPER.

This summer, for the first time, the off-Broadway theater is an important stop on the itinerary of tourists visiting New York.

In addition to "My Fair Lady" and the Empire State Building, the more adventurous out-of-towners feel they must see one of those cultural plays in the tiny downtown theaters they've been hearing about, so they can go back home truly sophisticated.

Some come out of curiosity, some come for the snob appeal and others think they may see something daring. (After all, most of these theaters are in Greenwich Village.)

"They don't know what to expect," observed Carman Capalbo, co-producer of one of off-Broadway's biggest hits, "The Threepenny Opera," "but they don't really expect to enjoy themselves. They're completely amazed when they do."

Drawn From Richmond.

Last week "The Threepenny Opera" passed something of an economic milestone in that it played host to the first showtrain in off-Broadway history. A group of theater lovers from Richmond, Va., came to town to see some of the big hits and included "The Threepenny Opera" among their selections.

A large percentage of the mail orders for the show comes from out-of-town. Mr. Capalbo has no doubt but that the success of the recording of the theme from "The Threepenny Opera" has a great deal to do with it.

"That song has been kicking around for almost 30 years," he said, "and all of a sudden it becomes a popular hit. It's very strange but we're not complaining."

The whole history of "The Threepenny Opera" has been rather strange.

"Not many people realize that the show, although it has been a big hit all over the world, has never received unanimous rave notices when it opened," Mr. Capalbo said. "And that includes its opening here. But somehow it has always managed to catch on with the public."

This production certainly has caught on. Next Saturday it plays its 350th performance, make it the longest run off-Broadway show. "Summer and Smoke," a Circle in the Square production, previously held the record.

"The other day we received a mail order for New Year's Eve," Mr. Capalbo said. "We're still sold out every night, so a lot of people are turned away. Often the disappointed customer asks us to suggest another show.

"Fortunately, right now there are several other excellent shows downtown, like 'Uncle Vanya,' 'The Iceman Cometh' and 'The Man With the Golden Arm.' We have to give street directions on how to get to the other shows."

Salary: $30 Week.

Most of Mr. Capalbo's time is taken up with finding replacements for his actors who go on to more lucrative things, the standard off-Broadway salary being $30 a week.

Mr. Capalbo and his partner, Stanley Chase, also have some uptown plans. They have leased the Bijou Theater for the coming season and plan to put on a series of plays, including Eugene O'Neill's "A Moon for the Misbegotten," which has never had a New York production.

In addition to the usual out-of-towners the producers also have to contend with the steady patronage of the visiting Hollywood people, hardly ordinary folk.

Marlene Dietrich, who is not really a visitor, has seen the show several times, but she has a special attachment for it. It seems that in 1928 she tried out for the role of Polly in the original production but she was turned down. Lotte Lenya got the part instead.

Miss Lenya subsequently progressed to the juicier role of Jenny, which she also played in New York. Katharine Sergava currently has the part.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,619
JUL 14 1956

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Tanglewood debut in 1955, returns to the Berkshire Festival for two concerts. On Wednesday, 8:30 p. m., Miss Harshaw will sing the Wesendonck Song Cycle of Wagner and a group of Richard Strauss songs, on the same program as a chamber music concert by The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony.

On Saturday, July 21, 8:30 p. m., the soprano will be teamed with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa and bass James Pease in a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure," an all-Wagner program. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
PRESS
Circ. D. 36,400 - S. 26,867
JUL 15 1956

This Week in Music

by William McMahon

BOSTON IN EUROPE

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half week tour of Europe in August and September. Under the baton of Charles Munch, the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the current Berkshire Festival at Lenox on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts will be in Ireland and an additional five at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival. A highlight of the tour is an invitation recently accepted to play in Moscow.

The Boston will be the first American orchestra to play behind the Iron Curtain. A prior invitation to the Philadelphia Orchestra wound up in a lot of union red tape and cancellation.

27 Concerts Abroad

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries under the baton of Charles Munch during its five-and-a-half weeks tour of Europe in August and September. The 106 players will fly to Europe immediately after the close of the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,251,430 - S. 4,008,180
JUL 15 1956

Tanglewood Bill Shifts Into High

The Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., [illegible] in earnest next week-end with all 106 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assembling at Tanglewood after concertizing and teaching in parts elsewhere.

The 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides, for the music to spill out to the lawns to be heard by music-lovers lounging under the trees, will be open for the annual series of 12 week-end concerts beginning Friday.

A feature of the new series will be the first Tanglewood performances for four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, playing its 75th anniversary season. The new works are by Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, a great teacher at the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755
JUL 15 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

All-Mozart Draws 2,200 at Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 13—Three concertos, three performers and three pianos describes quantitatively the order of musical fare here Friday night at the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival.

The delight of the evening, qualitatively can only be measured, however, by those 2,200-plus courageous listeners who braved dampness and rain to attend the all-Mozart program presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the three collaborating artists.

Within the music's limited frame, the program offered considerable variety. Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, the eminent duoapianists, top artists in the genre, participated in two of the concertos. Boris Goldovsky played a solo concerto, was the third pianist for the three-piano concerto, and conducted most of the concert. Luboshutz was on the podium for the Concerto in A Major, K.488, in which Goldovsky was the soloist. The latter conducted the three-piano work from his instrument. He also opened the concert with a buoyant performance of three movements from the charming Serenade in D Major, K. 320 and 320 A.

Nobody could deny that this was a versatile trio and skilled too. True, Miss Nemenoff had no chance to display other gifts than her first-rate art as a member of a team, but she more than compensated in personality and loveliness for her lack of varied opportunity.

Originally scheduled for the small Theater-Concert Hall which seats 1,200, the management decided four hours before the program was to start to hold it instead in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Announcements were sent out over the radio to this effect with the result that over a thousand additional enthusiasts, who would ordinarily have overflowed onto the grass had the weather been good, sat in the shed and enjoyed the music undampened.

The Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra K. 242, benefited from an excellent performance by the trio, particularly enhanced by the silken tone, imaginative coloring and sensitive understandings of Luboshutz and Nemenoff as the most important solo participants. Goldovsky, himself a creditable pianist, though obviously not as dedicated as the former two, was a worthy adjunct to them.

Primarily a conductor, he officiated with mastery whenever he had the opportunity, as also did Luboshutz.

Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff closed the concert with an ingratiating rendition of the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra, K. 365.

Weather permitting, the two all Bach concerts remaining for the week-end will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The four coming weeks of orchestral concerts in the big shed will open Friday, July 20, with the full complement of the 105 strong Boston Symphony, playing under the direction of Charles Munch.

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 3:30.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502

JUL 14 1956

Theaters

Off-Broadway Lures Them off the Train

By WILLIAM PEPER.

This summer, for the first time, the off-Broadway theater is an important stop on the itinerary of tourists visiting New York.

In addition to "My Fair Lady" and the Empire State Building, the more adventurous out-of-towners feel they must see one of those cultural plays in the tiny downtown theaters they've been hearing about, so they can go back home truly sophisticated.

Some come out of curiosity, some come for the snob appeal and others think they may see something daring. (After all, most of these theaters are in Greenwich Village.)

"They don't know what to expect," observed Carman Capalbo, co-producer of one of off-Broadway's biggest hits, "The Threepenny Opera," "but they don't really expect to enjoy themselves. They're completely amazed when they do."

Drawn From Richmond.

Last week "The Threepenny Opera" passed something of an economic milestone in that it played host to the first showtrain in off-Broadway history. A group of theater lovers from Richmond, Va., came to town to see some of the big hits and included "The Threepenny Opera" among their selections.

A large percentage of the mail orders for the show comes from out-of-town. Mr. Capalbo has no doubt but that the success of the recording of the theme from "The Threepenny Opera" has a great deal to do with it.

"That song has been kicking around for almost 30 years," he said, "and all of a sudden it becomes a popular hit. It's very strange but we're not complaining."

The whole history of "The Threepenny Opera" has been rather strange.

"Not many people realize that the show, although it has been a big hit all over the world, has never received unanimous rave notices when it opened," Mr. Capalbo said. "And that includes its opening here. But somehow it has always managed to catch on with the public."

This production certainly has caught on. Next Saturday it plays its 350th performance, make it the longest run off-Broadway show. "Summer and Smoke," a Circle in the Square production, previously held the record.

"The other day we received a mail order for New Year's Eve," Mr. Capalbo said. "We're still sold out every night, so a lot of people are turned away. Often the disappointed customer asks us to suggest another show.

"Fortunately, right now there are several other excellent shows downtown, like 'Uncle Vanya,' 'The Iceman Cometh' and 'The Man With the Golden Arm.' We have to give street directions on how to get to the other shows."

Salary: $30 Week.

Most of Mr. Capalbo's time is taken up with finding replacements for his actors who go on to more lucrative things, the standard off-Broadway salary being $30 a week.

Mr. Capalbo and his partner, Stanley Chase, also have some uptown plans. They have leased the Bijou Theater for the coming season and plan to put on a series of plays, including Eugene O'Neill's "A Moon for the Misbegotton," which has never had a New York production.

In addition to the usual out-of-towners the producers also have to contend with the steady patronage of the visiting Hollywood people, hardly ordinary folk.

Marlene Dietrich, who is not really a visitor, has seen the show several times, but she has a special attachment for it. It seems that in 1928 she tried out for the role of Polly in the original production but she was turned down. Lotte Lenya got the part instead.

Miss Lenya subsequently progressed to the juicier role of Jenny, which she also played in New York. Katharine Sergava currently has the part.

27 Concerts Abroad

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries under the baton of Charles Munch during its five-and-a-half weeks tour of Europe in August and September. The 106 players will fly to Europe immediately after the close of the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,819

JUL 14 1956

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Tanglewood debut in 1955, returns to the Berkshire Festival for two concerts. On Wednesday, 8:30 p. m., Miss Harshaw will sing the Wesendonck Song Cycle of Wagner and a group of Richard Strauss songs, on the same program as a chamber music concert by The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony.

On Saturday, July 21, 8:30 p. m., the soprano will be teamed with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa and bass James Pease in a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure," German all-Wagner program. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
PRESS
Circ. D. 36,600 - S. 26,867

JUL 15 1956

This Week in MUSIC

by William McMahon

BOSTON IN EUROPE

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half week tour of Europe in August and September. Under the baton of Charles Munch, the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the current Berkshire Festival at Lenox on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts will be in Ireland and an additional five at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival. A highlight of the tour is an invitation recently accepted to play in Moscow.

The Boston will be the first American orchestra to play behind the Iron Curtain. A prior invitation to the Philadelphia Orchestra wound up in a lot of union red tape and cancellation.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,251,430 - S. 4,008,180

JUL 15 1956

Tanglewood Bill Shifts Into High

The Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., get going in earnest next week-end with all 106 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assembling at Tanglewood after concertizing and teaching in parts elsewhere.

The 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides for the music to spill out to the lawns to be heard by music-lovers lounging under the trees, will be open for the annual series of 12 week-end concerts beginning Friday.

A feature of the new series will be the first Tanglewood performances for four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, playing its 75th anniversary season. The new works are by Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, a great teacher at the Berkshire Music Center Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755

JUL 15 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

All-Mozart Draws 2,200 at Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 13—Three concertos, three performers and three pianos describes quantitatively the order of musical fare here Friday night at the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival.

The delight of the evening, qualitatively can only be measured, however, by those 2,200-plus courageous listeners who braved dampness and rain to attend the all-Mozart program presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the three collaborating artists.

Within the music's limited frame, the program offered considerable variety. Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, the eminent duoapianists, top artists in the genre, participated in two of the concertos. Boris Goldovsky played a solo concerto, was the third pianist for the three-piano concerto, and conducted most of the concert. Luboshutz was on the podium for the Concerto in A Major, K.488, in which Goldovsky was the soloist. The latter conducted the three-piano work from his instrument. He also opened the concert with a buoyant performance of three movements from the charming Serenade in D Major, K. 320 and 320 A.

Nobody could deny that this was a versatile trio and skilled too. True, Miss Nemenoff had no chance to display other gifts than her first-rate art as a member of a team, but she more than compensated in personality and loveliness for her lack of varied opportunity.

Originally scheduled for the small Theater-Concert Hall which seats 1,200, the management decided four hours before the program was to start to hold it instead in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Announcements were sent out over the radio to this effect with the result that over a thousand additional enthusiasts, who would ordinarily have overflowed onto the grass had the weather been good, sat in the shed and enjoyed the music undampened.

The Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra K. 242, benefited from an excellent performance by the trio, particularly enhanced by the silken tone, imaginative coloring and sensitive understandings of Luboshutz and Nemenoff as the most important solo participants. Goldovsky, himself a creditable pianist, though obviously not as dedicated as the former two, was a worthy adjunct to them.

Primarily a conductor, he officiated with mastery whenever he had the opportunity, as also did Luboshutz.

Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff closed the concert with an ingratiating rendition of the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra, K. 365.

Weather permitting, the two-all Bach concerts remaining for the week-end will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The four coming weeks of orchestral concerts in the big shed will open Friday, July 20, with the full complement of the 105 strong Boston Symphony, playing under the direction of Charles Munch.

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

[184]

1,000 Hear Bach at Lenox

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Lenox, Mass., July 16—The combine of all-Bach and Bach cool weather drew big crowds for Saturday night and yesterday afternoon's concerts at the Berkshire Festival here.

[illegible] was so covered with humanity, on and off blankets that it was like circumnavigating through a maze to get to the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall for the Bach instrumental program Saturday; and the "St. John Passion, yesterday. More than 8,000 people attended the two conducted events, played by the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch.

Saturday's program began with a performance of the Brandenburg Concert No. 2 in F major which turned out to be a warming up for the ensemble and particularly so for the trumpeter saddled with the problem of playing a high range [illegible] of his instrument. Bach must have felt especially adventurous when he wrote the piece for else he was mad at the trumpet player. By the third movement, Roger Voisin, the soloist, had come into his own and came through brilliantly. An admirable performance of the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 2 in E major with William Kroll as soloist followed.

Flute Solo Repeated

It was after the intermission, however, that the biggest excitement arrived. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the ensemble's superb [illegible] first flutist, was the soloist in the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings. She played so brilliantly that she was compelled to repeat the final gay movement in order to satisfy her listeners. Mrs. Dwyer had performed the work last season at the Bach-Mozart concerts with the same result.

After the joyousness of the [illegible] it was inspiring to hear the grandeur of the opening "Overture" to the Suite No. 3 in D major. Munch and ensemble were in top technical form and the conductor was at his best in communicating his wishes to the ensemble. In the famous "Air" there was suavity and smoothness in tonal blend and a breathless verve in the final bourree and gigue.

Saint John Passion

The Saint John Passion, performed by the Festival Chorus [illegible] by Hugh Ross, with [illegible] people sang the long and difficult chorus parts with vitality and intensity of dramatic expression and impressive musicianship. The soloists were all creditable. Adele Addison, soprano, as usual, sang with

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 16 1956

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,402,346 - S. 4,716,807
JUL 22 1956

Free Music

Visitors to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are invited to a free concert of contemporary chamber music tomorrow evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The evening is donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

AT TANGLEWOOD:

2 Bach Concerts Lure Thousands

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 16.—Bach's magnetic power became dramatically obvious with the large crowds that assembled for the two Bach concerts held in the theatre-concert hall this past weekend.

The instrumental concert on Saturday night drew 4,530; the performance of the St. John Passion yesterday afternoon, 3,741.

Since the hall holds only 1,200, the remainder enjoyed the music sitting on the lawn. The weather was ideal.

This was the first time the St. John Passion had been given at Tanglewood. That it was sung in German may have proved most disconcerting for many in the audience who had no text to follow.

The circumstance could not, however, detract too much from a singularly beautiful performance wherein the spirit of the music received such personal communication through the performers.

Fine Approach

The intimacy of the performance derived from Charles Munch's approach to the score. Except where he drove a bit for climax, he fashioned it with such sensitivity that the audience was pulled into the hush and the reverence of his reading. It followed with the utmost absorption.

The evangelist, John McCollum, gave a most distinguished account of the story, in style and in feeling he achieved a rare, devout mood and sang in excellent voice. Mac Morgan gave an intelligent, humble if somewhat self-conscious characterization of Jesus, well-sung throughout.

Adele Addison and Florence Kopleff sang the soprano and contralto arias with beauty of voice, and James Joyce gave more than usual stature to the other bass parts.

The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, showed its fine culture at once, and responded readily to Munch's demands, especially his insistence on singing softly. They conveyed the final pages of the work most persuasively.

Did Splendidly

The Boston Symphony Chamber group and the various instrumental soloists cooperated splendidly.

In the Saturday concert, Munch turned his attention to the second Brandenburg Concerto, the Second Violin Concerto with William Kross as soloist, the Suite No. 2 with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as the flute solist, and finally the Suite No. 3.

It was a generous, rich segment of Bach which evidently appealed to a great many people.

The Friday concert was devoted to Mozart. It repeated the program given at Lewisohn stadium a year ago (almost as a preview of the Mozart anniversary) with Pierre Luboshutz, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky. Because of rain it was given in the music shed in order to accommodate the 2,208 people present.

This Friday the Berkshire festival moves into the shed permanently with the Boston Symphony playing full strength.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 104,579
JUL 18 1956

Short Subjects and Encores

"EARP" OVERSEAS — Hugh (Wyatt Earp) O'Brian is contemplating a movie in which he would portray a cowboy who tours Russia.

BUSY ISLAND — "Escapade in Japan," "The Japanese Eye" and "Joe Butterfly" are three new pictures scheduled to be made in and near Tokyo in the near future, "Teahouse of the August Moon," with Marlon Brando, recently completed its shooting schedule in Japan.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL BROADCASTS: Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Mozart this Monday, 8:15 p.m. when NBC starts its weekly series of Berkshire Music Festival broadcasts from Tanglewood, Mass.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 21 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 20, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 21, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 22, at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 25, at 8:30: A program of chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio. . . . ¶ Friday, July 27, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 28, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 29, at 2:30: Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony, with Ruth Posselt, violin. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 12.)

MONDAY

1:30—(4) All About Women (premiere).

2:00—(4) All About Men (premiere).

7:30—(7) Bold Journey: Adventure films (premiere).

8:00—(4) Ernie Kovacs Show: Edie Adams, Henry Lascoe. (7) Jerry Mack Show (time change). (13) Report From Rutgers: John Cahn.

9:00—(4) Medics—A study of sterility.

9:30—(2) Vic Damone Show: Roberta Sherwood, Bambi Linn, Rod Alexander. (4) Montgomery Summer Theater: "Day of Grace," by Doris Folliott. A fantasy about a man who longs for money and is brought to a realization of truer values. Charles Drake, Mary K. Wells.

10:00—(2) Studio One Summer Theater: "Emmaline," by Richard Deroy. A comedy about the search for the unknown author of a racy novel. Deidre Owens, Alexander Scourby, Jan Ferrand, Lawrence Hugo.

TV highlights for the whole week appear on one clip-out page in our Week-End Magazine.

RADIO

4:15—WRCA, Juvenile D[illegible] "Children In Trouble."

8:15—WRCA, Berkshi[illegible] Boston Symphony Orch. Bach's Piano Concerto in D [illegible] Foss, conductor.

8:30—WABC, Concert, Thomas L. Thomas, Howard Barlow conductor. WCBS, Godfrey Talent Scouts.

9:00—WRCA, Concert, Brian Sullivan, Don Voorhees' Orch.

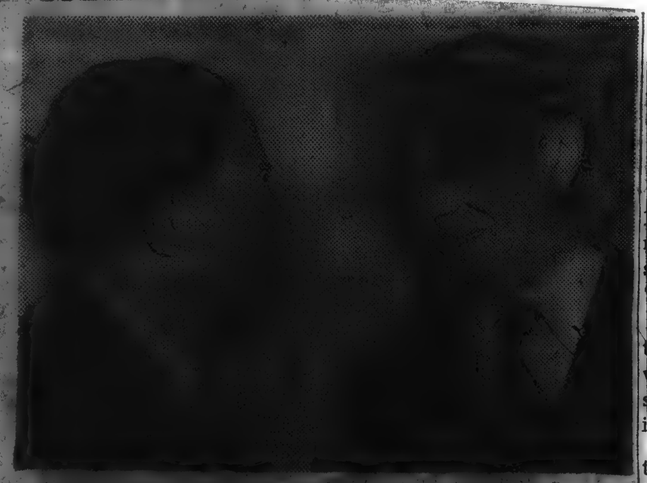
9:30—WABC, "Our Civil Rights." [illegible] Tasts In Music. Howard Hanson, conductor. WCBS, "Country Ballroom."

10:35—WABC, Tex and Jinx Show, Ed and Pegeen Fitzgerald.

11:10—WCBS, "Jazz in N. Y.," George Burns.

12:00—WRCA, Ray Block Show.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 17 1956



LEAD BOSTON SYMPHONY. Pierre Monteux, left, veteran orchestral and opera conductor, and Dr. Charles Munch, Boston Symphony conductor and Berkshire Festival musical director, in "Tanglewood." Monteux and Dr. Munch will conduct both in "Tanglewood" and on [illegible] forthcoming European tour of the orchestra.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 21 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 20, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 21, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 22, at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 25, at 8:30: A program of chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio. . . . ¶ Friday, July 27, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 28, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 29, at 2:30: Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony, with Ruth Posselt, violin. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 12.)

[195]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755
JUL 16 1956

8,000 Hear Bach at Lenox

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Lenox, Mass., July 16—The combine of all-Bach and near cool weather drew big crowds for Saturday night and yesterday afternoon's concerts at the Berkshire Festival here.

Tanglewood's lawn was so covered with humanity, on and off blankets that it was like circulating throngh a maze to get to the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall for the Bach instrumental program Saturday; and the "St. John Passion, yesterday. More than 8,000 people attended the two conducted events, played by the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch.

Saturday's program began with a performance of the Brandenburg Concert No. 2 in F Major which turned out to be a warming up for the ensemble and particularly so for the trumpeter saddled with the problem of playing a high range sample of his instrument. Bach must have felt especially adventurous when he wrote this piece or else he was mad at his trumpet player. By the third movement, Roger Voisin, the soloist, had come into his own and came through brilliantly. An admirable performance of the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 2 in E Major with William Kroll as soloist followed.

Flue Solo Repeated

It was after the intermission, however, that the biggest excitement arrived. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the ensemble's superb distaff first flutist, was the soloist in the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings. She played so brilliantly that she was compelled to repeat the final gay movement in order to satisfy her listeners. Mrs. Dwyer had performed the work last season at these Bach-Mozart concerts with the same result.

After the joyousness of the suite it was inspiring to hear the grandeur of the opening "Overture" to the Suite No. 3 in D Major. Munch and ensemble were in top technical form and the conductor was at his best in communicating his wishes to the ensemble. In the famous "Air" there was suavity and smoothness in tonal blend and a breathtaking verve in the final bourree and gigue.

St. John Passion

Yesterday's "St. John Passion" was particularly distinguished by the work of the Festival Chorus which had been trained by Hugh Ross. These young people sang the chorales and difficult choruses with vitality and intensity of emotional expression and impressive musicianship. The soloists were all creditable. Adele Addison, soprano, as usual, sang with

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,402,346 - S. 4,716,807
JUL 22 1956

Free Music

Visitors to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are invited to a free concert of contemporary chamber music tomorrow evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The evening is donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, of Chicago.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 16 1956

AT TANGLEWOOD:

2 Bach Concerts Lure Thousands

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 16.—Bach's magnetic power became dramatically obvious with the large crowds that assembled for the two Bach concerts held in the theatre-concert hall this past weekend.

The instrumental concert on Saturday night drew 4,530; the performance of the St. John Passion yesterday afternoon, 3,741.

Since the hall holds only 1,200, the remainder enjoyed the music sitting on the lawn. The weather was ideal.

This was the first time the St. John Passion had been given at Tanglewood. That it was sung in German may have proved most disconcerting for many in the audience who had no text to follow.

The circumstance could not, however, detract too much from a singularly beautiful performance wherein the spirit of the music received such personal communication through the performers.

Fine Approach

The intimacy of the performance derived from Charles Munch's approach to the score. Except where he drove a bit for contrast, he fashioned it with such sensitivity that the audience was pulled into the humility and the reverence of his feeling. It followed with the utmost absorption.

As the evangelist, John McCollum gave a most distinguished account of the story, in style and in feeling he achieved a rare, devout mood and sang in excellent voice. Mac Morgan gave an intelligent, humble if somewhat self-conscious characterization of Jesus, well-sung throughout.

Adele Addison and Florence Kopleff sang the soprano and contralto arias with beauty of voice, and James Joyce gave more than usual stature to the other bass parts.

The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, showed its fine calibre at once, and responded readily to Munch's demands, especially his insistence on singing softly. They conveyed the final pages of the work most persuasively.

Did Splendidly

The Boston Symphony Chamber group and the various instrumental soloists cooperated splendidly.

In the Saturday concert, Munch turned his attention to the second Brandenburg Concerto, the Second Violin Concerto with William Kross as soloist, the Suite No. 2 with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as the flute solist, and finally the Suite No. 3.

It was a generous, rich segment of Bach which evidently appealed to a great many people.

The Friday concert was devoted to Mozart. It repeated the program given at Lewisohn stadium a year ago (almost as a preview of the Mozart anniversary) with Pierre Luboshutz, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky. Because of rain it was given in the music shed in order to accommodate the 2,208 people present.

This Friday the Berkshire festival moves into the shed permanently with the Boston Symphony playing full strength.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 104,579
JUL 18 1956

Short Subjects and Encores

'EARP' OVERSEAS — Hugh (Wyatt Earp) O'Brian is contemplating a movie in which he would portray a cowboy who tours Russia.

BUSY ISLAND — "Escapade in Japan," "The Japanese Eye" and "Joe Butterfly" are three new pictures scheduled to be made in and near Tokyo in the near future. "Teahouse of the August Moon," with Marlon Brando, recently completed its shooting schedule in Japan.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL BROADCASTS: Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Mozart this Monday, 8:15 p.m. when NBC starts its weekly series of Berkshire Music Festival broadcasts from Tanglewood, Mass.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 21 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 20, at 8:30: Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, soloists. . . . Saturday, July 21, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James . . . Sunday, July 22, at 2:30: . . . conducting the Boston Symphony, soloists. . . . Wednesday, July 25, program of chamber music by the . . . Trio. . . . Friday, July 27, at . . . Munch conducting the Boston . . . soloists. . . . Saturday, July . . . harles Munch conducting the . . . with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . July 29, at 2:30: Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony, with . . . Burgin. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.) Sunday, Aug. 12:

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755
JUL 16 1956

HIGHLIGHTS

MONDAY

1:30—(4) All About Women (premiere).

2:00—(4) All About Men (premiere).

7:30—(7) Bold Journey: Adventure films (premiere).

8:00—(4) Ernie Kovacs Show: Edie Adams, Henry Lascoe. (7) Dotty Mack Show (time change). (13) Report From Rutgers: John Brown.

9:00—(4) Medic: A study of sterility.

9:30—(2) Vic Damone Show: Roberta Sherwood, Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander. (4) Montgomery Summer Theater: "Day of Grace," by Doria Folliott. A fantasy about a man who longs for money and is brought to a realization of truer values. Charles Drake, Mary K. Wells.

10:00—(2) Studio One Summer Theater: "Emmaline," by Richard Deroy. A comedy about the search for the unknown author of a racy novel. Deidre Owens, Alexander Scourby, Jan Ferrand, Lawrence Hugo.

TV highlights for the whole week appear on one clip-out page in our Week-End Magazine.

RADIO

4:15—WRCA, Juvenile Delinquency: "Children In Trouble."

8:15—WRCA, Berkshire Festival Concert: Boston Symphony Orch. Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Lukas Foss, conductor.

5:30—WABC, Concert, Thomas L. Thomas, Howard Barlow Orch. WCBS, Godfrey Talent Scouts.

9:00—WRCA, Concert, Brian Sullivan, Don Voorhees' Orch.

9:30—WMCA, "Our Civil Rights." WRCA, Contrasts In Music, Howard Hanson, conductor. WCBS, "Capitol Cloakroom."

10:35—WRCA, Tex and Jinx Show, Ed and Pegeen Fitzgerald.

11:10—WCBS, "This Is N. Y.," George Burns.

12:00—WMCA, Barry Gray Show.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 17 1956

LEAD BOSTON SYMPHONY. Pierre Monteux, left, veteran orchestral and opera conductor, and Dr. Charles Munch, Boston Symphony conductor and Berkshire Festival musical director, in "Tanglewood." Monteux and Dr. Munch will conduct both in "Tanglewood" and on the forthcoming European tour of the orchestra.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 21 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

[185]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 19 1956

TALKING IT OVER

35 California Teachers Will Be Guests in Barnell Home July 27

By Emma Van Wormer

Thirty-five teachers in elementary schools in Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, Calif., are taking a 47-day cross continent tour, a credit history course, visiting historical, cultural and industrial sites in 22 states. They are expected in Syracuse July 27.

Mrs. Barnell

Miss Barnell

A picnic has been arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Barnell, 547 Allen St., on the grounds adjoining their home for the visitors. The group includes Mr. and Mrs. Barnell's daughter, Miss Shirley J. Barnell, who has taught in Glendale, Calif., for two years. Miss Barnell, who also has taught in Japan, will resume teaching in the fall in Los Angeles. She received her master's degree in Syracuse University and now is working for her doctor's degree.

The trip was arranged by Prof. John F. Knipschild, educational superintendent of the Southern California Conference of Adventists, approved and sponsored by the Conference Committee of Adventists. The entire trip is being paid for with salaries, as teachers, continuing throughout the summer.

A chartered bus left Los Angeles June 24, the first stop being Boulder, Nev. Hoover Dam was visited, also Los Alamos, the atomic center; Carlsbad Cavern, King Ranch in Texas, New Orleans. Places in the southeast: Bok Memorial, Cypress Gardens, Silver Springs, Stephen Foster Memorial, St. Augustine, and from Florida to Charleston, S. C., Washington, D. C., Annapolis, Md., Gettysburg, Philadelphia, New York City. New England centers include Concord and Lexington, then west to the General Electric plant in Schenectady, the Eastman Kodak plant in Rochester. Following a stay in Niagara Falls and Canada, the group will go to Detroit to visit the Ford plant and Dearborn Village, then to Chicago to visit the Museum of Science and Industry, before leaving for San Francisco.

* * *

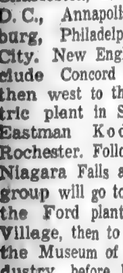
Here and There: Gabor Carell, operatic and concert tenor, has returned to New York, following several engagements in Israel and a 36-hour flight home. In Israel, Carelli sang 12 performances, the leading tenor role in "Lucia di Lammermoor" and two performances of "Judas Maccabeus". He leaves soon for Cincinnati to sing the tenor lead in "Don Pasquale."

Carelli is a member of the Metropolitan Opera, having sung in the Italian, French and German wings and in "Die Fledermaus" in English, both in New York and on tour. He reports that since his previous engagements in Israel two years ago, when he was the first tenor to sing the Verdi "Requiem" there, amazing progress has been made in housing and in agriculture. "Like another miracle," he says. Carelli has sung in Syracuse on several occasions.

* * *

Harshaw Soloist In 'Tanglewood'; Center Benefit

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, donated their services in concert in "Tanglewood" last night for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The orchestra's Brass Ensemble, led by Roger Voisin, also performed.



Miss Harshaw

Tomorrow night, Dr. Charles Munch and the full 106-piece orchestra will present the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood." Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz's Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.

Pease

Da Costa

Saturday night Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease os Hunding; also Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the "Tanglewood" premiere of Brohuslav Marinu's "Fantasies Symphonique." On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at "Tanglewood" as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216
JUL 20 1956

Westbury Music Fair Goes 2 Shows a Night on Saturday

Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelly Gross, producers of the Westbury (L.I.) Music Fair, announce that they will institute a new policy of presenting two performances on Saturday nights, one at 6 p.m., another at 9:30 p.m., beginning Saturday night with the final performances of "Kismet."

This policy of two Saturday night shows continues throughout the Summer, and the Saturday matinees are, henceforth, eliminated.

* * *

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION, starting Monday, is "Guys and Dolls," starring Phil Foster, Marilyn Ross, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and Joey Faye. It will play through Saturday night, Aug. 4.

William and Jean Eckart have been commissioned to design the settings for the forthcoming musical comedy, "Li'l Abner." They currently are represented by "Damn Yankees" for which they created both the settings and costumes. "Li'l Abner" opens here in the early Fall.

Jack Kirkland's stage version of "The Man With the Golden Arm" concludes a nine-week extended run at the Cherry Lane Theatre Sunday evening. It will have played 73 times.

CAROL GUSTAFSON, Zolya Talma and Robert Ellenstein have the leading roles in "Anastasia," which opens at the Hyde Park (NY) Playhouse, Monday, for one week.

The Bill Tabbert of "South Pacific and "Fanny" fame will sing in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert at Lewisohn Stadium, July 28.

* * *

TOMI ROMER, currently appearing with the American Shakspeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., has been set for a leading role in the Lee Peizman production of Evan Hunter's "On the Seventh Day."

Marion Marlowe will represent the singers' division of the entertainment committee being formed to welcome Italy's famed Carabinieri Band of Rome. The musical aggregation is due here for a national tour Oct. 3.

Jerry the Clown, a veteran of Ringling Brothers and Barnum-Bailey circus, has joined the Storyland Village staff and will be at the park daily to greet youngsters. Storyland Village, Asbury Park, N. J., now open daily from noon to dusk, is the largest children's attraction on the Atlantic seaboard.

* * *

BECAUSE THEIR presentations of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy," done in music-theatre style, have met with such solid acclaim at the Green Mansions Theatre, Warrensburg, N. Y., owners Lena Barish and Sam Garlen are contemplating bringing the double-bill to an off-Broadway theatre early in October. The theatre gives four performances a week from now through the end of September.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Friday) from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502
JUL 18 1956

Brass Group, Soprano In Berkshire Concert

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will get under way this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate theatre-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

News (e)
MILFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,091
JUL 21 1956

Festival To Be Site For Ground-Breaking

LENOX — The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass.-Tanglewood- for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonnies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook Novitiate on July 31.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, S.J., Provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old Novitiate on March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former Novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic Hierarchy of New England. The buildings of the Berkshire Festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra when the need became known.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 21 1956

First Festival Music Shed Concert Attended by 6,203

A crowd of 6,203 persons attended the first shed concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox last night.

The 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, played four works: "The Roman Carnival" overture, by Berlioz; Prelude to "The Afternoon of Faun," by Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, by Ravel, and the Symphony No. 2 in D Major, by Brahms.

Mr. Munch will conduct again this evening, with the first part of the program to be devoted to the Adagio for Strings, by Samuel Barber, and the Symphony No. 6, by Martinu, written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. The second half will be a concert version of the first act of Wagner's opera "Die Walkure." Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

The final concert of the week-end will be heard tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, when Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra.

[illegible] New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
[illegible] Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 23,358
JUL 21 1956

ESUITS PREPARE GROUND BREAKING AT NEW NOVITIATE

The Jesuits of New England Friday thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass.—Tanglewood—for offering the site of the music festival or ceremonies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook novitiate July 31.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitz-Gerald, S. J., provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old novitiate March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic hierarchy of New England when the need became known.

The thousands of persons expected to attend will proceed from Tanglewood to the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old fo the actual ground breaking by th Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon bishop of the Springfield diocese Memorial services for the fou Jesuits who perished in the fir will be held a schmeetteryatshrdh will be held at the cemetery adja cent to the ruins.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan o Lowell, national chairman of th appeal for $3-million to rebuild th novitiate, announced Friday tha $2,045,000 has been donated to date

[186]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704

JUL 19 1956

TALKING IT OVER

35 California Teachers Will Be Guests in Barnell Home July 27

By Emma Van Wormer

Thirty-five teachers in elementary schools in Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, Calif., are taking a 47-day cross continent tour, a credit history course, visiting historical, cultural and industrial sites in 22 states. They are expected in Syracuse July 27.

A picnic has been arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Barnell, 547 Allen St., on the grounds adjoining their home for the visitors. The group includes Mr. and Mrs. Barnell's daughter, Miss Shirley J. Barnell, who has taught in Glendale, Calif., for two years. Miss Barnell, who also has taught in Japan, will resume teaching in the fall in Los Angeles. She received her master's degree in Syracuse University and now is working for her doctor's degree.

The trip was arranged by Prof. John F. Knipschild, educational superintendent of the Southern California Conference of Adventists, approved and sponsored by the Conference Committee of Adventists. The entire trip is being paid for with salaries, as teachers, continuing throughout the summer.

A chartered bus left Los Angeles June 24, the first stop being Boulder, Nev. Hoover Dam was visited, also Los Alamos, the atomic center; Carlsbad Cavern, King Ranch in Texas, New Orleans. Places in the southeast: Bok Memorial, Cypress Gardens, Silver Springs, Stephen Foster Memorial, St. Augustine, and from Florida to Charleston, S. C., Washington, D. C., Annapolis, Md., Gettysburg, Philadelphia, New York City. New England centers include Concord and Lexington, then west to the General Electric plant in Schenectady, the Eastman Kodak plant in Rochester. Following a stay in Niagara Falls and Canada, the group will go to Detroit to visit the Ford plant and Dearborn Village, then to Chicago to visit the Museum of Science and Industry, before leaving for San Francisco.

* * *

Here and There: Gabor Carelli, operatic and concert tenor, has returned to New York, following several engagements in Israel and a 36-hour flight home. In Israel, Carelli sang 12 performances, the leading tenor role in "Lucia di Lammermoor" and two performances of "Judas Maccabeus". He leaves soon for Cincinnati to sing the tenor lead in "Don Pasquale."

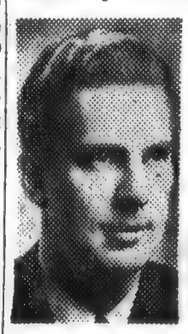
Carelli is a member of the Metropolitan Opera, having sung in the Italian, French and German wings and in "Die Fledermaus" in English, both in New York and on tour. He reports that since his previous engagements in Israel two years ago, when he was the first tenor to sing the Verdi "Requiem" there, amazing progress has been made in housing and in agriculture. "Like another miracle," he says. Carelli has sung in Syracuse on several occasions.

* * *

Mrs. Barnell

Miss Barnell

Munch and the full 106-piece orchestra will present the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood." Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz's Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.



Pease

Da Costa

Saturday night Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease os Hunding; also Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the "Tanglewood" premiere of Brohuslav Marinu's "Fantasies Symphonique." On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at "Tanglewood" as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Harshaw Soloist In 'Tanglewood'; Center Benefit

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, donated their services in concert in "Tanglewood" last night for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The orchestra's Brass Ensemble, led by Roger Voisin, also performed.

Miss Harshaw

Tomorrow night, Dr. Charles

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502

JUL 18 1956

Brass Group, Soprano In Berkshire Concert

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will get under way this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate theatre-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216

JUL 20 1956

Westbury Music Fair O... Saturday

...and Shelly Gross, producers of ... (L.I.) Music Fair, announce that they will ...stitute a new policy of presenting two performances on Saturday nights, one at 6 p.m., another at 9:30 p.m., beginning Saturday night with the final performances of "Kismet."

This policy of two Saturday night shows continues throughout the Summer, and the Saturday matinees are, henceforth, eliminated.

* * *

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION, starting Monday, is "Guys and Dolls," starring Phil Foster, Marilyn Ross, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and Joey Faye. It will play through Saturday night, Aug. 4.

William and Jean Eckart have been commissioned to design the settings for the forthcoming musical comedy, "Li'l Abner." They currently are represented by "Damn Yankees" for which they created both the settings and costumes. "Li'l Abner" opens here in the early Fall.

Jack Kirkland's stage version of "The Man With the Golden Arm" concludes a nine-week extended run at the Cherry Lane Theatre Sunday evening. It will have played 73 times.

CAROL GUSTAFSON, Zolya Talma and Robert Ellenstein have the leading roles in "Anastasia," which opens at the Hyde Park (NY) Playhouse, Monday, for one week.

The Bill Tabbert of "South Pacific and "Fanny" fame will sing in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert at Lewisohn Stadium, July 28.

* * *

TOMI ROMER, currently appearing with the American Shakspeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., has been set for a leading role in the Lee Peizman production of Evan Hunter's "On the Seventh Day."

Marion Marlowe will represent the singers' division of the entertainment committee being formed to welcome Italy's famed Carabinieri Band of Rome. The musical aggregation is due here for a national tour Oct. 3.

Jerry the Clown, a veteran of Ringling Brothers and Barnum-Bailey circus, has joined the Storyland Village staff and will be at the park daily to greet youngsters. Storyland Village, Asbury Park, N. J., now open daily from noon to dusk, is the largest children's attraction on the Atlantic seaboard.

* * *

BECAUSE THEIR presentations of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy," done in music-theatre style, have met with such solid acclaim at the Green Mansions Theatre, Warrensburg, N. Y., owners Lena Barish and Sam Garlen are contemplating bringing the double-bill to an off-

Broadway theatre early in October. The theatre gives four performances a week from now through the end of September.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Fri.

News (e)
MILFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,091

JUL 21 1956

Festival To Be Site For Ground-Breaking

LENOX — The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass.-Tanglewood- for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonnies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook Novitiate on July 31.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, S.J., Provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old Novitiate on March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former Novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic Hierarchy of New England. The buildings of the Berkshire Festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra when the need became known.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 21 1956

First Festival Music Shed Concert Attended by 6,203

A crowd of 6,203 persons attended the first shed concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox last night.

The 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, played four works: "The Roman Carnival" overture, by Berlioz; Prelude to "The Afternoon of Faun," by Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, by Ravel, and the Symphony No. 2 in D Major, by Brahms.

Mr. Munch will conduct again this evening, with the first part of the program to be devoted to the Adagio for Strings, by Samuel Barber, and the Symphony No. 6, by Martinu, written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. The second half will be a concert version of the first act of Wagner's opera "Die Walkure." Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

The final concert of the week-end will be heard tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, when Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra.

F. New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
0 Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 23,358

JUL 21 1956

JESUITS PREPARE GROUND BREAKING AT NEW NOVITIATE

The Jesuits of New England Friday thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass.—Tanglewood—for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook novitiate July 31.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitz-Gerald, S. J., provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old novitiate March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic hierarchy of New England. The buildings of the Berkshire festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra when the need became known.

The thousands of persons expected to attend will proceed from Tanglewood to the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old for the actual ground breaking by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon bishop of the Springfield diocese. Memorial services for the four Jesuits who perished in the fire will be held a echmeetteryatshrdh will be held at the cemetery adjacent to the ruins.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the appeal for $3-million to rebuild the novitiate, announced Friday that $2,045,000 has been donated to date.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704

JUL 19 1956

TALKING IT OVER

35 California Teachers Will Be Guests in Barnell Home July 27

By Emma Van Wormer

Thirty-five teachers in elementary schools in Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, Calif., are taking a 47-day cross continent tour, a credit history course, visiting historical, cultural and industrial sites in 22 states. They are expected in Syracuse July 27.

A picnic has been arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Barnell, 547 Allen St., on the grounds adjoining their home for the visitors. The group includes Mr. and Mrs. Barnell's daughter, Miss Shirley J. Barnell, who has taught in Glendale, Calif., for two years. Miss Barnell, who also has taught in Japan, will resume teaching in the fall in Los Angeles. She received her master's degree in Syracuse University and now is working for her doctor's degree.

Mrs. Barnell

Miss Barnell

The trip was arranged by Prof. John F. Knipschild, educational superintendent of the Southern California Conference of Adventists, approved and sponsored by the Conference Committee of Adventists. The entire trip is being paid for with salaries, as teachers, continuing throughout the summer.

A chartered bus left Los Angeles June 24, the first stop being Boulder, Nev. Hoover Dam was visited, also Los Alamos, the atomic center; Carlsbad Cavern, King Ranch in Texas, New Orleans. Places in the southeast: Bok Memorial, Cypress Gardens, Silver Springs, Stephen Foster Memorial, St. Augustine, and from Florida to Charleston, S. C., Washington, D. C., Annapolis, Md., Gettysburg, Philadelphia, New York City. New England centers include Concord and Lexington, then west to the General Electric plant in Schenectady, the Eastman Kodak plant in Rochester. Following a stay in Niagara Falls and Canada, the group will go to Detroit to visit the Ford plant and Dearborn Village, then to Chicago to visit the Museum of Science and Industry, before leaving for San Francisco.

* * *

Here and There: Gabor Carelli, operatic and concert tenor, has returned to New York, following several engagements in Israel and a 36-hour flight home. In Israel, Carelli sang 12 performances, the leading tenor role in "Lucia di Lammermoor" and two performances of "Judas Maccabeus". He leaves soon for Cincinnati to sing the tenor lead in "Don Pasquale."

Carelli is a member of the Metropolitan Opera, having sung in the Italian, French and German wings and in "Die Fledermaus" in English, both in New York and on tour. He reports that since his previous engagements in Israel two years ago, when he was the first tenor to sing the Verdi "Requiem" there, amazing progress has been made in housing and in agriculture. "Like another miracle," he says. Carelli has sung in Syracuse on several occasions.

* * *

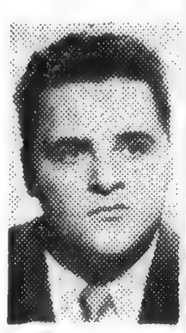
Harshaw Soloist In 'Tanglewood'; Center Benefit

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, donated their services in concert in "Tanglewood" last night for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The orchestra's Brass Ensemble, led by Roger Voisin, also performed.

Miss Harshaw

Tomorrow night, Dr. Charles Munch and the full 106-piece orchestra will present the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood." Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz's Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.

Pease



Da Costa

Saturday night Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease os Hunding; also Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the "Tanglewood" premiere of Brohuslav Marinu's "Fantasies Symphonique." On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at "Tanglewood" as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502

JUL 18 1956

Brass Group, Soprano In Berkshire Concert

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will get under way this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate theatre-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216

JUL 20 1956

Westbury Music Fair G... Saturday

...and Shelly Gross, producers of ...(L.I.) Music Fair, announce that they will ...stitute a new policy of presenting two performances on Saturday nights, one at 6 p.m., another at 9:30 p.m., beginning Saturday night with the final performances of "Kismet."

This policy of two Saturday night shows continues throughout the Summer, and the Saturday matinees are, henceforth, eliminated.

* * *

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION, starting Monday, is "Guys and Dolls," starring Phil Foster, Marilyn Ross, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and Joey Faye. It will play through Saturday night, Aug. 4.

William and Jean Eckart have been commissioned to design the settings for the forthcoming musical comedy, "Li'l Abner." They currently are represented by "Damn Yankees" for which they created both the settings and costumes. "Li'l Abner" opens here in the early Fall.

Jack Kirkland's stage version of "The Man With the Golden Arm" concludes a nine-week extended run at the Cherry Lane Theatre Sunday evening. It will have played 73 times.

CAROL GUSTAFSON, Zolya Talma and Robert Ellenstein have the leading roles in "Anastasia," which opens at the Hyde Park (NY) Playhouse, Monday, for one week.

The Bill Tabbert of "South Pacific and "Fanny" fame will sing in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert at Lewisohn Stadium, July 28.

* * *

TOMI ROMER, currently appearing with the American Shakspeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., has been set for a leading role in the Lee Pelzman production of Evan Hunter's "On the Seventh Day."

Marion Marlowe will represent the singers' division of the entertainment committee being formed to welcome Italy's famed Carabinieri Band of Rome. The musical aggregation is due here for a national tour Oct. 3.

Jerry the Clown, a veteran of Ringling Brothers and Barnum-Bailey circus, has joined the Storyland Village staff and will be at the park daily to greet youngsters. Storyland Village, Asbury Park, N. J., now open daily from noon to dusk, is the largest children's attraction on the Atlantic seaboard.

* * *

BECAUSE THEIR presentations of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy," done in music-theatre style, have met with such solid acclaim at the Green Mansions Theatre, Warrensburg, N. Y., owners Lena Barish and Sam Garlen are contemplating bringing the double-bill to an off-Broadway theatre early in October. The theatre gives four performances a week from now through the end of September.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Fri.

News (e)
MILFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,091

JUL 21 1956

Festival To Be Site For Ground-Breaking

LENOX — The Jesuits of New England today thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass.-Tanglewood- for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonnies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook Novitiate on July 31.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, S.J., Provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old Novitiate on March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former Novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic Hierarchy of New England. The buildings of the Berkshire Festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra when the need became known.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 21 1956

First Festival Music Shed Concert Attended by 6,203

A crowd of 6,203 persons attended the first shed concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox last night.

The 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, played four works: "The Roman Carnival" overture, by Berlioz; Prelude to "The Afternoon of Faun," by Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, by Ravel, and the Symphony No. 2 in D Major, by Brahms.

Mr. Munch will conduct again this evening, with the first part of the program to be devoted to the Adagio for Strings, by Samuel Barber, and the Symphony No. 6, by Martinu, written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. The second half will be a concert version of the first act of Wagner's opera "Die Walkure." Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

The final concert of the week-end will be heard tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, when Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra.

c. New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
0 Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 23,358

JUL 21 1956

ESUITS PREPARE GROUND BREAKING AT NEW NOVITIATE

The Jesuits of New England Friday thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox, Mass.—Tanglewood—for offering the site of the music festival or ceremonies marking the ground breaking of the Shadowbrook novitiate July 31.

The Very Rev. William E. Fitz-Gerald, S. J., provincial, lauded the 'immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which razed the old novitiate March 10 and disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Tanglewood Music festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic hierarchy of New England The buildings of the Berkshire festival, adjacent to the Shadowbrook land, were offered by the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra when the need became known.

The thousands of persons expected to attend will proceed from Tanglewood to the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old fo the actual ground breaking by th Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon bishop of the Springfield diocese Memorial services for the fou Jesuits who perished in the fir will be held a echmeetteryatshrdlu will be held at the cemetery adja cent to the ruins.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan o Lowell, national chairman of th appeal for $3-million to rebuild th novitiate, announced Friday tha $2,045,000 has been donated to date

[186]

Northampton Mass Gazette
July 21/56 FIVE

Boston Symphony Heard At Best Led By Munch

Last evening the full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was heard for the first time this season when it performed in the vast music shed at Tanglewood with its director, Charles Munch.

The audience welcomed Mr. Munch and the orchestra with prolonged applause which they acknowledged by standing quietly for a few minutes.

Then Mr. Munch turned, the players were seated, and off at an incredible tempo went the musicians, swift and flawless in the salterello of Berlioz' Roman Carnival Overture. Berlioz would have been well pleased with this performance and its pace since it is well known that he had difficulty finding the conductor who would give it the correct rollicking beat. The English horn solo was hauntingly beautiful and again the same theme in the bass soons against the salterello in the second violins, the whole tempered by Mr. Munch's good taste and the orchestra's impeccable musicianship.

Debussy's Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun brought sighs and a long hush at its close when Doriot Dwyer shared applause with Mr. Munch. The mood seemed a little heavy and too mortal, but it may have been the weather, the skies being heavy with unshed rain.

For a balmy moonlight evening the next number would have been quite correct, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe"; the aquatic beginning of "Daybreak" was a little too suggestive for the unwanted but imminent weather and one wished for the originally scheduled "Rhapsodie Espagnol"; the effect was musically satisfying in every way, ending on a high note of jubilation from the full orchestra.

Brahms' second symphony in D major was the final offering; the allegro a little fidgety in starting but settling into the proper tempo; the adagio pleading and portentous, with its melodies and counter melodies weaving endlessly throughout; the minuet-like grace of the allegretto and its colorful treatment of the first theme and the final allegro, starting with strings sotto voce, such as only the Boston Symphony strings can evoke, gradually building to great heights for full orchestra, again a softer mood, much development, all so ingenious as Brahms ever was, and handled with superb skill by Mr. Munch, each change accentuated by his subtle and again marked directions.

This symphony, although not one of Brahms' massive works, is not the less appealing for that reason; it fitted well with the mood of the whole evening, one of pleasant relaxed enjoyment. The comparatively small audience, no doubt because of the threatening weather, was well rewarded for facing whatever the elements might bring.

Saturday's concert at 8:30 will include a Tanglewood premiere of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert [illegible] and James [illegible]. Mr. Munch's concert will be Rossini, Bartok concerto for orchestra, and the seldom heard Schubert Seventh symphony, conducted by 81-year-old Pierre Monteux.—M. deB. B.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 21 1956

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 12 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel. 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music Concerts Wed. 8:30 p.m. $2 & $3. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Fri. Sat. 8:30 Sun. 2:30. $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm. to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 20-Aug. 12 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference [illegible], Mass. . . . Sat. July 21—Charles Munch cond. Berlioz, Overture "The [illegible]; Debussy, Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel, Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms, Symphony No. 2 in D. . . . Sat. July 21—Charles Munch cond. Martinu, Symphony No. 6; Barber, "Adagio for Strings"; "Die Walkure" (Act I). Soloists: Margaret Harshaw; Albert DaCosta; James Pease. . . . Sun. July 22 — Pierre Monteux cond. Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok [illegible] to for Orchestra; Schubert, Symphony [illegible] in C. . . . Wed. July 25—Beaux Arts [illegible] Mendelssohn, [illegible] minor; Ravel, [illegible]o in A minor; [illegible] Trio in C minor. . . . Fri. July [illegible] Munch cond. Beethoven, Overture [illegible] 2, [illegible], Concerto for C[illegible], Tchaikowsky, Symphony No. 4 in [illegible]. July 28—Charles Munch cond. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann, [illegible] Concerto in A minor; Honegger, Sy[illegible] No. 5; Debussy, "La Mer."

KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
Circ. D. 344,297 - S. 361,728
JUL 22 1956

DISC BRINGS OPERA TO LIFE.

"The Magic Violin" Is by Werner Egk, Bavarian.

One of the most entertaining works in the modern opera repertory is "The Magic Violin," by a Bavarian composer, Werner Egk. Few Americans have heard it, even though it was premiered 21 years ago, in Frankfurt, Germany. Now it comes to life, pleasantly and in a fairy-tale atmosphere, with an excellent German cast of vocalists and the Bavarian State opera orchestra and chorus, with the composer himself conducting. It is on a new Decca 12-inch long-play recording.

Even though you may not understand the German language in which it is sung, the vitality and freshness of the music itself is reward enough for listening to a fine reproduction of this performance.

Mozart and Schubert are platter-mates on a new London Records release in the 12-inch LP category presenting the Stuttgart chamber orchestra with Karl Munchinger conducting. The Mozart offering is the Divertimento No. 11 in D Major, in charming, aristocratic vein. Of incidental listening value, maybe as dinner music, is the Schubert music on the other side of the disc. Schubert wrote a total of 452 dances. Five of them are in this arrangement, along with five minuets. This music transports one back to another, warm-hearted era.

Hi-fi fans whose special delight is organ music the way it reverberates on their prized sets will find a paradise of good listening on a London L'Oiseau-Lyre album. On the single 12-inch longplay disc is preserved an excellent reading of Louis Vierne's Symphony No. 2 in E Major for organ, with Pierre Cochereau at the console in the Notre-Dame de Paris cathedral.

Another recording of Rachmaninoff's best concerto, No. 2 in C Minor, has the British pianist, Clifford Curzon, as the soloist, with the London Philharmonic conducted by Sir Adrian Boult, on a London 12-inch LP. Technically and musically, it is a worthy rival of Columbia's recent issue of the concerto with Eugene Istomin as soloist.

The Boston Symphony orchestra and Charles Munch perform magnificently in the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D Major, on a 12-inch Victor disc. Then for extra measure the orchestra and conductor do the Brahms Tragic Overture, which is darker-hued than the expressive coloration of the symphony. It was in Boston that the Brahms No. 2 was unfavorably received in an 1882 premiere there, the program notes remind us.

Sunday Herald
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Non-partisan
Circ. 28,822
JUL 22 1956

PIERRE MONTEAUX AT TANGLEWOOD

Pierre Monetux will conduct the Boston Symphony Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The program: Overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and the great C Major Symphony No. 7 by Schubert.

The Bartok score was commissioned by Serge Koussevitsky for the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216
JUL 22 1956

LET'S GO! On An Auto Tour

By GENE GRAF

It is said that variety is the spice of life, and if that's the way you want to flavor your vacation this year, head your auto up to New England. Between the Connecticut border on the Merritt P'kwy and the upper edge of Maine in Aroostook County there is a whale of a lot of vacation enjoyment to be had. Ten days to two weeks spent wandering around New England are a good bet any time.

One of the best things about New England is that the distances between new items of interest is always small. As they pointed out to me at Sinclair's Auto Tour Bureau, a motorist can, if he's energetic, have a morning dip in the ocean, lunch at an inland lake, knock off nine holes of golf in the foothills, and have dinner and spend the night on a mile-high mountain—all in the course of one day.

MOTORISTS WILL find that it is easier than ever to get around New England this Summer. For one thing, the Portland-Augusta leg of the Maine Turnpike is open. This means you can go from the limited access highway just above Boston at Danvers, Mass., all the way up to Augusta with only toll booths to stop you. In New Hampshire the Nashua to Manchester leg of that state's growing toll road system is open.

There is so much to see in this six-state region that one column doesn't have the room to catalog much of it, but here are a few things to think about in planning a route:

CONNECTICUT—YALE University and New Haven are a must, even if you just drive around. In Mystic on the coast is the fascinating Mystic Seaport Marine Museum where a complete old American seaport town has been reconstructed. There is nothing like it to be seen anywhere. The whole of the state is dotted with state parks, many with camp facilities.

Rhode Island—The smallest state, but far from being the least in entertainment. Narragansett Bay cuts deeply into the state, providing excellent deep-sea fishing, boating, and bathing facilities. The state is one of the three in New England offering pari-mutuel horse racing, having two tracks, in fact.

Massachusetts—This is the real state of historic landmarks, of course. Take your choice—Plymouth Rock, Bunker Hill, Lexington, Concord, Sturbridge Village, or the Whalers Museum at New Bedford. Over in the western part of the state the Berkshires offer wonderful scenery, plus fine music in the famous Tanglewood Concerts in Lenox. Cape Cod, too, should be seen at some time.

VERMONT—THIS is the only state in the area with no coastline, but lots of things make up for that. Such things as the historic battle monument at Bennington, Fort Ticonderoga of Ethan Allen fame, Rudyard Kipplings' home near Brattleboro, the delicious home-made maple syrup, or the birthplace of President Coolidge.

New Hampshire—There's much to be seen, especially from the many accessible mountain tops in this state. A ride up the Cog Railway on Mt. Washington will long be remembered, and there are also lifts at Franconia Notch and at Cannone Mountain.

Maine—Despite its reputation for a rock-bound coast, Maine still has fine bathing facilities in spots on the ocean. There are many wonderful camping spots, and the [illegible] National park in the North [illegible] tribe found at Acadia.

I'll be happy to have Sinclair map out a New [illegible] tour for you—or any tour for that matter. Drop me a line: Auto Editor, New York Mirror, 235 E. 45th St., N. Y. 17, N. Y.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
JUL 22 1956

Hanson 'Elegy' to Be Played in Berkshires

The fourth week of the Berkshire Festival concerts—six weeks in all by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and artists, will start Wednesday night, July 25, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms, played by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater concert hall.

In the Music Shed, where thousands hear the full 106-piece Boston Symphony, (many more music lovers listening from the broad lawns) Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the weekend's three concerts, Friday and Saturday nights. On Sunday afternoon, July 29, Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, will be on the podium.

The Friday night program comprises orchestral works by Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, and the "Tanglewood" premiere of a composition by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is a guest teacher of composition this summer in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood".

The Saturday night Festival concert program is devoted to works by Schumann, Debussy and Honneger and the first performance, in the great Music Shed, of an Elergy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for years conductor of the Boston Symphony. Composer of the "Elegy" is Dr. Howard Hanson of Eastman School of Music, Rochester.

Rudolf Serkin, noted concert pianist, who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624 last summer when he made his first appearance in a Berkshire Festival concert, will be soloist Saturday night, playing Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

DR. HOWARD Hanson
. . . composer of "Elegy"

Next Sunday afternoon's concert will comprise music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. Soloist in the Hinemith Violin Concerto will be Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Richard Burgin. The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts opens Wednesday night, Aug. 1 with a joint recital by Pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. On Friday night, Aug. 3, the gifted young conductor Eleazar de Cavallo will conduct the full Symphony orchestra in works by Barraud, de Falla, Ravel and Stravinsky. Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. de Cavallo) will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto, Mr. de Cavallo conducted the Israel Philharmonic in Syracuse seasons ago.

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 23 1956

Magic of Music At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 23—One can learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills, the week-end of July 27, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

On that week-end, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known Festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p. m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p. m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p. m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281
JUL 23 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAMS PLANNED

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves Wednesday into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the coming week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday-evening festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler.

[187]

Northampton Mass Gazette July 21/56

FIVE

Boston Symphony Heard At Best Led By Munch

Last evening the full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was heard for the first time this season when it performed in the vast music shed at Tanglewood with its director, Charles Munch.

The audience welcomed Mr. Munch and the orchestra with prolonged applause which they acknowledged by standing quietly for a few minutes.

Then Mr. Munch turned, the players were seated, and off at an incredible tempo went the musicians, swift and flawless in the salterello of Berlioz' Roman Carnival Overture. Berlioz would have been well pleased with this performance and its pace since it is well known that he had difficulty finding the conductor who would give it the correct rollicking beat. The English horn solo was hauntingly beautiful and again the same theme in the bassoons against the salterello in the second violins, the whole tempered by Mr. Munch's good taste and the orchestra's impeccable musicianship.

Debussy's Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun brought sighs and a long hush at its close when Doriot Dwyer shared applause with Mr. Munch. The mood seemed a little heavy and too mortal, but it may have been the weather, the skies being heavy with unshed rain.

For a balmy moonlight evening the next number would have been quite correct, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe"; the aquatic beginning of "Daybreak" was a little too suggestive for the unwanted but imminent weather and one wished for the originally scheduled "Rhapsodie Espagnol"; the effect was musically satisfying in every way, ending on a high note of jubilation from the full orchestra.

Brahms' second symphony in D major was the final offering; the allegro a little fidgety in starting but settling into the proper tempo; the adagio pleading and portentous, with its melodies and counter melodies weaving endlessly throughout; the minuet-like grace of the allegretto and its colorful treatment of the first theme and the final allegro, starting with strings sotto voce, such as only the Boston Symphony strings can evoke, gradually building to great heights for full orchestra, again a softer mood, much development, all so ingenious as Brahms ever was, and handled with superb skill by Mr. Munch, each change accentuated by his subtle and again marked directions.

This symphony, although not one of Brahms' massive works, is not the less appealing for that reason; it fitted well with the mood of the whole evening, one of pleasant relaxed enjoyment. The comparatively small audience, no doubt because of the threatening weather, was well rewarded for facing whatever the elements might bring.

Saturday's concert at 8:30 will include the Tanglewood premiere of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert DaCosta and James Pease, directed by Mr. Munch. Sunday's concert will be Rossini, Bartok concerto for orchestra and the seldom heard Schubert seventh symphony, conducted by 81-year-old Pierre Monteux.—M. deB. B.

KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
Circ. D. 344,297 - S. 361,728
JUL 22 1956

DISC BRINGS OPERA TO LIFE.

"The Magic Violin" Is by Werner Egk, Bavarian.

One of the most entertaining works in the modern opera repertory is "The Magic Violin," by a Bavarian composer, Werner Egk. Few Americans have heard it, even though it was premiered 21 years ago, in Frankfurt, Germany. Now it comes to life, pleasantly and in a fairy-tale atmosphere, with an excellent German cast of vocalists and the Bavarian State opera orchestra and chorus, with the composer himself conducting. It is on a new Decca 12-inch long-play recording.

Even though you may not understand the German language in which it is sung, the vitality and freshness of the music itself is reward enough for listening to a fine reproduction of this performance.

Mozart and Schubert are platter-mates on a new London Records release in the 12-inch LP category presenting the Stuttgart chamber orchestra with Karl Munchinger conducting. The Mozart offering is the Divertimento No. 11 in D Major, in charming, aristocratic vein. Of incidental listening value, maybe as dinner music, is the Schubert music on the other side of the disc. Schubert wrote a total of 452 dances. Five of them are in this arrangement, along with five minuets. This music transports one back to another, warm-hearted era.

Hi-fi fans whose special delight is organ music the way it reverberates on their prized sets will find a paradise of good listening on a London L'Oiseau-Lyre album. On the single 12-inch longplay disc is preserved an excellent reading of Louis Vierne's Symphony No. 2 in E Major for organ, with Pierre Cochereau at the console in the Notre-Dame de Paris cathedral.

Another recording of Rachmaninoff's best concerto, No. 2 in C Minor, has the British pianist, Clifford Curzon, as the soloist, with the London Philharmonic conducted by Sir Adrian Boult, on a London 12-inch LP. Technically and musically, it is a worthy rival of Columbia's recent issue of the concerto with Eugene Istomin as soloist.

The Boston Symphony orchestra and Charles Munch perform magnificently in the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D Major, on a 12-inch Victor disc. Then for extra measure the orchestra and conductor do the Brahms Tragic Overture, which is darker-hued than the expressive coloration of the symphony. It was in Boston that the Brahms No. 2 was unfavorably received in an 1882 premiere there, the program notes remind us.

C. B. N.

Sunday Herald
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Non-partisan
Circ. 98,333
JUL 22 1956

PIERRE MONTEAUX AT TANGLEWOOD

Pierre Monetux will conduct the Boston Symphony Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The program: Overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and the great C Major Symphony No. 7 by Schubert.

The Bartok score was commissioned by Serge Koussevitsky for the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 21 1956

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 12 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel. 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts Wed. 8:30 p.m. $2 & $3. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Fri. Sat. 8:30 Sun. 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm. to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 20-Aug. 12 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. . . . Sat. July 20—Charles Munch cond. Berlioz, Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy, Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel, Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms, Symphony No. 2 in D. . . . Sat. July 21—Charles Munch cond. Martinu, Symphony No. 6; Barber, "Adagio for Strings"; "Die Walkure" (Act I). Soloists: Margaret Harshaw; Albert DaCosta; James Pease. . . . Sun. July 22 — Pierre Monteux cond. Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert, Symphony No. 7 in C. . . . Wed. July 25—Beaux Arts Trio. Mendelssohn, Trio in D minor; Ravel, Trio in A minor; Brahms' Trio in C minor. . . . Fri. July 27—Charles Munch cond. Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra; Adler, Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 4 in F minor. . . . Sat. July 28—Charles Munch cond. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann, Piano Concerto in A minor; Honegger, Symphony No. 5; Debussy, "La Mer."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216
JUL 22 1956

LET'S GO! On An Auto Tour

By GENE GRAF

It is said that variety is the spice of life, and if that's the way you want to flavor your vacation this year, head your auto up to New England. Between the Connecticut border on the Merritt P'kwy and the upper edge of Maine in Aroostook County there is a whale of a lot of vacation enjoyment to be had. Ten days to two weeks spent wandering around New England are a good bet any time.

One of the best things about New England is that the distances between new items of interest is always small. As they pointed out to me at Sinclair's Auto Tour Bureau, a motorist can, if he's energetic, have a morning dip in the ocean, lunch at an inland lake, knock off nine holes of golf in the foothills, and have dinner and spend the night on a mile-high mountain—all in the course of one day.

MOTORISTS WILL find that it is easier than ever to get around New England this Summer. For one thing, the Portland-Augusta leg of the Maine Turnpike is open. This means you can go from the limited access highway just above Boston at Danvers, Mass., all the way up to Augusta with only toll booths to stop you. In New Hampshire, the Nashua to Manchester leg of that state's growing toll road system is open.

There is so much to see in this six-state region that one column doesn't have the room to catalog much of it, but here are a few things to think about in planning a route:

* * *

CONNECTICUT—YALE University and New Haven are a must, even if you just drive around. In Mystic on the coast is the fascinating Mystic Seaport Marine Museum where a complete old American seaport town has been reconstructed. There is nothing like it to be seen anywhere. The whole of the state is dotted with state parks, many with camp facilities.

Rhode Island—The smallest state, but far from being the least in entertainment. Narragansett Bay cuts deeply into the state, providing excellent deep-sea fishing, boating, and bathing facilities. The state is one of the three in New England offering pari-mutuel horse racing, having two tracks, in fact.

Massachusetts—This is the real state of historic landmarks, of course. Take your choice—Plymouth Rock, Bunker Hill, Lexington, Concord, Sturbridge Village, or the Whalers Museum at New Bedford. Over in the western part of the state the Berkshires offer wonderful scenery, plus fine music in the famous Tanglewood Concerts in Lenox. Cape Cod also should be seen at some time.

* * *

VERMONT—THIS is the only state in the area with no coastline, but lots of things make up for that. Such things as the historic battle monument at Bennington, Fort Ticonderoga of Ethan Allen fame, Rudyard Kiplings' home near Brattleboro, the delicious home-made maple syrup, or the birthplace of President Coolidge.

New Hampshire — There's much to be seen, especially from the many accessible mountain tops in this state. A ride up the Cog Railway on Mt. Washington will long be remembered, and there are also lifts at Franconia Notch and at Canmore Mountain

Maine—Despite its reputation for a rock-bound coast, Maine still has fine bathing facilities in spots on the ocean. There are many wonderful camping spots, and the only national park in the Northeast is tibe found at Acadia.

I'll be happy to have Sinclair map out a New England tour for you— or any tour for that matter. Drop me a line: Auto Editor, New York Mirror, 235 E. 45th St., N. Y. 17, N. Y.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
JUL 22 1956

Hanson 'Elegy' to Be Played in Berkshires

The fourth week of the Berkshire Festival concerts—six weeks in all by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and artists, will start Wednesday night, July 25, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms, played by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater concert hall.

In the Music Shed, where thousands hear the full 106-piece Boston Symphony, (many more music lovers listening from the broad lawns) Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the weekend's three concerts, Friday and Saturday nights. On Sunday afternoon, July 29, Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, will be on the podium.

The Friday night program comprises orchestral works by Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, and the "Tanglewood" premiere of a composition by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is a guest teacher of composition this summer in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood".

The Saturday night Festival concert program is devoted to works by Schumann, Debussy and Honneger and the first performance, in the great Music Shed, of an Elergy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for years conductor of the Boston Symphony. Composer of the "Elegy" is Dr. Howard Hanson of Eastman School of Music, Rochester.

Rudolf Serkin, noted concert pianist, who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624 last summer when he made his first appearance in a Berkshire Festival concert, will be soloist Saturday night, playing Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

DR. HOWARD Hanson
. . . composer of "Elegy"

Next Sunday afternoon's concert will comprise music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. Soloist in the Hinemith Violin Concerto will be Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Richard Burgin.

The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts opens Wednesday night, Aug. 1 with a joint recital by Pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. On Friday night, Aug. 3, the gifted young conductor Eleazar de Cavallo will conduct the full Symphony orchestra in works by Barraud, de Falla, Ravel and Stravinsky. Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. de Cavallo) will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto, Mr. de Cavallo conducted the Israel Philharmonic in Syracuse seasons ago.

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 23 1956

Magic of Music At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 23—One can learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills, the week-end of July 27, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

On that week-end, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known Festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p. m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p. m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p. m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; Hindemith's Violin Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281
JUL 23 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAMS PLANNED

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves Wednesday into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the coming week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

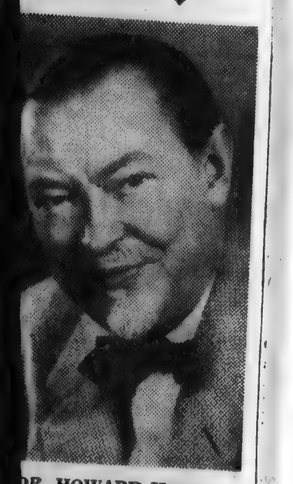
Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler.

TIGHT BINDING

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

JUL

gy' to Be erkshires



OR. HOWARD Hanson
composer of "Elegy"

t Sunday afternoon's con- will comprise music by ieff, Hindemith and Mah- loist in the Hinemith Violin to will be Ruth Posselt, in life Mrs. Richard Burgin. ifth week of Berkshire l concerts opens Wednes- ht, Aug. 1 with a joint by Pianist Rudolf Serkin Boston Symphony Wood- uartet. On Friday night, the gifted young con- Eleazar de Cavallo will the full Symphony or- in works by Barraud, de Ravel and Stravinsky. de Oliveira (Mrs. de with a soloist in the oncerto, Mr. de Cavallo d the Israel Philhar- n Syracuse seasons ago.

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,281

JUL 23 1956

ERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAMS PLANNED

The Berkshire Festival of the ston Symphony Orchestra at nglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves ednesday into the fourth of its weeks of summer symphonic sic, with a concert of chamber sic by Mendelssohn, Ravel and ahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, rth in a series of six Wednes- evening programs of this na- e, in the Theatre-Concert ll.

Charles Munch, music director the Boston Symphony, will duct two of the coming week- 's three concerts in the Sic Shed, on Friday and ay evenings, and the orc 's associate conductor certmaster, Richard Bu es. the podium with the stra next Sunday afterno r. Munch's Friday prog prises orchestral music thoven, Tchaikovsky, and glewood premiere of a w Goffredo Petrassi, noted composer who is guest te f composition this summe orchestra's summer m ol at Tanglewood, the B Music Center.

e Saturday evening fes ert is composed of work mann, Honegger, Debu the first Tanglewood nance of a contempo by Howard Hanson, d f music at the East ol of Music, Universit hester, New York.

chard Burgin's Sunday on concert consists of Prokofieff, Hindemith er.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 23 1956

Munch Opens New Season At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 22—The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood brought more than 20,000 music lovers for three concerts conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

More than 6,200 were in the opening audience Friday evening when Charles Munch raised his baton to start the four-week season of concerts in the big music shed. The performance of the Brahms "Symphony No. 2, in D major" was so fine that one was assured of another memorable season of excellent performances which the large week-end audiences here have come to accept as normal.

Despite the heavy rain of Saturday which kept away many who normally are seated on the spacious lawns, there was a large audience for the performance of Wagner's "Die Walkure," Act I, which featured the soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. The first part of the program presented Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques", composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was a rapt audience which listened to the excellent performance of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" at the opening concert. There was color and fire in the performance of Ravel's ballet music from his "Daphnis et Chloe." Throughout the evening the string section of the Boston gave an inspired performance. Mr. Munch conducted with such ease of manner and the orchestra responded with such splendor that it was difficult to realize what rehearsal had gone on behind the scenes in the days preceding.

The Sunday afternoon performance brought a large audience to the grounds as well as the shed to hear the 81-year-old Pierre Monteux conduct the program of Rossini, Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and Schubert's "Symphony in C Major."

Concerts this week will bring the music of Beethoven, Tschaikovsky, and Petrassi Friday evening; Rudolph Serkin as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" Saturday evening, and Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto" Sunday afternoon with her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister, conducting that concert.

The Sunday afternoon program will include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "symphony No. 1, in D Major."

S.M.

Generous Hand Greets Monteux At Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux, distinguished former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as guest conductor Sunday afternoon at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood to a group of almost 7,000 music-lovers.

The delightful Overture to Rossini's opera "L'Italiana in Algeri" opened an exceedingly interesting program. A bit hesitant at first, an infectious and insistent pulse soon dominated, and a provocation theme in the woodwinds giving the proper feminine touch a bubbly and light-hearted mood was established with a pseudo-oriental vein.

The intensely compelling and ingenious Concerto for orchestra, so-called because of its treatment of single instrument groups in a soloistic manner, by Bela Bartok, Hungarian composer and scholar, was given an understanding but uninspired reading by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra. The concerto abounds in inventive genius, only two of the movements in more or less standard sonata form. One is intrigued by contrasts; the primitive rhythmic pattern beginning and ending the second movement, including five unrelated sections for winds and muted trumpets, consecutively, in the midst of which appears a short chorale for brass instruments and sidedrum; a stream of melody doused with a burst of Parisian gaiety; a shimmering misty texture unmatched in its varied tonal color, serving as a background for several successive themes. The final movement ends on a note of triumph, "life-assertion" as the composer called it. Certainly this concerto reflects the all-embracing personality of the composer whom musicologists and musicians consider was an outstanding genius of this century; it can well be listened to many times over with freshened interest.

As one of the musicians mentioned, Schubert wrote one unfinished and one unending symphony; the latter was the final work on Sunday's program. For all its length, it is one that abounds in melodic fertility and clear instrumental usage. The horns of the andante of the first movement were compassionate in the opening theme, the strings sturdy in their handling of the main theme; the oboe hauntingly plaintive in the transitional second movement; the scherzo seemed quite repetitious in the interpretation Mr. Monteux afforded it; the finale inevitably swept to an uplifting finish.

Mr. Monteux, who has reached his 81st year, is a conductor of nobly simple stature; though he is not inclined to inspire the orchestra players as does Mr. Munch by the force of his personality and artistic inventiveness, his musical rightness and benign character always produce a clean treatment of the composer's works. The audience was most generous in its appreciation at Mr. Monteux' first of two appearances at Tanglewood.—M. deB. B.

ting disease . . .

Northampton Daily Hitt July 23

Generous Hand Greets Monteux At Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux, distinguished former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as guest conductor Sunday afternoon at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood to a group of almost 7,000 music-lovers.

The delightful Overture to Rossini's opera "L'Italiana in Algeri" opened an exceedingly interesting program. A bit hesitant at first, an infectious and insistent pulse soon dominated, and a provocation theme in the woodwinds giving the proper feminine touch a bubbly and light-hearted mood was established with a pseudo-oriental vein.

The intensely compelling and ingenious Concerto for orchestra, so-called because of its treatment of single instrument groups in a soloistic manner, by Bela Bartok, Hungarian composer and scholar, was given an understanding but uninspired reading by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra. The concerto abounds in inventive genius, only two of the movements in more or less standard sonata form. One is intrigued by contrasts; the primitive rhythmic pattern beginning and ending the second movement, including five unrelated sections for winds and muted trumpets, consecutively, in the midst of which appears a short chorale for brass instruments and sidedrum; a stream of melody doused with a burst of Parisian gaiety; a shimmering misty texture unmatched in its varied tonal color, serving as a background for several successive themes. The final movement ends on a note of triumph, "life-assertion" as the composer called it. Certainly this concerto reflects the all-embracing personality of the composer whom musicologists and musicians consider was an outstanding genius of this century; it can well be listened to many times over with freshened interest.

As one of the musicians mentioned, Schubert wrote one unfinished and one unending symphony; the latter was the final work on Sunday's program. For all its length, it is one that abounds in melodic fertility and clear instrumental usage. The horns of the andante of the first movement were compassionate in the opening theme, the strings sturdy in their handling of the main theme; the oboe hauntingly plaintive in the transitional second movement; the scherzo seemed quite repetitious in the interpretation Mr. Monteux afforded it; the finale inevitably swept to an uplifting finish.

Mr. Monteux, who has reached his 81st year, is a conductor of nobly simple stature; though he is not inclined to inspire the orchestra players as does Mr. Munch by the force of his personality and artistic inventiveness, his musical rightness and benign character always produce a clean treatment of the composer's works. The audience was most generous in its appreciation at Mr. Monteux' first of two appearances at Tanglewood.—M. deB. B.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 24 1956

Munch Conducts Twice This Week At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28) evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audience during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt — in private life, Mrs. Burgin — as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Where Readers Have 'Say So'

(All communications for this column must be signed by the writers, but not necessarily for publication. Give street address and telephone number. No attention is paid to anonymous communications.)

North Tonawanda News

Tanglewood Always To Provide Spell Of Great Music

Northampton, July 24, 1956

To the Editor:

The criticism (by Jay S. Harrison), of Dr. Munch and his Tanglewood programs reprinted in a recent Gazette seems to me very lacking in sensitivity.

There are still people so humble that they can listen even to Beethoven and Brahms a thousand times without exhausting their beauty. For such people, Dr. Munch studies the oft-repeated symphonies so that he may interpret them more faithfully and so free the power in them.

For the people who require variety, there are hundreds of recordings available. But for people who crave deeper familiarity with the music of the old masters, who are grateful to anyone whose wide experience enables him to interpret that music richly, and who enjoy human companionship under the spell of what is great in music, there is, and always will be, Tanglewood.

A Listener.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384

JUL 24 1956

Tanglewood Music Fete In Fourth Week

Local vacationers may enjoy the magic of music and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills during the coming weekend by visiting the famous Tanglewood Music Festival, now completing its fourth week.

The July 27 performance of the internationally-famous Festival, scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Routes 2, 9, nad 20 connect with Route 7.

News (e)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,895

JUL 23 1956

Tanglewood Concerts Reach Fourth of Six Week Season

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the TheatreConcert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

Today's program for the Music Shed concert by the Boston Symphony, at 2:30 p.m., will be Rossini: Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert: Symphony No. 7, in C major; Pierre Monteux, conductor.

[188]

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577
JUL 23 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Walkuere' Thrills at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 23—The contrasting personalities of two Frenchmen, Charles Munch, Saturday night, and Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon, on the podium for the Bostonians here at Tanglewood, plus more provocative fare, program-wise, whetted interest in the Berkshire Festival week-end.

Though two highly significant contemporary works were performed, the most exciting event from the audience standpoint without a doubt was the concert version of Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," performed Saturday night.

Munch conducted the work with his usual communicative excitement but the outstanding contribution of the three soloists could not be underestimated. If Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan opera soprano, as Sieglinde, did not thrill every listener with the opulent beauty of her voice, the fault was not hers. Singing on a cold, damp night, where even wrapped in a mink stole she must have been chilly, she poured out tones which were effulgent in quality and alive with Wagnerian ecstasy. In my experience I have never heard her sing so well. And as could be expected, she sang with her familiar impeccable musicianship.

The Siegmund was the young tenor, Albert Da Costa, who made a great stir this past season when he sang Walther in the Met's "Die Meistersinger" on short notice, his first leading role in the house. Da Costa is a real find, the Met should guard him well. This was his first Siegmund anywhere and his trumpet-like quality which soars over even the loudest orchestral passages, was excellent in its effect. He also obviously had studied the role with thoroughness, was impressive in his sincerity. His command of the Wagnerian style and his vocal opulence will grow with experience, but he is well on his way to a big career in this almost-impossible-to-find category.

James Pease, bass, recently returned after a long series of successes in European opera houses, sang the lesser role of Hunding, with authority and with a sonorous richness.

While Munch doesn't command the Wagnerian style as he does the French, and there were many details which left something to be desired, the general effect was dynamic and convincing.

Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Prize for the outstanding new orchestral work performed during 1955, was played before the intermission on Saturday. The Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" had the same place on yesterday's schedule.

The Martinu wears well, on second hearing it proved again to be worth the honor awarded it. Under Munch's direction, the Bostonians played the composition with stunning drama and a picturesque sense of color.

Monteux, the calm philosopher, and the impartial, wise Jupiter of the baton, as opposed to the promethean approach of Munch, projected a significant and masterly interpretation of the Bartok. The majestic grandeur of Schubert's Seventh Symphony brought yesterday's program to a close.

Rory Calhoun stars in Technicolor frontier tale, "Raw Edge," opening Friday at the Palace.

Express (e)
NEWPORT, Vt.
Republican
Circ. 4,234
JUL 25 1956

in Montpelier.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Commanday of Mexico and Mrs. A. E. Arkin were entertained Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs Herman Pigula in St. Johnsbury The Commandays are on their first visit to Newport and are enthusiastic over the beauties of its natural settings. They have expressed the need for more widely acclaiming the beauty spots of America. Leaving for Hinsdale, Mass., today for their summer home near Tanglewood summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, they are taking brochures of the city which they will take to their new hotel.

Warren & Barrington
Gazette
WARREN, R. I.
Bi-Weekly Non-Part.
Circ. 2400
JUL 24 1956

The Berkshire Music Festivtl

To Be Held in Tanglewood, Weekend of July 27, Completing Fourth Week of Season

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, in

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p. m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky.

On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p. m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy.

Sunday,s selections are presented at 2:30 p. m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet," Hindemith's Violin Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

(Continued on Page 8)

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
JUL 25 1956

DUNCAN MacDONALD suggests . . . . .

(Duncan MacDonald is featured every weekday on the "YANKEE HOME and FOOD SHOW" on the Yankee Network at 1:15 p.m.)

. . . THE BERKSHIRES as an ideal vacation spot. With so much emphasis on the musical attractions at Tanglewood, one is apt to forget that even after Labor Day, the Berkshires have many points of interest besides beautiful scenery and music. A mere listing indicates a variety of possibilities: At Pittsfield, The Berkshire Museum, The Berkshire Athenaeum which houses the Herman Melville Memorial Room, the Little Cinema, the Berkshire Garden Center. Just a few miles away there is the Crane Museum at Dalton; the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary at Lenox; the studio of Daniel Chester French at Stockbridge, Massachusetts. And at Williamstown, not too far away, the new Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute.

. . . MARGARET FRENCH CRESSON is a charming person to engage in conversation about her father, Daniel Chester French, the distinguished sculptor. Mrs. Cresson lives in the family home which is adjacent to Crestwood, the sculptor's studio. Open to the public until the end of September, the studio has many models, plaster casts and bronzes, including those of the Lincoln Memorial, the Alma Mater on the steps of Low Library at Columbia University, the John Harvard in Harvard Yard, the bronze doors of the Boston Public Library, the War Memorial at Exeter, New Hampshire, the Minute Man at Concord.

. . . CHESTERWOOD is a page out of American history, Daniel Chester French was only 22 when the Concord Committee entrusted him with the commission for the Minute Man. When the statue was unveiled by Ralph Waldo Emerson on April 19, 1875, it brought immediate fame to the sculptor. Fifty years later he was present at the dedication of his most famous statue, the great Seated Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

. . . SPEAKING OF HISTORY, George Bisacca, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, has revived a friendly Civil War on his 500-acre tract at Lenox, Massachusetts, formerly the estate of multi-millionaire Harris C. Fahnestock, and now a year-round vacation resort. Each Sunday afternoon the guests and staff 'take sides', put on their Civil War attire, and a sham battle takes place. George Bisacca has visited every important battlefield in the United States, and his collection of Civil War cannons, guns, drawings and flags is attracting nationwide attention.

. . . EASTOVER'S INDOOR POOL is one of the most fabulous in New England. Built at a cost of $115,000, guests can enjoy swimming on a winter's day while watching skiing enthusiasts outside the massive picture windows. Other recreation is provided in the form of golf, tennis, horseback, archery, hunting and fishing. Eastover is on the American plan and 'seconds' and 'thirds' at mealtime do not cause a lift of the eyebrows or a lift in the price. Whether one stays in the main house, the converted carriage house, or in one of the cottages the view is breathtaking and it is not surprising that the millionaires of yesteryear came to Lenox from all over the entire country to spend the summer.

. . . PRUNE WHIP is an easy dessert. Combine in top of double boiler: 8 egg whites, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon prune cooking liquid, and a dash of salt. Place over boiling water and beat with rotary beater until mixture stands up in peaks when beater is lifted (4 to 7 minutes). Remove from heat and fold in ¾ cup pureed cooked prunes. Cool and serve with cream or custard sauce. 6 servings.

. . . PRUNES ARE POTENT PROVIDERS of blood building nutrients and quick energy from fruit sugar. They are a rich source of needed Vitamins A, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

. . . for a THOUGHT: Cervantes said, "The bow cannot possibly always stand bent, nor can human nature or human frailty subsist without some lawful recreation."

—KEEP YOUR CHIN UP!

—Duncan MacDonald

July 25/56

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON

Beaux Arts Trio Will Be Featured

The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox will be given tonight in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D Minor), Ravel (in A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air. Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America, in addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second weekend of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schuman Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

SLIPPERY BEAR

Theatres

Academy
Today & Thurs. — Trapeze at 2:10-4:25-6:40-9:00.

Calvin
Today thru Sat.—That Certain Feeling at 2:10-5:40-9:05; The Scarlet Hour at 3:35-7:20; Cartoons at 1:20 only.

Amherst
Closed today.

Majestic (EASTHAMPTON)
Tonight—The Bold and the Brave at 7:45; Jungle Moon Men at 6:00 and 9:00.

Hadley Drive-In
Tonight—Tribute to a Bad Man at 10:30; The Birds and the Bees at 8:45.

Red Rock Drive-In
Tonight—Desperate Hours at 8:45; At Gunpoint at 10:50.

$40

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements
JUL 25 1956

Bostonians Hit Russian Cities

Boston, July 24.

Boston Symphony will play 37 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia, during its five and one-half week tour starting next month. Charles Munch and 106 men fly to Europe in two groups immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

Opener: concerts in Cork, Ireland, Friday night, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Then five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. After that Scandinavia for four days.

Bostonians will be first American symph to perform in the Soviet Union. During six days, Sept. 5-10, a brace of concerts will be given in Leningrad and Moscow, respectively.

Expenses of this portion of the tour will be assumed by the Russian government, including transportation by air and train, and also a stipend for the four concerts. After Russia Hubsters hit Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London.

Tour was traffic-managed here this week by Thomas D. Perry, arch manager, and Dolf C. Bulterman, N. E. manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines.

[189]

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUL 23 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Walkuere' Thrills at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 23—The contrasting personalities of two Frenchmen, Charles Munch, Saturday night, and Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon, on the podium for the Bostonians here at Tanglewood, plus more provocative fare, program-wise, whetted interest in the Berkshire Festival week-end.

Though two highly significant contemporary works were performed, the most exciting event from the audience standpoint without a doubt was the concert version of Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," performed Saturday night.

Munch conducted the work with his usual communicative excitement but the outstanding contribution of the three soloists could not be underestimated. If Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, as Sieglinde, did not thrill every listener with the opulent beauty of her voice, the fault was not hers. Singing on a cold, damp night, where even wrapped in a mink stole she must have been chilly, she poured out tones which were effulgent in quality and alive with Wagnerian ecstasy. In my experience I have never heard her sing so well. And as could be expected, she sang with her familiar impeccable musicianship.

The Siegmund was the young tenor, Albert Da Costa, who made a great stir this past season when he sang Walther in the Met's "Die Meistersinger" on short notice, his first leading role in the house. Da Costa is a real find, the Met should guard him well. This was his first Siegmund anywhere and his trumpet-like quality which soars over even the loudest orchestral passages, was excellent in its effect. He also obviously had studied the role with thoroughness, was impressive in his sincerity. His command of the Wagnerian style and his vocal opulence will grow with experience, but he is well on his way to a big career in this almost-impossible-to-find category.

James Pease, bass, recently returned after a long series of successes in European opera houses, sang the lesser role of Hunding, with authority and with a sonorous richness.

While Munch doesn't command the Wagnerian style as he does the French, and there were many details which left something to be desired, the general effect was dynamic and convincing.

Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Prize for the outstanding new orchestral work performed during 1955, was played before the intermission on Saturday. The Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" had the same place on yesterday's schedule.

The Martinu wears well, on second hearing it proved again to be worth the honor awarded it. Under Munch's direction, the Bostonians played the composition with stunning drama and a picturesque sense of color.

Monteux, the calm philosopher and the impartial, wise Jupiter of the baton, as opposed to the promethean approach of Munch, projected a significant and masterly interpretation of the Bartok. The majestic grandeur of Schubert's Seventh Symphony brought yesterday's program to a close.

Rory Calhoun stars in Technicolor frontier tale, "Raw Edge," opening Friday at the Palace.

Warren & Barrington Gazette
WARREN, R. I.
Bi-Weekly Non-Part.
Circ. 2400

JUL 24 1956

The Berkshire Music Festivtl

To Be Held in Tanglewood, Weekend of July 27, Completing Fourth Week of Season

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills the weekend of July 27, by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, in [illegible]

On that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season.

The July 27 performance, scheduled for 8:30 p. m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky.

On Saturday, July 28, the 8:30 p. m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy.

Sunday,s selections are presented at 2:30 p. m. and on the 29th, visitors will hear Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet," Hindemith's Violin Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

(Continued on Page 8)

Express (e)
NEWPORT, Vt.
Republican
Circ. 4,234

JUL 25 1956

in Montpelier.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Commanday of Mexico and Mrs. A. E. Arkin were entertained Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs Herman Pigula in St. Johnsbury The Commandays are on their first visit to Newport and are enthusiastic over the beauties of its natural settings. They have expressed the need for more widely acclaiming the beauty spots of America. Leaving for Hinsdale, Mass., today for their summer home near Tanglewood summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, they are taking brochures of the city which they will take to their new hotel.

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384

JUL 25 1956

DUNCAN MacDONALD suggests . . . . .

(Duncan MacDonald is featured every weekday on the "YANKEE HOME and FOOD SHOW" on the Yankee Network at 1:15 p.m.)

. . . THE BERKSHIRES as an ideal vacation spot. With so much emphasis on the musical attractions at Tanglewood, one is apt to forget that even after Labor Day, the Berkshires have many points of interest besides beautiful scenery and music. A mere listing indicates a variety of possibilities: At Pittsfield, The Berkshire Museum, The Berkshire Athenaeum which houses the Herman Melville Memorial Room, the Little Cinema, the Berkshire Garden Center. Just a few miles away there is the Crane Museum at Dalton; the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary at Lenox; the studio of Daniel Chester French at Stockbridge, Massachusetts. And at Williamstown, not too far away, the new Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute.

. . . MARGARET FRENCH CRESSON is a charming person to engage in conversation about her father, Daniel Chester French, the distinguished sculptor. Mrs. Cresson lives in the family home which is adjacent to Crestwood, the sculptor's studio. Open to the public until the end of September, the studio has many models, plaster casts and bronzes, including those of the Lincoln Memorial, the Alma Mater on the steps of Low Library at Columbia University, the John Harvard in Harvard Yard, the bronze doors of the Boston Public Library, the War Memorial at Exeter, New Hampshire, the Minute Man at Concord.

. . . CHESTERWOOD is a page out of American history. Daniel Chester French was only 22 when the Concord Committee entrusted him with the commission for the Minute Man. When the statue was unveiled by Ralph Waldo Emerson on April 19, 1875, it brought immediate fame to the sculptor. Fifty years later he was present at the dedication of his most famous statue, the great Seated Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

. . . SPEAKING OF HISTORY, George Bisacca, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, has revived a friendly Civil War on his 500-acre tract at Lenox, Massachusetts, formerly the estate of multi-millionaire Harris C. Fahnestock, and now a year-round vacation resort. Each Sunday afternoon the guests and staff 'take sides', put on their Civil War attire, and a sham battle takes place. George Bisacca has visited every important battlefield in the United States, and his collection of Civil War cannons, guns, drawings and flags is attracting nationwide attention.

. . . EASTOVER'S INDOOR POOL is one of the most fabulous in New England. Built at a cost of $115,000, guests can enjoy swimming on a winter's day while watching skiing enthusiasts outside the massive picture windows. Other recreation is provided in the form of golf, tennis, horseback, archery, hunting and fishing. Eastover is on the American plan and 'seconds' and 'thirds' at mealtime do not cause a lift of the eyebrows or a lift in the price. Whether one stays in the main house, the converted carriage house, or in one of the cottages the view is breathtaking and it is not surprising that the millionaires of yesteryear came to Lenox from all over the entire country to spend the summer.

. . . PRUNE WHIP is an easy dessert. Combine in top of double boiler: 3 egg whites, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon prune cooking liquid, and a dash of salt. Place over boiling water and beat with rotary beater until mixture stands up in peaks when beater is lifted (4 to 7 minutes). Remove from heat and fold in ¾ cup pureed cooked prunes. Cool and serve with cream or custard sauce. 6 servings.

. . . PRUNES ARE POTENT PROVIDERS of blood building nutrients and quick energy from fruit sugar. They are a rich source of needed Vitamins A, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

. . . for a THOUGHT: Cervantes said, "The bow cannot possibly always stand bent, nor can human nature or human frailty subsist without some lawful recreation."

—KEEP YOUR CHIN UP!

—Duncan MacDonald

July 25/56

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON

Beaux Arts Trio Will Be Featured

The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox will be given tonight in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D Minor), Ravel (in A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air. Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second weekend of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schuman Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

SLIPPERY BEAR

Theatres

Academy
Today & Thurs. — Trapeze at 2:10-4:25-6:40-9:00.

Calvin
Today thru Sat.—That Certain Feeling at 2:10-5:40-9:05; The Scarlet Hour at 3:55-7:20; Cartoons at 1:20 only.

Amherst
Closed today.

Majestic (EASTHAMPTON)
Tonight—The Bold and the Brave at 7:45; Jungle Moon Man at 6:00 and 9:00.

Hadley Drive-In
Tonight—Tribute to a Bad Man at 10:30; The Birds and the Bees at 8:45.

Red Rock Drive-In
Tonight—Desperate Hours at 8:45; At Gunpoint at 10:50.

$40

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements

JUL 25 1956

Bostonians Hit Russian Cities

Boston, July 24.

Boston Symphony will play 37 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia, during its five and one-half week tour starting next month. Charles Munch and 106 men fly to Europe in two groups immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

Opener: concerts in Cork, Ireland, Friday night, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Then five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. After that Scandinavia for four days.

Bostonians will be first American symph to perform in the Soviet Union. During six days, Sept. 5-10, a brace of concerts will be given in Leningrad and Moscow, respectively.

Expenses of this portion of the tour will be assumed by the Russian government, including transportation by air and train, and also a stipend for the four concerts. After Russia Hubsters hit Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London.

Tour was traffic-managed here this week by Thomas D. Perry, orch manager, and Dolf C. Bulterman, N. E. manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines.

[189]

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUL 23 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Walkuere' Thrills at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 23—The contrasting personalities of two Frenchmen, Charles Munch, Saturday night, and Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon, on the podium for the Bostonians here at Tanglewood, plus more provocative fare, program-wise, whetted interest in the Berkshire Festival week-end.

Though two highly significant contemporary works were performed, the most exciting event from the audience standpoint without a doubt was the concert version of Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," performed Saturday night.

Munch conducted the work with his usual communicative excitement but the outstanding contribution of the three soloists should not be underestimated. If Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, as Sieglinde, did not thrill every listener with the opulent beauty of her voice, the fault was not hers. Singing on a cold, damp night, where even wrapped in a mink stole she must have been chilly, she poured out tones which were effulgent in quality and alive with Wagnerian ecstasy. In my experience I have never heard her sing so well. And as could be expected, she sang with her familiar impeccable musicianship.

The Siegmund was the young tenor, Albert Da Costa, who made a great stir this past season when he sang Walther in the Met's "Die Meistersinger" on short notice, his first leading role in the house. Da Costa is a real find, the Met should guard him well. This was his first Siegmund anywhere and his trumpet-like quality which soars over even the loudest orchestral passages, was excellent in its effect. He also obviously had studied the role with thoroughness, was impressive in his sincerity. His command of the Wagnerian style and his vocal opulence will grow with experience, but he is well on his way to a big career in this almost-impossible-to-find category.

James Pease, bass, recently returned after a long series of successes in European opera houses, sang the lesser role of Hunding, with authority and with a sonorous richness.

While Munch doesn't command the Wagnerian style as he does the French, and there were many details which left something to be desired, the general effect was dynamic and convincing.

Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Prize for the outstanding new orchestral work performed during 1955, was played before the intermission on Saturday. The Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" had the same place on yesterday's schedule.

The Martinu wears well, on second hearing it proved again to be worth the honor awarded it. Under Munch's direction, the Bostonians played the composition with stunning drama and a picturesque sense of color.

Monteux, the calm philosopher and the impartial, wise Jupiter of the baton, as opposed to the promethean approach of Munch, projected a significant and masterly interpretation of the Bartok. The majestic grandeur of Schubert's Seventh Symphony brought yesterday's program to a close.

Rory Calhoun stars in Technicolor frontier tale, "Raw Edge," opening Friday at the Palace.

...SHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

(Continued from Page 1)

Plan now for a week or a weekend in the Bay State's beautiful Berkshire Hills. There's always plenty to do in this enchanting natural playground. Special events in local towns plus the area's natural facilities for swimming, fishing, hiking, picnicking and general relaxation will make your stay a pleasant and memorable one.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Express (e)
NEWPORT, Vt.
Republican
Circ. 4,234

JUL 25 1956

in Montpelier.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Commanday of Mexico and Mrs. A. E. Arkin were entertained Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs Herman Pigula in St. Johnsbury. The Commandays are on their first visit to Newport and are enthusiastic over the beauties of its natural settings. They have expressed the need for more widely acclaiming the beauty spots of America. Leaving for Hinsdale, Mass., today for their summer home near Tanglewood summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, they are taking brochures of the city which they will take to their new hotel

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384

JUL 25 1956

DUNCAN MacDONALD suggests . . . . .

(Duncan MacDonald is featured every weekday on the "YANKEE HOME and FOOD SHOW" on the Yankee Network at 1:15 p.m.)

. . . THE BERKSHIRES as an ideal vacation spot. With so much emphasis on the musical attractions at Tanglewood, one is apt to forget that even after Labor Day, the Berkshires have many points of interest besides beautiful scenery and music. A mere listing indicates a variety of possibilities: At Pittsfield, The Berkshire Museum, The Berkshire Athenaeum which houses the Herman Melville Memorial Room, the Little Cinema, the Berkshire Garden Center. Just a few miles away there is the Crane Museum at Dalton; the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary at Lenox; the studio of Daniel Chester French at Stockbridge, Massachusetts. And at Williamstown, not too far away, the new Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute.

. . . MARGARET FRENCH CRESSON is a charming person to engage in conversation about her father, Daniel Chester French, the distinguished sculptor. Mrs. Cresson lives in the family home which is adjacent to Crestwood, the sculptor's studio. Open to the public until the end of September, the studio has many models, plaster casts and bronzes, including those of the Lincoln Memorial, the Alma Mater on the steps of Low Library at Columbia University, the John Harvard in Harvard Yard, the bronze doors of the Boston Public Library, the War Memorial at Exeter, New Hampshire, the Minute Man at Concord.

. . . CHESTERWOOD is a page out of American history. Daniel Chester French was only 22 when the Concord Committee entrusted him with the commission for the Minute Man. When the statue was unveiled by Ralph Waldo Emerson on April 19, 1875, it brought immediate fame to the sculptor. Fifty years later he was present at the dedication of his most famous statue, the great Seated Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

. . . SPEAKING OF HISTORY, George Bisacca, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, has revived a friendly Civil War on his 500-acre tract at Lenox, Massachusetts, formerly the estate of multi-millionaire Harris C. Fahnestock, and now a year-round vacation resort. Each Sunday afternoon the guests and staff 'take sides', put on their Civil War attire, and a sham battle takes place. George Bisacca has visited every important battlefield in the United States, and his collection of Civil War cannons, guns, drawings and flags is attracting nationwide attention.

. . . EASTOVER'S INDOOR POOL is one of the most fabulous in New England. Built at a cost of $115,000, guests can enjoy swimming on a winter's day while watching skiing enthusiasts outside the massive picture windows. Other recreation is provided in the form of golf, tennis, horseback, archery, hunting and fishing. Eastover is on the American plan and 'seconds' and 'thirds' at mealtime do not cause a lift of the eyebrows or a lift in the price. Whether one stays in the main house, the converted carriage house, or in one of the cottages the view is breathtaking and it is not surprising that the millionaires of yesteryear came to Lenox from all over the entire country to spend the summer.

. . . PRUNE WHIP is an easy dessert. Combine in top of double boiler: 3 egg whites, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon prune cooking liquid, and a dash of salt. Place over boiling water and beat with rotary beater until mixture stands up in peaks when beater is lifted (4 to 7 minutes). Remove from heat and fold in ¾ cup pureed cooked prunes. Cool and serve with cream or custard sauce. 6 servings.

. . . PRUNES ARE POTENT PROVIDERS of blood building nutrients and quick energy from fruit sugar. They are a rich source of needed Vitamins A, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

. . . for a THOUGHT: Cervantes said, "The bow cannot possibly always stand bent, nor can human nature or human frailty subsist without some lawful recreation."

—KEEP YOUR CHIN UP!

—Duncan MacDonald

July 25/56

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON

Beaux Arts Trio Will Be Featured

The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox will be given tonight in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D Minor), Ravel (in A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air. Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second weekend of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schuman Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

SLIPPERY BEAR

Theatres

Academy
Today & Thurs. — Trapeze at 2:10-4:25-6:40-9:00.

Calvin
Today thru Sat.—That Certain Feeling at 2:10-5:40-9:05; The Scarlet Hour at 3:55-7:20; Cartoons at 1:20 only.

Amherst
Closed today.

Majestic (EASTHAMPTON)
Tonight—The Bold and the Brave at 7:45; Jungle Moon Men at 6:00 and 9:00.

Hadley Drive-In
Tonight—Tribute to a Bad Man at 10:30; The Birds and the Bees at 8:45.

Red Rock Drive-In
Tonight—Desperate Hours at 8:45; At Gunpoint at 10:50.

$40

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements

JUL 25 1956

Bostonians Hit Russian Cities

Boston, July 24.

Boston Symphony will play 37 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia, during its five and one-half week tour starting next month. Charles Munch and 106 men fly to Europe in two groups immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

Opener: concerts in Cork, Ireland, Friday night, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Then five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. After that Scandinavia for four days.

Bostonians will be first American symph to perform in the Soviet Union. During six days, Sept. 5-10, a brace of concerts will be given in Leningrad and Moscow, respectively.

Expenses of this portion of the tour will be assumed by the Russian government, including transportation by air and train, and also a stipend for the four concerts. After Russia Hubsters hit Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London.

Tour was traffic-managed here this week by Thomas D. Perry, orch manager, and Dolf C. Bulterman, N. E. manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines.

[189]

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 25 1956

1500 INVITED TO CEREMONY

Archbishop Cushing to Speak At Jesuit Ground Breaking

Church dignitaries from all New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit novitiate at Lenox, which will replace the building destroyed by fire March 10.

More than 1500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held at Tanglewood, facilities provided by the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England hierarchy will be present. Ground breaking will be performed by Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Springfield Diocese. Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S. J., provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Shadowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin Tuesday, a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31 will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, National chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced yesterday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and cochairmen. These include: Lawrence T. Callahan, North Shore (Mass.) area; Robert T. Capeless, Berkshire area; Judge John P. Cooney, Jr., Rhode Island area; Judge John E. Fenton, executive board; Charles J. Fleming, Worcester area; E. Clayton Gengras, Hartford area; William S. Ginn, Berkshire area; Thomas J. Groark, Norwich area; Thomas W. Grzebien, Jr., Rhode Island area; Solomon G. Hajjar, M.D., Merrimack Valley area; John F. Havens, Hartford area; George J. Jacob, New Haven area; James V. Joy, Fairfield County area; James B. Kelley, Jr., Bristol County area; Dr. James J. Kelley, Rhode Island area; Judge Daniel M. Keyes, Jr., Springfield area; John A. Largay, Waterbury area; Daniel E. Marshall, Maine area; James J. Marshall, Worcester area; Adm. Edmond J. Moran, Fairfield County area; Dr. Richard L. Murphy, New Hampshire area; Harry J. O'Sullivan, Brockton area; Robert H. Ryan, special gifts, Boston; and Walter F. Sullivan, Central Massachusetts area.

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

HAMPDEN

Courier-Gazette
ROCKLAND, Maine
Tri-Wkly. Ind. Rep.
Circ. 6,547

JUL 24 1956

Realm OF music

By GLADYS HEISTAD

The Blue Hill music season opened officially on July 18 with an evening concert given at Kneisel Hall with Joseph Fuchs, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, as soloists. Mr. Fuchs and Mr. Balsam will in effect, offer a series within a seris of chamber music concerts. Their offering marks the first half of a group of six evening concerts that will go through most of August. The last three consist of a concert by Zlatko Balokovic, violin, and the resident quartet on Aug. 8; Rolf Persinger, viola, assisted by Louis Persinger, on Aug. 15; and Artur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 27.

The Sunday concerts (afternoon) number five this summer, the first one taking place on July 22.

Mr. Fuchs and Mr. Balsam have recently returned from Europe, where they performed together in London the Beethoven sonata cycle. So great was the response of their hearers that they have been booked to repeat the programs in the spring of 1957.

Blue Hill and environs are also privileged this season in having the opportunity to hear the Albeneri Trio, whose personnel is Ward Davenny, piano, Giorgio Ciompi, violin, and Benar Heifetz, 'cello. This concert is the gift to Kneisel Hall of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress, and the second such gift in the three-year history of the Music School. It is offered as a special benefit to the scholarship fund—proceeds from all the other concerts, as usual, will be used for this purpose.

Mr. Kneisel is no stranger in Blue Hill. He has played in and about Blue Hill since he was a very young man, studying with his father, the late Franz Kneisel. Mr. Warburg, who was featured in the first Sunday afternoon concert, is also well known in Blue Hill, having spent many summers in that lovely town as a boy and youth. At the age of 14, he became a student of Willem Willeke, 'cellist of the Kneisel Quartet, and for years thereafter he returned annually to study and play at Kneisel Hall. He is widely known as one of the leading 'cellists and conductors in this country. He is founder of the Stradivarius Society and a member of the staff of the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts and also Founder of the Brooklyn Symphony in New York.

Detailed information as to price of tickets both single and for the two series may be obtained by writing direct to Marianne Kneisel, director, Kneisel Hall, Blue Hill, Maine.

* * *

We are justly proud of Lilian Sprague Copping whose 91st birthday was celebrated on July 17. Few if any in this section have figured so prominently in music as Mrs. Copping over the years. She herself was the possessor of a notably fine voice, yet perhaps her greatest love was in teaching, and in this field she has been outstanding since she gave to her pupils much beyond just voice training. I say this first hand since I studied with Mrs. Copping for quite a period and have never ceased to be grateful and appreciative for all she gave me, both in vocal training and in the background of music. She was a truly dedicated teacher, with no limits set on time or painstaking care. Voice students who started their first lessons with her all attest to the knowledge she imparted to them—about musicians, about concerts she had heard and participated in, the history and literature of music—rich giving from her store of knowledge and interest.

While her teaching days were over some years ago, she has never lost her interest in music and its activities, and in her one-time pupils. And to talk with her today you would hear her delve into her great store of musical memories and bring up treasures. What a wealth she has given to the many "boys and girls" who studied with her! I know they do not forget.

* * *

I have just read a truly fascinating biography—that of Maude Adams—(Maude Adams: An Intimate Portrait, by Phyllis Robbins)."

And unless one reads this biography, he can never fully realize what a tremendously gifted and versatile woman and artist she was. She had a beautiful singing voice as well as speaking voice; she was gifted in writing, she had a decided turn for mechanics and worked out a system of stage lighting that I believe is still used today; these are only a few of the things this lovely and enchanting woman had at her command. Her teaching at Stephens College was outstanding in its vision and uthority.

I recalled that Miss Adams played in "Twelfth Night" in Camden but could not remember the year until I read this biogrphy. It was in 1934, during a tour of New England, in summer stock which opened in Ogunquit on July 16, playing the role of Maria in "Twelfth Night." The biography says that she "wearily traveled to Camden and other towns in Maine by bus, like the stage coach of her early theatrical days. Then Hanover and Keene, in New Hampshire, Brattleboro in Vermont, Westerly in Rhode Island, and Magnolia, Wellesley and Dennis in Massachusetts. The reviewers said that her Maria was less the earthy wench and more the child, seeking fun, her foolery taking a form more elfin than robust. How she managed this was her own secret, and how she conveyed this "youngness" was all the more amazing since she never made any effort to hide her years, she was then 61 years old.

She was deeply interested in producing a Bible play—she felt very strongly that "when religious faith is left out of the daily education of young people, it seems to be forgotten that it is to the church we look for beauty and goodness. If the church does not survive, will the spirit live" was one of her queries.

Of course the role of Babbie was her best known and made her famous everywhere she played "The Little Minister." Her contact with James Barrie who wrote "The Little Minister" and other plays for her, extended over many years and their friendship was deep and sincere. Several of Barrie's letters appear in the book.

A while back, Mrs. Helen Emmons, formerly of Warren, sent me a charming book showing Maude Adams in "The Little Minister." The book is an edition-de-luxe souvenir published by the arrangement with Charles Frohman, with drawings by C. Allan Gilbert—the date is 1898. The drawings are exquisite but lovelier still is the frontispiece picture showing Miss Adams at her loveliest. Few faces have the sensitivity and delicate beauty as hers did.

* * *

Those who follow the Berkshire Festival (Lenox, Mass.) will learn with interest that the Berkshire County group which fostered the symphonic festivals which have attracted international attention from the music world, have voted to dissolve their organization and to give the $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center. It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra—this donation including the $30,000 music shed at Tanglewood.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berk[illegible] attac[illegible] mai[illegible] field Inc.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 25 1956

Beaux Arts Trio Will Return to Music Festival Tonight

The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, will be given tonight in the intimate 1,200-seat Theater-Concert hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (In D Minor), Ravel (In A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second week end of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert, when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct a program, which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

[190]

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 25 1956

BEAUX ARTS TRIO TONIGHT AT FESTIVAL

Serkin, Burgin and Ruth Posselt Also Featured This Week

Lenox, July 25—The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesay evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, will be given tonight in the intimate 1200-seat theater-concert hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D Minor), Ravel (in A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air. Since his Town Hall debut in 1948, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second week end of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the 100 anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio, and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 900. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

RUTH POSSELT

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUL 25 1956

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week, opening with joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-peice Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro August 3; by Leonard Bernstein August 4; by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch August 5.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor - Soloist: Rudolpf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; Debussy: "La Mer" - Charles Munch, conductor; Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto - Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major - Richard Burgin, conductor.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 106th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a violin recital of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck, by Zino Francescatti, accompanied by Artur Balsam, on Wednesday evening, August 8, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. In the Music Shed Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, August 10 in a program of Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas. Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra Saturday evening, August 11 in selections of Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss. Dr. Munch will conclude the festival Sunday afternoon, August 12 with Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica"; and a concert version of the opening and final scenes of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and James Pease as soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students, trained by James Aliferis.

Thursday, August 9, is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," the day-long gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in the evening concert, and Arthur Fielder will conduct the Boston "Pops" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Press
STONEHAM, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,600

JUL 26 1956

JESUITS APPAECIATE TANGLEWOOD FACULTY

The Jesuits of New England expressed their appreciation last Monday for the proffer of Tanglewood at Lenox where ceremonies will be held Tuesday to note groundbreaking for the new Shadowbrook Novitiate.

The Very Rev. W. E. Fitzgerald, S. J. thanked the "Lenox neighbors for the immediate and friendly assistance when the old Novitiate was burned March 10, and again for answering our present need."

Standard-Star, New Rochelle
Fri., July 20, 1956 9

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

Festival Time, U.S.A.

FESTIVAL IN HIGH GEAR

This weekend the music production and dance festivals on the Eastern seaboard are expanding their talent girth and a wideoscopic lens covering the three major ones would be taking in quite an eye and earful. For the festival, like "love" in the hit musical OF THEE I SING (or was it AS THOUSANDS CHEER?) is "sweeping the country" and more and more, music and theatre adventurers are gypsying to the Empire State Music Festival in Ellenville, N. Y.; then to Tanglewood for the lilting Berkshire strings and full symphones; thence to Jacobs Pillow in the same hillsides for a scanning of the new in dance. It may be, too, said for the artistic managements back of these richly planned musical feasts that they are generally vastly superior to the ordinary run of summer theatre.

* * *

In the instance of the latter (and being a theatre man essentially this may be sacrilege) the planners who bring the theatre out to the citronella circuit is in many instances makeshift. Little time is spent on rehearsals by virtue of the weekly change of play. And it is admitted that "names" are more important than talent when casting is planned. As for the music festivals there is a full and concerted effort to make each event a gala occurrence; musicianship is of a high order and conductors are chosen for their dynamic abilities and long backlog of experience.

* * *

This week at Ellenville is given over to a new production of A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. Leopold Stokowski conducts the stellar programming with the symphony of the air under his baton.

* * *

A notable cast will be seen in the production. Basil Rathbone, Red Buttons, Nancy Wickwire, Alvin Epstein, Joan Wetmore, Ray Boyle are some of the players in the large cast.

* * *

At Tanglewood, this same weekend, Charles Munch will lift his baton over the full complement of Boston Symphony's 106 orchestral pieces. Tonight will inaugurate the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUL 26 1956

Break Ground Tuesday For New Shadowbrook

Archbishop Cushing will be principal speaker at ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit Novitiate at Lenox.

The ceremonies will also mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

The new building will replace the structure destroyed by fire March 10.

Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood, with facilities provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking of the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, Provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of the Springfield diocese, will do the actual ground breaking.

To date 11,900 donors have contributed $2,045,699 of the $3 million appeal total.

Prominent Catholic Laymen from the New England area who have been active in the fund raising campaign will be guests at the ceremonies.

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire.

Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 26 1956

4th Week of Music Festival Opens With Beaux Arts Trio

The fourth week of the Berkshire Music festival opened last night with the Beaux Arts Trio giving the regular Wednesday evening chamber music program in the theater-concert hall. A crowd of 1,375 was on hand.

Beaux Arts Trio

The trio, composed of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, 'cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, played the Trio in D minor by Mendelssohn, the Trio in A minor by Ravel and the Trio in C minor by Brahms.

The remaining concerts of the current series, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, will be held in the big shed and will feature the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra.

On Friday evening Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct a program which will include Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 2; Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor.

Mr. Munch will conduct again Saturday evening and he will have Rudolph Serkin as piano soloist for a performance of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor. Also on the program are Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, Honegger's Symphony No. 5 and Debussy's "La Mer."

Sunday Afternoon

On Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony's associate conductor and concertmaster, will take the podium and his wife, Ruth Posselt, will be soloist for Hindemith's Violin Concerto. The orchestra will also play Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 25 1956

BEAUX ARTS TRIO TONIGHT AT FESTIVAL

Serkin, Burgin and Ruth Posselt Also Featured This Week

Lenox, July 25—The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesay evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, will be given tonight in the intimate 1200-seat theater-concert hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D Minor), Ravel (in A Minor) and Brahms (in C Minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air. Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Charles Munch will inaugurate the second week end of concerts in the giant Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the 100 anniversary of the composer's death. Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio, and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

RUTH POSSELT

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUL 25 1956

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week, opening with joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-peice Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro August 3; by Leonard Bernstein August 4; by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch August 5.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor - Soloist: Rudolpf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; Debussy: "La Mer" - Charles Munch, conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto - Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major - Richard Burgin, conductor.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a violin recital of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck, by Zino Francescatti, accompanied by Artur Balsam, on Wednesday evening, August 8, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. In the Music Shed Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, August 10 in a program of Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas. Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra Saturday evening, August 11 in selections of Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss. Dr. Munch will conclude the festival Sunday afternoon, August 12 with Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica"; and a concert version of the opening and final scenes of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and James Pease as soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students, trained by James Aliferis.

Thursday, August 9, is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," the day-long gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in the evening concert, and Arthur Fielder will conduct the Boston "Pops" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Press
STONEHAM, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,600

JUL 26 1956

JESUITS APPAECIATE TANGLEWOOD FACULTY

The Jesuits of New England expressed their appreciation last Monday for the proffer of Tanglewood at Lenox where ceremonies will be held Tuesday to note groundbreaking for the new Shadowbrook Novitiate.

The Very Rev. W. E. Fitzgerald, S. J. thanked the "Lenox neghbors for the immediate and friendly assistance when the old Novitiate was burned March 10, and again for answering our present need."

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUL 26 1956

Break Ground Tuesday For New Shadowbrook

Archbishop Cushing will be principal speaker at ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook, the new Jesuit Novitiate at Lenox.

The ceremonies will also mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

The new building will replace the structure destroyed by fire March 10.

Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood, with facilities provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Festival.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, Provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of the Springfield diocese, will do the actual ground breaking.

To date 11,900 donors have contributed $2,045,000 of the $3 million appeal total.

Prominent Catholic Laymen from the New England area who have been active in the fund raising campaign will be guests at the ceremonies.

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire.

Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

Standard-Star, New Rochelle
Fri., July 20, 1956 9

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

Festival Time, U.S.A.

FESTIVAL IN HIGH GEAR

This weekend the music, production and dance festivals on the Eastern seaboard are expanding their talent girth and a wideoscopic lens covering the three major ones would be taking in quite an eye and earful. For the festival, like "love" in the hit musical OF THEE I SING (or was it AS THOUSANDS CHEER?) is "sweeping the country" and more and more, music and theatre adventurers are gypsying to the Empire State Music Festival in Ellenville, N. Y.; then to Tanglewood for the lilting Berkshire strings and full symphones; thence to Jacobs Pillow in the same hillsides for a scanning of the new in dance. It may be, too, said for the artistic managements back of these richly planned musical feasts that they are generally vastly superior to the ordinary run of summer theatre.

* * *

In the instance of the latter (and being a theatre man essentially this may be sacrilege) the planners who bring the theatre out to the citronella circuit is in many instances makeshift. Little time is spent on rehearsals by virtue of the weekly change of play. And it is admitted that "names" are more important than talent when casting is planned. As for the music festivals there is a full and concerted effort to make each event a gala occurrence; musicianship is of a high order and conductors are chosen for their dynamic abilities and long backlog of experience.

* * *

This week at Ellenville is given over to a new production of A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. Leopold Stokowski conducts the stellar programing with the symphony of the air under his baton.

* * *

A notable cast wil' be seen in the production. Basil Rathbone, Red Buttons, Nancy Wickwire, Alvin Epstein, Joan Wetmore, Ray Boyle are some of the players in the large cast.

* * *

At Tanglewood, this same weekend, Charles Munch will lift his baton over the full complement of Boston Symphony's 106 orchestral pieces. Tonight will inaugurate the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 26 1956

4th Week of Music Festival Opens With Beaux Arts Trio

The fourth week of the Berkshire Music festival opened last night with the Beaux Arts Trio giving the regular Wednesday evening chamber music program in the theater-concert hall. A crowd of 1,375 was on hand.

Beaux Arts Trio

The trio, composed of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, 'cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, played the Trio in D minor by Mendelssohn, the Trio in A minor by Ravel and the Trio in C minor by Brahms.

The remaining concerts of the current series, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, will be held in the big shed and will feature the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra.

On Friday evening Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct a program which will include Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 2; Pertrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5, and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor.

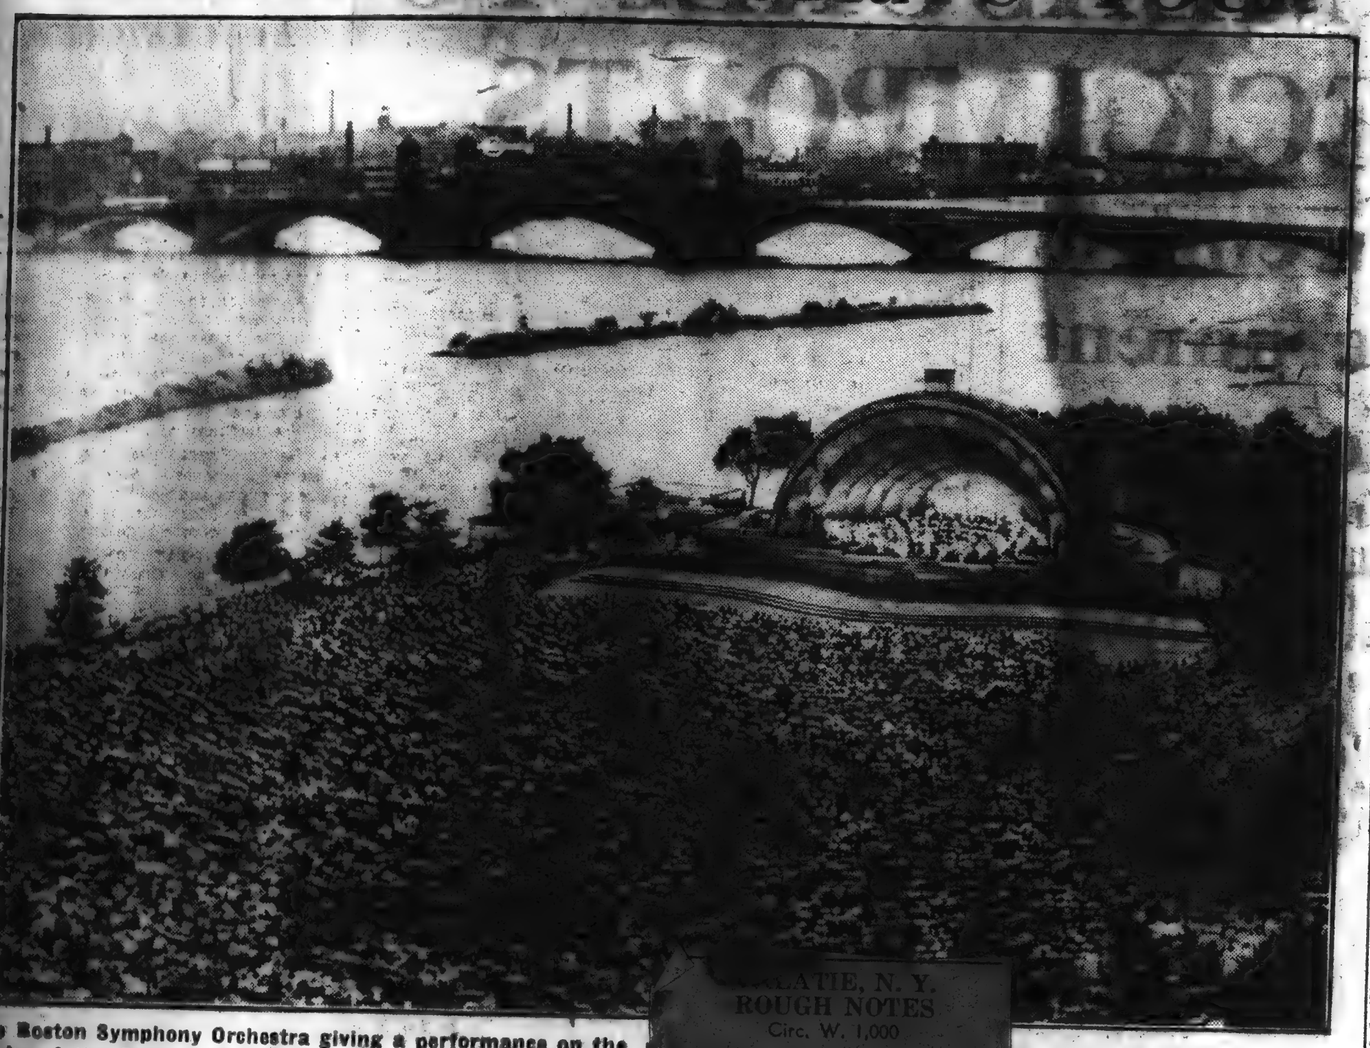
Mr. Munch will conduct again Saturday evening, and he will have Rudolph Serkin as piano soloist in a performance of Schumann's piano Concerto in A minor. Also on the program are Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, Honegger's Symphony No. 5 and Debussy's "La Mer."

Sunday Afternoon

On Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony's associate conductor and concertmaster, will take the podium and his wife, Ruth Posselt, will be soloist for Hindemith's Violin Concerto. The orchestra will also play Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major.

Irish Independent
Tues. July 24, 1956

BOSTON ORCHESTRA'S TOUR



The Boston Symphony Orchestra giving a performance on the banks of the Charles River, Boston. Audiences of 20,000 and more are not unusual.

Will Visit Dublin And Cork Next Month

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will commence a tour of Europe on August 14, appearing in Cork on August 24, and Dublin on August 25. The tour will include 27 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia at the invitation of the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

The orchestra, about to crown its 75th anniversary season, got its start through the frustration of a musical career. The frustrated musician was Henry Lee Higginson, son of a New England merchant family, who forsook the traditional family pattern of entering a business firm following graduation from college. Instead, the 22-year-old Higginson went to Vienna in 1856 to study the piano while eking out a living by giving English lessons.

When an injured hand prevented him from becoming a pianist, he followed the family tradition of banking until he had acquired some capital, and then proceeded to build with it a symphony orchestra. This was no case of the 19th-century millionaire who poured his surplus into some good deed. Mr. Higginson finally left no fortune, but the orchestra a fortune had made.

Best Musicians

In 1881 he gathered together the best musicians he could obtain in Germany and Austria, a young German-born conductor, Georg Henschel, to lead them, and announced concerts in Boston.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was not a musical "society" which met periodically to make music together, but a permanently maintained organisation of skilled players who knew where their first and foremost duties lay. Always choosing a conductor for his high intentions as well as his abilities, Mr. Higginson proceeded to give him a free hand.

Wilhelm Gericke, a Viennese (1884-1889; 1898-1906) drilled the orchestra into an immaculate ensemble. Travelling was extended, and 1886-87 saw Mr. Gericke ready to submit his orchestra's prowess to New York to the astonishment of that city. Three other conductors in turn conducted the orchestra, and in 1912 Max Fiedler took over and conducted until the Spring of 1918.

Karl Muck

A Public Trust

The first World War brought the end of an era. The orchestra's owner after 36 years bowed to the inevitable change. From 1881 till 1919 Higginson had personally made up the deficit every year. Now this orchestra became what all orchestras had to be—a public trust, the property of the community it served.

The newly-formed Board of Trustees engaged Henri Rabaud from Paris in 1918, and in the season following, Pierre Monteux. The orchestra became more cosmopolitan and so did its programmes. Mr. Monteux produced a virtually new and newly illustrious orchestra.

In 1924, Serge Koussevitzky, a magic figure in Europe, began what was to be the longest term for a single conductor—25 years, and the name of the orchestra and its conductor seemed inseparable until in 1949 he decided to retire.

Charles Munch, when he came to this orchestra in the autumn of 1949, was one of the foremost musicians in France and had been the conductor of four orchestras in Paris. Mr. Munch's mother was French, his father an Alsatian. He grew up surrounded by the music of Bach, for his father, Ernest, in Strasbourg and his uncle, Eugene, in Mulhouse, were leaders of Bach's music in the cathedral of each city.

Another Alsatian, Albert Schweitzer, who was once the pupil of Eugene, is the relative by marriage of Charles Munch. Mr. Munch has been conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six years.

Long Season

If Mr. Higgison could behold what has grown from his project of 1881, which began under such limited circumstances but aimed so high, he would have plentiful cause for satisfaction. While he took steps to have the concerts available to as many people as possible, he could not have dreamed what science would provide on records and on the air. It would surely please the founder to contemplate that what was once his orchestra, has become a world orchestra with a season from October to mid-August.

With its "Pops" season in May and June under Arthur Fiedler, the season in July and August of free concerts on the Charles River Embankment, the six weeks' Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, where more than 100,000 people attend each summer, and its Tanglewood school for experience in performance, the Berkshire Music Centre this orchestra makes a more extensive contribution than any other in the U.S.

LEATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000
JUN 29 1956

mainly things

by ED MERRITT

No doubt the summer season has finally arrived. Our sunburn is beginning to peel. . . . Anniversary number 23 of graduation from school has been heralded by the arrival of a neat invitation. . . . Monday and Tuesday the Berkshire Playhouse and The Malden Bridge Summer Theatre opened their respective doors, to be followed closely by the rest of the summer features. Everything seems to make good sense, except for the graduation anniversary.

By this time we had hoped for definite word on the schedule at Music Inn, Lenox, where the jazz and the musical talk will flow during a goodly part of the summer. Unfortunately, not anymore than a brief notice of their opening has blown across the desk. We do know it's a big season. . . . We'll report details as soon as available. On the other hand, plenty of dope on the upcoming doings at Tanglewood. This would be a big year for familiar composers and familiar music. Also a group of features by contemporary composers written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be celebrated this year. Crowds can be expected for many events on the programs, particularly such items as the Benny Goodman appearances with both orchestra and chamber groups. Mr. G., fresh from the triumphs of "The Benny Goodman Story," a wonderful engagement at the Cafe Rouge in New York, and a swing across the country with his band, will make music in the Berkshire Hills July 6 and 11. In addition to these concerts, this department looks forward with great anticipation to a pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of the fabulous octogenarian, Pierre Monteux. These musical events July 22 and August 11 will again afford a wonderful opportunity to see and hear one of the greatest musicians of our time in action.

Bulked into the summer plans of most everyone . . . a chance to get close to some of the books we've been promising ourselves all winter long. We'd like to suggest a couple here . . . one mighty serious and the other fairly relaxed. Here at home we have the ever present headlines to remind us of the problem of race relations, a problem spread around the world, unfortunately. Most pressing and alarming conditions probably are found in South Africa where a conservative guess would suggest the clock has been turned back 200 years. Recent telecast by Edward R. Murrow, in the fine journalistic tradition, has brought this situation close to the attention of Americans. Now, further and distressing enlightment to be found in a book by one of Murrow's guests, Father Trevor Huddleston, "Naught For Your Comfort." This one aptly titled . . . some find the volume exciting and moving. We find it horrifying. If you want to know a bit about the madness which sometimes seizes human beings, if you want to see how and why the actions of people, thousands of miles away, stir up a witches' brew, which well may plague us here, don't fail to read this distressing story.

Number two book . . . "H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Memory" by Charles Angoff. Catch a close-up glimpse of one of the most interesting and controversial men of the Twenties. Perhaps you'll not care for the manners, but the man is terrific.

Just a pair of record selections this week. In the popular department . . . Elliott Lawrence on the Fantasy label with a fine set of tunes as arranged by Tiny Kahn and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable big band playing. Then, halfway between the popular and the concert world comes pianist, Pablo Flores. MGM releases his recording of "Memories of Mexico." May not be profound, but one of the best listening items to come along in quite a while. So . . . more later!

The Echo
New Lebanon
Tues. July 31.

Tanglewood Goes Into Fifth Week

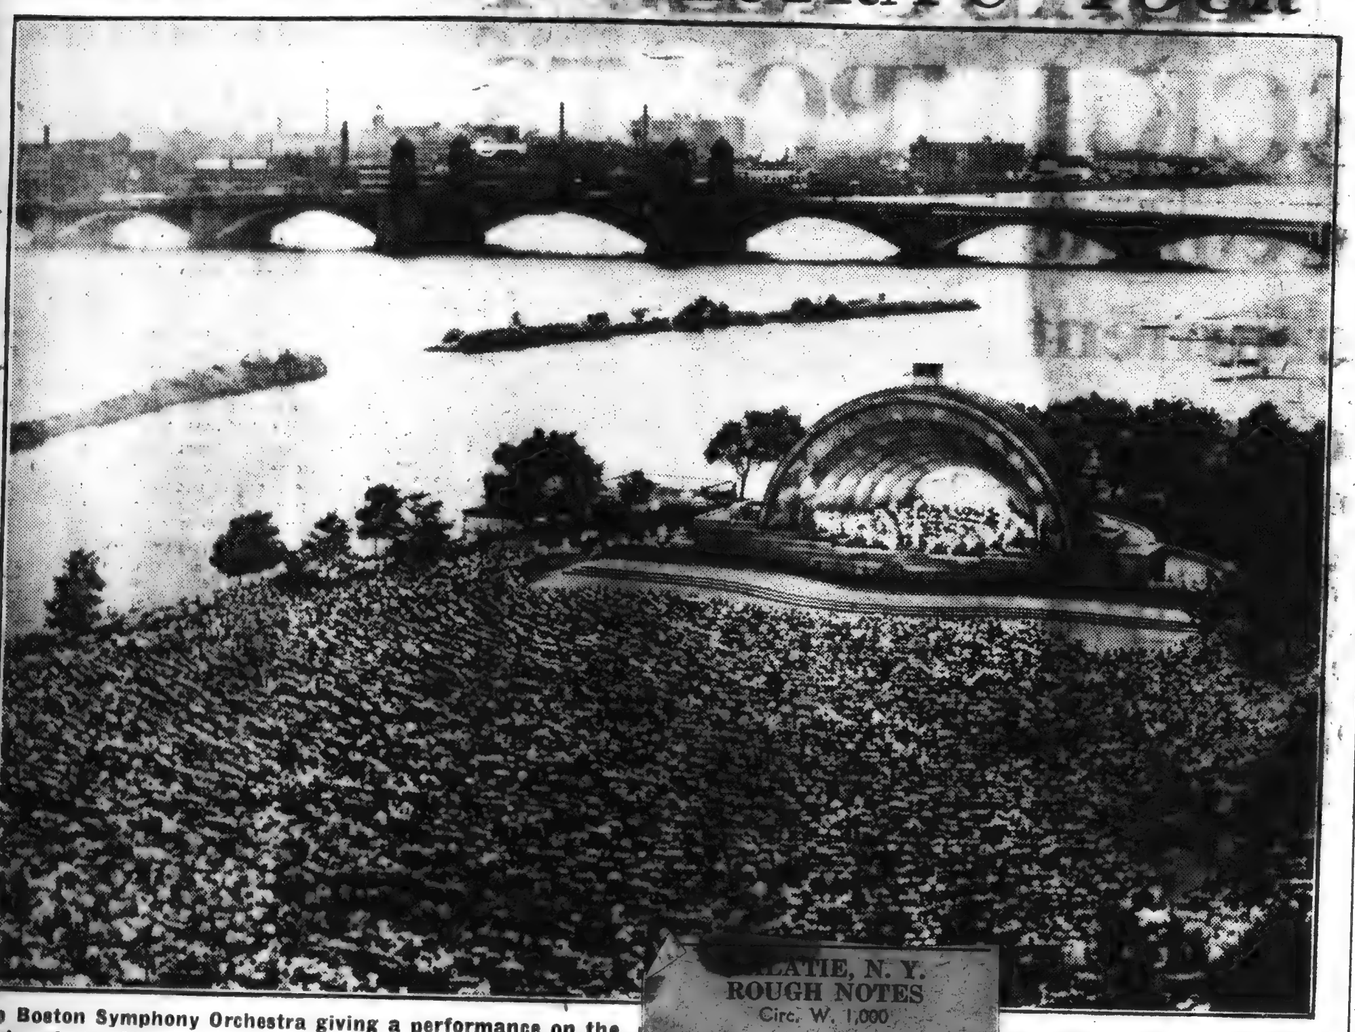
The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a joint recital by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1. In the Music Shed, Eleazar de Carvalho, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of works by Barraud, Falla, Ravel, Stravinsky, with his wife, Joey de Oliveira, as soloist in the Ravel Piano Concerto on Friday evening, August 3. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in a memorial to its former conductor Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening, August 4, the program consisting of Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Charles Munch takes the concert Sunday afternoon, August 5 with works scheduled by Aaron Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann, with Zino Francescatti soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

ARTHUR FIEDLER, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, will return to Tanglewood for his third consecutive summer to appear with the Pops at "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday, August 9, at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed.

[192]

Irish Independent
Tues. July 24, 1956

BOSTON ORCHESTRA'S TOUR



The Boston Symphony Orchestra giving a performance on the banks of the Charles River, Boston. Audiences of 20,000 and more are not unusual.

Will Visit Dublin And Cork Next Month

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will commence a tour of Europe on August 14, appearing in Cork on August 24, and Dublin on August 25. The tour will include 27 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia at the invitation of the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

The orchestra, about to crown its 75th anniversary season, got its start through the frustration of a musical career. The frustrated musician was Henry Lee Higginson, son of a New England merchant family, who forsook the traditional family pattern of entering a business firm following graduation from college. Instead, the 22-year-old Higginson went to Vienna in 1856 to study the piano while eking out a living by giving English lessons.

When an injured hand prevented him from becoming a pianist, he followed the family tradition of banking until he had acquired some capital, and then proceeded to build with it a symphony orchestra. This was no case of the 19th-century millionaire who poured his surplus into some good deed. Mr. Higginson finally left no fortune, but the orchestra a fortune had made.

Best Musicians

In 1881 he gathered together the best musicians he could obtain in Germany and Austria, a young German-born conductor, Georg Henschel, to lead them, and announced concerts in Boston.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was not a musical "society" which met periodically to make music together, but a permanently maintained organisation of skilled players who knew where their first and foremost duties lay. Always choosing a conductor for his high intentions as well as his abilities, Mr. Higginson proceeded to give him a free hand.

Wilhelm Gericke, a Viennese (1884-1889; 1898-1906) drilled the orchestra into an immaculate ensemble. Travelling was extended, and 1886-87 saw Mr. Gericke ready to submit his orchestra's prowess to New York to the astonishment of that city. Three other conductors in turn conducted the orchestra, and in 1912 Max Fiedler took over and conducted until the Spring of 1918.

A Public Trust

The first World War brought the end of an era. The orchestra's owner after 36 years bowed to the inevitable change. From 1881 till 1919 Higginson had personally made up the deficit every year. Now this orchestra became what all orchestras had to be—a public trust, the property of the community it served.

The newly-formed Board of Trustees engaged Henri Rabaud from Paris in 1918, and in the season following, Pierre Monteux. The orchestra became more cosmopolitan and so did its programmes. Mr. Monteux produced a virtually new and newly illustrious orchestra.

In 1924, Serge Koussevitzky, a magic figure in Europe, began what was to be the longest term for a single conductor—25 years, and the name of the orchestra and its conductor seemed inseparable until in 1949 he decided to retire.

Charles Munch, when he came to this orchestra in the autumn of 1949, was one of the foremost musicians in France and had been the conductor of four orchestras in Paris. Mr. Munch's mother was French, his father an Alsatian. He grew up surrounded by the music of Bach, for his father, Ernest, in Strasbourg and his uncle, Eugene, in Mulhouse, were leaders of Bach's music in the cathedral of each city.

Another Alsatian, Albert Schweitzer, who was once the pupil of Eugene, is the relative by marriage of Charles Munch. Mr. Munch has been conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six years.

Long Season

If Mr. Higgison could behold what has grown from his project of 1881, which began under such limited circumstances but aimed so high, he would have plentiful cause for satisfaction. While he took steps to have the concerts available to as many people as possible, he could not have dreamed what science would provide on records and on the air. It would surely please the founder to contemplate that what was once his orchestra, has become a world orchestra with a season from October to mid-August.

With its "Pops" season in May and June under Arthur Fiedler, the season in July and August of free concerts on the Charles River Embankment, the six weeks' Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, where more than 100,000 people attend each summer, and its Tanglewood school for experience in performance, the Berkshire Music Centre this orchestra makes a more extensive contribution than any other in the U.S.

LATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000
JUN 29 1956

mainly things

by ED MERRITT

No doubt the summer season has finally arrived. Our sunburn is beginning to peel. . . . Anniversary number 23 of graduation from school has been heralded by the arrival of a neat invitation. . . . Monday and Tuesday the Berkshire Playhouse and The Malden Bridge Summer Theatre opened their respective doors, to be followed closely by the rest of the summer features. Everything seems to make good sense, except for the graduation anniversary.

By this time we had hoped for definite word on the schedule at Music Inn, Lenox, where the jazz and the musical talk will flow during a goodly part of the summer. Unfortunately, not anymore than a brief notice of their opening has blown across the desk. We do know it's a big season. . . . We'll report details as soon as available. On the other hand, plenty of dope on the upcoming doings at Tanglewood. This would be a big year for familiar composers and familiar music. Also a group of features by contemporary composers written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be celebrated this year. Crowds can be expected for many events on the programs, particularly such items as the Benny Goodman appearances with both orchestra and chamber groups. Mr. G., fresh from the triumphs of "The Benny Goodman Story," a wonderful engagement at the Cafe Rouge in New York, and a swing across the country with his band, will make music in the Berkshire Hills July 6 and 11. In addition to these concerts, this department looks forward with great anticipation to a pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of the fabulous octogenarian, Pierre Monteux. These musical events July 22 and August 11 will again afford a wonderful opportunity to see and hear one of the greatest musicians of our time in action.

Bulked into the summer plans of most everyone . . . a chance to get close to some of the books we've been promising ourselves all winter long. We'd like to suggest a couple here . . . one mighty serious and the other fairly relaxed. Here at home we have the ever present headlines to remind us of the problem of race relations, a problem spread around the world, unfortunately. Most pressing and alarming conditions probably are found in South Africa where a conservative guess would suggest the clock has been turned back 200 years. Recent telecast by Edward R. Murrow, in the fine journalistic tradition, has brought this situation close to the attention of Americans. Now, further and distressing enlightment to be found in a book by one of Murrow's guests, Father Trevor Huddleston, "Naught For Your Comfort." This one aptly titled . . . some find the volume exciting and moving. We find it horrifying. If you want to know a bit about the madness which sometimes seizes human beings, if you want to see how and why the actions of people, thousands of miles away, stir up a witches' brew, which well may plague us here, don't fail to read this distressing story.

Number two book . . . "H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Memory" by Charles Angoff. Catch a close-up glimpse of one of the most interesting and controversial men of the Twenties. Perhaps you'll not care for the manners, but the man is terrific.

Just a pair of record selections this week. In the popular department . . . Elliott Lawrence on the Fantasy label with a fine set of tunes as arranged by Tiny Kahn and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable big band playing. Then, halfway between the popular and the concert world comes pianist, Pablo Flores. MGM releases his recording of "Memories of Mexico." May not be profound, but one of the best listening items to come along in quite a while. So . . . more later!

[192]

The Echo
New Lebanon
Tues. July 31.

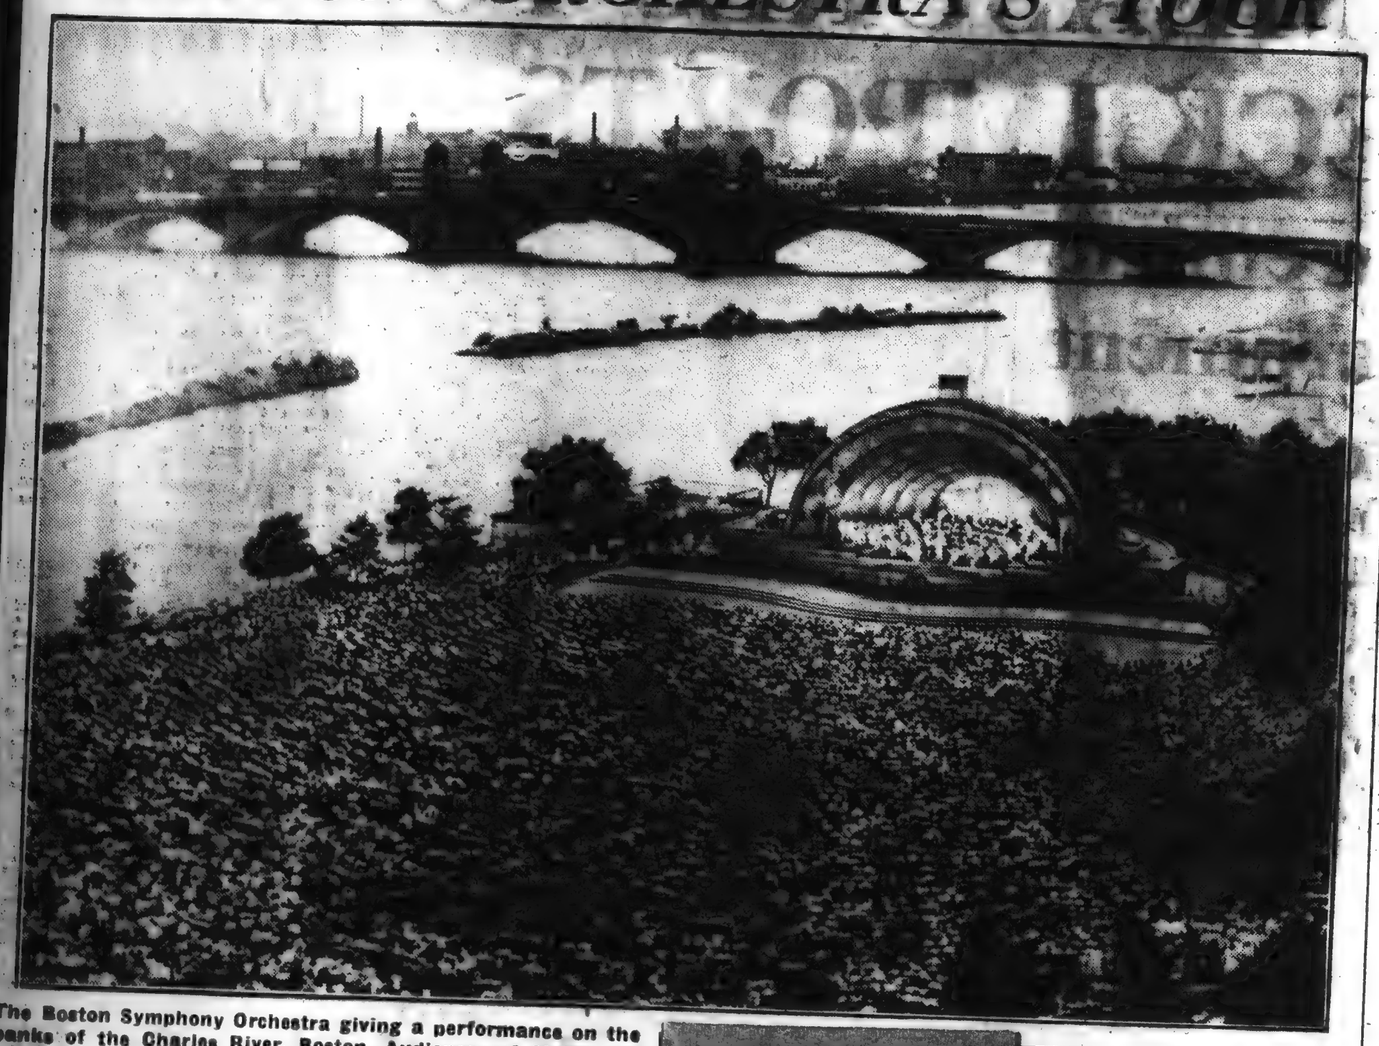
Tanglewood Goes Into Fifth Week

The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a joint recital by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1. In the Music Shed, Eleazar de Carvalho, who leads the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of works by Barraud, Falla, Ravel, Stravinsky, with his wife, Joey de Oliveira, as soloist in the Ravel Piano Concerto on Friday evening, August 3. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in a memorial to its former conductor Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening, August 4, the program consisting of Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States; and Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Charles Munch takes the concert Sunday afternoon, August 5 with works scheduled by Aaron Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann, with Zino Francescatti soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

ARTHUR FIEDLER, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, will return to Tanglewood for his third consecutive summer to appear with the Pops at "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday, August 9, at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed.

Irish Independent
Tues. July 24, 1956

BOSTON ORCHESTRA'S TOUR



The Boston Symphony Orchestra giving a performance on the banks of the Charles River, Boston. Audiences of 20,000 and more are not unusual.

Will Visit Dublin And Cork Next Month

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will commence a tour of Europe on August 14, appearing in Cork on August 24, and Dublin on August 25. The tour will include 27 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia at the invitation of the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

The orchestra, about to crown its 75th anniversary season, got its start through the frustration of a musical career. The frustrated musician was Henry Lee Higginson, son of a New England merchant family, who forsook the traditional family pattern of entering a business firm following graduation from college. Instead, the 22-year-old Higginson went to Vienna in 1856 to study the piano while eking out a living by giving English lessons.

When an injured hand prevented him from becoming a pianist, he followed the family tradition of banking until he had acquired some capital, and then proceeded to build with it a symphony orchestra. This was no case of the 19th-century millionaire who poured his surplus into some good deed. Mr. Higginson finally left no fortune, but the orchestra a fortune had made.

Best Musicians

In 1881 he gathered together the best musicians he could obtain in Germany and Austria, a young German-born conductor, Georg Henschel, to lead them, and announced concerts in Boston.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was not a musical "society" which met periodically to make music together, but a permanently maintained organisation of skilled players who knew where their first and foremost duties lay. Always choosing a conductor for his high intentions as well as his abilities, Mr. Higginson proceeded to give him a free hand.

Wilhelm Gericke, a Viennese (1884-1889; 1898-1906) drilled the orchestra into an immaculate ensemble. Travelling was extended, and 1886-87 saw Mr. Gericke ready to submit his orchestra's prowess to New York to the astonishment of that city. Three other conductors in turn conducted the orchestra, and in 1912 Max Fiedler took over and conducted until the Spring of 1918.

A Public Trust

The first World War brought the end of an era. The orchestra's owner after 36 years bowed to the inevitable change. From 1881 till 1919 Higginson had personally made up the deficit every year. Now this orchestra became what all orchestras had to be—a public trust, the property of the community it served.

The newly-formed Board of Trustees engaged Henri Rabaud from Paris in 1918, and in the season following, Pierre Monteux. The orchestra became more cosmopolitan and so did its programmes. Mr. Monteux produced a virtually new and newly illustrious orchestra.

In 1924, Serge Koussevitzky, a magic figure in Europe, began what was to be the longest term for a single conductor—25 years, and the name of the orchestra and its conductor seemed inseparable until in 1949 he decided to retire.

Charles Munch, when he came to this orchestra in the autumn of 1949, was one of the foremost musicians in France and had been the conductor of four orchestras in Paris. Mr. Munch's mother was French, his father an Alsatian. He grew up surrounded by the music of Bach, for his father, Ernest, in Strasbourg and his uncle, Eugene, in Mulhouse, were leaders of Bach's music in the cathedral of each city.

Another Alsatian, Albert Schweitzer, who was once the pupil of Eugene, is the relative by marriage of Charles Munch. Mr. Munch has been conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six years.

Long Season

If Mr. Higgison could behold what has grown from his project of 1881, which began under such limited circumstances but aimed so high, he would have plentiful cause for satisfaction. While he took steps to have the concerts available to as many people as possible, he could not have dreamed what science would provide on records and on the air. It would surely please the founder to contemplate that what was once his orchestra, has become a world orchestra with a season from October to mid-August.

With its "Pops" season in May and June under Arthur Fiedler, the season in July and August of free concerts on the Charles River Embankment, the six weeks' Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, where more than 100,000 people attend each summer, and its Tanglewood school for experience in performance, the Berkshire Music Centre this orchestra makes a more extensive contribution than any other in the U.S.

mainly things

by ED MERRITT

No doubt the summer season has finally arrived. Our sunburn is beginning to peel. . . . Anniversary number 23 of graduation from school has been heralded by the arrival of a neat invitation. . . . Monday and Tuesday the Berkshire Playhouse and The Malden Bridge Summer Theatre opened their respective doors, to be followed closely by the rest of the summer features. Everything seems to make good sense, except for the graduation anniversary.

By this time we had hoped for definite word on the schedule at Music Inn, Lenox, where the jazz and the musical talk will flow during a goodly part of the summer. Unfortunately, not anymore than a brief notice of their opening has blown across the desk. We do know it's a big season. . . . We'll report details as soon as available. On the other hand, plenty of dope on the upcoming doings at Tanglewood. This would be a big year for familiar composers and familiar music. Also a group of features by contemporary composers written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be celebrated this year. Crowds can be expected for many events on the programs, particularly such items as the Benny Goodman appearances with both orchestra and chamber groups. Mr. G., fresh from the triumphs of "The Benny Goodman Story," a wonderful engagement at the Cafe Rouge in New York, and a swing across the country with his band, will make music in the Berkshire Hills July 6 and 11. In addition to these concerts, this department looks forward with great anticipation to a pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of the fabulous octogenarian, Pierre Monteux. These musical events July 22 and August 11 will again afford a wonderful opportunity to see and hear one of the greatest musicians of our time in action.

Bulked into the summer plans of most everyone . . . a chance to get close to some of the books we've been promising ourselves all winter long. We'd like to suggest a couple here . . . one mighty serious and the other fairly relaxed. Here at home we have the ever present headlines to remind us of the problem of race relations, a problem spread around the world, unfortunately. Most pressing and alarming conditions probably are found in South Africa where a conservative guess would suggest the clock has been turned back 200 years. Recent telecast by Edward R. Murrow, in the fine journalistic tradition, has brought this situation close to the attention of Americans. Now, further and distressing enlightment to be found in a book by one of Murrow's guests, Father Trevor Huddleston, "Naught For Your Comfort." This one aptly titled . . . some find the volume exciting and moving. We find it horrifying. If you want to know a bit about the madness which sometimes seizes human beings, if you want to see how and why the actions of people, thousands of miles away, stir up a witches' brew, which well may plague us here, don't fail to read this distressing story.

Number two book . . . "H. L. Mencken, A Portrait from Memory" by Charles Angoff. Catch a close-up glimpse of one of the most interesting and controversial men of the Twenties. Perhaps you'll not care for the manners, but the man is terrific.

Just a pair of record selections this week. In the popular department . . . Elliott Lawrence on the Fantasy label with a fine set of tunes as arranged by Tiny Kahn and Johnny Mandel. Enjoyable big band playing. Then, halfway between the popular and the concert world comes pianist, Pablo Flores. MGM releases his recording of "Memories of Mexico." May not be profound, but one of the best listening items to come along in quite a while. So . . . more later!

[192]

The Echo
New Lebanon
Thurs. July 31.

Tanglewood Goes Into Fifth Week

The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a joint recital by Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1. In the Music Shed, Eleazar de Carvalho, who leads the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of works by Barraud, Falla, Ravel, Stravinsky, with his wife, Josy de Oliveira, as soloist in the Ravel Piano Concerto on Friday evening, August 3. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in a memorial to its former conductor Serge Koussevitsky on Saturday evening, August 4, the program consisting of Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5, which Dr. Koussevitsky introduced to the United States; and Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Charles Munch takes the concert Sunday afternoon, August 5 with works scheduled by Aaron Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann, with Zino Francescatti soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

ARTHUR FIEDLER, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, will return to Tanglewood for his third consecutive summer to appear with the Pops at "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday, August 9, at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed.

Berkshire Eagle - July 31

Beaux Arts Trio Will Play at South Mountain

Second appearance in the Berkshires this summer for the Beaux Arts Trio will be on Saturday at South Mountain Temple of Music. They performed at the chamber music series at Tanglewood July 25. Left to right, Daniel Guilet, violin; Menahem Pressler, piano; Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

The Beaux Arts Trio will present the second concert of the regular series at South Mountain Saturday at 3:30 p.m., it was announced today by Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director. The concerts have been planned by the South Mountain Assn.

The trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Menahem Pressler, piano; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello, have played together for four years, but in public performance for only one. It has the endorsement of Artur Toscanini, the result of a small, private concert given for him and has given a total of 57 concerts this year. A soldout tour of 80 concerts is scheduled for next season.

On July 25 the trio returned to Tanglewood for the first time after its debut there last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms. The first New York appearance of the group was under the auspices of the Frick Collection. They also are being featured at the Ravina Festival in three concerts this week before returning to the Berkshires to play at South Mountain.

NBC Concertmaster

Born in France, Mr. Guilet attended the National Conservatoire in Paris, studying and playing public performances with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He has appeared extensively on the continent and in this country with major orchestras and chamber music groups. In 1941 he organized the Guilet Quartet and in 1944 was chosen as a member of the NBC Symphony of which he became concertmaster in 1951. He still holds that position with the Symphony of the Air, successor to the NBC Symphony.

Mr. Pressler was born in Germany but fled with his family to Israel when Hitler came into power. He began his studies there and won the Debussy Prize when he was 17. He has appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra, New York Philharmonic, the Cleveland Orchestra, Indianapolis Symphony and the National Symphony in Washington, D.C.

On Juilliard Faculty

Mr. Greenhouse made his Town Hall debut in 1946 and in that same year in Europe began studies for two years with Pablo Casals. A former fellowship student at the Juilliard School of Music, he now is on the faculty of that school and the Manhattan School of Music. He plays the "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

The Beaux Arts Trio has made recordings with MGM, two of which will be released the end of the month.

A few free tickets are available for the South Mountain concert and may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Willem Willeke and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Music

Opera Scenes at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center presented scenes from five 19th century operas to an audience of "Friends" last night in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, again added immeasurably to the pleasure, and the understanding, of the evening by his pertinent, witty and nonchalant remarks and explanations preceding each scene.

* * *

THE PRODUCTIONS in most cases were professional and the singers are all already, or so close to, "arrived" that not only their voices but their stage demeanor were elements with which the respective directors could build the small fragments of the chosen operas into complete integral units. Some lent themselves better than others. The scenery and costumes were much more than adequate and were appropriate and in good taste, particularly the unit costumes devised by Laura Zirner for the "Aida" scene.

Verdi dominated the evening, being represented by three excerpts, from "Aida," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff." The fourth act of Berlioz' "The Trojans" and the first act of Puccini's "La Rondine" completed the program.

* * *

THE IMPASSIONED second act duet between Ameris (Claudia Lourie) and Aida (Annabelle Howard) was not surpassed during the evening for general effectiveness. The "Don Carlo" was a little more elaborate and moved forward with the greatest intensity. Here the scenic designs by Ed Flesh and the costumes by Leo Van Witsen were supports for John Parella as King Philip, John McCurdy, the Grand Inquisitor; Spelios Constantine, Count Lerma; Madeleine Palmer, Queen Elizabeth; Donald Henrickson, Rodrigo, and Shirley Carter, Princess Eboli. The foundation and support provided by Paul Ulanowsky at the piano in the pit gave this portion of the evening a drive and dramatic pulse not equaled by any other of the evening's offerings.

"La Rondine" suffered by its fate of being a period piece. The costumes of the Second Empire, and the obvious make-believe of the plot just do not make it good or credible theater, in spite of the excellent efforts of Lynn Rasmussen as the sophisticated Magda, Polyna Zagaretou as the saucy and pert Lisette and Harold Johnson as the mooning poet Prunier.

* * *

"THE TROJANS" and "Falstaffexcerpts were tightly knit and provided some of the most engaging concerted singing, while the individual singers had some very grateful solos. The whole evening, except for its duration, (the final curtain was at 11:30) was thoroughly enjoyable. The long hours of preparation produced results for the audience and, probably more important, opportunities for the aspiring young artists that are among the high points of the Center's achievements.

25 Foreign Born Musicians To Visit Homelands With BSO

TANGLEWOOD — Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, on Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris on Sept. 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres on Sept. 21. Included in this group are Emil Kornsand (born in Colmar), Norbert Lauga (Aix-les-Bains), Pierre Mayer (Paris) and Roger Shermont (Paris), violinists Albert Yves Bernard (Seine) and Jean Cauhape (Toulouse) are French-born violists. Leon Marjollet (Chalons-sur-Marne) and Alfred Zighera (Paris) are native French cellists. The bass section includes Georges Moleux, principal bass (Boulogne-sur-Mer), Gaston Dufresne (Lille) and Henri Girard (Montlhery).

Other French-born Boston Symphony players are Jean Devergie (Marseille), oboe; Louis Speyer (Paris), English horn; Roger Voisin, principal trumpet (Angers); Marcel Lafosse (Marly-le-Roi), trumpet; and Bernard Zighera (Paris), harp.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born. Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Three Russian-born violinists have been polishing up their Russian for the orchestra's concerts in Leningrad on Sept. 5 and 6, and Moscow on Sept. 8 and 9. They are Victor Manusevitch (born in Alexandrovsk), Vladimir Resnikoff (Novgorod), and Manuel Zung (Grodno).

Two cellists, Louis Berger (Prague) and Josef Zimbler (Pilsen), have been briefing their colleagues about the best restaurants and hotels in Prague, where the orchestra will play on Sept. 11.

The concert in Vienna on Sept. 12 will find Irving Frankel (Lemberg), bass, and Ernst Panenka (Vienna), bassoon, acting as guides for the other men as they go sight-seeing in this famous musical capital.

The two remaining foreign-born players whose homelands will be visited are violinists Alfred Krips (Berlin) and Einar Hansen (Copenhagen). The orchestra will play in Copenhagen on Aug. 31, immediately after its final performance at the Edinburgh Festival, and Stuttgart and Munich in Germany will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Sept. 13 and 14. Eleven other members of the orchestra are foreign-born, but their countries are not included on the itinerary for this year's tour.

Burlington Daily News - July 31

BURLINGTON STUDENT AT TANGLEWOOD— June Stone, of 24 Hoover St., Burlington (extreme right), a member of the festival chorus, goes over a score with fellow students at the famed Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. In the background is the music shed, where Boston Symphony Orchestra summer concerts are held. Miss Stone's fellow New England area students are, from left, Eunice de Sanchez of Portland, Maine, Joan Lewitt of Nashua, N. H., Walter Tokarczyk of Woonsocket, R. I., and Madeline Palmer of Manchester, N. H.

Successful Weekend Reported by Kiwanis Information Center

LENOX—For the first time this season, the Kiwanis Information Center at the Community Center on Walker Street reported that all rooms were rented out during the past weekend.

Despite reports from Tanglewood that attendance at the concerts was low, Mrs. John M. O'Brien, clerk of the information center, said that more people had come to the center seeking rooms than at any other time this season.

More than 200 rooms registered with the center were rented out, and visitors had to be referred to neighboring towns for rooms.

West Stockbridge

Musicians To Perform In 2 Churches Sunday

WEST STOCKBRIDGE — A Boston Symphony Orchestra violist and a Great Barrington soprano will perform Sunday morning in two churches in West Stockbridge.

Jean Cauhape, a summer resident of West Center, will play the viola at the 11 o'clock service of the West Stockbridge Congregational Church. Mrs. Hope Straleau will sing at 9 a.m. at the West Center Congregational Church.

[93]

CITY RESIDENT AT TANGLEWOOD

. . . Among residents of New England who are studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer is Walter Tokarczyk of 539 River St., shown relaxing with Eunice De Sanchez of Portland, Maine, Joan Lewitt of Nashua, N. H., Madeline Palmer of Manchester, N. H., and June Stone of Burlington, Vt., left to right. Tokarczyk is a tympanist in the student orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 1 1956

FINE KETTLES of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are turned over to Everett Firth by Roman Szulc.

Symphony Timpanist Szulc Retires; Everett Firth Takes Over His Post

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Szulc, who is 62, lives with his wife at 118 Hemenway st., Boston, and during the Tanglewood season at 28 Clinton av., Pittsfield. In the Autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. He has two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Firth was born in Winchester and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Szulc and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic Symphony.

The Boston Symphony's timpani and percussion section comprises five men. Harold Farberman is the other timpanist. Charles Smith and Harold Thompson in the percussion trio have been joined this season by Arthur C. Press, a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, and a student of Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman. Press has played with Thomas Scherman's Little Orchestra Society and was solo percussionist with the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra.

A new set of timpani has just been received by the Boston Symphony, the four kettle drums made to the design of Saul Goodman and they will travel with the orchestra on its European tour.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 1 1956

Serkin Concert At Tanglewood

The fifth week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens at 8:30 p. m. today in the Theater-Concert Hall with a chamber music concert by Rudolph Serkin, pianist, and four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet. The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give concerts in the Music Shed Friday night under Eleazar de Carvalho, Saturday night under Leonard Bernstein and Sunday afternoon under Charles Munch.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

AUG 1 1956

Serkin Honoring Schumann Tonight

Rudolf Serkin (who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer), makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the intimate 1200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30. He will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, wit hfour members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, James Stagliano, horn, and oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Sherman Walt, bassoon.

N.Y. Times July 31

OPERATIC EXCERPTS OFFERED AT LENOX

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 30—Five acts from nineteenth-century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi were given here tonight.

Students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center performed the excerpts before a capacity audience in the Berkshire Festival's theatre-concert hall. Boris Goldovsky directed the performance and provided piano accompaniment.

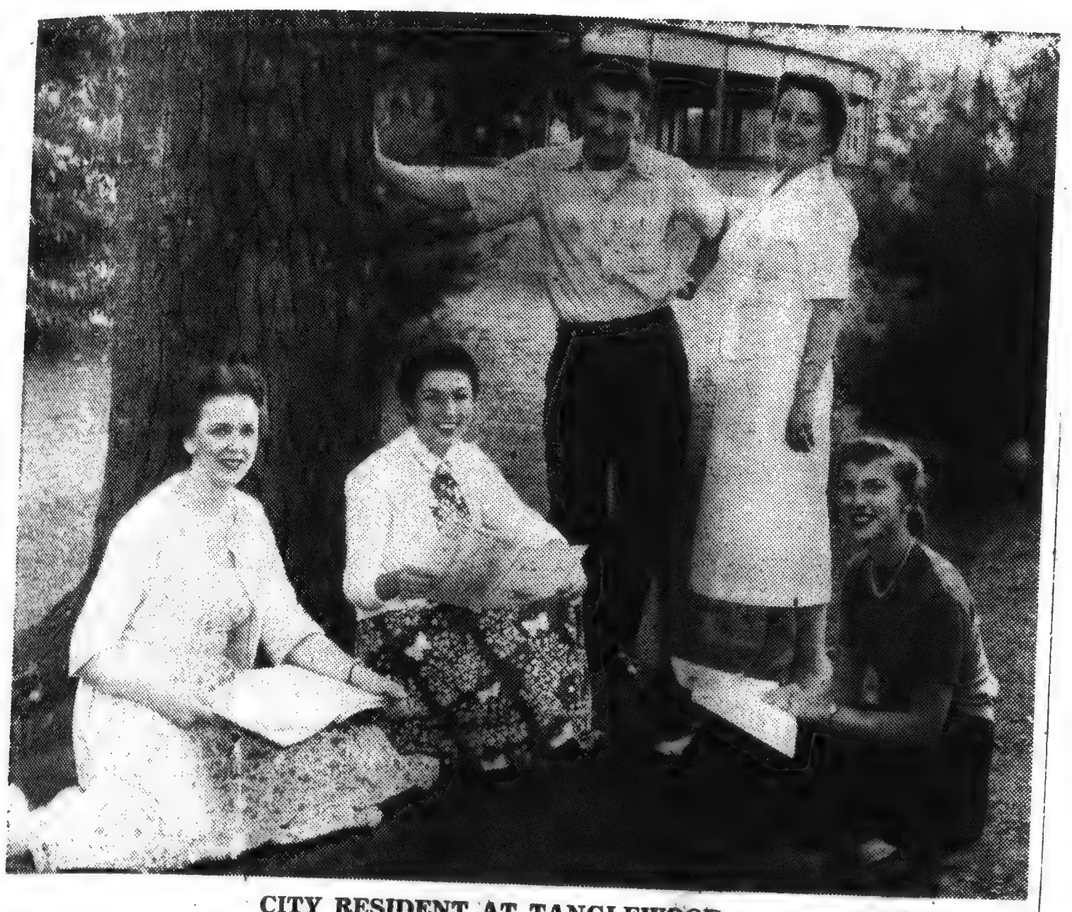
The excerpts offered were from Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Boheme" and Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff."

Next Monday and Tuesday Mr. Goldovsky will stage the major offering of the Tanglewood season, Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin." The opera, given last winter in condensed form on television, will be staged for the first time. The composer will conduct.

RETIRING TIMPANIST Roman Szulc, left, 62, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, gives a pointer to his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, who will succeed him as first timpanist when the orchestra begins its European tour Aug. 24. Mr. Szulc has been with the orchestra 21 years.

Berkshire Eagle - Tuesday July 31

[194]



CITY RESIDENT AT TANGLEWOOD

. . . Among residents of New England who are studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer is Walter Tokarczyk of 539 River St., shown relaxing with Eunice De Sanchez of Portland, Maine, Joan Lewitt of Nashua, N. H., Madeline Palmer of Manchester, N. H., and June Stone of Burlington, Vt., left to right. Tokarczyk is a tympanist in the student orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 1 1956

FINE KETTLES of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are turned over to Everett Firth by Roman Szulc.

Symphony Timpanist Szulc Retires; Everett Firth Takes Over His Post

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Szulc, who is 62, lives with his wife at 118 Hemenway st., Boston, and during the Tanglewood season at 28 Clinton av., Pittsfield. In the Autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. He has two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Firth was born in Winchester and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Szulc and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic Symphony.

The Boston Symphony's timpani and percussion section comprises five men. Harold Farberman is the other timpanist. Charles Smith and Harold Thompson in the percussion trio have been joined this season by Arthur C. Press, a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, and a student of Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman. Press has played with Thomas Scherman's Little Orchestra Society and was solo percussionist with the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra.

A new set of timpani has just been received by the Boston Symphony, the four kettle drums made to the design of Saul Goodman and they will travel with the orchestra on its European tour.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 1 1956

Serkin Concert At Tanglewood

The fifth week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens at 8:30 p. m. today in the Theater-Concert Hall with a chamber music concert by Rudolph Serkin, pianist, and four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet. The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give concerts in the Music Shed Friday night under Eleazar de Carvalho, Saturday night under Leonard Bernstein and Sunday afternoon under Charles Munch.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

AUG 1 1956

Serkin Honoring Schumann Tonight

Rudolf Serkin (who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer), makes his sceond and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the intimate 1200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30. He will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, wit hfour members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

N.Y. Times July 31

OPERATIC EXCERPTS OFFERED AT LENOX

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 30—Five acts from nineteenth-century operas by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi were given here tonight.

Students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center performed the excerpts before a capacity audience in the Berkshire Festival's theatre-concert hall. Boris Goldovsky directed the performance and provided piano accompaniment.

The excerpts offered were from Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine" and Verdi's "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff."

Next Monday and Tuesday Mr. Goldovsky will stage the major offering of the Tanglewood season, Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin." The opera, given last winter in condensed form on television, will be staged for the first time. The composer will conduct.

RETIRING TIMPANIST Roman Szulc, left, 62, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, gives a pointer to his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, who will succeed him as first timpanist when the orchestra begins its European tour Aug. 24. Mr. Szulc has been with the orchestra 21 years.

Petrovec

Berkshire Eagle - Tuesday July 31

[194]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

AUG 1 1956

Symphony Timpanist Szulc Retires; Everett Firth Takes Over His Post

FINE KETTLES of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are turned over to Everett Firth by Roman Szulc.

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Szulc, who is 62, lives with his wife at 118 Hemenway st., Boston, and during the Tanglewood season at 28 Clinton av., Pittsfield. In the Autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. He has two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Firth was born in Winchester, and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Szulc, and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

The Boston Symphony's timpani and percussion section comprises five men. Harold Farberman is the other timpanist. Charles Smith and Harold Thompson in the percussion trio have been joined this season by Arthur C. Press, a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, and a student of Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman. Press has played with Thomas Scherman's Little Orchestra Society and was solo percussionist with the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra.

A new set of timpani has just been received by the Boston Symphony, the four kettle drums made to the design of Saul Goodman, and they will travel with the orchestra on its European tour.

Northampton Gazette
July 30, 1956

Nearly 10,000 Attend Concert At Tanglewood

Perfect weather Saturday evening drew a crowd of 9812 enthusiastic music devotees to the Berkshire Festival's 15th program at Tanglewood this summer.

Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky" started the program with a quiet forthright simplicity and proceeded through many reminiscent stages to an intensive elevation, after which it retreated with modest subsidence.

Rudolph Serkin's interpretation of Robert Schumann's piano concerto in A minor was imbued with a frenetic feeling which almost beclouded his assorted and masterful playing. Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided a restrained and sensitive background, but one could not relax with ease in the freedom and spaciousness inherent in this composition. The audience recalled the modest Mr. Serkin many times.

A compelling and cleverly constructed symphony, the fifth and last of Arthur Honegger, who died in 1955, a really great and dedicated composer, enveloped one with its sensuous sounds and layered colors. The opening chord for full orchestra from high flutes to low basses preluded a melodic line of chords with a fulsome dissonance, which gradually subsided and left one hushed and eager for that which followed; a sustained trumpet note lifted and held the attention and then the opening theme sounded among the strings, embellished by the woodwinds; the parts were then exchanged by the instruments and the movement closed softly. The second movement could almost be called a fluffy bit of enchantment, but there were undertones of seriousness, the cellos too rich in color to be frothy, and the development a vast interplay of light and dark figures. The finale was a masterpiece of restrained power and for the third time the composer brought the movement to a considerate and tranquil close. In this and the following one was aware of the whole entity, conductor, composer and orchestra in complete accord.

The final opus, Debussy's La Mer, was transcendant. Mr. Munch and the orchestra wove a spell of enchantment with these sketches that one was loathe to cast off. The audience obviously was transported with its ineffable beauty and with awakening awareness burst into wild approbation; one's aesthetic sense rebelled against the return to reality but was perhaps made keener for an appreciation of the same.

Since the evening concerts are supposed to begin at 8:30 it is wise to arrive between 7:30 and 8 to avoid confusion, or even earlier, to picnic on the spacious and beautiful lawns, an enjoyable prelude to an evening of music.
—M. B.

Fairfield County Fair
July 5, 1956

Tanglewood Untangles

This week on the 200-acre pine-clad estate of Tanglewood, at Lenox in western Massachusetts, the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 musicians under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, and the 400 students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, will commence the annual program of 24 public concerts and some 30 student demonstrations which have made the Berkshire Hills a mecca for more than 130,000 music lovers each summer for the past decade and a half during the concentrated six weeks in July and early August that is the period of the Berkshire Festival.

Classical and modern symphonic music, works for chamber orchestra, choral pieces, chamber music and opera will once more lure the city tourist over highways and railway lines to the cool green of the Berkshires, from July 4 to August 12. This year marks the nineteenth summer, since 1937, that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has directed the Berkshire Festival, which grew from a local project for outdoor concerts first undertaken in 1934 under canvas by citizens of Berkshire county, and which now sets the pace throughout this country for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude.

The pattern of the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which commences with a chamber music concert of works by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday evening (July 4), is the same as in recent years. Six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will feature noted soloists and ensembles. In 1955 these performances, once considered or special tastes only, attracted a total of 9,561 persons to average 1,593 or more than the capacity of the auditorium. Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart series," performed in the same auditorium by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Munch, are given during the first two week-ends in July, and last year attendance at these six events totaled 10,190, an average of 3,032, again considerably above average.

In the final four week-ends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony assembles at Tanglewood for twelve week-end concerts, and in 1955 an attendance at these was registered of 108,336, an average of 9,028 persons, more than one-third again the capacity of the 6,000-seat shed.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
Circ. D. 314,247

JUL 21 1956

Recording the Classics

New LP's: The B's, All SIX of 'Em

By JIM FRANKEL

The Three Big B's and three lesser B's are the subjects of new, generally first-rate LP releases.

FRANKEL

BACH: Sonata No. 1 and Partita No. 2 are played with exquisite emotion by the one and only Heifetz for Victor. . . . Also for Victor, Organist Virgil Fox makes wonderful sounds with choice Bach selections.

London's Ducretet-Thomson offers the Concertos for three and four "pianos" (originally, harpsichords) with French artists on an LP, also four sonatas for flute and harpsichord and cello on another. All richly recorded and impeccably rendered.

BEETHOVEN: Pianist Byron Janis has sensitive touch and sound learning in Sonatas No. 21 and 30 for Victor. . . . William Steinberg and his Pittsburgher offer a warm, thin-sounding "Eroica" Symphony for Capitol.

BRAHMS: Boston Symphony under Charles Munch offers a smooth, ample, mellow Symphony No. 2 for Victor. A deep-feeling performance. . . . Same symphony by the NWDR Orchestra of Hamburg (Capitol) has good spirit but is slowly paced. Sound on both is tops. . . . Antal Dorati and the Minneapolis Symphony essay Symphony No. 3 (Mercury). Performance is spirited and edgy. Good value has Academic and Tragic Overtures, too.

BYRON JANIS

JENO ANTAL

[195]

OUR ENGLISH SECT

NEW ENGLAND FOREIGN LANGUAGE NEWSPAPERS ASSOCIATION MEMBER

OUR POLICY

"The purpose of the Association shall be to help preserve the ideals and traditions of our country, the United States of America, to revere its laws and inspire others to respect and obey them, and in all ways to aid in making this country greater and better"

Tanglewood: Programs and Problems

By MARLENE A. BURNS

A thought-provoking article by Jay Harrison appeared under the headline "Sameness of Programs at Tanglewood Criticized" in the July 22nd New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Harrison maintained that many of the Berkshire Festival programs are "familiar to the point of embarrassment." It is very true that the same Bach concertos and suites, Beethoven overtures and symphonies, and works by Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel are performed summer after summer. As is the case with the Bach Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings, and the Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique, many works are repeated by audience demand to hear already excellent and exciting interpretations which have added new dimensions with the passing of a year and the ever-expanding artistry of the musicians particularly associated with the works, in this case flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer and the Bach suite, and conductor Dr. Charles Munch and the Berlioz symphony.

Mr. Harrison does seem right in his belief that some works are needlessly repeated, however. This type of Tanglewood repetition seems to stem more from habit than anything else. Surely the Brahms and Beethoven symphonies which are so often heard could be replaced by less familiar works by acknowledged masters. Perhaps in this way the programs could be more of a musical adventure than Mr. Harrison seems to think they are. The attitude toward concert performance of relatively unknown contemporary works or modern works of surpassing difficulty to comprehend is still hostile, even though recent compositions are being heard more frequently each year. The ideal rpogram which Mr. Harrison seems to suggest is one made up of an acknowledged artistic tour de force for The Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lesser known work by a classical or major modern composer, and a new work.

If Mr. Harrison seems justified in much of his argument about the Tanglewood orchestral programs, some investigation is due of the other extreme which he does not mention in his article. This opposite is the series of Berkshire Music Center programs of compositions by Tanglewood students and young American composers. The one disadvantage with these programs is that they are attended by Friends subscribers only. So much of a defensive hostility still remains against modern, i. e. dissonant, music that many people wonder why there is no cozy Enemies organization to equate the situation produced by having only a Friends group. As the Berkshire Festival programs are hampered by the security of relying on classical stand-bys, so the Berkshire Music Center programs are hampered by relying only on patronage. Modern music by this time should be able to stand on its own worth to any audience which pays to hear it, without the benefit of Friends. Schoenberg developed his innovations fifty years ago. Since that time Stravinsky, Copland and Milhaud, to mention a few, have developed as modern masters. Granted that student events such as the Composers' Forums need patronage to support the Tanglewood school; yet some programs such as those presented by the Fromm Music Foundation, with the compositions and performance already subsidized, should be open to the public so that modern American music can be as available as the sturdy classics which fill the Tanglewood air a little too frequently.

* * *

The July 22nd Composers' Forum showed clearly the expanded means of musical expression which has developed in the past fifty years. The works heard, representing composers from five countries, were alternately playful, dramatic, frenetic, serene, and hyper-intellectual. All were technically interesting and difficult.

Walter D. Skolnik's Divertimento No. 1 for Two Clarinets and Bassoon had the same carefree air as Morton Gould's "Interplay" score and Aaron Copland's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra. At times the whimsicality gave way to a shade of spontaneous moodiness which gave shape and meaning to the other less distant moments. The picking-up of theme from one clarinet to another, and the contrast provided by the bassoon were the bases for the alternating moods.

Tossi Ichiyanagi's Sonata for Violin and Piano explored a developing refinement at first suggested by the quiet and elegant piano and then discovered by the violin, which began dramatically and boldly, then subsided into an interplay with the piano, and ended still dramatic but less bold — exactly Allegro non troppo. The violin solo was especially demanding, and its subtle colors were carefully conveyed by Noriko Oka.

Eino Rautavvara's Suite for Strings, Op. 2 went through no such clearly defined evolution as Ichiyanagi's suite. This quartet proceeded frenetically, hewing away at the firm structure of the Andante, which was surrounded by the Presto and Vivace assai. The pace was hectic, and the continued drive of the opening and last movements tended to become monotonous.

Pequena Music (Little Music) for Woodwind Quintet, by Josè Serebrier of Uruguay, by contrast, was filled with pauses and silences which gave a full scope to the work. While certainly not as extreme as John Cage's Music for (Prepared) Piano, this composition was equally as fluid in its use of time — exploring all possibilities for rest and motion in sound. Of all the works heard, this was the most melodic, if not the most thematically developed. The middle movement, Danza, was tuneful but otherwise insignificant. In Cancion de Amor, the interesting orchestration was molded around a warm French horn solo, played with sensitivity and skill by Wayne Harrell.

Of the Three Songs to the Poetry of Robert Hillyer, by Marjorie Grief, the musical intepretation of April Morning was most distinctive. The poem is brief and Mallarme-like in its high colors and sensuousness. The song itself was at times hushed and then almost ecstatic. The piano accompaniment was diaphonous and moody like the poem. The Gull and Julia's Room, although sung expressively by Dircea de Amorin, lacked color.

What was heard of Kenneth Gaburo's Ideas and Transformations, for Violin and Viola, seemed disagreeably dissonant and impressively difficult. The music seemed a cold intellectual play of themes and variations.

An interesting note of Carlos Farinas' Pregon with Variations for Flute and String Quartet, which was not heard because it was the last item on the program: Grace Henderson, a Pittsfield student at the Berkshire Music Center, was flute soloist.

[196]

Northampton, Mass., Gazette
July 28, 1956

Most Satisfying Symphony Program Warmly Received

In spite of the humidity in most places, Tanglewood wafted cool breezes over the 6,256 thankful music-lovers who attended last evening's concert.

One of three offerings, Beethoven's second "Leonore" Overture, a source of much debate where musicians gather, some preferring his more brilliant third, was a dramatic unfolding of the opera; the calm despair of the hero reflected by the marvelous sustained bowing of the strings, the gradual evolvement of the story, starting softly and spreading with mounting tension through the orchestra to burst dramatically in the trumpet fanfare heard in the distance, and then as if a little closer, announcing the salvation of the hero and heroine, the following quiet repetition of the hero's aria, and the anticipation of and release of thankful emotion in the famous violin passage. Mr. Munch directed the whole with dramatic fervor.

Next came the first performance at Tanglewood by Goffredo Petrassi's fifth Concerto for orchestra, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation. Mr. Petrassi, a major contemporary composer, is composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

This concerto employs all manner of sounds, formulated by an ingenious use of the instruments, is melodically pleasant, at times, dissonances not displeasing except in the second movement where an intensity of pitch becomes scalp-tingling; it begins very melodramatically with a theme of six tones in the violas, an eerie sound played ponticello, followed immediately by another group of six in the muted trombones, the two comprising a series of 12 on which this and the following movement are built; then everyone is kept busy with an erratic rhythmic beat, the percussion relieved by the basses, the almost perpetual motion of the strings.

In the two movements there is much change of mood along with tempo, a gay gamboling of the strings in the second is answered by a merry tune in the piccolo, flute, and woodwinds; repetitious use of the thematic material of the first is obvious but not too wearisome; both movements end pianissimo, a relief from the usual fortissimo, necessary one feels, because the ultimate in tonal absorption has been reached. Mr. Petrassi was given a very warm ovation, which he shared graciously with Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

The oft-played Tschaikowsky fourth symphony completed, most satisfying program. Certainly Mr. Munch did not spare himself at any time, to delineate carefully every nuance, and to expend himself and his players in a thoroughly vibrant and sensitive performance.

The audience reflected its pleasure in prolonged applause.

This evening's concert at 8:30, will include Schumann's A minor piano concerto by Rudolf Serkin, and Elegy composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Howard Hanson, and Honegger's fifth Symphony, also Debussy's La Mer.

Sunday's performance will be conducted by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the symphony, who will be assisted by his wife, Ruth Posselt, playing the Hindemith violin concerto. Mahler's first symphony and Prokofieff's Romeo and Juliet Ballet, Second Suite, will also be directed by Mr. Burgin. Both concerts are well worth the pleasant drive necessary to attend them.—M. deB. B.

New York Tribune
Aug. 1, 1956

TANGLEWOOD
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
LAST 2 WEEKS!
SHED CONCERTS: Fri. and Sat. Eves at 8:30 and Sun. Aft. at 2:30 (closing August 12)
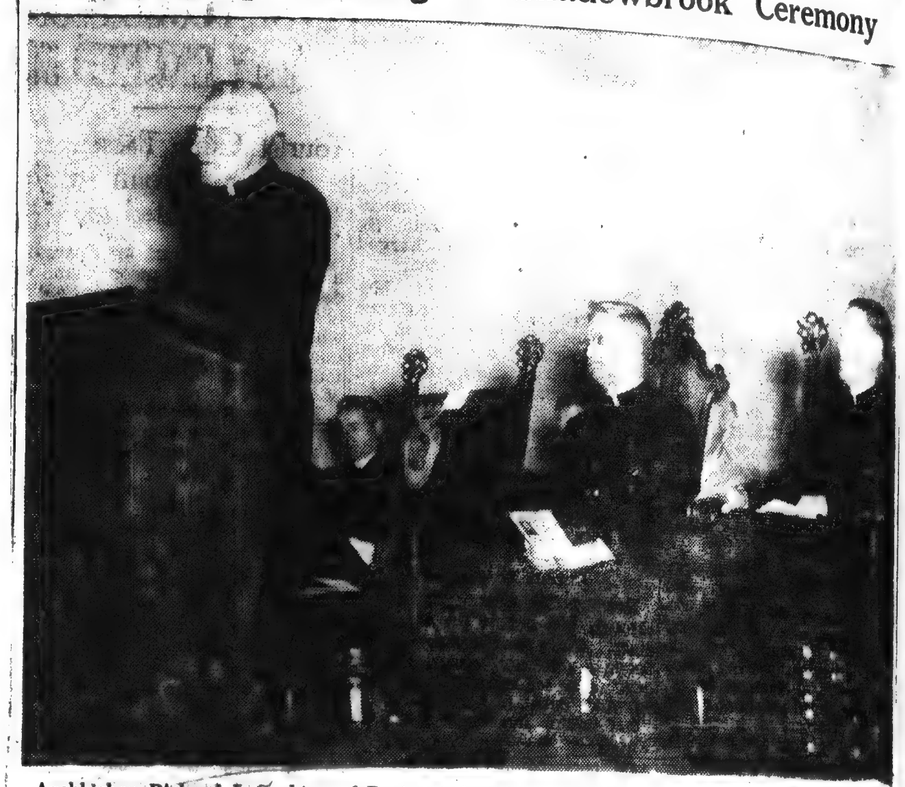
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Archbishop Cushing at Shadowbrook Ceremony



Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston tells 4000 attending ceremonies at the Tanglewood Music shed in Lenox yesterday that he will sponsor a drive for $500,000 for a chapel for the new novitiate to be built at Shadowbrook. Groundbreaking exercises at the site of the proposed building followed. Seated at right are the Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, New England Jesuit provincial, and Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of Springfield.

Bishops Turn

Continued From Page 1

will be built. The ground-breaking took place about 200 yards from the charred ruins of the old building at a location overlooking Stockbridge Bowl and the hills beyond.

About 4000 persons attended the formal exercises earlier at the Tanglewood music shed, including the New England hierarchy of the church.

Most From N. E.

Rev. George V. McCabe, SJ, executive chairman of the fund drive, announced that total collections to date amount to $2,158,522, almost $2,000,000 of it from New England. But Very Rev. William E. Fitzgerald, SJ, New England provincial, said the initial goal of three million dollars will not be enough to outfit the new facility completely.

Several hundred persons moved from Tanglewood to Shadowbrook for the ground-breaking and memorial exercises for the four who died in the fire.

The first to turn soil was Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon bishop of Springfield. He was joined in the ceremony by Archbishop Cushing, Bishop Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, Bishop Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich, Auxiliary Bishop Eric F. Mackenzie of Boston, Auxiliary Bishop John F. Hackett of Hartford; and Fr. Fitzgerald. Bishop John J. Wright of Worcester also attended the events at the Tanglewood music shed.

Memorial Rite Held

After the actual ground-breaking, a memorial service was held at the nearby graves of the four dead, with Rev. Francis O'Corcoran, SJ, rector of Shadowbrook, officiating.

Archbishop Cushing's pledge of $500,000 was made in memory of the four dead and also to mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius Loyola, who founded the Jesuit order, and the 150th anniversary of the Boston diocese, which occurs in 1958.

In announcing collections of $2,158,522 to date, Fr. McCabe said the Springfield area has given $108,658; the Berkshire area, $83,225; Worcester County, $187,772; Central Massachusetts, $50,585; and the Hartford area, $50,564. Largest contributions have come from the Greater Boston area, $779,027, he said.

Cites Cost of Furnishings

Fr. Fitzgerald said the cost of equipment and furnishings for the new building" may be about $50,000; and the increase in total cost may be still more." The old novitiate burned down five months after the fund drive started with the loss of all furnishings and equipment.

"The fire closed a chapter in the history of the Society of Jesus in New England," said Archbishop Cushing. "Today's ceremonies inaugurate another century of the Society of Jesus and another chapter in the history of the Jesuits in New England.

"I look upon this day as historic for all the dioceses of New England quite as much as it is for the Society of Jesus," the Archbishop added.

He said, the new building will provide teachers and scholars for the whole Catholic community. It is expected to house 30 Jesuit priests and professed brothers and 175 novices, juniors and novice brothers.

Music Is Offered

The ritual exercises were opened on this sunny summer afternoon by organist Florence Dunn of the Berkshire Music Center staff followed by renditions of "Kyrie" and "Credo" from Bruckner's Mass in E Minor performed by the Berkshire Music Festival chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross.

The hierarchy of the church trooped into the shed under an archway formed by the ceremonial swords of Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus from Pittsfield. The opening prayer was given by Bishop Weldon.

Shadowbrook fund drive national chairman Joseph E. Sullivan declared that "the campaign has been successful," but said he would await the time when it could be reported "over the top" before saying more.

Fr. Fitzgerald expressed the gratitude of the Jesuits to the hierarchy. the lay campaign workers and all who have donated to the rebuilding fund.

According to the program booklet for today's event, St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus, died on July 31, 1556, exactly 400 years ago today. Since 1923, the primary training center for the New England Province has been the St. Stanislaus novitiate at Shadowbrook, Lenox.

The Jesuits train priests and brothers for apostolates in education, communications, science, missions, retreats, parish and hospital work.

Berkshire Eagle, August 1, 1956

Archbishop Cushing Pledges $500,000 to Jesuits

Boston Prelate Reveals Plans To Build Shadowbrook Chapel

By FRANK V. McCARTHY

LENOX—Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston announced at ground breaking ceremonies at Tanglewood and on the Shadowbrook grounds yesterday, that he will sponsor an appeal for $500,000 to build the St. Stanislaus Chapel at the new Shadowbrook.

Archbishop Cushing added extemporaneously that the money is to be raised in three years and is not to be considered part of the three million dollar goal of the national Shadowbrook Fund. The whole three million dollars and more is needed for the construction and furnishing of the new Shadowbrook without the expense of the chapel, he said.

The Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., executive director of the national fund and master of ceremonies yesterday, announced that the amount collected to date for the fund is $2,158,000.

The ceremonies at Tanglewood began with music by the Berkshire Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross, and organ music by Miss Florence Dunn of the Berkshire Music Center staff. A ringing speech by Archbishop Cushing concluded the ceremonies in the Music Shed.

Memorial Service

Several hundred of the 4,000 people assembled in the Shed then went to the Shadowbrook grounds across the street for the actual ground breaking and the blessing of the graves of the three Jesuit priests and one brother who died in the March 10 fire which destroyed the old Shadowbrook.

High light of the afternoon was the speech by Archbishop Cushing, who belied the thin and wan appearance of having been seriously ill with a voice which rang with authority through the Shed and across the Tanglewood grounds.

"When the Diocese of Boston was established," the archbishop declared, "it included all New England as the Jesuit province of New England still serves the same area.

"I propose to link the 150th anniversary of the Diocese of Boston to the 400th anniversary of the Society of Jesus," which is being observed this year.

Dedicated to Holy Cross

"The Cathedral of Boston, now undergoing repair in preparation for the anniversary of the diocese," Archbishop Cushing said, "is dedicated to that Holy Cross which the Jesuits planted on New England soil, that Holy Cross the saga of which has found the Jesuits one with the bishops, priests and people of New England at the very point of crisis or of conquest. Our objectives have been theirs; theirs ours.

"In witness to that solidarity on the level of our work, our aspirations, our solicitudes and our prayers, I, as Archbishop of Boston, mindful of our common memories, confident of our united future, announce in honor of our 150th anniversary and of the Shadowbrook dead, that I shall sponsor an appeal for the sum of $500,000 to provide the chapel of St. Stanislaus Novitiate, the Shadowbrook of the future."

In reviewing the history of the Jesuits in New England, Archbishop Cushing quoted Theodore Maynard to the effect that the beginnings of the church in this country were largely "a Jesuit affair."

In 1611, the region of New England was consecrated when a cross bearing the arms of France was erected in the harbor of Sainte Croix following the commissioning of the Jesuit Fathers to preach the Canadian mission. This included what is now New England, the archbishop said.

He told of the trials of the Jesuits before and after the establishment of the colonies and related that after the "beginnings in Boston of the organized Catholic community in New England, the Jesuits acquired bitter criticism, even within the household of the faith."

He quoted from the subtitle of a book alleged to be a "true and exact history of the Jesuits . . . A Well-Meant Caution to the U.S. of America on the Danger of Admitting that Turbulent Body of Men, Called Jesuits . . ."

The archbishop described the founding of Holy Cross College and Boston College, naming among those responsible Bishop Benedict Joseph Fenwick, S.J., the Rev. James Fitton and the Rev. John McElroy, S.J.

"The educational ideals of Fenwick flourish in schools and colleges of Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut," the archbishop declared. "Here in Western Massachusetts, there now arises a new and more effective center in which are cradled, as it were, the newborn hopes of the Society of Jesus for an even more superb service to Christ and to souls."

Mitchell

BREAKING GROUND at the site of the new Shadowbrook Novitiate is Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston following ceremonies in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, where the prelate was the principal speaker. Watching the archbishop take his turn at turning the soil are the other New England Catholic leaders who took part in the exercises, Bishops Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, John F. Hackett of Hartford, Auxiliary Bishop Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston, Christopher J. Weldon of Springfield, Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, Jesuit provincial of New England, Bishop Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich and Bishop John J. Wright of Worcester.

BISHOPS TURN SOIL FOR NEW SHADOWBROOK

Archbishop Cushing Will Sponsor Appeal for Additional $500,000

Lenox, July 31—Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston today pledged $500,000 for a new chapel at Shadowbrook during ground-breaking ceremonies for the new St. Stanislaus Jesuit Novitiate in Lenox.

To Sponsor Appeal

Archbishop Cushing said he would personally sponsor an appeal for that sum, which would be in addition to the three million dollar drive now in progress to replace the building destroyed by fire here March 10 with the loss of four lives.

Later, in a unique ceremony, six bishops from throughout New England turned over chunks of earth where the new novitiate

Continued On Page 18

Earth Turned for Shadowbrook

Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of Springfield, turns the first shovelful of earth at ground-breaking ceremonies for a new novitiate at Shadowbrook in Lenox yesterday. Other priests, who also used the spade, are, left to right, Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston; Bishop Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport; Jesuit provincial William E. FitzGerald; Auxiliary Bishop John F. Hackett of Hartford; and Auxiliary Bishop Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston.

[192]

Berkshire Eagle, August 1, 1956

Our Berkshires

The Old and the New Art at Tanglewood

By Walter Prichard Eaton

THE RECENT ATTACK on the Tanglewood programs by a music critic of the New York Herald Tribune can hardly be dismissed lightly, for it raises once more the old question of how music (or any other form of art) can develop, how new creative artists can be encouraged, if all programs are revivals of old compositions and the public is not encouraged to appraise and enjoy what is new.

* * *

IN THE THEATER the problem does not exist, or rather it exists in reverse. By and large the theater public demands novelty, and the difficulty is to get them to patronize enough revivals to keep them aware of their dramatic past. They will go to Shakespeare if well enough acted, and as we have just demonstrated in the Berkshires they will go to Shaw (if you think of Shaw as belonging to the past). But if either Broadway or the Berkshire summer playhouses should attempt to stage an entire season of plays, as old as the music of Bach, Mozart, Brahms, even Debussy and Ravel, the result would be financial disaster; just as it would be financial disaster, no doubt, if the Boston orchestra, or the Philharmonic, or the Philadelphia band, should play for a whole season nothing earlier than Bartok. In an average theatrical season probably 80 or 90 per cent of all plays are modern. What is the percentage of modern compositions in the average symphony concert repertoire? I suppose somebody has worked it out for individual orchestras, but probably not for the country at large. I should be greatly surprised if the theater percentage were not reversed. For the country at large it would almost certainly be 90 per cent of established classics. The Boston band does better by the new than do the majority.

* * *

DOUBTLESS there are many reasons for this paradoxical situation, and it is a situation that did not always obtain. In the days of Garrick in the 18th century and of Kemble, Kean and Booth in the 19th, the theaters showed a larger number of old plays than of new. Moreover, a successful new play could expect to remain in the repertoire for 50 or 75 years, sometimes more. How often in my boyhood did I see "The Rivals" and "She Stoops to Conquer"! I even saw the latter in Pittsfield, at the Colonial Theater, played by a very good traveling company. I haven't seen it since. To be truthful, I don't particularly want to.

For in the latter half of the 19th century Ibsen, with the help of Zola and Tolstoi and the Time Spirit, developed modern drama, which was realistic and reflected the speech, the social structure, the spiritual and political idiom of its age. This bewildered old timers, unaccustomed to using their minds in the theater; but it rejoiced the young. In less than two generations, nearly all drama was realistic, and as a result nearly all plays were quickly dated, and lasted but a few years. That fine, exciting play of the Prohibition era, "Broadway," is as dead today as —as prohibition. So is Grace Kelly's uncle's fine comedy, "The Show-off." In our realistic theater only the giants survive, like Shaw and Chekhov. That doesn't mean we do not have good plays; we have many. But we wouldn't have them if we did not demand new dramas. The demand creates the dramas.

* * *

IN MUSIC there has been no analogous development which turned listeners eagerly to the new things and made the old seem outmoded. The repertoire of the Metropolitan Opera house is nine-tenths stodgy repetitions. Not long ago Tanglewood produced something new in opera, "Peter Grimes," but after hearing it most people went back to "Don Giovanni" with relief. Just as perhaps you go back from Bartok or Honegger to the harmonious dullness of Brahms. The great Romantics wrote wonderfully beautiful music. George Moore said the songs of Schubert and Schumann were "the moonlit lakes and nightingales of music." Moonlit lakes and nightingales appeal to nearly everybody's emotions, and the appeal of music to most people is an emotional appeal. With the older giants the modern composers cannot compete, or do not want to. They feel it their task to find new musical styles which can have a peculiar emotional appeal to the people of today, just as Ibsen found a new style for the drama, just as painters and architects are trying to find new styles.

This, it seems to me, the composers have not yet done, to such an extent, at any rate, that the public demands their work in preference to Mozart and Beethoven. It may be that certain musicians have done it for a certain section of the public, with jazz. But probably this section of the public never had any association with great and serious music. The best the symphony orchestras can do, and remain solvent, is to commission new works with the help of foundation funds, and give them a hearing. No composer can make a living writing symphonic music. This is giving the composers a very limited field in which to develop a new art, but apparently it is the best they can at present expect.

There would probably be more opportunity for new composers, a better chance to train the public to accept experimental music, if our orchestras were not so large and expensive. The Boston orchestra numbers 104—or is it 105? Mozart wrote for an orchestra of 35. But here economics again rears its horrid head, and we hastily withdraw ours.

THE BOSTON HERALD, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1956

Serkin Honoring Schumann Tonight

Rudolf Serkin (who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer), makes his sceond and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the intimate 1200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30. He will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, wit hfour members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Berkshire Eagle, August 1, 1956

Rudolf Serkin's Final Concert At Tanglewood Tonight at 8:30

TANGLEWOOD—Rudolf Serkin, who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer, makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall tonight at 8:30. He will continue tonight his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite.

In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The Boston Woodwind Quintet was formed by the principal woodwind players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1952. Since then the group has given many concerts throughout New England and on tour.

The final concert in this summer's chamber music series will be given next Wednesday evening when violinist Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam, pianist, will play a program of sonatas by Faure, Ravel and Franck.

This coming weekend the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho (Friday evening), Leonard Bernstein (Saturday evening), and Charles Munch (Sunday afternoon). Soloists will be pianist Jocy de Oliveira on Friday; singers Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum on Saturday; and violinist Zino Francescatti on Sunday.

Remaining tickets for all concerts in the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug. 12, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office. Telephone reservations are accepted.

Schenectady Gazette

De Carvalho to Conduct At Tanglewood Saturday

Summer symphonic music at the Berkshire Music Festival this week will include three weekend programs under the leadership of Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, Friday evening; Leonard Bernstein, Saturday evening; and by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's music director Charles Munch on Sunday afternoon.

* * *

A JOINT RECITAL of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart will be presented tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

The concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony will be held in the Music Shed.

Evening programs at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., open at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. Serkin will be assisted tonight by the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, which includes Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon. The program will include the Schumann "Symphonic Etudes" and "Carnaval" played by Mr. Serkin, and the Mozart Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K. 452.

* * *

JOCY DE OLIVEIRA, wife of Mr. deCarvalho, will make her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto Friday evening. The program will also include Henri Barraud's "La Kermesse" in a first Tanglewood performance; de Falla's "The Three-Cornered Hat" and a complete performance of Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka."

The Saturday evening program will open with the Mozart "Mass in C minor (K. 427), the Kyrie and Gloria" with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor, and the Festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke deVaron. It will also include the Prokofieff "Symphony number 5" which Serge Koussevitzky introduced to the United States.

The entire program is being presented as a memorial to Dr. Koussevitzky, who was Mr. Bernstein's patron.

* * *

ZINO FRANCESCATTI will be soloist with the orchestra on Sunday afternoon in the Tchaikowski Violin Concerto. Dr. Munch will also conduct Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" for its first performance at Tanglewood and the Schumann Symphony number 2 in C major. The Schumann symphony has been included to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann.

The Berkshire Festival will conclude on the afternoon of Aug. 12 and will be followed immediately by a five-week tour of Europe by the Boston Symphony.

[99]

Symphony Timpanist Retiring

Roman Szulc, left, 62, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orcestra, will complete 21 years' association with the orchestra when he retires at the end of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglwood on Aug. 12. His successor is his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, a member of the orchestra since 1952, who will become first timpanist with the start of the orchestra's tour of Europe on Aug. 24.

First Timpanist Of Symphony to Retire On Aug. 12

Lenox, July 31 — Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife in Boston, and during the Tanglewood season at 28 Clinton Ave., Pittsfield. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. He has two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras. They now operate a gasoline station in Long Island.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony, succeeding the great trombonist Ritter. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Firth was born in Winchester and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Mr. Szulc, and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

Tribune
August 1, 1956

Serkin Concert At Tanglewood

The fifth week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens at 8:30 p. m. today in the Theater-Concert Hall with a chamber music concert by Rudolph Serkin, pianist, and four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet. The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give concerts in the Music Shed Friday night under Eleazar de Carvalho, Saturday night under Leonard Bernstein and Sunday afternoon under Charles Munch.

Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, will play at Tanglewood for the first time in fourteen years in the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Thursday night, Aug. 9, when he will be soloist in Gershwin's Concerto in F. The Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra, under Mr. de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler, will share this concert, which begins at 8:15 p. m. There will also be an opera performance at 4 p. m. and demonstrations by departments of the Center at 6 p. m.

Roman Szulc, who has been the Boston Symphony's first tympanist for twenty-one years, will retire after the end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12. His successor will be Everett J. Firth, who joined the orchestra in 1952. Tribune 8/1

Rudolf Serkin Concert Today At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 31—Rudolf Serkin, who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer, makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. He will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind intruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gion Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The Boston Woodwind Quintet was formed by the principal woodwind players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1952. Since then the group has given many concerts throughout New England and on tour.

The final concert in this summer's chamber music series will be given next Wednesday evening when violinist Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam, pianist, will play a program of sonatas by Faure, Ravel and Franck.

This coming week end the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho (Friday evening), Leonard Bernstein (Saturday evening), and Charles Munch (Sunday afternoon). Soloists will be pianist Jocy de Oliveira on Friday; singers Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum on Saturday; and violinist Zino Francescatti on Sunday.

Northampton, Mass., Gazette
August 2, 1956

Pianist Serkin Rates Cheers, Plays Schumann At Festival

Robert Schumann, romantic composer, who died one hundred years ago, shared the commemorative program last evening with the classic genius Mozart, whose 200th anniversary has been honored throughout this year in most musical circles.

Rudolph Serkin, pianist, appeared for the second time at Tanglewood to a wildly cheering audience of 2,200 in the theatre-concert hall, a perfect setting for the genuine and sensitive music of Schumann and Mozart.

One of the most brilliant of Schumann's piano works, is the Etudes Symphoniques, a collection of 12 variations on a theme given him by his friend Baroness Ernestine de Frichen. Mr. Serkin opened the program with a forceful and sympathetic reading of these contrasted studies, in some of which the theme is quite lost, but for which the inspired music more than compensates. For love of musico - literary allusions, Schumann started the finale with a rough reversal of the theme, a quotation from Marchner's Ivanhoe opera, Templar and Jewess, full of the spirit of enivalry, and then works back to the real theme, and unified close.

Of special appeal was Mozart's Quintet for woodwinds and piano in which Mr. Serkin was assisted by Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Etherealized society music, skilful, uncomplicated spiritually and highly joyous, this quintet was interpreted with excellent taste and good feeling for its strict chamber style. Each instrument stood out in importance, nowhere did one overshadow the other, and yet the separate grouping of winds and piano was made obvious with great skill; within the wind ensemble little figures flitted from one instrument to another, at times changing their forms according to the timbre of the instrument employed. The larghetto had a melting and heartbreaking quality which was dispensed in the bounding finale. The piano, as Mr. Serkin contrived it, remained a part of the whole, showing his uncommon gift for perfect ensemble playing, not always evident in a solo artist.

The stirring Preamble of Schumann's Carnaval beban an exciting finale to the program; Mr. Serkin then produced an amazing kaleidoscope of pianistic personalities in the following sketches, airy was Harlequin, impassioned and tender was the valse noble; one hears Schumann's conflicting personalities, as he liked to refer to himself in the sensitive Eusebius and the esstatic Florestan. Since Carnaval is on a loose set of variatiaon on the letters ASCH (In German Bratural) these appear in incredible combinations throughout; also included are tributes to Chopin, Mendelssohn and Paganini, as he was a great and vociferos admirer of his fellow musicians.

An unreservedly enthusiastic audience insisted on an encore from Mr. Serkin, which seemed too demanding and anticlimatical after such a masterful performance of this incomparable work. However, Mr. Serkin graciously played on lilting Mozartean piece and departed, the audience reluctantly consenting.—M deB B.

Music

10—The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 2, 1956

Serkin Plays Schumann

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIFTH week of Tanglewood began with a chamber music program last night in the Theater-Concert Hall played by Rudolf Serkin and four members of the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quintet: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The five artists played Mozart's quintet for piano and wind in the center of a program of which the beginning and end were the massive piano works of Schumann, the Symphonic Etudes and Carnaval.

There scarcely could be greater contrast between types of music than that presented by last night's Mozart, a superbly lively, joyous work, completely innocent of complications, problems, either musical or literary, and the highly dramatic sets of variations and sketches of Schumann.

SERKIN'S conception was on a vast canvas. His unlimited mastery of the keyboard was used solely to express the burning emotion and passion pent up within him. If these virtues drove him at times even beyond the prowess of his own fingers, the large audience was made to sense every flaw and every particle of Schumann's intensity.

[illegible] is the centenary of Schumann's death and these particular suites were written in the early 1830s, when the composer was not yet 25. It doesn't take much imagination to discern what a commotion such writing must have caused in its day. Serkin exposed the depths of Schumann's melancholy and revealed the heights of his exuberance. The initial ominous descending arpeggio in C sharp minor of the Etudes set the stage. Serkin was not yet at his most dominant moment of the evening. Indeed, there were other instances of impatience and less than his wonted self-discipline. Even so, one could yet feel the accumulation of melodrama.

SCHUMANN [illegible] the lower registers [illegible] investigating new tonal and rhythmic regions, requiring a pianism in which Serkin was superbly adequate and, for the style of music, peerless.

The Carnaval has a brilliant introduction, suggesting the opening of possibly a great masquerade. Indeed the wide skips and the variety of the episodes must have just begged for some[illegible] ballet music, for that is just what Diaghilev did in 1913. He had it orchestrated and Nijinsky achieved a memorable success as the Harlequin.

These Schumann pieces are a delectable description for us pianists, more properly an ellosaurus. It is an unforgettable experience to hear, and witness, Serkin's performances. We do not hold out so much for his singing and snorting, but his immersion in the music, his expression of it, his headlong impetuosity, the gentleness of the tender episodes, the fury of the tempestuous ones, add up to a magnificent exhibition of musical exegesis.

THE MOZART is in another world and, no less a bewildering one. There is here none of the confusion of Schumann's merry-making. The adjustment of Serkin's piano to the smooth nature of the wind instruments and the skilful command of the performers made an excellent tonal grouping. Slight evidence of less than security at all points could not alter the pleasure the quintet afforded the audience. This was Mozart of the period of the great piano concertos, a mature man of 28. His insight to the potentialities of the instruments was artistically realized last night as the graceful phrases were turned with suavity and tonal beauty.

[300]

UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1956

RUDOLF SERKIN PLAYING STIRS ENTHUSIASM

Pianist, Quartet Are Given Much Applause at Tanglewood

By WILBUR M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 1 — Rudolf Serkin attracted the largest audience to any of the shed concerts thus far and he also drew the largest Wednesday night chamber music audience to night. Continuing his commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, he played the Schumann piano concerto last Saturday night. Tonight he played the Schumann "Symphonic Etudes" and "Carnaval." Observing the current Mozart bicentennial, he played, with the Boston Symphony woodwind quintet, the Quintet for piano, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon.

Members of the quartet were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. With Mr. Serkin at the piano, there was formed a group of superb musicians who seemed to be playing the music they loved. Each had given his service for the benefit of the revolving scholarship fund.

Mr. Serkin gave a brilliant, strongly propulsive account of the Schumann Symphonic Etudes. It was a broad, heavily outlined exposition of these delightful studies, each of which seems to outdo the other in interest and ingenuity of treatment. We have heard greater contrasts given to these etudes, but not always the vitality and drive Mr. Serkin provided.

The "Carnaval" was a sheer delight to hear. The miracle of these pieces is the bewildering variety achieved despite the limiting factor of three themes to which he confined himself. Regardless of the program given the work as pure music the "Carnaval" is a dazzling, passionate potpourri from one of the most poetic musicians who ever lived. It was all mirrored in Mr. Serkin's playing which was beautifully detailed, limitless in tonal variety and spiced with the joyousness inherent in the music. The audience numbering 2236 fairly rocked the concert hall in its enthusiasm and the shy little man returned time after time to acknowledge the applause.

Mr. Serkin seemed completely happy when playing with his colleagues in the Mozart "Quintet for piano, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon." He was relaxed and in perfect symphony and understanding with those about him.

Work of Master

This Mozart quintet, the first ever written for such instrumentation was composed in 1874 for a series of concerts in Vienna. It is the assured work of a mature master, who was perfectly at home in the musical language of the 18th Century. For this quintet, Mozart conceived some of his finest melodies and subtlest harmonic touches. The opening movement is a masterpiece of elegant melodic invention subtlety of texture and expert craftsmanship. The larghetto is a superb movement in the style of an operatic aria. The finale is elegant in form and content. The five musicians played the work with complete understanding of its stylistic demands and with faultless blending of tone. Indeed, it is difficult to imagine a finer performance.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, makes his appearance Friday in the shed concert. His wife, Jocy de Oliveira, pianist, will make her North American debut playing Ravel's piano concerto. The program will also contain "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Barraud, three dances from De Falla's "El Sombrero de Tres Picos" and the complete suite of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS. THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1956

THREE CONDUCTORS AT TANGLEWOOD -:-

Shown are three celebrated conductors who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its remaining concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. Left to right they are: Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra; Pierre Monteaux, guest conductor on Saturday, August 11; and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor for the Koussevitzky memorial concert on Saturday, August 4.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1956

Tanglewood Parade Is Set for Aug. 9

Berkshire Courier 8-2-56 p. 1

Eleazar de Carvalho Shares Conducting Honors

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Will Be Heard After Intermission.—Jesus Maria Sanroma to Play Gershwin Piano Concerto.—Week-end Program Announced.

Program details have been announced for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox on Thursday evening, August 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected—and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4:00 p. m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively.

At 5:45 p. m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p. m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Tanglewood Turn to fourth page

De Carvalho Is To Conduct at Lenox Today

Lenox, Aug. 2—Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Friday night's Berkshire Festival concert in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, at 8:30.

Mr. De Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer after a five-year absence as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. de Carvalho has scheduled a suite from the ballet "La Kermesse" by Henri Barraud in its first Tanglewood performance, and also three dances from the ballet "The Three-Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla and the complete score for Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." In addition, the young Brazilian pianist Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. Eleazar de Carvalho) will make her North American debut as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G Major by Ravel.

A bonus for Festival visitors Saturday morning will be the third of this season's four Saturday morning open rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for which a nominal admission charge of $1 is made with the proceeds benefiting the Pension Fund of the Orchestra.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TONIGHT 8:30—BARRAUD—FALLA—RAVEL—STRAVINSKY (CARVALHO
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira, Piano
SAT. Aug. 4, at 8:30—MOEVS—MOZART—PROKOFIEFF (BERNSTEIN)
SUN. Aug. 5, at 2:30—COPLAND—TCHAIKOVSKY—SCHUMANN (MUNCH)
Soloist: Zino Francescatti, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

[20]

'Griffelkin'

Performance of Foss Opera Set for Monday and Tuesday

TANGLEWOOD — Two performances will be given next week at the Theater-Concert Hall of "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, which will have its world premiere here as a complete stage performance. It is the summer's major project of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center. Performances will be given Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8:30.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the school, will stage the production and the composer, who is a member of the Music Center's composition faculty, will conduct.

Seats for both performances are reserved, and are available to those who support the music school through membership in its Friends' organization. Reservations may be made through the Friends' office at Tanglewood.

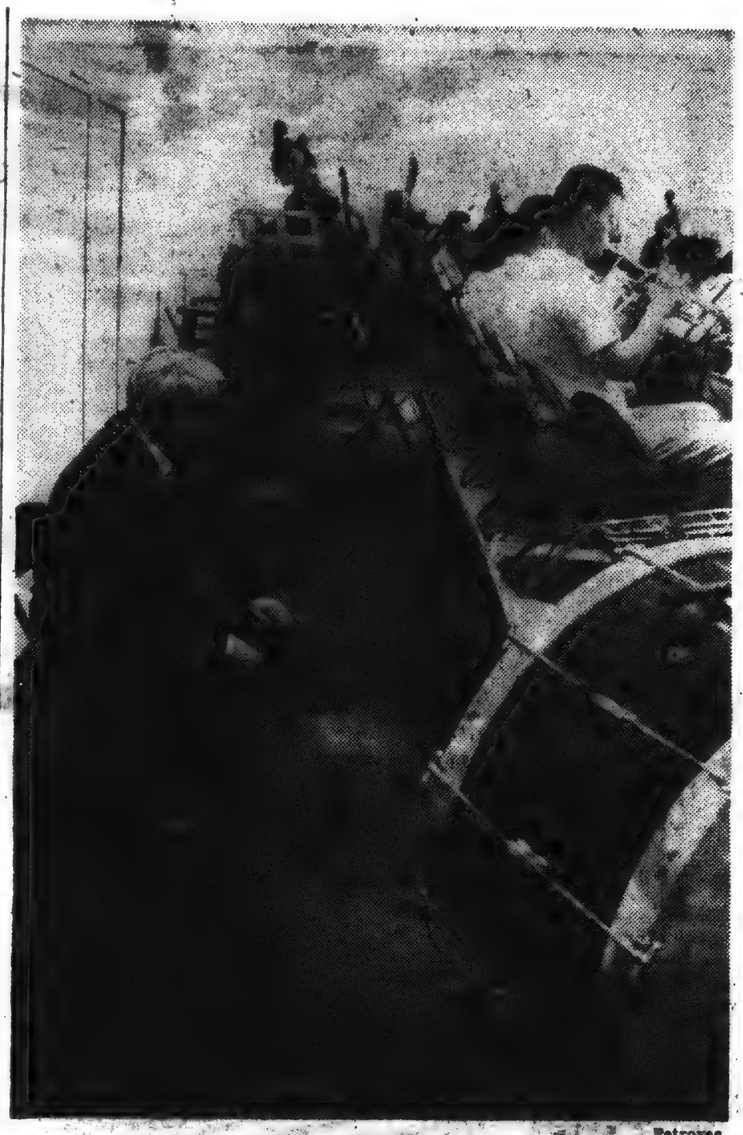
Largest Stage Work

"Griffelkin," an opera in three acts, is the young composer-conductor-concert pianist's largest stage work to date. It was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company, and the network's television Opera Theater gave it a coast-to-coast performance on Nov. 6, 1955. It has a rhymed libretto by Alastair Reid, British poet who teaches English literature at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y.

"Griffelkin" is based on a little-known German folk tale which the composer first heard from his mother at the age of seven and first set to music when he was only eight. Twenty-three years later Mr. Foss returned to the same subject, and from his synopsis his collaborator fashioned a libretto, achieved through transcontinental correspondence of some 50 letters and various drafts.

In the words of the composer, "Griffelkin" is "the story of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil, to change the world to hell. When he arrives in the world, he sees for the first time 'the blue sky.' This is his first 'discovery.' In the course of this day he discovers many things human—love, death, a mother with her children. With each discovery he becomes himself more human: learns, even falls in love. Finally, just before midnight he commits a good deed, and at the stroke of the clock finds himself surrounded by his hell-companions and put on trial. Griffelkin is expelled from Hell and ends as a mortal: as a little boy, a little human."

"Griffelkin" is the 34-year-old composer's second opera. His first, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," was produced at Tanglewood in 1950, and has had 38 different productions in the United States and three in foreign countries. His full-length work is scheduled for a European production in Stuttgart.



Petrovec

CONDUCTOR Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony takes an intermission during rehearsals with the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center. He will lead the students tonight in Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique." Works by Prokofieff and Petrassi also are on tonight's Music Shed program.

Tanglewood Premiere Set Monday for Foss Opera

Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin" will have its world premiere as a complete stage performance Monday and Tuesday evenings at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p.m.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the opera department of the center, will stage the production which will be conducted by the composer, who is a member of the center's composition faculty.

The three-act opera was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Co. and the network's television opera theater gave it a coast-to-coast performance on Nov. 6, 1955.

Alastair Reid, British poet who teaches English literature at Sarah Lawrence College, wrote the rhymed libretto. The story is based on a little-known German folk tale which Foss heard from his mother at the age of 7.

*

ACCORDING

"the story of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil and to change the world to Hell." A series of discoveries makes the devil succeedingly more human and in the end he is expelled from Hell by his companions and ends as a "little boy, a little human."

"Griffelkin" is the 34-year-old composer's second opera. His first, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" was produced at Tanglewood in 1950 and has had 38 different productions in the United States and three in foreign countries. His full-length work is scheduled for a European production in Stuttgart.

* * *

LUKAS FOSS was born in Berlin on Aug. 15, 1922, and at the age of 11 commenced studies at the Paris Conservatoire. At 15 he came to the United States to study at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and at Yale. He is associate professor at the University of California in charge of composition and is also music director of the UCLA Symphony Orchestra.

In the early days of Tanglewood he was a conductor-pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky. From 1944 to 1950 he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and since 1946 he has taught composition at Tanglewood.

"GRIFFELKIN" has a cast of 23 in addition to chorus and dancers. The orchestra will be composed of students from the orchestra department of the Berkshire Music Center. Robert O'Hearn designed the scenery; costumes and make-up are by Leo Van Witsen; lighting and technical direction by Thomas DeGaetani.

Seats for both performances are reserved and are available to those who support the music school through membership in its Friends' organization. Reservations may be made through the Friends' office at Tanglewood.

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Francescatti Violin Soloist At Tanglewood Sunday

Violinist Zino Francescatti will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday in the Tchaikowski Violin Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct the program which will open at 2:30 o'clock in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

FRANCESCATTI also will present a sonata program next Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall with pianist Artur Balsam.

The Sunday afternoon program will also include the first Tanglewood performance of Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and the Schumann Symphony number 2 in C major.

For the Wednesday evening program Francescatti and Balsam will play the Faure Violin Sonata number 1, the Ravel Violin Sonata and the Franck Violin Sonata.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM at the Shed at Tanglewood will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho with his wife, Jocy De Oliveira as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto. Other numbers will be Barraus's "La Kermesse," the deFalla "Three-Cornered Hat" and the Stravinsky ballet music, "Petrouchka."

Tomorrow evening's program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. It will include the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mozart "Mass in C Minor" and the Prokofieff Symphony number 5. Soloists for the Mozart will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor.

[200]

Tribune, August 6, 1956

More Than 20,000 at Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Attracts Largest Week-End Crowd

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—More than 20,000 persons heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this week end's Berkshire Festival concerts in the music shed at Tanglewood.

Last night's crowd, 11,104, marked the record thus far for this season's festival; today's gathering in the shed and on the lawn almost equaled this figure with 10,837. Warmer weather was one of the reasons cited for the increase in attendance over the previous two week ends of the festival's major series. The figure does not include the 6,000 present heard yesterday morning's public rehearsal.

Three Conductors

The week end offered an array of three conductors. Eleazar de Carvalho on Friday night was followed by Leonard Bernstein for last night's annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Charles Munch conducted this afternoon, with Zino Francescatti as soloist in Tchaikovsky's violin concerto; Aaron Copland's revised Symphonic Ode and Robert Schumann's Second Symphony, in C major, completed the program. Yesterday's program consisted of contrasted works, the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427) and the Fifth Symphony of Serge Prokofieff.

Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor, were the soloists in Mozart's music with the festival orchestra and the chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Kyrie and the Gloria are among th parts of the C minor mass whic Mozart actually finished; the are among his most eloquen and representative contribu tions to the literature of religious music—and indeed to music in general. Yesterday's performance did not suggest the operatic character sometimes ascribed to parts of Mozart's church works; it revealed the fugue at the end of the Gloria as a magnificent combination of compelling spontaneity and scholarship. The chorus sang this with clarity and brilliance. All details of the vocal and musical fabric had not seemed entirely clear at the start, but this impression soon faded. The soloists sang with expressive sympathy, and the general interpretation under Mr. Bernstein gave a sense of understanding and devotion.

One reason why Mr. Bernstein had chosen Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony for yesterday's program was that Dr. Koussevitzky had introduced it to America eleven years ago. Reheard, it revealed general individuality of style and a wide expressive span; it holds attention for most of its generous course, but there are episodes in which a particular musical idea seems slightly overdone; the higher end of the dynamic range is also rather overemphasized, although the adagio provides contrasted lyric meditation. Mr. Bernstein directed an admirable and revealing performance with notable communicative intensity; he and the orchestra successfully prevented successive climaxes from neutralizing each other.

The orchestra also dealt laudably with Mr. Copland's ode at the beginning of today's concert under Mr. Munch. The work, first written for the Bostonians' fiftieth anniversary and revised for their seventy-fifth, was heard last season in both Boston and New York. Today it gave a sense of much vitality with ingenuity of structure and skill in its colorful scoring. Its ideas make for unity and sequence, but its rather episodic nature sometimes interrupts a sense of continuity; at a few points animation borders upon chattiness. There are also emotionally convincing episodes of musical breadth and depth and instrumental glow.

Mr. Francescatti was generally in good form for the Tchaikovsky Concerto; apart from a few measures, his tone had its customary ingratiating quality, fineness of texture and effortless fluency. He also displayed his well known technical prowess in a musicianly, sympathetic interpretation, but here and there in the work's more energetic moments there was room for somewhat more Russian color and savor. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave the violinist well proportioned co-operation and closed the festival's semi-final week with a satisfying and persuasive performance of the Schumann Symphony.

N.Y. Journal-American, August 6, 1956

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL:

Honor Koussevitzky

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6.—Leonard Bernstein returned to Tanglewood to conduct the Berkshire Festival's annual tribute to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky Saturday night. He was warmly welcomed by an audience of 11,104, the largest to attend a festival event to date this season.

The program consisted of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, and Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. The Mozart was creditably performed, the Prokofieff outstandingly.

For the Boston Symphony, the Prokofieff conveyed strong personal association, since Koussevitzky had given its American premiere and championed it as the masterpiece people recognize it to be.

Ardor Shown

With his flare for the contemporary, Bernstein was at his best in the Symphony. Conducting with his customary ardor and choreographic style, he caught the essence of the music, if not the full depth of its meaning.

He allowed his tempos to become exaggerated at times for emotional rather than musical reasons, but nevertheless made sure that the content of the work was clearly and forcefully conveyed.

The performance served to underline the fact that this is one of the truly great works of this century. It speaks strongly of the thoughts and feelings of our times and of the underlying philosophy of hope that surmounts the troubled spirit of mankind. As Prokofieff was deeply aroused, so the listener receives the composer's message.

Audience Cheers

Such was the case with this audience, which followed in complete absorption and cheered at the end in recognition of Bernstein's achievement.

The performance of the Mozart never quite integrated. The soloists, Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, and John McCollum, were most successful in their trio.

Otherwise it was the Festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, which carried the performance. It was good but not stirring.

As the Boston Symphony sounded on this occasion, it has no rivals.

—MILES KASTENDIECK

N.Y. Times, August 6, 1956

Music: Two Memorials

Berkshire Programs Honor Composers

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—Up until Friday, the attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival had been lagging behind that of recent summers. But the turnouts for the last two concerts of the fifth week-end heartened festival officials. Yesterday's audience of 11,104 set the summer's record to date, and this afternoon's 10,837 lagged only a little behind.

It was a week-end of memorial observances. Last night Leonard Bernstein led the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. In doing so, he paid tribute to the Mozart bicentennial by devoting the first half of the program to the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427). Today, Charles Munch marked the centennial of Schumann's death by leading the Boston Symphony in the composer's Symphony No. 2 in C major.

•

There was beautiful weather for both concerts. The evening was cool and silvery, and today the afternoon was golden. The many people who brought their bright-colored blankets to stretch out on the lawns fanning out behind the Shed were able to get a pleasant tan as they listened to the music.

Mr. Bernstein was a protégé of Koussevitzky and he led the memorial concert last year, too. Then he led a notable performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." On Friday, he approached the excerpts from the Mozart mass as if they were Beethovenian, too.

In doing so, he made them seem heavily dramatic with a deep, pounding pulse. It was an approach that stirred the audience, but one that meant considerable loss of Mozartean style and grace. Still, the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang so well that there were many fine moments. The able soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

Leonard Bernstein

For the other work of the evening Mr. Bernstein chose a selection that Koussevitzky introduced to America—Prokofieff's Fifth symphony. The word for the performance was sensational, and this is not meant in an altogether flattering sense. Under his almost frenzied leadership the performance had enormous drive and vitality and the sonorities were piled up to mighty proportions. But for this listener at least the performance seemed more bombastic than penetrating.

•

Mr. Munch's selections besides the Schumann symphony were Aaron Copland's seventeen-minute Symphonic Ode, which the Boston Symphony played during its winter concerts, and the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

In all of them Mr. Munch's leadership was rough-hewn, vigorous and authoritative. There was little letdown in the tension, except in the adagio of the Schumann. Mr. Francescatti played with a boldness and technical virtuosity that matched the spirit of the accompaniment. He won an ovation from the vast throng, and the men of the orchestra applauded as heartily as the audience.

Northampton Gazette Aug. 6/56, FIVE

Art Exhibits Open in Lenox, Tanglewood

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, Aug. 6—New exhibitions have opened at the Lenox Library and in the reception hall at Tanglewood's main gate to provide fresh interest for those who have come here for the music festival and, of course, resident art enthusiasts.

In these recently opened shows, sculpture has its moment in the spotlight in the present exposition of the arts taking place here. The most important is the sixth annual exhibition of sculpture being presented in the garden of the Lenox Library through the sponsorship of the Sculpture Workshop, which is directed by Franc Epping, the well-known and distinguished sculptor.

The exhibition this year consists of 33 works by 21 sculptors. Some are the works of students in the sponsoring school but there are sufficient mature works to make the show interesting and important.

Robin Spry-Campbell is the most adventurous of the sculptors with his "Young Lovers," an expressionistic work introducing interesting arrangements of volumes and voids and of concave and convex planes, and "Trio No. 2," which consists of three organic forms interlinked.

Miss Epping is being notably represented by a wonderfully formed "Torso" carved from ash-wood and an interesting "Double-Portrait" which presents the profile of a man on one side and a girl on the other.

Others particularly rewarding in the show are "Head," an expressionistically conceived head of a man in bronze; "Awakening" in maplewood by Fred Lancone; "Morning" in birchwood and "Proud Woman" in walnut by Ethel Merlis; "Affection" in walnut by C. Torno Speyer; and the ethnic "Old Man and Woman" and "Family Portrait" by Carl Musgrave.

Sculpture also is being given distinguished representation through the show being presented in the reception hall at Tanglewood as here there is placed on display a selection of sculptures by Peter Abate, winner of the Prix de Rome and head of the department of sculpture at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, who, starting this year, has established an art school for the summer season at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

The sculptures in this group are on the small size and while not representative of the artist's best work they are interesting. In the group are several nude figures which have been elongated in the traditions of Lehmbruck. Among these, "Lillie Mae" is exquisitely formed. The portraits of George Cole and "The Student" also are masterfully executed. "Meditation" is notable for its encircling composition and "Modern Atlas" is an interesting adaptation of the well-known theme with the world supported by Atlas being a linear composition.

This morning there opened at the Lenox Library an exhibition of water colors by Thomas Blagden of Lakeville, Conn., which is rich as to color and as to artistic values. The paintings range from impressionistic realism to organic nonrepresentation and offer an interesting display of the artist's work.

[203]

Tribune, August 6, 1956

More Than 20,000 at Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Attracts Largest Week-End Crowd

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—More than 20,000 persons heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this week end's Berkshire Festival concerts in the music shed at Tanglewood.

Last night's crowd, 11,104, marked the record thus far for this season's festival; today's gathering in the shed and on the lawn almost equaled this figure with 10,837. Warmer weather was one of the reasons cited for the increase in attendance over the previous two week ends of the festival's major series. The figure does not include the 6,000 present heard yesterday morning's public rehearsal.

Three Conductors

The week end offered an array of three conductors. Eleazar de Carvalho on Friday night was followed by Leonard Bernstein for last night's annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky. Charles Munch conducted this afternoon, with Zino Francescatti as soloist in Tchaikovsky's violin concerto. Aaron Copland's revised Symphonic Ode and Robert Schumann's Second Symphony, in C major, completed the program. Yesterday's program consisted of contrasted works, the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427) and the Fifth Symphony of Serge Prokofieff.

Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor, were the soloists in Mozart's music with the festival orchestra and the chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Kyrie and the Gloria are among the parts of the C minor mass which Mozart actually finished; they are among his most eloquent and representative contributions to the literature of religious music—and indeed to music in general. Yesterday's performance did not suggest the operatic character sometimes ascribed to parts of Mozart's church works; it revealed the fugue at the end of the Gloria as a magnificent combination of compelling spontaneity and scholarship. The chorus sang this with clarity and brilliance. All details of the vocal and musical fabric had not seemed entirely clear at the start, but this impression soon faded. The soloists sang with expressive sympathy, and the general interpretation under Mr. Bernstein gave a sense of understanding and devotion.

One reason why Mr. Bernstein had chosen Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony for yesterday's program was that Dr. Koussevitzky had introduced it to America eleven years ago. Reheard, it revealed general individuality of style and a wide expressive span; it holds attention for most of its generous course, but there are episodes in which a particular musical idea seems slightly overdone; the higher end of the dynamic range is also rather overemphasized, although the adagio provides contrasted lyric meditation. Mr. Bernstein directed an admirable and revealing performance with notable communicative intensity; he and the orchestra successfully prevented successive climaxes from neutralizing each other.

The orchestra also dealt laudably with Mr. Copland's ode at the beginning of today's concert under Mr. Munch. The work, first written for the Bostonians' fiftieth anniversary and revised for their seventy-fifth, was heard last season in both Boston and New York. Today it gave a sense of much vitality with ingenuity of structure and skill in its colorful scoring. Its ideas make for unity and sequence, but its rather episodic nature sometimes interrupts a sense of continuity; at a few points animation borders upon chattiness. There are also emotionally convincing episodes of musical breadth and depth and instrumental sheen.

Mr. Francescatti was generally in good form for the Tchaikovsky Concerto; apart from a few measures, his tone had its customary ingratiating quality, fineness of texture and effortless fluency. He also displayed his well known technical prowess in a musicianly, sympathetic interpretation, but here and there in the work's more energetic moments there was room for somewhat more Russian color and savor. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave the violinist well proportioned co-operation and closed the festival's semi-final week with a satisfying and persuasive performance of the Schumann Symphony.

N.Y. Journal-American, August 6, 1956

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL:

Honor Koussevitzky

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6.—Leonard Bernstein returned to Tanglewood to conduct the Berkshire Festival's annual tribute to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky Saturday night. He was warmly welcomed by an audience of 11,104, the largest to attend a festival event to date this season.

The program consisted of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, and Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. The Mozart was creditably performed, the Prokofieff outstandingly.

For the Boston Symphony, the Prokofieff conveyed strong personal association, since Koussevitzky had given its American premiere and championed it as the masterpiece people recognize it to be.

Ardor Shown

With his flare for the contemporary, Bernstein was at his best in the Symphony. Conducting with his customary ardor and choreographic style, he caught the essence of the music, if not the full depth of its meaning.

He allowed his tempos to become exaggerated at times for emotional rather than musical reasons, but nevertheless made sure that the content of the work was clearly and forcefully conveyed.

The performance served to underline the fact that this is one of the truly great works of this century. It speaks strongly of the thoughts and feelings of our times and of the underlying philosophy of hope that surmounts the troubled spirit of mankind. As Prokofieff was deeply aroused, so the listener receives the composer's message.

Audience Cheers

Such was the case with this audience, which followed in complete absorption and cheered at the end in recognition of Bernstein's achievement.

The performance of the Mozart never quite integrated. The soloists, Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, and John McCollum, were most successful in their trio.

Otherwise it was the Festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, which carried the performance. It was good but not stirring.

As the Boston Symphony sounded on this occasion, it has no rivals.

—MILES KASTENDIECK

N.Y. Times, August 6, 1956

Music: Two Memorials

Berkshire Programs Honor Composers

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—Up until Friday, the attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival had been lagging behind that of recent summers. But the turnouts for the last two concerts of the fifth week-end heartened festival officials. Yesterday's audience of 11,104 set the summer's record to date, and this afternoon's 10,837 lagged only a little behind.

It was a week-end of memorial observances. Last night Leonard Bernstein led the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. In doing so, he paid tribute to the Mozart bicentennial by devoting the first half of the program to the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427). Today, Charles Munch marked the centennial of Schumann's death by leading the Boston Symphony in the composer's Symphony No. 2 in C major.

•

There was beautiful weather for both concerts. The evening was cool and silvery, and today the afternoon was golden. The many people who brought their bright-colored blankets to stretch out on the lawns fanning out behind the shed were able to get a pleasant tan as they listened to the music.

Mr. Bernstein was a protégé of Koussevitzky and he led the memorial concert last year, too. Then he had a notable performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." On Friday, he approached the excerpts from the Mozart mass as if they were Beethovenian, too.

In doing so, he made them seem heavily dramatic with a deep, pounding pulse. It was an approach that stirred the audience, but one that meant considerable loss of Mozartean style and grace. Still, the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang so well that there were many fine moments. The able soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

Leonard Bernstein

For the other work of the evening Mr. Bernstein chose a selection that Koussevitzky introduced to America—Prokofieff's Fifth symphony. The word for the performance was sensational, and this is not meant in an altogether flattering sense. Under his almost frenzied leadership the performance had enormous drive and vitality and the sonorities were piled up to mighty proportions. But for this listener at least the performance seemed more bombastic than penetrating.

•

Mr. Munch's selections besides the Schumann symphony were Aaron Copland's seventeen-minute Symphonic Ode, which the Boston Symphony played during its winter concerts, and the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

In all of them Mr. Munch's leadership was rough-hewn, vigorous and authoritative. There was little letdown in the tension, except in the adagio of the Schumann. Mr. Francescatti played with a boldness and technical virtuosity that matched the spirit of the accompaniment. He won an ovation from the vast throng, and the men of the orchestra applauded as heartily as the audience.

North Shore Gazette Aug 6/56, FIVE

Art Exhibits Open in Lenox, Tanglewood

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, Aug. 6—New exhibitions have opened at the Lenox Library and in the reception hall at Tanglewood's main gate to provide fresh interest for those who have come here for the music festival and, of course, resident art enthusiasts.

In these recently opened shows, sculpture has its moment in the spotlight in the present exposition of the arts taking place here. The most important is the sixth annual exhibition of sculpture being presented in the garden of the Lenox Library through the sponsorship of the Sculpture Workshop, which is directed by Franc Epping, the well-known and distinguished sculptor.

The exhibition this year consists of 33 works by 21 sculptors. Some are the works of students in the sponsoring school but there are sufficient mature works to make the show interesting and important.

Robin Spry-Campbell is the most adventurous of the sculptors with his "Young Lovers," an expressionistic work introducing interesting arrangements of volumes and voids and of concave and convex planes, and "Trio No. 2," which consists of three organic forms interlinked.

Miss Epping is being notably represented by a wonderfully formed "Torso" carved from ash-wood and an interesting "Double-Portrait" which presents the profile of a man on one side and a girl on the other.

Others particularly rewarding in the show are "Head," an expressionistically conceived head of a man in bronze; "Awakening," in maplewood by Fred Lanconé; "Morning" in birchwood and "Proud Woman" in walnut by Ethel Merlis; "Affection" in walnut by C. Torno Speyer; and the ethnic "Old Man and Woman" and "Family Portrait" by Carl Musgrave.

Sculpture also is being given distinguished representation through the show being presented in the reception hall at Tanglewood as here there is placed on display a selection of sculptures by Peter Abate, winner of the Prix de Rome and head of the department of sculpture at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, who, starting this year, has established an art school for the summer season at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

The sculptures in this group are on the small size and while not representative of the artist's best work they are interesting. In the group are several nude figures which have been elongated in the traditions of Lehmbruck. Among these, "Lillie Mae" is exquisitely formed. The portraits of George Cole and "The Student" also are masterfully executed. "Meditation" is notable for its encircling composition and "Modern Atlas" is an interesting adaptation of the well-known theme with the world supported by Atlas being a linear composition.

This morning there opened at the Lenox Library an exhibition of water colors by Thomas Blagden of Lakeville, Conn., which is rich as to color and as to artistic values. The paintings range from impressionistic realism to organic nonrepresentation and offer an interesting display of the artist's work.

[203]

The Berkshire Eagle

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 6, 1956.

Best Weekend of Season Boosts Tourist Business

The Berkshire County tourist industry [illegible] happy tunes on its cash registers over the weekend as good weather brought out the first near-capacity crowd of the season.

Tanglewood Gets Crowds

The weekend attendance at Tanglewood was 27,850, an increase of 2,400 over the same weekend in 1955. There appeared to be some hope today that good weather throughout the next weekend might erase some of the early season drop in Tanglewood attendance this year.

The Tanglewood attendance last season hit an all-time record of 136,087. That was an increase of 312 over the record set in 1954.

The 1956 Tanglewood season closes next Sunday afternoon. Starting with tonight's opera, there is something scheduled at Tanglewood every day through Sunday.

Information booths in Central and Southern Berkshire County reported the heaviest trade of the season, comparing favorably with peak periods in past years.

The Kiwanis information center in Lenox had its best weekend of the season, according to George Hughes, director. All rooms registered with the center were rented by 1 p.m. Saturday.

In Lee, Mrs. Kathryn Ford, director of the Chamber of Commerce information center, reported that the weekend was "by far the best this season." A good percentage of rooms were filled by Friday evening. The rest were rented Saturday morning and early afternoon. After that, visitors were referred to Otis, Becket and other neighboring towns.

'Like Old Times'

"It seemed just like old times. It must be the good weather," said Mrs. Ford. Earlier this year Mrs. Ford said the tourist business was the worst ever.

At the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce information booth, Mrs. W. F. Sanford said the weekend trade was "stupendous." She said the rush started early Friday afternoon and by Saturday the regular listings were filled and an "emergency list" of rooms was in use.

Saturday was the busiest single day in several years at the Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce information booth in Great Barrington. Hotels and motels in the area were filled by Saturday afternoon, and by 8 Saturday evening only a handful of rooms were still available in private homes.

Booth personnel in Great Barrington reported well over 1,000 inquiries from tourists wishing route information and accommodations.

Traffic at Peak

The weekend traffic at Tanglewood was as heavy as during previous record years at Tanglewood attendance, according to James A. Quihin, who is in charge of the Lenox special police [illegible] which handles traffic [illegible] center of town.

Although Central and Southern Berkshire enjoyed a [illegible] weekend, things apparently could have been better in the North Berkshire area.

Information booths operated by the North Adams Chamber of Commerce and the Williamstown Board of Trade reported a very "good weekend," though neither had its busiest of the year.

The Williamstown booth, located in Field Park at the junction of Routes 2 and 7, reported that all motels in the college town were filled over the weekend. Most of the lodging houses also were filled.

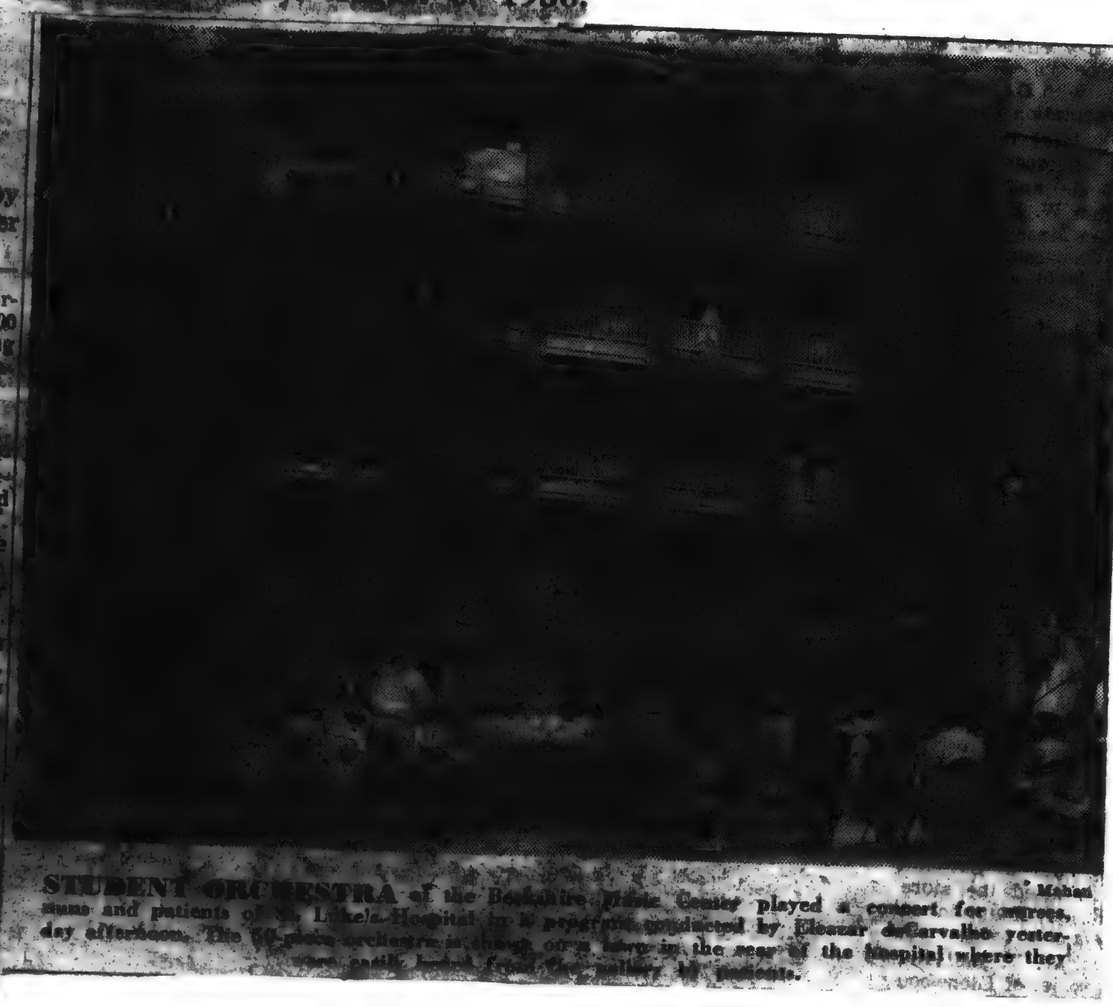
15 Turned Down Already

The weekend crowds also brought business to Northeast Airlines. The company had to turn away 18 people from yesterday afternoon's flight to New York City.

At Tanglewood, 10,837 turned out yesterday to hear violinist Zino Francescatti. There was a crowd of 11,104 Saturday, when Leonard Bernstein, in his only Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the annual Koussevitsky memorial concert. Eleazar de Carvalho conducted the BSO before a crowd of 6,009 Friday night.

Total attendance at last week's Tanglewood events was 39,504. Two weeks ago it was 33,493; three weeks ago, 25,526.

With operas tonight and tomorrow, Francescatti Wednesday night, Tanglewood on Parade Thursday and the windup three concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Tanglewood is expecting this to be its banner week of the current season—[illegible] willing.



STUDENT ORCHESTRA of the Berkshire Music Center played a concert for nurses, nurse and patients of the Lukens Hospital in a program conducted by Eleazar deCarvalho yesterday afternoon. The 60-piece orchestra [illegible] on the rear of the hospital where they [illegible] patients.

Syracuse Herald American
Sunday, August 5, 1956

Tanglewood on Parade In Berkshires Aug. 9

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, to climax the 1956 "Tanglewood on Parade" in the great Music Shed near Lenox, Mass., next Thursday night will bring the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma to the Berkshire Festival for the first time in a decade and a half. With the Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler conducting, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin. The pianist is remembered here for a concert a few seasons ago in the War Memorial when he played during a Gershwin evening. Later he was guest of honor at a reception in the Louis Krasner home.

In addition to the Concerto, the Boston Pops selections will include a Suite from the Ballet "Lo Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini, orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Maestro Fiedler who has directed the Pops for a quarter of a century and more.

The first half of the program will be presented by the Boston Symphony, Eleazar de Cavallo conducting, the numbers to comprise the "Russian Easter Overture" by Rimsky-Korsakoff and the Villa-Lobos Choros No. 10, titled "Rasga o Coracao" with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, led by Hugh Ross, head of the Chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of Berkshire Music Center: student symphony and chamber music, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division of the Tanglewood study group.

Tomorrow night, "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, will have its world premiere, a complete stage performance, in the Theater-Concert Hall. A second performance will be given Tuesday night. The composer, member of Berkshire Center's composition faculty, will conduct. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Center which is the Boston Symphony's summer home, has staged the opera.

Northampton, Mass., Gazette
August 6, 1956

Record Crowd At Tanglewood

A record crowd of 11,104 avid music lovers was bountifully rewarded Saturday night at the Koussevitsky Memorial concert in the Shed on the Tanglewood grounds. Leonard Berstein was the conductor of the evening and part of the year's largest assemblage was due strictly to his multi-faceted personality. He is without doubt the most exaggeratedly expressive conductor I have ever witnessed. The question would seem to be whether he is expressing the music or that most fascinating person, Mr. Bernstein.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the exceptionally well trained festival chorus performed magnificently the "Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor" of Mozart. The soloists, soprano Phyllis Curtain, Contralto Eunice Alberts and Tenor John McCollum were quite adequate to the difficult arias, Miss Curtin by far the most outstanding. Mr. McCollum we could hardly hear as he was positioned just about as far back as was possible, and Miss Alberts though she was vocally equal to every note, has a very throaty quality to her voice which rendered her efforts somewhat less than pleasing. A soprano - contralto duet, "Agnus Dei" however accomplished much in blending and interpretive feeling. The chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang with great enthusiasm for the beautiful music and reached magnificent choral heights in phrasing and changes of volume. Much credit for their performance should go to these directors for their thoroughness of preparation.

Prokofieff's 5th Symphony which followed the intermission enabled Mr. Bernstein to display more histrionics, but the result even so, was the performance of a symphony you would like to hear over again, to get to know like you do the Classical, for which, with Peter and the Wolf, Prokofieff is so well known.

The first movement pulled out all the stops for brasses and percussion, and was not particularly like other works of this composer but the second was reassuring and the third had lot of slowly thumping [illegible] passages which were very interesting to listen to. We left before the end but not too soon to hear the thunderous applause which [illegible] Mr. Bernstein and the members of the Boston Symphony of the success of their efforts.—E. M. B.

Northampton, Mass., Gazette
August 4, 1956

Music Warms Large Audience At Tanglewood

France, Spain, Russia and South America were given an evening at Tanglewood last night, when Eleazar de Carvalho of Brazil conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of more or less contemporary works.

A total of 9,006 people in the audience, slightly chilled by a brisk breeze, were warmed by the fiery flamenco rhythms of deFalla in three dances from "The Three Corner Hat."

Mr. de Carvalho's wife, Joey de Oliveira, warmed them still further with her entrance in a strawberry red dress and her pianistic technique in Ravel's Piano Concerto. This, too, had verve, a touch of the jazz idiom in rhythm and use of instruments. The pianist did not measure up to the color of her dress in much except technical efficiency, but the work itself is at best lacking in serious content. The second movement had some restful pastoral moments and subsided into a waltz tempo for solo piano then strings and woodwinds.

Stravinsky's "Burlesque" in Four Scenes," "Petrouchka" followed the intermission. Purely program and ballet music as it is, the music is full of effects, hurdy gurdys playing, merry-go-rounds grinding monotonously on, the sound of the crowds at the fair—from the fresh beginnings at the start of the day to the run down, worn out feeling that is the culmination of the life of a carnival's one day stand. Stravinsky is a master of these effects and makes every scene stand out vividly. Bernard Zighera was the piano soloist for this work.

Mr. de Carvalho is a rather quiet, unobstrusive sort of conductor, except for the fiery passages in the music of his own country or Spain. Then he is an inspiration and a dynamic body of rhythmic pulsations. Tonight's program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein and will feature the Mass in C minor of [204]

The Berkshire Eagle

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 6, 1956.

Best Weekend of Season Boosts Tourist Business

The Berkshire County tourist industry played happy tunes on its cash registers over the weekend as good weather brought out the first near-capacity crowd of the season.

Tanglewood Gets a Break

The weekend attendance at Tanglewood was 27,950, an increase of 2,400 over the same weekend in 1955. There appeared to be some hope today that good weather throughout the next weekend might erase some of the early season drop in Tanglewood attendance this year.

The Tanglewood attendance last season hit an all-time record of 136,087. That was an increase of 312 over the record set in 1954.

The 1956 Tanglewood season closes next Sunday afternoon. Starting with tonight's opera, there is something scheduled at Tanglewood every day through Sunday.

Information booths in Central and Southern Berkshire County reported the heaviest trade of the season, comparing favorably with peak periods in past years.

The Kiwanis information center in Lenox had its best weekend of the season, according to George Hughes, director. All rooms registered with the center were rented by 1 p.m. Saturday.

In Lee, Mrs. Kathryn Ford, director of the Chamber of Commerce information center, reported that the weekend was "by far the best this season." A good percentage of rooms were filled by Friday evening. The rest were rented Saturday morning and early afternoon. After that, visitors were referred to Otis, Becket and other neighboring towns.

'Like Old Times'

"It seemed just like old times. It must be the good weather," said Mrs. Ford. Earlier this year Mrs. Ford said the tourist business was the worst ever.

At the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce information booth, Mrs. W. F. Sanford said the weekend trade was "stupendous." She said the rush started early Friday afternoon and by Saturday the regular listings were filled and an "emergency list" of rooms was in use.

Saturday was the busiest single day in several years at the Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce information booth in Great Barrington. Hotels and motels in the area were filled by Saturday afternoon, and by 8 Saturday evening only a handful of rooms were still available in private homes.

Booth personnel in Great Barrington reported well over 1,000 inquiries from tourists wishing route information and accommodations.

Traffic at Peak

The weekend traffic at Tanglewood was as heavy as during previous record years of Tanglewood attendance, according to James A. Quinn, who is in charge of the Lenox special police detail which handles traffic through the center of town.

Although Central and Southern Berkshire enjoyed a busy weekend, things apparently could have been better in the North Berkshire area. Information booths operated by the North Adams Chamber of Commerce and the Williamstown Board of Trade reported a very busy weekend, though neither had its busiest of the year.

The Williamstown booth, located in Field Park at the junction of Routes 2 and 7, reported that all motels in the college town were filled over the weekend. Most of the lodging houses also were filled.

18 Turned Down at Airport

The weekend crowds also brought business to Northeast Airlines. The company had to turn away 18 people from yesterday afternoon's flight to New York City.

At Tanglewood, 10,837 turned out yesterday to hear violinist Zino Francescatti. There was a crowd of 11,101 Saturday, when Leonard Bernstein, in his only Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the annual Koussevitsky memorial concert. Eleazar deCarvalho conducted the BSO before a crowd of 6,009 Friday night.

Total attendance at last week's Tanglewood events was 38,604. Two weeks ago it was 33,393; three weeks ago, 25,526.

With operas tonight and tomorrow, Francescatti Wednesday night, Tanglewood on Parade Thursday and the windup three concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Tanglewood is expecting this to be its banner week of the current season—weather willing.

STUDENT ORCHESTRA of the Berkshire Music Center played a concert for nurses, nuns and patients of St. Luke's Hospital in Pittsfield conducted by Eleazar deCarvalho yesterday afternoon. The 50-piece orchestra is shown on the lawn in the rear of the hospital where they were easily heard from the gallery by patients. Mahan

Syracuse Herald American
Sunday, August 5, 1956

Tanglewood on Parade In Berkshires Aug. 9

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, to climax the 1956 "Tanglewood on Parade" in the great Music Shed near Lenox, Mass., next Thursday night will bring the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma to the Berkshire Festival for the first time in a decade and a half. With the Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler conducting, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin. The pianist is remembered here for a concert a few seasons ago in the War Memorial when he played during a Gershwin Evening. Later he was guest of honor at a reception in the Louis Krasner home.

In addition to the Concerto, the Boston Pops selections will include a Suite from the Ballet "Lo Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini, orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Maestro Fiedler who has directed the Pops for a quarter of a century and more.

The first half of the program will be presented by the Boston Symphony, Eleazar de Cavallo, conducting, the numbers to comprise the "Russian Easter Overture" by Rimsky-Korsakoff and the Villa-Lobos Choros No. 10, titled "Rasga o Coracao" with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, led by Hugh Ross, head of the Chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of Berkshire Music Center: student symphony and chamber music, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division of the Tanglewood study group.

Tomorrow night, "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, will have its world premiere, a complete stage performance, in the Theater-Concert Hall. A second performance will be given Tuesday night. The composer, member of Berkshire Center's composition faculty, will conduct. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Center, which is the Boston Symphony's summer home, has staged the opera.

Northampton, Mass., Gazette
August 6, 1956

Record Crowd At Tanglewood

A record crowd of 11,101 avid music lovers was bountifully rewarded Saturday night at a Koussevitsky Memorial concert in the Shed on the Tanglewood grounds. Leonard Berstein was the conductor of the evening and part of the year's largest assemblage was due strictly to his multi-faceted personality. He is without doubt the most exaggeratedly expressive conductor I have ever witnessed. The question would seem to be whether he is expressing the music or that most fascinating person, Mr. Bernstein.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the exceptionally well trained festival chorus performed magnificently the "Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor" of Mozart. The soloists, soprano-Phyllis Curtain, Contralto-Eunice Alberts and Tenor-John McCollum were quite adequate to the difficult arias, Miss Curtin by far the most outstanding. Mr. McCollum we could hardly hear as he was positioned just about as far back as was possible, and Miss Alberts though she was vocally equal to every note, has a very throaty quality to her voice which rendered her efforts somewhat less than pleasing. A soprano - contralto duet, "Agnus Dei" however accomplished much in blending and interpretive feeling. The chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang with great enthusiasm for the beautiful music and reached magnificent choral heights in phrasing and changes of volume. Much credit for their performance should go to these directors for their thoroughness of preparation.

Prokofieff's 5th Symphony which followed the intermission enabled Mr. Bernstein to display more histrionics, but the result, even so, was the performance of a symphony you would like to hear over again, to get to know like you do the Classical, for which, with Peter and the Wolf, Prokofieff is so well known.

The first movement pulled out all the stops for brasses and percussion, and was not particularly like other works of this composer but the second was reassuring and the bird had lot of slowly thumping double bass passages which were very interesting to listen to. We left before the end but not too soon to hear the thunderous applause which appraised Mr. Bernstein and the members of the Boston Symphony of the success of their efforts.—F.M.R.

Northampton, Mass., Gazette
August 4, 1956

Music Warms Large Audience At Tanglewood

France, Spain, Russia and South America were given an evening at Tanglewood last night, when Eleazar de Carvalho of Brazil conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of more or less contemporary works.

A total of 9,006 people in the audience, slightly chilled by a brisk breeze, were warmed by the fiery flamenco rhythms of deFalla in three dances from "The Three Corner Hat."

Mr. de Carvalho's wife, Joey de Oliveira, warmed them still further with her entrance in a strawberry red dress and her pianistic technique in Ravel's Piano Concerto. This, too, had verve, a touch of the jazz idiom in rhythm and use of instruments. The pianist did not measure up to the color of her dress in much except technical efficiency, but the work itself is at best lacking in serious content. The second movement had some restful pastoral moments and subsided into a waltz tempo for solo piano then strings and woodwinds.

Stravinsky's "Burlesque" in Four Scenes," "Petrouchka" followed the intermission. Purely program and ballet music as it is, the music is full of effects, hurdy gurdys playing, merry-go-rounds grinding monotonously on, the sound of the crowds at the fair—from the fresh beginnings at the start of the day to the run down, worn out feeling that is the culmination of the life of a carnival's one day stand. Stravinsky is a master of these effects and makes every scene stand out vividly. Bernard Zighera was the piano soloist for this work.

Mr. de Carvalho is a rather quiet, unobstrusive sort of conductor, except for the fiery passages in the music of his own country or Spain. Then he is an inspiration and a dynamic body of rhythmic pulsations. Tonight's program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein and will feature the Mass in C minor of

[20]

At Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith's party, Dr. Charles Munch, BSO conductor, third from left, chats with Goffredo Petrassi, one of Italy's foremost composers who is guest teacher of composition at Berkshire Music Center, left; Mrs. Massimo Freccia and Mr. Freccia of Washington, Conn. Latter is conductor of Baltimore Symphony.

Miss Robinson Smith Entertains At The Residence, Stockbridge

Miss Robinson Smith greets George Sokolsky of Sandisfield and Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti of Monterey. Mr. Francescatti, noted violinist, was soloist at yesterday's Berkshire Festival concert, conducted by Dr. Munch. Party at Miss Robinson Smith's summer home, the Residence, Stockbridge, honored Dr. Munch and Mr. Francescatti.

Northampton, Mass, Gazette
August 6, 1956

Three Composers' Works Are Played At Tanglewood

Sunday afternoon a throng of 10,837 music-lovers, their appetites whetted by near-perfect weather and a promise of well-ordered fare by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, converged on the Music Shed and the invitingly spacious grounds at Tanglewood for the twentieth program in the current Berkshire Festival series.

Two romantic composers shared the program with one contemporary composer, Aaron Copland whose Symphonic Ode, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Memorial Foundation and dedicated to the memory of Natalie and Serge Koussevitsky, opened the program.

As an hors d'oeuvre Mr. Copland's Ode was given its rightful place; packed with interesting material which was overwhelmed by erractic and repetitous rhythmic figures, wandering melodic lines, even the harmonic effects were, unless instrumentally padded, pallid and merely dissonant; the percussion and brass instrumentation was deliberate and quite exciting, but one's interest tended to lag long before the clipped conclusion. Mr. Copland appeared on stage to receive with Mr. Munch the audience's approval and appreciation.

The piece de resistance of the afternoon was undobutedly Zino Francescatti's playing of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto. A dedicated violinist since a small boy, Mr. Francescatti was resplendent in his deeply felt and technically perfect interpretation of this magnificently rich work. With his "Hart" Stradavarius he imparted a glowing singing tone to the nostalgic Andante; his bowing producing smooth-flowing phrases breathing gently with subtle changes, his virtuosity breathtaking at all times; the finale was necessarily brilliant and swift, the repartee between soloist and orchestra deftly handled. Mr. Munch led this superior orchestra in a perfect complement to the violinist's style and composer's intent, preserving a skillful and well-balanced unity.

The audience recalled Mr. Francescatti many times with vigorous and vociferous applause.

After such rich fare, Schumann's Symphony No. 2 was a bountiful but rather somber finish; however intermission tempered the contrast, and this commemorative performance was well-received. Mr. Munch and the orchestra reflected well the complex emotional and constructive gamut inherent in its fertility of melody and design, and were particularly expressive in the mobile and exultant finale.

The audience's impetuous response to this easily assimilated fare, must have been heart-warming to Mr. Munch and the orchestra personnel who labor long and devotedly to please most of their listeners most of the time. Especially gratifying is it to see a goodly profusion of well-mannered sub-teen and teen-age young people, with genuine interest in all phases of the Festival program reflected in their alert and absorbed young faces.

— M. deB. B.

Springfield Union
August 7, 1956

MUSIC CENTER OPERA SINGERS PRESENT WORK

German Fairy Tale Theme Of Lukas Foss Staged With Ingenuity

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 6—"Griffelkin," a German fairy tale set to music by Lukas Foss with a text by Alastair Reid, was offered tonight by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center as its principal production of the season. It was staged by Boris Goldovsky, conducted by Mr. Foss and performed by a group of talented and enthusiastic students.

Bright, Sparkling Music

Mr. Goldovsky has staged the work with a deal of ingenunity and the settings were as ingenious as the staging. Mr. Foss has written bright, sparkling music for the most part. It sounds deceptively easy but it is really difficult. This opera was sung in English, but for the most part it could have been sung on any vowel, for the music was usually so heavy that words were inaudible, except when spoken. The texture of the music was too heavy for most of the voices.

The role of Griffelkin was sung by Mildred Allen, a petite soprano with an excellent voice and delightful flexibility of movement. Much of her work was parlando, and her speaking voice was adequate. She sang easily and acted with charm.

A fine characterization was given by Regina Sarfaty, as the devil's grandmother. Her enunciation was particularly admirable. Shirley Carter as the statue also could enunciate clearly.

Audience Likes It

The audience seemed to be having a fine time, but to us the action was the cause of what amusement there was, for, without hearing the words, there was little sense to it all.

The student orchestra played the music admirably under Mr. Foss's direction. While this music had sparkle and rhythmic grace, it was, on the whole, too heavy and at times cumbersome.

Robert O'Hearn was responsible for the sevings and Leio Van Witsen for costumes. Lighting was by Tom Degaietani. Just where this opera goes from here will be interesting to observe. It seems far too difficult for the opera workshops and lacking in propulsion and power for the opera house.

Photos by Mahan

Among those at the event, attended by 125, were Mrs. Helen D. Lindsay of Sarasota, Fla., houseguest of Mrs. William Penn Cresson of Chesterwood, Stockbridge; Leo Montileone of New York, who spent weekend with Mr. and Mrs. George K. Livermore of Stockbridge; Miss Mabel Choate and C. D. Jackson, both of Stockbridge. Party followed the concert.

Hands Across the Hills

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I wish to thank you for your generous coverage of the new Empire State Music Festival at Ellenville in your supplement "Berkshire Week." In returning the visit of your patrons and backers, I salute the Berkshire Festival for its great accomplishment and like other Americans pay homage to its founders and supporters. Many of our subscribers will join Mrs. Forest and myself in participating in the closing days of this year's program and in the programs in future years.

FRANK FOREST.

Curtis Hotel,
Lenox.

GUEST SOLOIST at the Tanglewood on Parade program at the Music Shed Thursday night will be Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will appear with the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler in a performance of Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. Mr. Sanroma is making his first Tanglewood appearance since 1942. Proceeds of Thursday's event will go to the Berkshire Music Center.

[205]

N.Y. Post
August 6, 1956

Berkshire F... Draw... Top ...

By HARRIETT JO...

Lenox, Mass., Aug. ... clear weather brought the ... real crowds of the Berkshire Festival's current season here to Tanglewood for two miscellaneous programs by the Boston Symphony Saturday night and yesterday afternoon. The total for the three week-end events, including Friday's concert, was 27,950, a record for the current six-week season which closes Sunday.

Saturday night's program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, drew the largest audience for the 1956 season when 11,104 music lovers filled the gigantic Music Shed and overflowed onto the grass to hear the Massachusetts-born conductor lead a program of music by Mozart and Prokofieff.

The dynamic maestro had chosen to play an odd mixture of secular and sacred music, the selections influenced by the fact that the concert was in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Beginning with the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, Bernstein closed with the brilliant Prokofieff Symphony No. 5, which Koussevitzky had given its first American performance with the Bostonians in 1...

Because the enormously gifted, versatile conductor is so filled with electric energy, because of sincerity and eagerness to re-create music with intensity, his ten-

Music Tonight . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

Chamber Music Concert by American Chamber Orchestra conducted by Robert Scholz. Concert includes works by Purcell, Bach, Mozart. Washington Square ..., sponsored ... Washington Square Assn. 8 ...

...dency is to overplay and his way ... the situation with the Kyrie of the Mozart Mass. The first pronouncation flurries of the work in the midst of sophisticated, whirling sounds was inclined to jar on the nerves.

Bernstein's conception of the Kyrie and Gloria on the other hand had an abundance of buoyancy, which in the Gloria moved into ecstatic affirmation that always was controlled ... finely ... He was also ... by the Berkshire Festival ... prepared by Hugh ... and Cooke de Varon, ... responded to his wishes with sensitivity. ...

The soloists, Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor, performed well, especially Miss Curtin, whose lovely, pure quality soared easily even in the most difficult portions. Mozart gave his contralto, however, the most difficult task of all, entrusting to her passages so high they could only be easy for a soprano. Miss Alberts, on the whole, came through with excellent results, if the top notes were not all that could be desired. ...

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid To Tour Europe, U.S.S.R.

Famed Boston Symphony Orchestra received and immediately accepted a formal invitation from the USSR to include Soviet Russia in tour of Europe symphony will make during August and September.

Invitation from Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted by Yuri Gouk, attache of Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C., to orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr.

Boston Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch will be first American orchestra to perform in Russia.

Russian invitation to Boston Symphony is to spend six days of its autumn tour within the Soviet border and, although details are not worked out as yet, concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow. It is understood that the USSR, as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume expenses of transportation of the 108 members of the orchestra, music director Charles Munch and the orchestra's staff and equipment.

Boston Symphony's tour of Europe, which will include Edinburgh Tenth International Festival of Music and Drama, is to be made in cooperation with International Exchange Program of American National Theater and Academy (ANTA), professional agency appointed by State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits to the orchestra from concerts abroad.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 7 ...6

Curtain Music

Ed Fitzgerald, manager, Boston UPN bureau, has been selected as official photographer for the Boston Symphony Orchestra which will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad this Summer.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUL 11 1956

Boston Orchestra To Tour Europe

The Boston Symphony orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., said today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the last seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe after the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire festival on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday night, Aug. 24, with a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A high light of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres. The orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral — Leeds and London.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

JUL 11 1956

List Plans for Symphony Group's European Tours

CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Abroad

Detailed plans for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's five and a half week tour of Europe in August and September have been announced by Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

* * *

THE 106 MEMBERS of the orchestra will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12 and will return in late September in time for the opening of the 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra for the past seven years, will conduct most of the 27 scheduled concerts abroad. Pierre Monteux, music director of the orchestra from 1919 to 1924, has been invited to conduct some 10 of the concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in co-operation with the international exchange program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

* * *

A HIGHLIGHT of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the ministry of culture in Moscow and accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, to be the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR. The orchestra will be in Soviet territory from Sept. 5 through 10 and will present a pair of concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

TRAVEL PLANS include the transportation on Aug. 14 of 79 persons from Logan airport, Boston, to Shannon airport, Ireland, on a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super Constellation. Some 40 persons will sail the same date, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenged KLM Constellation will bring the rear guard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on the evening of Aug. 24 with a matinee in Dublin the following day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26 through 30, and then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

Other concerts have been scheduled from Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954

JUL 15 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, music director, now is in its summer home in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Festival is in progress. Dr. Munch has made changes in two programs to be performed in the Music Shed by the orchestra. Instead of all-Wagner concerts next Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each program.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" which Dr. Munch commissioned for The Boston's 75th anniversary season and which was named by the New York Music Critics Circle as the best new orchestral work presented in 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works are to have first performances in "Tanglewood." They replace previously announced excerpts from "Siegfried" and "Tristam and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously scheduled Overture numbers from "Tannhauser" and "Siegfried." On both concert programs, Dr. Munch will retain concert versions of Wagner operas "Die Walkure" and "Die Meistersinger" with Margaret Harshaw, Marguerite Willauer, Albert De Costa and James Pease as soloists. Meantime, there are Chamber Music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall.

The Boston Symphony will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half weeks' tour, including Russia, in August and September, according to orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. Dr. Munch and the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the final "Tanglewood" program on Aug. 12. The first two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Aug. 24, followed by a matinee the next day in Dublin. Five concerts will be given in Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival; the Boston Symphony Orchestra then will visit Scandinavia for four days.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited The Boston to perform in the USSR during six days, Sept. 5-10, the invitation immediately accepted. Other concerts on the tour include those in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London. Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct several of the orchestra's concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony will play in Syracuse in October under local management of Famous Artists, Murray Bernthal, executive. Famous Artists has presented The Boston, under Dr. Munch, on previous occasions of musical note.

In Brief . . .

The generally sunny faces on the Tanglewood management after the weekend dispel any haunting doubt that Tanglewood may be getting old hat. They seem rather to say that happy is the box office that the sun shines on. . . . Popular John W. Keegan, retired deputy fire chief, dead at 67, is genuinely mourned in municipal circles. Having put three children through college on his modest salary, he was proof of the adage that where there is a will there is a way. . . . The Pittsfield Fire Department's sponsored bugle and drum corps continues to show promise on the road. The Goshen, N.Y., victory, the third win abroad for the "Sparks," show that they ... be ready to catch fire . . .

Williamstown's Jim Burns ... of supporting Adlai Stevenson on the first ... Williamstown fired sub-par golf at the outset of the Country Club of Pittsfield tournament, opponents John Hawkins of Lenox and ... Tutwiler of Charleston, W. Va., must have felt that they were in an eight-ball and not a four-ball affair. The smashing victory for the home-grown products was popular . . .

"Movies will not regain their popularity until they make theater seats as comfortable to sleep in as the easy chair in front of the TV set.—Wall Street Journal.

The world is so full of a number of things that it's hard to keep up payments on them.—McLeansboro (Ill.) Times-Leader.

[206]

N. Y. Post
August 6, 1956

Berkshire Festival Draws Top Crowd

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6—Bright, clear weather brought the biggest crowds of the Berkshire Festival's current season here to Tanglewood for two miscellaneous programs by the Boston Symphony Saturday night and yesterday afternoon. The total for the three week-end events, including Friday's concert, was 27,950, a record for the current six-week season which closes Sunday.

Saturday night's program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, drew the largest audience for the 1956 season when 11,104 music lovers filled the gigantic Music Shed and overflowed by the thousands onto the grass to hear the Massachusetts-born conductor lead a program of music by Mozart and Prokofieff.

The dynamic maestro had chosen to play an odd mixture of secular and sacred music, the selections influenced by the fact that the concert was in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Beginning with the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, Bernstein closed with the brilliant Prokofieff Symphony No. 5, which Koussevitzky had given its first American performance with the Bostonians in 1945.

Because the enormously gifted, versatile conductor is so filled with electric energy, fervent sincerity and eagerness to re-create music with intensity, his tendency is to overplay and this was the situation with the Prokofieff. After the spiritual beauty of the Mozart Mass, the violent percussion buried at the ears in the midst of sophisticated, whirling sounds was inclined to jar on the nerves.

Bernstein's conception of the Kyrie and Gloria on the other hand had an abundance of buoyancy which in the Gloria moved into ecstatic affirmation that always was controlled and satisfying. He was ably assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, who responded to his wishes with sensitivity.

The soloists, Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor, performed well, especially Miss Curtin, whose lovely, pure quality soared easily even in the most difficult portions. Mozart gave his contralto, however, the most difficult task of all, entrusting to her passages so high they could only be easy for a soprano. Miss Alberts, on the whole, came through with excellent results, if the top notes were not all that could be desired.

Music Tonight . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park. 8:30.

Chamber Music Concert by American Chamber Orchestra conducted by Robert Scholz. Concert includes works by Purcell, Bach, Mozart. Washington Square Park, auspices Washington Square Assn. 9.

In Brief . . .

The generally sunny faces of the Tanglewood management after the weekend dispel any haunting doubt that Tanglewood may be getting old hat. They seem rather to say that happy is the box office that the sun shines on . . . Popular John W. Keegan, retired deputy fire chief, dead at 67, is genuinely mourned in municipal circles. Having put three children through college on his modest salary, he was proof of the adage that where there is a will there is a way . . . The Pittsfield Fire Department's sponsored bugle and drum corps continues to show promise on the road. The Goshen, N.Y., victory, the third win abroad for the "Sparks," show that they still seem to be ready to catch fire . . .

Williamstown's Jim Burns position of supporting Adlai Stevenson on the first Williamstown fired sub-par golf at the outset of the Country Club of Pittsfield tournament, opponents John Hawkins of Lenox and Ed Tutwiler of Charleston, W.Va., must have felt that they were in an eight-ball and not a four-ball affair. The smashing victory for the home-grown products was popular . . .

Movies will not regain their popularity until they make theater seats as comfortable to sleep in as the easy chair in front of the TV set.—Wall Street Journal.

The world is so full of a number of things that it's hard to keep up payments on them.—McLeansboro (Ill.) Times-Leader.

---

[206]

SAN JOSE, CALIF.
MERCURY
Circ. S. 32,757
JUL 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid To Tour Europe, U.S.S.R.

Famed Boston Symphony Orchestra received and immediately accepted a formal invitation from the USSR to include Soviet Russia in tour of Europe symphony will make during August and September.

Invitation from Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted by Yuri Gouk, attache of Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C. to orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr.

Boston Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch will be first American orchestra to perform in Russia.

Russian invitation to Boston Symphony is to spend six days of its autumn tour within the Soviet border and, although details are not worked out as yet, concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow. It is understood that the USSR, as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume expenses of transportation of the 104 members of the orchestra, music director Charles Munch and the orchestra's staff and equipment.

Boston Symphony's tour of Europe, which will include Edinburgh Tenth International Festival of Music and Drama, is to be made in cooperation with International Exchange Program of American National Theater and Academy (ANTA), professional agency appointed by State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits to the orchestra from concerts abroad.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 7 1956

Curtain Music

Ed Fitzgerald, manager, Boston UPN bureau, has been selected as official photographer for the Boston Symphony Orchestra which will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad this Summer.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685
JUL 11 1956

Boston Orchestra To Tour Europe

The Boston Symphony orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., said today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the last seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe after the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire festival on Aug. 12.

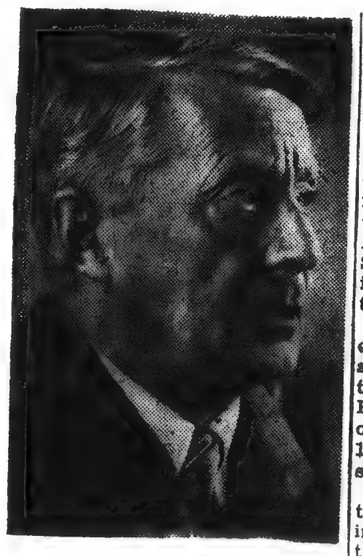
The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday night, Aug. 24, with a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A high light of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres. The orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral — Leeds and London.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUL 11 1956

List Plans for Symphony Group's European Tours



CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Abroad

Detailed plans for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's five and a half week tour of Europe in August and September have been announced by Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

* * *

THE 106 MEMBERS of the orchestra will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12 and will return in late September in time for the opening of the 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra for the past seven years, will conduct most of the 27 scheduled concerts abroad. Pierre Monteux, music director of the orchestra from 1919 to 1924, has been invited to conduct some 10 of the concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in co-operation with the international exchange program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

* * *

A HIGHLIGHT of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the ministry of culture in Moscow and accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, to be the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR. The orchestra will be in Soviet territory from Sept. 5 through 10 and will present a pair of concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

TRAVEL PLANS include the transportation on Aug. 14 of 79 persons from Logan airport, Boston, to Shannon airport, Ireland, on a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super - Constellation. Some 40 persons will sail the same date, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenged KLM Constellation will bring the rear guard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on the evening of Aug. 24 with a matinee in Dublin the following day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26 through 30, and then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

Other concerts have been scheduled from Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
JUL 15 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, music director, now is in its summer home in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Festival is in progress. Dr. Munch has made changes in two programs to be performed in the Music Shed by the orchestra. Instead of all-Wagner concerts next Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each program.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" which Dr. Munch commissioned for The Boston's 75th anniversary season and which was named by the New York Music Critics Circle as the best new orchestral work presented in 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works are to have first performances in "Tanglewood." They replace previously announced excerpts from "Siegfried" and "Tristam and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously scheduled Overture numbers from "Tannhauser" and "Siegfried." On both concert programs, Dr. Munch will retain concert versions of Wagner operas "Die Walkure" and "Die Meistersinger" with Margaret Harshaw, Marguerite Willauer, Albert De Costa and James Pease as soloists. Meantime, there are Chamber Music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall.

The Boston Symphony will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half weeks' tour, including Russia, in August and September, according to orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. Dr. Munch and the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the final "Tanglewood" program on Aug. 12. The first two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Aug. 24, followed by a matinee the next day in Dublin. Five concerts will be given in Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival; the Boston Symphony Orchestra then will visit Scandinavia for four days.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited The Boston to perform in the USSR during six days, Sept. 5-10, the invitation immediately accepted. Other concerts on the tour include those in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London. Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct several of the orchestra's concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony will play in Syracuse in October under local management of Famous Artists, Murray Bernthal, executive. Famous Artists has presented The Boston, under Dr. Munch, on previous occasions of musical note.

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD
Circ. D. 88,500

JUL 14 1956

"Marriage Of Figaro" Headed By Italo Tajo

"Carmen", "Aida" To Be Presented In Cincinnati Zoo Theater

Puccini's spectacular "Turandot" is to be presented in the Cincinnati Zoo theater tonight by the Cincinnati Summer Opera company.

Frances Yend is to sing the name role. Other artists to appear are Ruggero Schileo, Frank Valentino, William Wilderman and Helen Greco.

"Carmen" is to be performed tomorrow evening with Rise Stevens in the name role. Supporting her will be Charles Kullman, Cesare Bardelli and Helen George.

Thursday and Saturday, July 21, Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" is to be presented. Eva Likova will appear as the Countess; Laurel Hurley, as Susanna; Jarmila Novotna, as Cherubino. Italo Tajo, baritone of distinction, will sing the role of Figaro and Salvatore Baccaloni, that of Bartolo. Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, is to direct the Mozart score.

Friday evening and Sunday, July 22, Verdi's "Aida" will be performed with Herva Nelli, Nell Rankin, Cesare Bardelli, William Wilderman and Charles Kullman in leading roles.

"Carmen" is to be conducted by Fausto Cleva and "Aida" by Carlo Moresco. The Cincinnati Opera Ballet headed by Lydia Arlova and Lucien Prideaux, will appear in "Carmen" and "Aida."

Tickets may be purchased in Dayton from Ann Kirk, Charles McLean Bookseller, 11 North Jefferson street.

Cloister Concert

The fourth in the series of Cloister concerts, Dayton Art institute, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Robert Downing, whose baritone voice has gained him a wide following in Dayton, will sing, among other selections, Edwards' "Into the Night" and Charles' "Thank God for a Garden."

Gustave Rabson, classical guitarist, will play "Four Toyes" from Jane Pickering's "Lute Book," Lozy's "Partita in A Minor," "Lagrima" by Tarrego and three brief preludes by Porce.

Mr. Rabson is associate professor of mathematics at Antioch college. Versatile, he has appeared for the Dayton Chamber Music society as pianist, and with the Classic Guitar society as guitarist.

Marjorie Kline, well-known Dayton violinist, heads a trio which is to present "Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn" by Brahms. Lawrence Tagg will play the horn and Veryl Zech, the piano. Mr. Tagg has taught voice at the University of Dayton for three years and Mr. Zech instructs in piano and theory at the university.

Goes To Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly Aug. 12, to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival, near Lenox, Massachusetts.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

An invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, will make the Boston Symphony the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR.

During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts each will be given in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral, Leeds and London.

Catholic Observer
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Catholic

JUL 20 1956

Boston Symphony Benefit Concert For Irish School

DUBLIN (NC) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play a benefit concert here on August 25 for the archdiocesan seminary of the Holy Cross at Clonliffe.

The concert will be given under the patronage of Archbishop John C. McQuaide, C.S.Sp., of Dublin and will be the first event in a program to raise $500,000 to rebuild the seminary.

The Boston orchestra is making its first European tour this summer, and its visit to Ireland will mark the first time that an American orchestra has played here.

The college, which is 97 years old, was founded by the late Cardinal Paul Cullen. The prelate was given a relic of the True Cross by Pope Pius IX, which is treasured at the college.

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Donnerstag, 26. Juli 1956 11

Richard Wagners "Walküre" tönt im Wald von Tanglewood

Aus Lenox, Mass., berichtet unser musikalischer Gewährsmann, daß der erste Akt aus Richard Wagners "Walküre", in der konzertanten Aufführung durch das Symphonie-Orchester Boston unter Leitung von Charles Munch weit stärkere Eindrücke hinterlassen habe, als bei jeder Aufführung in geschlossenem Rahmen eines Opernhauses.

Das ist nicht nur auf die landschaftliche Kulisse zurückzuführen, sondern vor allem auch auf die symphonische Art der Interpretation dieser Partitur durch einen kongenialen Dirigenten. Keines der, reichlich doktrinär, "Leitmotive" genannten charakteristischen Themen wird unterschlagen, alle jedoch werden gemeinsam ins melodisch-harmonische Gewebe eingesponnen, von der einleitenden Gewittermusik bis zu jenen Winterstürmen, welche am Schluß dem "Wonnemond wichen".

Orchester und Sänger verschmolzen im Widerhall einer einzigen elementaren Naturkraft. Wobei es gleichgültig bleibt, welchen Namen — Leidenschaft, Liebe, Blutsverwandtschaft — immer man diesem Begriff geben mag. Margaret Harshaw hatte einen ihrer besten Tage als Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa, in der Met vorerst vorsichtig herausgestellt, bewies, daß er (als Siegmund) das Zeug zum echten Heldentenor in sich hat und James Pease machte glänzenden Gebrauch von Stil und Artikulation der Hamburger Oper (an welcher er zeitweilig tätig war); er gab einen ebenso charakteristischen wie deutlich verständlichen Hunding.

Mozart und Bach

Vor Wagner huldigten die "Bostonians" Mozart und Bach mit der gleichen Hingabe. Pierre Luboshutz und Genia Nemenoff, die bekannten Duo-Pianisten, nahmen an zweien der drei Klavierkonzerte Mozarts teil, für welche drei Flügel und drei Spieler zur Verfügung standen. Luboshutz dirigierte das A-Dur-Konzert mit Boris Goldovsky als Solisten, der seinerseits das Konzert für drei Klaviere, F-Dur, K. 242, von seinem Instrument aus leitete. In der Koordination von Klangfarbe, Tonstärke, Phrasierung und Ausdruck wurde vielfach Vorbildliches erreicht. Mit dem Konzert für 2 Klaviere und Orchester, Es-Dur, K. 365, klang das Programm dank der künstlerischen Identifizierung der beiden Duo-Pianisten prachtvoll aus.

Johannespassion im Grünen

Über 8000 Zuhörer folgten mit — glücklicherweise wohldisziplinierter — Andacht den beiden Bachkonzerten. Im engeren Raum der Theaterkonzerthalle brachte Charles Munch das 2. Brandenburgische Konzert, das 2. Violinkonzert, die Suite Nr. 3 und die Suite Nr. 2 technisch vollendet und bemerkenswert stilistisch rein zu Gehör.

Die Johannespassion erfuhr eine Wiedergabe, in der niemals artistische Effekte gesucht wurden. Aber auch die ergebene Frömmigkeit, die ein Wesensbestandteil solch kirchlicher Musik sein muß, führte nicht zum Abrollen von Litaneien, sondern gab den einzelnen Abschnitten des ewigen Passionsdramas aufrichtig gefühlvollen, beseelten Ausdruck. Hervorragend John McCollum als Evangelist, sehr klug fand sich Mac Morgan mit dem Jesuspart ab;* zu den übrigen Solisten Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff und James Joyce (Baß) trat, den Eindruck erheblich steigernd, der von Hugh Ross meisterlich einstudierte Festspielchor.

Martinu und Bartok

Ein Glücksstern (astronomisch wie sinnbildlich) waltete über den zwei modernen Wochenendprogrammen im großen Zelt. Fast 19,000 Zuhörer rissen sich um die Genüsse, die bevorstanden, und sie waren wohlberaten. Charles Munch dirigierte die "Fantaisies Symphoniques" des "bohemischen Musikanten" Amerikas, Bohuslav Martinu. Auch wer das Werk bereits in der Carnegie Hall vernahm, erlag erneut der Frische der Eingebung und dem Zauber eines kontrapunktisch kompositorischen Könnens, das nie die Schönheiten einer Phantasiewelt überwuchert, wo ein geborener Musikant wie Martinu zu Hause ist. So wurden die "Phantasien" zu hörbarer, fast greifbarer, oft nachsingbarer Wirklichkeit einer höheren Kunst.

Pierre Monteux trat als 81-jähriger Pionier und Vorkämpfer der Moderne ans Pult von Tanglewood; das "Concerto for Orchestra" von Bela Bartok erklang in kaum je zuvor vernommener Präzision. Monteux nimmt sich nie jene Freiheiten, an welchen man sofort den "Maestro virtuoso" erkennt; gerade dadurch kamen die scharfen Kontraste des Werks, sein Humor, seine Tragik um so eindringlicher zur Geltung.

Irish Times - June 29 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO GIVE CONCERT IN DUBLIN

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will give a performance in the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on August 25th next, in aid of reconstruction work at Holy Cross College, Clonliffe, Dublin. The concert is being presented by Our Lady's Choral Society, and is under the patronage of the Most Rev. Dr. McQuaid, Archbishop of Dublin and Primate of Ireland.

The announcement of the orchestra's visit was made by the Very Rev. Cathal McCarthy, Holy Cross College, in the college. He said that it was estimated that reconstruction work at the college would cost about £200,000. The college authorities had been advised by a number of architects that it would be necessary to strip down the interior of the building, which was almost 100 years old. The timbers had become affected by dry rot and woodworm and would have to be replaced by concrete and steel.

Owing to the growth of the population of Dublin there was a demand for many more priests. Holy Cross College was the diocesan seminary and accommodation would have to be provided for more students. The college, which had been built by Cardinal Cullen, was intended for 80 students. A new wing had been provided for 40 students and another would now be necessary for a further 40 students.

The Very Rev. R. McNevin, Adm., Pro-Cathedral, Director of Our Lady's Choral Society, said that the Boston Symphony Orchestra was attending the Edinburgh Festival and had expressed a wish to have a performance in Ireland with Our Lady's Choral Society. There would, however, not be time for rehearsals and the choral society would not have an opportunity of singing. The programme would include Haydn's Symphony No. 102, Barber's Adagio for Strings, Richard Strauss's "Don Juan," and Schuman's Second Symphony. The orchestra will be conducted by the French conductor, Charles Munch.

Postal booking opened yesterday (Thursday) direct to the Theatre Royal. Admission is by subscription, or at prices ranging from two guineas to 7/6.

[207]

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD
Circ. D. 88,500

JUL 14 1956

"Marriage Of Figaro" Headed By Italo Tajo

"Carmen", "Aida" To Be Presented In Cincinnati Zoo Theater

Puccini's spectacular "Turandot" is to be presented in the Cincinnati Zoo theater tonight by the Cincinnati Summer Opera company.

Frances Yend is to sing the name role. Other artists to appear are Ruggero Schileo, Frank Valentino, William Wilderman and Helen Greco.

"Carmen" is to be performed tomorrow evening with Rise Stevens in the name role. Supporting her will be Charles Kullman, Cesare Bardelli and Helen George.

Thursday and Saturday, July 21, Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" is to be presented. Eva Likova will appear as the Countess; Laurel Hurley, as Susanna; Jarmila Novotna, as Cherubino. Italo Tajo, baritone of distinction, will sing the role of Figaro and Salvatore Baccaloni, that of Bartolo. Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, is to direct the Mozart score.

Friday evening and Sunday, July 22, Verdi's "Aida" will be performed with Herva Nelli, Nell Rankin, Cesare Bardelli, William Wilderman and Charles Kullman in leading roles.

"Carmen" is to be conducted by Fausto Cleva and "Aida" by Carlo Moresco. The Cincinnati Opera Ballet headed by Lydia Arlova and Lucien Prideaux, will appear in "Carmen" and "Aida."

Tickets may be purchased in Dayton from Ann Kirk, Charles McLean Bookseller, 11 North Jefferson street.

Cloister Concert

The fourth in the series of Cloister concerts, Dayton Art institute, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Robert Downing, whose baritone voice has gained him a wide following in Dayton, will sing, among other selections, Edwards' "Into the Night" and Charles' "Thank God for a Garden."

Gustave Rabson, classical guitarist, will play "Four Toyes" from Jane Pickering's "Lute Book," Lozy's "Partita in A Minor," "Lagrina" by Tarrego and three brief preludes by Porce.

Mr. Rabson is associate professor of mathematics at Antioch college. Versatile, he has appeared for the Dayton Chamber Music society as pianist, and with the Classic Guitar society as guitarist.

Marjorie Kline, well-known Dayton violinist, heads a trio which is to present "Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn" by Brahms. Lawrence Tagg will play the horn and Veryl Zech, the piano. Mr. Tagg has taught voice at the University of Dayton for three years and Mr. Zech instructs in piano and theory at the university.

Goes To Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly Aug. 12, to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival, near Lenox, Massachusetts.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

An invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, will make the Boston Symphony the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR.

During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts each will be given in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral, Leeds and London.

Catholic Observer
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Catholic

JUL 20 1956

Boston Symphony Benefit Concert For Irish School

DUBLIN (NC) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play a benefit concert here on August 25 for the archdiocesan seminary of the Holy Cross at Clonliffe.

The concert will be given under the patronage of Archbishop John C. McQuade, C.S.Sp., of Dublin and will be the first event in a program to raise $500,000 to rebuild the seminary.

The Boston orchestra is making its first European tour this summer, and its visit to Ireland will mark the first time that an American orchestra has played here.

The college, which is 97 years old, was founded by the late Cardinal Paul Cullen. The prelate was given a relic of the True Cross by Pope Pius IX, which is treasured at the college.

Richard Wagners "Walküre" tönt im Wald von Tanglewood

Aus Lenox, Mass., berichtet unser musikalischer Gewährsmann, daß der erste Akt aus Richard Wagners "Walküre", in der konzertanten Aufführung durch das Symphonie-Orchester Boston unter Leitung von Charles Munch weit stärkere Eindrücke hinterlassen habe, als bei jeder Aufführung in geschlossenem Rahmen eines Opernhauses.

Das ist nicht nur auf die landschaftliche Kulisse zurückzuführen, sondern vor allem auch auf die symphonische Art der Interpretation dieser Partitur durch einen kongenialen Dirigenten. Keines der, reichlich doktrinär, "Leitmotive" genannten charakteristischen Themen wird unterschlagen, alle jedoch werden gemeinsam ins melodisch-harmonische Gewebe eingesponnen, von der einleitenden Gewittermusik bis zu jenen Winterstürmen, welche am Schluß dem "Wonnemond wichen".

Orchester und Sänger verschmolzen im Widerhall einer einzigen elementaren Naturkraft. Wobei es gleichgültig bleibt, welchen Namen — Leidenschaft, Liebe, Blutsverwandtschaft — immer man diesem Begriff geben mag. Margaret Harshaw hatte einen ihrer besten Tage als Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa, in der Met vorerst vorsichtig herausgestellt, bewies, daß er (als Sigmund) das Zeug zum echten Heldentenor in sich hat und James Pease machte glänzenden Gebrauch von Stil und Artikulation der Hamburger Oper (an welcher er zeitweilig tätig war); er gab einen ebenso charakteristischen wie deutlich verständlichen Hunding.

Mozart und Bach

Vor Wagner huldigten die "Bostonians" Mozart und Bach mit der gleichen Hingabe. Pierre Luboshutz und Genia Nemenoff, die bekannten Duo-Pianisten, nahmen an zweien der drei Klavierkonzerte Mozarts teil, für welche drei Flügel und drei Spieler zur Verfügung standen. Luboshutz dirigierte das A-Dur-Konzert mit Boris Goldovsky als Solisten, der seinerseits das Konzert für drei Klaviere, F-Dur, K. 242, von seinem Instrument aus leitete. In der Koordination von Klangfarbe, Tonstärke, Phrasierung und Ausdruck wurde vielfach Vorbildliches erreicht. Mit dem Konzert für 2 Klaviere und Orchester, Es-Dur, K. 365, klang das Programm dank der künstlerischen Identifizierung der beiden Duo-Pianisten prachtvoll aus.

Johannespassion im Grünen

Über 8000 Zuhörer folgten mit — glücklicherweise wohldisziplinierter — Andacht den beiden Bachkonzerten. Im engeren Raum der Theaterkonzerthalle brachte Charles Munch das 2. Brandenburgische Konzert, das 2. Violinkonzert, die Suite Nr. 3 und die Suite Nr. 2 technisch vollendet und bemerkenswert stilistisch rein zu Gehör.

Die Johannespassion erfuhr eine Wiedergabe, in der niemals artistische Effekte gesucht wurden. Aber auch die ergebene Frömmigkeit, die ein Wesensbestandteil solch kirchlicher Musik sein muß, führte nicht zum Abrollen von Litaneien, sondern gab den einzelnen Abschnitten des ewigen Passionsdramas aufrichtig gefühlvollen, beseelten Ausdruck. Hervorragend John McCollum als Evangelist, sehr klug fand sich Mac Morgan mit dem Jesuspart ab; zu den übrigen Solisten Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff und James Joyce (Baß) trat, den Eindruck erheblich steigernd, der von Hugh Ross meisterlich einstudierte Festspielchor.

Martinu und Bartok

Ein Glücksstern (astronomisch wie sinnbildlich) waltete über den zwei modernen Wochenendprogrammen im großen Zelt. Fast 19,000 Zuhörer rissen sich um die Genüsse, die bevorstanden, und sie waren wohlberaten. Charles Munch dirigierte die "Fantaisies Symphoniques" des "bohemischen Musikanten" Amerikas, Bohuslav Martinu. Auch wer das Werk bereits in der Carnegie Hall vernahm, erlag erneut der Frische der Eingebung und dem Zauber eines kontrapunktisch kompositorischen Könnens, das nie die Schönheiten einer Phantasiewelt überwuchert, wo ein geborener Musikant wie Martinu zu Hause ist. So wurden die "Phantasien" zu hörbarer, fast greifbarer, oft nachsingbarer Wirklichkeit einer höheren Kunst.

Pierre Monteux trat als 81-jähriger Pionier und Vorkämpfer der Moderne ans Pult von Tanglewood; das "Concerto for Orchestra" von Bela Bartok erklang in kaum je zuvor vernommener Präzision. Monteux nimmt sich nie jene Freiheiten, an welchen man sofort den "Maestro virtuoso" erkennt; gerade dadurch kamen die scharfen Kontraste des Werks, sein Humor, seine Tragik um so eindringlicher zur Geltung.

Irish Times - June 21

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO GIVE CONCERT IN DUBLIN

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will give a performance in the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on August 25th next, in aid of reconstruction work at Holy Cross College, Clonliffe, Dublin. The concert is being presented by Our Lady's Choral Society, and is under the patronage of the Most Rev. Dr. McQuaid, Archbishop of Dublin and Primate of Ireland.

The announcement of the orchestra's visit was made by the Very Rev. Cathal McCarthy, Holy Cross College, in the college. He said that it was estimated that reconstruction work at the college would cost about £200,000. The college authorities had been advised by a number of architects that it would be necessary to strip down the interior of the building, which was almost 100 years old. The timbers had become affected by dry rot and woodworm and would have to be replaced by concrete and steel.

Owing to the growth of the population of Dublin there was a demand for many more priests. Holy Cross College was the diocesan seminary and accommodation would have to be provided for more students. The college, which had been built by Cardinal Cullen, was intended for 80 students. A new wing had been provided for 40 students and another would now be necessary for a further 40 students.

The Very Rev. R. McNevin, Adm., Pro-Cathedral, Director of Our Lady's Choral Society, said that the Boston Symphony Orchestra was attending the Edinburgh Festival and had expressed a wish to have a performance in Ireland with Our Lady's Choral Society. There would, however, not be time for rehearsals and the choral society would not have an opportunity of singing. The programme would include Haydn's Symphony No. 102, Barber's Adagio for Strings, Richard Strauss's "Don Juan," and Schuman's Second Symphony. The orchestra will be conducted by the French conductor, Charles Munch.

Postal booking opened yesterday (Thursday) direct to the Theatre Royal. Admission is by subscription, or at prices ranging from two guineas to 7/6.

[207]

BSO to USSR

DURING THE PAST YEAR we have been undergoing a Russian invasion. Focal points of the Soviet drive have been our recital halls and recording studios, which have fallen defenseless before such People's Heroes as David Oistrakh and Emil Gilels.

Apparently the American way to answer a move like this really is massive retaliation, and volunteers have not been lacking. Early this spring the clarion was sounded, in a published statement which ended: "... Ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow. (signed) Henry B. Cabot." Henry B. Cabot is, of course, the president of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and it is the BSO that will be the first American orchestra to play in the USSR. As a matter of fact, so far as anyone seems to know, it will be the first American orchestra to play in Russia at all. Before World War I, American orchestras, whatever their merit, were not much in demand in Europe, and ever since World War I such devices as the cordon sanitaire and the Iron Curtain have precluded junkets into Russia. (Just as a point of interest, no Russian orchestra seems ever to have played in America, either, a fact which, no doubt, is currently being mulled over by astute New York concert managements. Tovarishchi seem to be SRO material nowadays, and might not 110 Comrades pull even better than two?)

Whatever the conclusions of New York managements, the Moscow management (singular) seems to have no misgivings about the allure of Bostonians. The Russian government, indeed, has plunged into show business with a surety and sang-froid not unworthy of a Billy Rose. The Ministry of Culture in Moscow, dealing directly with the BSO, handed out no-loss guarantees for four concerts with the greatest readiness, though the Orchestra does not actually expect to make a profit. (It doesn't make a profit in the United States either, of course.)

The BSO's overseas tour, which begins August 14, naturally will not be limited to Russia. Starting out with two chartered airplanes (and some space on the New Amsterdam), the Orchestra's 115 men, together with 40 wives, and 88 pieces of musical baggage occupying 1985.7 cubic feet and weighing 8 tons, will play 26-29 concerts (bookings were incomplete at the time of this writing) in 17-19 cities in 12 nations. Cities fairly firm in the itinerary include Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Vienna, Munich, Stuttgart, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London. The portion of the tour west of the Iron Curtain will be subsidized in part by a government grant administered by the American National Theater and Academy.

At Helsinki the Soviet Ministry of Culture takes over, flying the Bostonians to Leningrad (without their wives) for two concerts. Thence they proceed to Moscow, for two more, one of which may feature the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, with Russian soloists and chorus. They hope also to appear in joint performance with Oistrakh or Gilels, or both. (Oistrakh played with them in Boston last winter.) The Ministry also will furnish housing, meals, and entertainment, and the musicians already have been heard remarking to one another that the latter, as purveyed by Soviet officialdom to foreign guests, is supposed to be something really memorable. From Moscow, the Ministry will fly them to Prague, whence they will cross the Curtain again, back to Vienna.

It can be stated, not without a glow of vicarious pride, that at summer's beginning, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was facing its journey into Communism's heartland with the aplomb which Bostonians are reputed to bring to any adventure, however novel. There was to be no special supervision of personnel within the Curtain countries. They were expected, as a staff member put it, to get to rehearsals and performances on time, just as they must in Boston, and the rest of what they might do would be their own business, also as it is in Boston. However, it was thought likely that the State Department would send someone to brief them, before departure, on such matters as what not to try to photograph while in Moscow, what conversational topics to avoid, and the like. For the rest, reliance for the making of a favorable impression was left to natural Bostonian decorum.

That refers, of course, to deportment only. No one had the slightest doubt what kind of impression the BSO would make musically, and this is of considerable intercultural importance, if that is the word I want. There is growing awareness of the need these days to show people not only behind the Curtain, but in Western Europe as well, that America is not a soulless Power concerned purely with dollars and gadgets. It would be hard to think of a more potent argument than the flawless glowing sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, irrefutable evidence of devotion to and labor for the most spiritual of the arts.

Anyway, at the time of the BSO's advent, Muscovites seemed to be taking to American musicians as heartily as the American public had received last winter's Russians. Isaac Stern had passed through in triumphal progress; Jan Peerce had won a five-minute standing ovation after singing in La Traviata with the Bolshoi company. The Boston Symphony Orchestra had no slightest doubt of being a sellout attraction — just as it is everywhere else.

J.M.C.

[20E]

BSO to USSR

DURING THE PAST YEAR we have been undergoing a Russian invasion. Focal points of the Soviet drive our recital halls and recording studios, who[re] often defenseless before such People's Heroe[s] as Oistrakh and Emil Gilels.

Apparently the American way to answer a move [that] actually is massive retaliation, and volunteer [re]sponse lacking. Early this spring the clarion [call] in a published statement which ended "[We] eager, if the President wishes, to be the [first] orchestra to play in Moscow" signed) Henry B. Cabot [Jr.], is, of course, the presi[dent] of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the BSO that will be the first American orchestra to [visit] the USSR. As a matter of fact, so far as anyone [can] say, it will be the first American orchestra to [play] in Russia at all. Before World War I, American orchestras, their merit, were not much in demand [abroad] and ever since World War I such devices as détente and the Iron Curtain have kept [them] out of Russia. Last as a point of record, [no] American orchestra seems ever to have played [in] Moscow, a fact which, no doubt, is currently being [pon]dered by astute New York concert managements [for] what seem to be SRO material nowadays, [namely] Red Comrades pull even better than two-[to]-one.

Whatever the conclusions of New York managements, the Moscow management (singular) seems to have no misgivings about the allure of Bostonians. The Russian government, indeed, has plunged into show business with celerity and sang froid not unworthy of a Billy Rose. The Ministry of Culture in Moscow, dealing directly with the BSO, handed out no-loss guarantees for concerts with the greatest readiness, though the orchestra does not actually expect to make a profit. It doesn't make a profit in the United States either, of course.

The BSO's overseas tour, which begins April 24, naturally will not be limited to Russia. Starting out in two chartered airplanes (and some space on the Nieuw Amsterdam), the Orchestra's 115 men, together with wives, and 88 pieces of musical baggage occupying 985 cubic feet and weighing 8 tons, will play 26-29 concerts (bookings were incomplete at the time of this writing) in 17-19 cities in 12 nations. Cities fairly firm on the itinerary include Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Vienna, Munich, Stuttgart, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London. The portion of the tour west of the Iron Curtain will be subsidized in part by a State Department grant administered by the American National Theater and Academy.

At Helsinki the Soviet Ministry of Culture takes over, flying the Bostonians to Leningrad (without their wives) for two concerts. Thence they proceed to Moscow for [four]more, one of which may feature the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, with American soloists and chorus. They [are] scheduled to appear in a joint performance with Oistrakh and [Gilels], or both. (Oistrakh played with them in Boston last winter.) The Ministry also will furnish "[hos]tesses and entertainment, and the musicians [have] been heard remarking to one another that [this] is as purveyed by Soviet officialdom to foreigners is supposed to be something really memorable. From Moscow, the Ministry will fly them to Prague, where they will cross the Curtain again, back to Vienna.

It can be stated, not without a glow of vicarious pride, that at summer's beginning, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was facing its journey into Communist heartland with the aplomb which Bostonians are apt to bring to any adventure, however novel. There was [no] special supervision of personnel with [the] countries. They were expected [to] put it to get to rehearsals and perform[ances], just as they must in Boston, and the rest [of] what they might do would be their own business [as] it is in Boston. However, it was thought likely [that] the State Department would send someone to brief [them] before departure, on such matters as what not [to] try to photograph while in Moscow, what conversational topics to avoid, and the like. For the rest, reliance for the making of a favorable impression was left to natural Bostonian decorum.

That refers, of course, to deportment only. No one had the slightest doubt what kind of impression the BSO would make musically, and this is of considerable intercultural importance, if that is the word I want. There is growing awareness of the need these days to show people not only behind the Curtain, but in Western Europe as well, that America is not a soulless Power concerned purely with dollars and gadgets. It would be hard to think of a more potent argument than the flawless glowing sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, irrefutable evidence of devotion to and labor for the spiritual of the arts.

Anyway, at the time of the BSO's advent, Muscovites seemed to be taking to American musicians as heartily as the American public had received last winter's Russians. Isaac Stern had passed through in triumphal progress, Jan Peerce had won a five-minute standing ovation after singing in La Traviata with the Bolshoi company. The Boston Symphony Orchestra had not the slightest doubt of being a sellout attraction — just as it is everywhere else.

J.N.C.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 22 1956

Official Send-Off For Symphony Director Aug. 13

Boston will give an official send-off to the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the eve of the European departure for tours of principal cities abroad.

Conductor Charles Munch and trustees of the orchestra will meet with Mayor Hynes Monday, Aug. 13, at City Hall.

A flag of the City of Boston will be presented the conductor to be flown in all concert halls. The conductor also will receive autographed copies of "Boston . . . America's Home Port," for presentation to mayors of cities to be visited.

Munch will also receive a surprise gift from the mayor.

The sketch book by Jack Frost contains illustrations of Greater Boston historic, commercial and industrial landmarks.

The orchestra's first concert will be in Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24. Other countries to be visited are Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France, England, Russia and Czecho-Slovakia.

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free
JUL 26 1956

Boston Symphony To Receive Official 'Send-Off' At City Hall Ceremonies On August 13

An official City of Boston "send-off" to the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given through Conductor Charles Munch and the trustees of the orchestra at the Mayor's Office on August 13, on the eve of their departure for Europe and the British Isles to present the most elaborate and farflung series of concerts in the history of the music world.

The tour is sponsored by the Department of State as part of its international good-will and better-understanding program between peoples of the Free World and those behind the Iron Curtain. Among the places the orchestra will visit behind the "wall" will be Moscow and Prague. "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast."

Other countries to be visited by the orchestra are Ireland, Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France and England. The opening performance in this "grandest of grand tours" will be at Cork, Ireland, on August 24. The final concert will be at London on September 25, with the Queen of England and her consort in attendance.

During the official "bon voyage" ceremonies, Mayor Hynes will present Conductor Charles Munch a City of Boston flag, to be flown at all the Grand Tour

Continued on Page Three

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 15,700
JUL 26 1956

TANGLEWOOD

Paradise! That's Tanglewood to the music lover! For what more could one ask for? Scenery so breathtaking one must pause, spellbound, with each turn; music, so lovely it can bring tears to the eyes of the sentimental; people, so friendly, you'll want to stay for a month.

If you take a morning stroll about Tanglewood, you'll hear a delightful potpourri of sounds. As you wander by one building, each grace note of Chopin's Fantasie Impromptue can be heard clearly. Passing another building, the high treble of a soprano trilling is met by the ear. And should you chance by the barn, you'd hear the orchestra in full swing. Guided tours daily are available at no cost.

But in the evening the scene changes. As twilight descends, a gentle murmur is felt as the crowds wait for the concert or an opera to begin. Lovers can be seen, strolling arm in arm, lost in the beauty about them. Middle-aged men and women chat just before the program begins, perhaps of the memories these strolling lovers recapture.

The maestro lifts his baton. A hush falls. The concert begins. No throbbing refrain is lost on this audience. Each person not only appreciates Bach and Mozart, they revel in it.

When the concert is over, each person goes his way. Some to their favorite restaurant in a nearby town, and some just to wander about.

In the vicinity are riding stables, art schools, and, if you'd like to see good dancing, Jacob's Pillow is not far away. Many lovely resorts are sprinkled through the area. Now I ask you music lovers, is this not a Paradise!

The cost of a week-end visit to Tanglewood is about $50. Broken down, it amounts to $15 per night for two nights, one dollar per meal for six meals, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday breakfasts and dinners. We'll allow you to splurge on Friday's and Saturday's evening meal, allowing $7.00 for both nights. Another five dollars for good seats at Tanglewood leaves $2.00 from the $50. which will be used for tips and such.

Bring along very simple clothes, a few sweaters, and warm pajamas. If you plan to go horseback riding or swimming bring along the necessary essentials. Have fun!

East Boston Leader
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,994
JUL 27 1956

MY SIDE OF STORY

BY JASPER JONES

Last Tuesday was the last day for filing nomination papers with election officials for certification. This rule does not apply to aspirants who were endorsed by pre-convention nominees but others have to have enough certified signatures for positions on the ballot.

To date 9 have taken out papers for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Suffolk County against present incumbent City Councillor Joseph C. White School Committeeman William F. Carr, Carmine A. Luongo, Mario Mattera of East Boston, John J. Mendoza, Nathan Kravitsky, George R. Byrne, James J. McAnarney and James J. Tobin.

Supporters of Adlai Stevenson feel they are practically sure Adlai will receive the nomination and they will open state headquarters in this state about August 20 in his behalf.

Congressman John W. McCormack will receive the state favorite son's vote in the Democratic convention.

Many residents of the West End have signed petitions to the Federal Government asking rejection of the $12,000,000 West End Urban Redevelopment Project.

The City of Boston will give an official sendoff to the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Mayor Hynes office in City Hall on Monday, August 13, 1956 on the eve of their departure to Europe and the British Isles to present a series of concerts.

Journal
ROCKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,549
JUL 26 1956

Selections Listed For Last Weekend At Tanglewood

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Berkshire Hills this weekend by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season this weekend.

The July 27th performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet;" Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2, 9, 20, connect with Rt. 7.

neiro August 3; by Leonard Bernstein August 4; by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch August 5.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor - Soloist: Rudolpf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; Debussy: "La Mer" - Charles Munch, conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto - Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major - Richard Burgin, conductor.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a violin recital of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck, by Zino Francescatti, accompanied by Artur Balsam, on Wednesday evening, August 8, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. In the Music Shed Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, August 10 in a program of Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas. Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra Saturday evening, August 11 in selections of Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss. Dr. Munch will conclude the festival Sunday afternoon, August 12 with Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica"; and a concert version of the opening and final scenes of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and James Pease as soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students, trained by James Aliferis.

Thursday, August 9, is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," the day-long gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in the evening concert, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758
JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week, opening with joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-peice Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Ja-

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391
JUL 29 1956

Tanglewood Music Festival Moves Into Semi-Final Week

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

De Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

[209]

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

JUL 26 1956

...mphony

Continued from Page One

concerts. He also has a surprise gift to Doctor Munch as a tribute to his outstanding leadership in the music world and his constant cooperation with the city in civic and charitable events.

The Mayor will also present to him autographed copies of "Boston — America's Home Port", a sketch book by Jack Frost, to be presented to the Mayors of the cities where the orchestra will perform. The sketch book contains illustrations of the principal historic, commercial and ndustrial landmarks of Greater Boston.

Journal
ROCKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,549

JUL 26 1956

Selections Listed For Last Weekend At Tanglewood

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Bershire Hills this weekend by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season this weekend.

The July 27th performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet;" Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2, 9, 20, connect with Rt. 7.

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758

JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week, opening with joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-peice Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro August 3; by Leonard Bernstein August 4; by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch August 5.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor - Soloist: Rudolpf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; Debussy: "La Mer" - Charles Munch, conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto - Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major - Richard Burgin, conductor.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a violin recital of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck, by Zino Francescatti, accompanied by Artur Balsam, on Wednesday evening, August 8, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. In the Music Shed Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, August 10 in a program of Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas. Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra Saturday evening, August 11 in selections of Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss. Dr. Munch will conclude the festival Sunday afternoon, August 12 with Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica"; and a concert version of the opening and final scenes of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and James Pease as soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students, trained by James Aliferis.

Thursday, August 9, is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," the day-long gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in the evening concert, and Arthur Fielder will conduct the Boston "Pops" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 15,700

JUL 26 1956

TANGLEWOOD

Paradise! That's Tanglewood to the music lover! For what more could one ask for? Scenery so breathtaking one must pause, spellbound, with each turn; music, so lovely it can bring tears to the eyes of the sentimental; people, so friendly, you'll want to stay for a month.

If you take a morning stroll about Tanglewood, you'll hear a delightful potpourri of sounds. As you wander by one building, each grace note of Chopin's Fantasie Impromptue can be heard clearly. Passing another building, the high treble of a soprano trilling is met by the ear. And should you chance by the barn, you'd hear the orchestra in full swing. Guided tours daily are available at no cost.

But in the evening the scene changes. As twilight descends, a gentle murmur is felt as the crowds wait for the concert or an opera to begin. Lovers can be seen, strolling arm in arm, lost in the beauty about them. Middle-aged men and women chat just before the program begins, perhaps of the memories these strolling lovers recapture.

The maestro lifts his baton. A hush falls. The concert begins. No throbbing refrain is lost on this audience. Each person not only appreciates Bach and Mozart, they revel in it.

When the concert is over, each person goes his way. Some to their favorite restaurant in a nearby town, and some just to wander about.

In the vicinity are riding stables, art schools, and, if you'd like to see good dancing, Jacob's Pillow is not far away. Many lovely resorts are sprinkled through the area. Now I ask you music lovers, is this not a Paradise!

The cost of a week-end visit to Tanglewood is about $50. Broken down, it amounts to $15 per night for two nights, one dollar per meal for six meals, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday breakfasts and dinners. We'll allow you to splurge on Friday's and Saturday's evening meal, allowing $7.00 for both nights. Another five dollars for good seats at Tanglewood leaves $2.00 from the $50. which will be used for tips and such.

Bring along very simple clothes, a few sweaters, and warm pajamas. If you plan to go horseback riding or swimming bring along the necessary essentials. Have fun!

East Boston Leader
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,994

JUL 27 1956

MY SIDE OF STORY

BY JASPER JONES

Last Tuesday was the last day for filing nomination papers with election officials for certification. This rule does not apply to aspirants who were endorsed by pre-convention nominees but others have to have enough certified signatures for positions on the ballot.

To date 9 have taken out papers for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Suffolk County against present incumbent City Councillor Joseph C. White School Committeeman William F. Carr, Carmine A. Luongo, Mario Mattera of East Boston, John J. Mendoza, Nathan Kravitsky, George R. Byrne, James J. McAnarney and James J. Tobin.

Supporters of Adlai Stevenson feel they are practically sure Adlai will receive the nomination and they will open state headquarters in this state about August 20. in his behalf.

Congressman John W. McCormack will receive the state favorite son's vote in the Democratic convention.

Many residents of the West End have signed petitions to the Federal Government asking rejection of the $12,000,000 West End Urban Redevelopment Project.

The City of Boston will give an official sendoff to the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Mayor Hynes' office in City Hall on Monday, August 13, 1956 on the eve of their departure to Europe and the British Isles to present a series of concerts.

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 29 1956

Tanglewood Music Festival Moves Into Semi-Final Week

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

De Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

[209]

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 22 1956

Official Send-Off For Symphony Director Aug. 13

Boston will give an official send-off to the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the eve of the European departure for tours of principal cities abroad.

Conductor Charles Munch and trustees of the orchestra will meet with Mayor Hynes Monday, Aug. 13, at City Hall.

A flag of the City of Boston will be presented the conductor to be flown in all concert halls. The conductor also will receive autographed copies of "Boston . . . America's Home Port," for presentation to mayors of cities to be visited.

Munch will also receive a surprise gift from the mayor.

The sketch book by Jack Frost contains illustrations of Greater Boston historic, commercial and industrial landmarks.

The orchestra's first concert will be in Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24. Other countries to be visited are Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France, England, Russia and Czecho-Slovakia.

Journal
ROCKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,549
JUL 26 1956

Selections Listed For Last Weekend At Tanglewood

Learn the magic of music, and experience the splendor of the Bershire Hills this weekend by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, this internationally-known festival will be completing its fourth week of the current season this weekend.

The July 27th performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., will feature music by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky. On Saturday the 8:30 p.m. performance will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing works of Hanson, Schumann, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday's selections are presented at 2:30 p.m. and include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet;" Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood, and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2, 9, 20, connect with Rt. 7.

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758
JUL 26 1956

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week, opening with joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-peice Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro August 3; by Leonard Bernstein August 4; by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch August 5.

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening July 28: Hanson: Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor - Soloist: Rudolpf Serkin; Honegger: Symphony No. 5; Debussy: "La Mer" - Charles Munch, conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 29: Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto - Soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: Symphony No. 1, in D major - Richard Burgin, conductor.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a violin recital of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck, by Zino Francescatti, accompanied by Artur Balsam, on Wednesday evening, August 8, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. In the Music Shed Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, August 10 in a program of Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas. Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra Saturday evening, August 11 in selections of Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss. Dr. Munch will conclude the festival Sunday afternoon, August 12 with Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica"; and a concert version of the opening and final scenes of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and James Pease as soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students, trained by James Aliferis.

Thursday, August 9, is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," the day-long gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in the evening concert, and Arthur Fielder will conduct the Boston "Pops" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free
JUL 26 1956

Boston Symphony To Receive Official 'Send-Off' At City Hall Ceremonies On August 13

An official City of Boston "send-off" to the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given through Conductor Charles Munch and the trustees of the orchestra at the Mayor's Office on August 13, on the eve of their departure for Europe and the British Isles to present the most elaborate and farflung series of concerts in the history of the music world.

The tour is sponsored by the Department of State as part of its international good-will and better-understanding program between peoples of the Free World and those behind the Iron Curtain. Among the places the orchestra will visit behind the "wall" will be Moscow and Prague. "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast."

Other countries to be visited by the orchestra are Ireland, Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France and England. The opening performance in this "grandest of grand tours" will be at Cork, Ireland, on August 24. The final concert will be at London on September 25, with the Queen of England and her consort in attendance.

During the official "bon voyage" ceremonies, Mayor Hynes will present Conductor Charles Munch a City of Boston flag, to be flown at all the Grand Tour

Continued on Page Three

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 15,700
JUL 26 1956

TANGLEWOOD

Paradise! That's Tanglewood to the music lover! For what more could one ask for? Scenery so breathtaking one must pause, spellbound, with each turn; music, so lovely it can bring tears to the eyes of the sentimental; people, so friendly, you'll want to stay for a month.

If you take a morning stroll about Tanglewood, you'll hear a delightful potpourri of sounds. As you wander by one building, each grace note of Chopin's Fantasie Impromptue can be heard clearly. Passing another building, the high treble of a soprano trilling is met by the ear. And should you chance by the barn, you'd hear the orchestra in full swing. Guided tours daily are available at no cost.

But in the evening the scene changes. As twilight descends, a gentle murmur is felt as the crowds wait for the concert or an opera to begin. Lovers can be seen, strolling arm in arm, lost in the beauty about them. Middle-aged men and women chat just before the program begins, perhaps of the memories these strolling lovers recapture.

The maestro lifts his baton. A hush falls. The concert begins. No throbbing refrain is lost on this audience. Each person not only appreciates Bach and Mozart, they revel in it.

When the concert is over, each person goes his way. Some to their favorite restaurant in a nearby town, and some just to wander about.

In the vicinity are riding stables, art schools, and, if you'd like to see good dancing, Jacob's Pillow is not far away. Many lovely resorts are sprinkled through the area. Now I ask you music lovers, is this not a Paradise!

The cost of a week-end visit to Tanglewood is about $50. Broken down, it amounts to $15 per night for two nights, one dollar per meal for six meals, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday breakfasts and dinners. We'll allow you to splurge on Friday's and Saturday's evening meal, allowing $7.00 for both nights. Another five dollars for good seats at Tanglewood leaves $2.00 from the $50. which will be used for tips and such.

Bring along very simple clothes, a few sweaters, and warm pajamas. If you plan to go horseback riding or swimming bring along the necessary essentials. Have fun!

East Boston Leader
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,994
JUL 27 1956

MY SIDE OF STORY

BY JASPER JONES

Last Tuesday was the last day for filing nomination papers with election officials for certification. This rule does not apply to aspirants who were endorsed by pre-convention nominees but others have to have enough certified signatures for positions on the ballot.

To date 9 have taken out papers for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Suffolk County against present incumbent City Councillor Joseph C. White School Committeeman William F. Carr, Carmine A. Luongo, Mario Mattera of East Boston, John J. Mendoza, Nathan Kravitsky, George R. Byrne, James J. McAnarney and James J. Tobin.

Supporters of Adlai Stevenson feel they are practically sure Adlai will receive the nomination and they will open state headquarters in this state about August 20, in his behalf.

Congressman John W. McCormack will receive the state favorite son's vote in the Democratic convention.

Many residents of the West End have signed petitions to the Federal Government asking rejection of the $12,000,000 West End Urban Redevelopment Project.

The City of Boston will give an official sendoff to the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Mayor Hynes' office in City Hall on Monday, August 13, 1956 on the eve of their departure to Europe and the British Isles to present a series of concerts.

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391
JUL 29 1956

Tanglewood Music Festival Moves Into Semi-Final Week

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening.

The three weekend concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (Aug. 3); by Leonard Bernstein (Aug. 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (Aug. 5).

De Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

[209]

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140

JUL 26 1956

Bartok Work High Point Of Concert At Tanglewood

The "Concerto For Orchestra" by Bela Bartok was the undisputed champion of the Sunday afternoon concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this week.

Under the restrained and precise conducting of Pierre Monteux, the orchestra performed the work in such an excellent and inspiring manner as to evoke an enthusiastic ovation from the large audience.

Mr. Monteux led the orchestra through the second work of the afternoon, (which treats the instrumental groups of the orchestra as soloists, hence the name "Concerto" as applied to the five-movement symphony-like work) with a deep insight into the historic Bartok composition.

A hushed audience absorbed every note as the solemn, questing first movement with its fugato intrusions of the brilliant color of the brasses progressed in the warmth of an unexpectedly sunny afternoon.

A dramatic drum-beat opened the second movement marked Giuoco delle copie: Allegro Scherzando by the composer. The buffoon-like march was taken up successively by pairs of bassoons, oboes, clarinets, flutes and muted trumpets.

The fourth movement gave the impression of a cynical musical "joke" perpetrated by the Composer, as the bumbling voices of bass instrument were answered by cascades of laughter from strings and woodwinds.

The vibrant beauty and vital power of the fifth movement, with the composers notation of Presto faithfully executed by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra, captured the imagination of the audience and swept them along in a whirlwind of sound. Mr. Monteux, with a languid flip of the wrist, executed a compelling transformation as with his gesture, the tremendous rushing force of the orchestra was hushed and the somewhat unexpected gentle voice of the Harp took center stage for a brief period before the imposing coda.

Applause and shouts of "bravo" rang out under the huge Music Shed as the enthusiastic audience expressed their delight with the work of Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Bartok work was the winner, that day.

The first performance on Sunday's program was Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri." The romantic beauty of the lively piece, with its frequent lapses into musical nostalgia, was much appreciated by the audience, who responded with generous applause.

Everyone was "in the mood" by the time the third and final work of the afternoon, Schubert's "Symphony in C. major, No. 7," was presented. From the lyric beauty of the first, Andante, movement with horns and strings alternating on the theme with perfect balance to the singing strings and rhythmic tempo of the Andante con moto second, the audience identification was growing. During the Scherzo, a casual look around the shed revealed numbers of heads moving slightly as individuals almost unconsciously beat time to the music.

The vigorous last movement featured beautiful work by the whole orchestra and lovely passages by woodwinds and strings. The golden tones of the brasses cut like a beam of light through a gentle background to re-state the theme. The afternoon came to a close with the audience well-satisfied with the day's entertainment.

This Week's Program

Tomorrow evening's Tanglewood concert, with Charles Munch conducting, will feature Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Perassi and the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony.

On Saturday, in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch will take the podium once more to conduct the Hanson "Elegy", the Schumann Concerto in A. Minor with Rudolf Serkin as soloist, the Symphony No. 5 by Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., guest conductor Richard Burgin will lead the orchestra in "Romeo and Juliet" by Prokofieff, the Hindemith Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt as soloist and Gustav Mahler's First Symphony.

L.F.M.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

JUL 30 1956

Tanglewood Concerts Brilliant

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 30 — The second week-end of concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival in the shed here at Tanglewood came to a brilliant close yesterday afternoon with the weather man cooperating for the concerts to give music-lovers, numbering some 25,000 for the three programs of modern as well as classical music.

Yesterday afternoon's concert brought a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith, and Mahler with Ruth Posselt as violin soloist and her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducting. This annual concert with the same husband-wife team is an event always enjoyed by the Sunday afternoon audiences. Yesterday's concert was no exception.

Saturday night's program with Charles Munch conducting was heard by more than 9,800 under ideal conditions for listening in the shed and beneath a star-studded sky. The opening "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson was no sad dirge of mourning but rather the strong affirmation of faith which befits the memory of the conductor whose dream and memorial this Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music School are. The music was vigorous until near the end when it died away in a tenuous, haunting beauty.

Marking the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, Rudolf Serkin appeared in a brilliant performance of that composer's "Pianoforte Concerto in A Minor." This was an inspired performance, greeted by "bravos" and followed by four appearances of the artist when he had concluded. Mr. Serkin received an ovation and the audience a thrill.

Honegger's "Symphony No. 5" was received with mixed feelings by the audience. For some it was too modern, for others it was one of the most interesting of modern compositions given a perfect interpretation and peformance by Charles Munch. The program concluded with another of those delightful performances of Debussy's "La Mer" which we have heard here on frequent programs over the years.

Music of Beethoven. Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 4, in F minor," and Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" with Mr. Munch conducting opened the week-end of programs with more than 6,250 in attendance. The Petrassi concerto was composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

This week's programs will include music of Schumann and Mozart with another appearance of Rudolf Serkin in the music theater on Wednesday evening when he will play with the woodwind quartet of Boston. Concerts in the shed beginning on Friday evening will bring a program of music of Falla, Ravel, and Stravinsky (the complete "Petrouchka") under the South American conductor, Eleazar De Carvalho. Leonard Bernstein will conduct a concert in memory of Koussevitzky on Saturday evening when the program will include Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 5" and Mozart's "Mass in C minor" with a chorus and soloists. Next Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will conduct a program of Copland's "Symphonic Ode," Tshaikovsky's "Violin Concerto" and Schumann's "Symphony No. 2, in C major." Zino Francescatti who has performed here so brilliantly in the past will be the violin soloist in the Tschaikovsky concerto.

The third week of concerts coming up in the shed gives promise of variety in music and conductors as well as in the appearance of esteemed soloists.

S. M.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 30 1956

Nearly 10,000 Attend Concert At Tanglewood

Perfect weather Saturday evening drew a crowd of 9812 enthusiastic music devotees to the Berkshire Festival's 15th program at Tanglewood this summer.

Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky" started the program with a quiet forthright simplicity and proceeded through many reminiscent stages to an intensive elevation, after which it retreated with modest subsidence.

Rudolph Serkin's interpretation of Robert Schumann's piano concerto in A minor was imbued with a frenetic feeling which almost beclouded his absorbed and masterful playing. Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided a restrained and sensitive background, but one could not relax with ease in the freedom and spaciousness inherent in this composition. The audience recalled the modest Mr. Serkin many times.

A compelling and cleverly constructed symphony, the fifth and last of Arthur Honegger, who died in 1955, a really great and dedicated composer, enveloped one with its sensuous sounds and layered colors. The opening chord for full orchestra from high flutes to low basses preled ed a melodic line of chords with a fulsome dissonance, which grad ually subsided and left one hushed and eager for that whicl followed; a sustained trumpe note lifted and held the atter tion and then the openin theme sounded among th strings, embellished by the wooc winds; the parts were then ex changed by the instruments an the movement closed softly. Th second movement could almos be called a fluffy bit of enchan ment, but there were under tones of seriousness, the cello too rich in color to be frothy and the development a vas interplay of light and dark fig ures. The finale was a master piece of restrained power and fo the third time the composer brought the movement to a con siderate and tranquil close. In this and the following one was aware of the whole entity, conductor, composer and orchestra in complete accord.

The final opus, Debussy's La Mer, was transcendant. Mr. Munch and the orchestra wove a spell of enchantment with these sketches that one was loathe to cast off. The audience obviously was transported with its ineffable beauty and with awakening awareness burst into wild approbation; one's aesthetic sense rebelled against the return to reality but was perhaps made keener for an appreciation of the same.

Since the evening concerts are supposed to begin at 8:30 it is wise to arrive between 7:30 and 8 to avoid confusion, or even earlier, to picnic on the spacious and beautiful lawns, an enjoyable prelude to an evening of music.

—M. B.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 31 1956

Tanglewood Parade To Feature Pianist Thursday, Aug. 9

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, August 9, in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

Jesus Maria Sanroma was born in Fajardo, Puerto Rico, in 1903. His name is a common one in Latin countries where the first-born is often called Jesus. In ordinary conversation, however, Sanroma answers to the nickname "Chu-Chu." As a child Sanroma's outstanding gifts were recognized and encouraged by the Puerto Rican government which sent him to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston at the age of thirteen. At sixteen he was graduated with honors, winning the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand piano. Later he studied with Antoinette Szumowska, one of Paderewski's few pupils, in Boston, and with Arthur Schnabel in Berlin.

In the course of his career he has played more than 2,000 concerts in every part of the globe and with every major orchestra and conductor. For years he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and, with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra—among them Honegger's Concertino, Stravinsky's Capriccio, Piston's Capriccio, Ravel's G Major Concerto, and the Hindemith Concerto which was written especially for him.

[210]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

JUL 30 1956

Scholarly Baton

Unusual Fare Offered On Tanglewood Program

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—Under the scholarly baton of Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony and violin soloist, Ruth Posselt, gave a concert in the Tanglewood Shed yesterday afternoon that seemed to satisfy an audience of 7,733.

On the program were "Romeo and Juliet," ballet, second suite, Opus 64, by Prokofieff; Hindemith concerto for violin and orchestra; and Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

To put it plainly, this was somewhat removed from usual Sunday afternoon fare at Tanglewood. The first two works are seasoned to the connoisseur mainly, and the Mahler is a rather meandering exploration of philosophical ideas that is apt to strike receptive chords in those who happen to like Mahler.

Beautifully Developed

It's to Burgin's credit that the program received what we might call a good reception. He is by no means a visual virtuoso of the podium. As concert master of the orchestra for the past 36 years, he knows its capabilities and needs well enough to dispense with ridiculous details that make conducting look terribly difficult — which it is, but not from the visual standpoint.

The "Romeo and Juliet" music was beautifully developed. The thundering opening chords fairly ozzed with Montague and Capulet hatred. There was a magnificence in the bold, angula string melodies with angry retorts in brasses and percussion.

Gorgeous Duet

The Juliet theme ran a gamut of descriptions—gay, flighty, swiftly paced, and much enhanced by a gorgeous duet between Doriot Anthony Dwyer's flute and Samuel Mayes' cello.

Excitement exuded from the rushing, gushing dance movement, exploring adverse keys, plausibly. The scene of Romeo at Juliet's grave seemed to seek its tragedy in reminiscense rather than tears. Its ominous, murky chords didn't lose their grip in a sunny Sunday afternoon setting.

The Hindemith concerto is clearly a cherished child to Burgin and Miss Posselt (Mrs. Burgin). He gave its first American performance with the same orchestra in 1940.

Stirring Performance

It is not the happiest of violin vehicles. No doubt exists of its immense technical difficulties, for both soloist and orchestra. Entrances must be made with split-second precision, and the conductor was most cooperative with the soloist in such matters. In spots, it sounds as if the solo instrument and orchestra have taken leave of each other.

Miss Posselt gave it a stirring performance.

It was relaxed, confident, brilliant playing. The first and last movements, bristling with difficulties, were played with incredible agility, and the cadenza of the last movement was a perfectly ordered showcase of "stunts," most of them with artistic purpose.

She beautified the wandering melodies of the slow movement with rich, flavorsome tones-presenting each phrase like a personal message.

Clear thought governed Burgin's approach to the elaborate Mahler symphony. He effected secure connections between its scattered materials—Bucolic phrases, deep and devasting harmonies—all philosophically related and, frankly tiring and taxing except to the Mahler enthusiast.

Series "C" of this festival resumes on Friday night. Eleazar De Carvalho who will conduct Barraud's "La Kermesse," Falla's "Three-Cornered Hat," and the complete Ballet from "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky. Soloist will be Jocy De Oliveira in the Ravel piano concerto.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

JUL 30 1956

Opera Acts Scheduled At Tanglewood

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, tonight at 8:30 in the Theater - Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863, which Goldovsky's New England Opera Company premiered in this country in 1955 in Boston; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), which had a belated 1917 premiere abroad. Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140

JUL 26 1956

Bartok Work High Point Of Concert At Tanglewood

The "Concerto For Orchestra" by Bela Bartok was the undisputed champion of the Sunday afternoon concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this week.

Under the restrained and precise conducting of Pierre Monteux, the orchestra performed the work in such an excellent and inspiring manner as to evoke an enthusiastic ovation from the large audience.

Mr. Monteux led the orchestra through the second work of the afternoon, (which treats the instrumental groups of the orchestra as soloists, hence the name "Concerto" as applied to the five-movement symphony-like work) with a deep insight into the historic Bartok composition.

A hushed audience absorbed every note as the solemn, questing first movement with its fugato intrusions of the brilliant color of the brasses progressed in the warmth of an unexpectedly sunny afternoon.

A dramatic drum-beat opened the second movement marked Giuoco delle copie: Allegro Scherzando by the composer. The buffoon-like march was taken up successively by pairs of bassoons, oboes, clarinets, flutes and muted trumpets.

The fourth movement gave the impression of a cynical musical "joke" perpetrated by the Composer, as the bumbling voices of bass instrument were answered by cascades of laughter from strings and woodwinds.

The vibrant beauty and vital power of the fifth movement, with the composers notation of Presto faithfully executed by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra, captured the imagination of the audience and swept them along in a whirlwind of sound. Mr. Monteux, with a languid flip of the wrist, executed a compelling transformation as with his gesture, the tremendous rushing force of the orchestra was hushed and the somewhat unexpected gentle voice of the Harp took center stage for a brief period before the imposing coda.

Applause and shouts of "bravo" rang out under the huge Music Shed as the enthusiastic audience expressed their delight with the work of Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Bartok work was the winner, that day.

The first performance on Sunday's program was Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri." The romantic beauty of the lively piece, with its frequent lapses into musical nostalgia, was much appreciated by the audience, who responded with generous applause.

Everyone was "in the mood" by the time the third and final work of the afternoon, Schubert's "Symphony in C major, No. 7," was presented. From the lyric beauty of the first, Andante, movement with horns and strings alternating on the theme with perfect balance to the singing strings and rhythmic tempo of the Andante con moto second, the audience identification was growing. During the Scherzo, a casual look around the shed revealed numbers of heads moving slightly as individuals almost unconsciously beat time to the music.

The vigorous last movement featured beautiful work by the whole orchestra and lovely passages by woodwinds and strings. The golden tones of the brasses cut like a beam of light through a gentle background to re-state the theme. The afternoon came to a close with the audience well-satisfied with the day's entertainment.

This Week's Program

Tomorrow evening's Tanglewood concert, with Charles Munch conducting, will feature Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Perassi and the Tchaikovsky fourth symphony.

On Saturday, in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch will take the podium once more to conduct the Hanson "Elegy", the Schumann Concerto in A. Minor with Rudolf Serkin as soloist, the Symphony No. 5 by Honegger and Debussy's "La Mer."

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., guest conductor Richard Burgin will lead the orchestra in "Romeo and Juliet" by Prokofieff, the Hindemith Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt as soloist and Gustav Mahler's First Symphony.

L.F.M.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

JUL 30 1956

Tanglewood Concerts Brilliant

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 30 — The second week-end of concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival in the shed here at Tanglewood came to a brilliant close yesterday afternoon with the weather man cooperating for the concerts to give music-lovers, numbering some 25,000 for the three programs of modern as well as classical music.

Yesterday afternoon's concert brought a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith, and Mahler with Ruth Posselt as violin soloist and her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducting. This annual concert with the same husband-wife team is an event always enjoyed by the Sunday afternoon audiences. Yesterday's concert was no exception.

Saturday night's program with Charles Munch conducting was heard by more than 9,800 under ideal conditions for listening in the shed and beneath a star-studded sky. The opening "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson was no sad dirge of mourning but rather the strong affirmation of faith which befits the memory of the conductor whose dream and memorial this Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music School are. The music was vigorous until near the end when it died away in a tenuous, haunting beauty.

Marking the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, Rudolf Serkin appeared in a brilliant performance of that composer's "Pianoforte Concerto in A Minor." This was an inspired performance, greeted by "bravos" and followed by four appearances of the artist when he had concluded. Mr. Serkin received an ovation and the audience a thrill.

Honegger's "Symphony No. 5" was received with mixed feelings by the audience. For some it was too modern, for others it was one of the most interesting of modern compositions given a perfect interpretation and peformance by Charles Munch. The program concluded with another of those delightful performances of Debussy's "La Mer" which we have heard here on frequent programs over the years.

Music of Beethoven. Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 4, in F minor," and Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" with Mr. Munch conducting opened the week-end of programs with more than 6,250 in attendance. The Petrassi concerto was composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

This week's programs will include music of Schumann and Mozart with another appearance of Rudolf Serkin in the music theater on Wednesday evening when he will play with the woodwind quartet of Boston. Concerts in the shed beginning on Friday evening will bring a program of music of Falla, Ravel, and Stravinsky (the complete "Petrouchka") under the South American conductor, Eleazar De Carvalho. Leonard Bernstein will conduct a concert in memory of Koussevitzky on Saturday evening when the program will include Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 5" and Mozart's "Mass in C minor" with a chorus and soloists. Next Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will conduct a program of Copland's "Symphonic Ode," Tshaikovsky's "Violin Concerto" and Schumann's "Symphony No. 2, in C major." Zino Francescatti who has performed here so brilliantly in the past will be the violin soloist in the Tschaikovsky concerto.

The third week of concerts coming up in the shed gives promise of variety in music and conductors as well as in the appearance of esteemed soloists.

S. M.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 30 1956

Nearly 10,000 Attend Concert At Tanglewood

Perfect weather Saturday evening drew a crowd of 9812 enthusiastic music devotees to the Berkshire Festival's 15th program at Tanglewood this summer.

Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky" started the program with a quiet forthright simplicity and proceeded through many reminiscent stages to an intensive elevation, after which it retreated with modest subsidence.

Rudolph Serkin's interpretation of Robert Schumann's piano concerto in A minor was imbued with a frenetic feeling which almost beclouded his absorbed and masterful playing. Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided a restrained and sensitive background, but one could not relax with ease in the freedom and spaciousness inherent in this composition. The audience recalled the modest Mr. Serkin many times.

A compelling and cleverly constructed symphony, the fifth and last of Arthur Honegger, who died in 1955, a really great and dedicated composer, enveloped one with its sensuous sounds and layered colors. The opening chord for full orchestra from high flutes to low basses preled ed a melodic line of chords with a fulsome dissonance, which grad ually subsided and left on hushed and eager for that whicl followed; a sustained trumpe note lifted and held the atter tion and then the openin theme sounded among th strings, embellished by the wooc winds; the parts were then e changed by the instruments an the movement closed softly. Th second movement could almos be called a fluffy bit of enchan ment, but there were under tones of seriousness, the cello too rich in color to be frothy and the development a vas interplay of light and dark fig ures. The finale was a master piece of restrained power and fo the third time the composer brought the movement to a con siderate and tranquil close. In this and the following one was aware of the whole entity, conductor, composer and orchestra in complete accord.

The final opus, Debussy's La Mer, was transcendant. Mr. Munch and the orchestra wove a spell of enchantment with these sketches that one was loathe to cast off. The audience obviously was transported with its ineffable beauty and with awakening awareness burst into wild approbation; one's aesthetic sense rebelled against the return to reality but was perhaps made keener for an appreciation of the same.

Since the evening concerts are supposed to begin at 8:30 it is wise to arrive between 7:30 and 8 to avoid confusion, or even earlier, to picnic on the spacious and beautiful lawns, an enjoyable prelude to an evening of music.

—M. B.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 31 1956

Tanglewood Parade To Feature Pianist Thursday, Aug. 9

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, August 9, in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

Jesus Maria Sanroma was born in Fajardo, Puerto Rico, in 1903. His name is a common one in Latin countries where the first-born is often called Jesus. In ordinary conversation, however, Sanroma answers to the nickname "Chu-Chu." As a child Sanroma's outstanding gifts were recognized and encouraged by the Puerto Rican government which sent him to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston at the age of thirteen. At sixteen he was graduated with honors, winning the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand piano. Later he studied with Antoinette Szumowska, one of Paderewski's few pupils, in Boston, and with Arthur Schnabel in Berlin.

In the course of his career he has played more than 2,000 concerts in every part of the globe and with every major orchestra and conductor. For years he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and, with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra—among them Honegger's Concertino, Stravinsky's Capriccio, Piston's Capriccio, Ravel's G Major Concerto, and the Hindemith Concerto which was written especially for him.

[210]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

JUL 30 1956

Scholarly Baton

Unusual Fare Offered On Tanglewood Program

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—Under the scholarly baton of Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony and violin soloist, Ruth Posselt, gave a concert in the Tanglewood Shed yesterday afternoon that seemed to satisfy an audience of 7,733.

On the program were "Romeo and Juliet," ballet, second suite, Opus 64, by Prokofieff; Hindemith concerto for violin and orchestra; and Symphony No. 1 in D Major by Mahler.

To put it plainly, this was somewhat removed from usual Sunday afternoon fare at Tanglewood. The first two works are seasoned to the connoisseur mainly, and the Mahler is a rather meandering exploration of philosophical ideas that is apt to strike receptive chords in those who happen to like Mahler.

Beautifully Developed

It's to Burgin's credit that the program received what we might call a good reception. He is by no means a visual virtuoso of the podium. As concert master of the orchestra for the past 36 years, he knows its capabilities and needs well enough to dispense with ridiculous details that make conducting look terribly difficult — which it is, but not from the visual standpoint.

The "Romeo and Juliet" music was beautifully developed. The thundering opening chords fairly ozzed with Montague and Capulet hatred. There was a magnificence in the bold, angula string melodies with angry retorts in brasses and percussion.

Gorgeous Duet

The Juliet theme ran a gamut of descriptions—gay, flighty, swiftly paced, and much enhanced by a gorgeous duet between Doriot Anthony Dwyer's flute and Samuel Mayes' cello.

Excitement exuded from the rushing, gushing dance movement, exploring adverse keys, plausibly. The scene of Romeo at Juliet's grave seemed to seek its tragedy in reminiscense rather than tears. Its ominous, murky chords didn't lose their grip in a sunny Sunday afternoon setting.

The Hindemith concerto is clearly a cherished child to Burgin and Miss Posselt (Mrs. Burgin). He gave its first American performance with the same orchestra in 1940.

Stirring Performance

It is not the happiest of violin vehicles. No doubt exists of its immense technical difficulties, for both soloist and orchestra. Entrances must be made with split-second precision, and the conductor was most cooperative with the soloist in such matters. In spots, it sounds as if the solo instrument and orchestra have taken leave of each other,

Miss Posselt gave it a stirring performance.

It was relaxed, confident, brilliant playing. The first and last movements, bristling with difficulties, were played with incredible agility, and the cadenza of the last movement was a perfectly ordered showcase of "stunts," most of them with artistic purpose.

She beautified the wandering melodies of the slow movement with rich, flavorsome tones-presenting each phrase like a personal message.

Clear thought governed Burgin's approach to the elaborate Mahler symphony. He effected secure connections between its scattered materials—Bucolic phrases, deep and devasting harmonies—all philosophically related and, frankly tiring and taxing except to the Mahler enthusiast.

Series "C" of this festival resumes on Friday night. Eleazar De Carvalho who will conduct Barraud's "La Kermesse," Falla's "Three-Cornered Hat," and the complete Ballet from "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky. Soloist will be Jocy De Oliveira in the Ravel piano concerto.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

JUL 30 1956

Opera Acts Scheduled At Tanglewood

Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, tonight at 8:30 in the Theater - Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863, which Goldovsky's New England Opera Company premiered in this country in 1955 in Boston; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), which had a belated 1917 premiere abroad. Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 31 1956

Carvalho And Bernstein Lead Orchestra At Lenox This Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second Symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10:00 a.m., for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 31 1956

Ground Breaking Ceremony at Shadowbrook

LENOX, July 31 — Over 2,000 persons, including seven Bishops from New England diocese, today attended ceremonies marking the beginning of construction of a new Jesuit Shadowbrook Novitiate to replace the building destroyed by fire four months ago.

In a unique ceremony, the soil was turned by each of the seven Bishops, headed by Archbishop Richard J Cushing of Boston. The first to break ground was the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of Springfield.

He was joined in the ceremony by Archbishop Cushing, Bishop Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, Bishop John J. Wright of Worcester, Bishop Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich, Auxiliary Bishop Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston and Auxiliary Bishop John F. Hackett of Hartford.

Earlier, at formal exercises at the Tanglewood Music Shed, Archbishop Cushing delivered the principal address.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., New England Provincial, expressed the gratitude of the Jesuits to the hierarchy, the lay campaign workers and all who have donated to the rebuilding fund. At the same time he disclosed that the complete loss of the old building by fire has forced an increase in the initial estimate of $3,000,000 needed for construction.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund appeal, reported that $2,158,000 has been donated to date.

Fr. FitzGerald explained that July 31 was selected as the date for ground breaking because it marks the 400th anniversary of the death

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 31 1956

Inappropriate

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I was surprised, to say the least, to read in The Eagle [July 23] a reprint of an article by a New York music critic, in which he complains rather bitterly about the Boston Symphony Orchestra's programs at Tanglewood.

Toscanini sticks to the classics pretty much, giving modern composers small opportunity to be heard through his orchestra. Koussevitsky was most receptive to new writers and now Dr. Munch is giving contemporary composers every opportunity possible for their works to be heard. The public likes the BSO programs, judging by the thousands that flock to the concerts.

I hope that people who might read the article in question and have not been to Tanglewood will not stay away on account of it. I think, as do others, that The Eagle's reprinting of this article was decidedly inappropriate.

HAROLD E. THOMPSON.
Great Barrington.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
AUG 1 1956

Boston Symphony Timpanist to Retire

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife in Boston, and during the Tanglewood season in Pittsfield. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony.

Telegraph (e)
NASHUA, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 10,728
AUG 1 1956

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 1 1956

Rudolf Serkin Has Evening Program

Pianist Rudolf Serkin will make his final appearance at this Summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Aug. 1) at 8:30 when he will perform the Schumann Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. He will play also Mozart's Quintet in E-flat major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

This coming weekend the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho (Friday evening), Leonard Bernstein (Saturday evening), and Charles Munch (Sunday afternoon).

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 31 1956

Tanglewood Opera Department Gives 'Friends' Concert

The opera department of the Berkshire Music center last evening gave a concert in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood featuring scenes from 19th Century operas.

The program was attended by persons who contribute to the center, the summer music school of the Boston Symphony orchestra, through its "Friends" organization.

The opera concert opened the fifth week of the Berkshire festival. Next event on the schedule is the weekly chamber music program, scheduled at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow evening in the theater-concert hall.

Shed concerts, featuring the full Boston Symphony, are held on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
AUG 1 1956

Serkin Plays At Tanglewood This Evening

Rudolf Serkin, who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer, makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30, when he will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Mr. Serkin, who made his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York, has since become one of the most illustrious figures on the American concert stage. He has played many times with every major American orchestra and his annual tours are highlights of the concert season. In recent years he has journeyed several times to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performances with the noted cellist, Pablo Casals. A summer Berkshire neighbor, he lives on a farm in Vermont.

AT BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Re[illegible]ts of this area who are studying at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass this summer. Left to right: Eunice DeSanchez of Portland, Me; Joan Lewitt of Nashua, a member of the Festival Chorus; Walter Tokarczyk, Woonsocket, RI; Madeline Palmer, Manchester and June Stone of Burlington, Vt.

[211]

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 31 1956

Carvalho And Bernstein Lead Orchestra At Lenox This Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts will be led by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. de Carvalho, a member of the conducting faculty at the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood from 1946-1951, is spending the summer at Tanglewood as acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting, while its permanent head, Leonard Bernstein, is on sabbatical. The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky, with his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, making her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a memorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second Symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode. Mr. Copland, assistant to Dr. Munch in the direction of the Berkshire Music Center, composed the piece for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony and revised it for the orchestra's current 75th anniversary year.

The Tanglewood evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony in the Shed at 10:00 a.m., for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200

JUL 31 1956

Ground Breaking Ceremony at Shadowbrook

LENOX, July 31 — Over 2,000 persons, including seven Bishops from New England diocese today attended ceremonies marking the beginning of construction of a new Jesuit Shadowbrook Novitiate to replace the building destroyed by fire four months ago.

In a unique ceremony, the soil was turned by each of the seven Bishops, headed by Archbishop Richard J Cushing of Boston. The first to break ground was the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of Springfield.

He was joined in the ceremony by Archbishop Cushing, Bishop Lawrence J. Shehan of Bridgeport, Bishop John J. Wright of Worcester, Bishop Bernard J. Flanagan of Norwich, Auxiliary Bishop Eric F. MacKenzie of Boston and Auxiliary Bishop John F. Hackett of Hartford.

Earlier, at formal exercises at the Tanglewood Music Shed, Archbishop Cushing delivered the principal address.

Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., New England Provincial, expressed the gratitude of the Jesuits to the hierarchy, the lay campaign workers and all who have donated to the rebuilding fund. At the same time he disclosed that the complete loss of the old building by fire has forced an increase in the initial estimate of $3,000,000 needed for construction.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund appeal, reported that $2,158,000 has been donated to-date.

Fr. FitzGerald explained that July 31 was selected as the date for ground breaking because it marks the 400th anniversary of the death

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 31 1956

Inappropriate

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I was surprised, to say the least, to read in The Eagle [July 23] a reprint of an article by a New York music critic, in which he complains rather bitterly about the Boston Symphony Orchestra's programs at Tanglewood.

Toscanini sticks to the classics pretty much, giving modern composers small opportunity to be heard through his orchestra. Koussevitsky was most receptive to new writers and now Dr. Munch is giving contemporary composers every opportunity possible for their works to be heard. The public likes the BSO programs, judging by the thousands that flock to the concerts.

I hope that people who might read the article in question and have not been to Tanglewood will not stay away on account of it. I think, as do others, that The Eagle's reprinting of this article was decidedly inappropriate.

HAROLD E. THOMPSON.
Great Barrington.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 1 1956

Boston Symphony Timpanist to Retire

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife in Boston, and during the Tanglewood season in Pittsfield. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony.

Telegraph (e)
NASHUA, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 10,728

AUG 1 1956

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

AUG 1 1956

Rudolf Serkin Has Evening Program

Pianist Rudolf Serkin will make his final appearance at this Summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Aug. 1) at 8:30 when he will perform the Schumann Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. He will play also Mozart's Quintet in E-flat major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

This coming weekend the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho (Friday evening), Leonard Bernstein (Saturday evening), and Charles Munch (Sunday afternoon).

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 31 1956

Tanglewood Opera Department Gives 'Friends' Concert

The opera department of the Berkshire Music center last evening gave a concert in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood featuring scenes from 19th Century operas.

The program was attended by persons who contribute to the center, the summer music school of the Boston Symphony orchestra, through its "Friends" organization.

The opera concert opened the fifth week of the Berkshire festival. Next event on the schedule is the weekly chamber music program, scheduled at 8.30 o'clock tomorrow evening in the theater-concert hall.

Shed concerts, featuring the full Boston Symphony, are held on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 1 1956

Serkin Plays At Tanglewood This Evening

Rudolf Serkin, who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer, makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30, when he will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Mr. Serkin, who made his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York, has since become one of the most illustrious figures on the American concert stage. He has played many times with every major American orchestra and his annual tours are highlights of the concert season. In recent years he has journeyed several times to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performances with the noted cellist, Pablo Casals. A summer Berkshire neighbor, he lives on a farm in Vermont.

AT BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Residents of this area who are studying at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass this summer. Left to right: Eunice DeSanchez of Portland, Me; Joan Lewitt of Nashua, a member of the Festival Chorus; Walter Tokarczyk, Woonsocket, RI; Madeline Palmer, Manchester and June Stone of Burlington, Vt.

[21]

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD—July 2 and 28 by A. C. S.

Drama was in the air at Tanglewood Friday evening. Dramatic readings of three dissimilar but equally dramatic scores were given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The opener was Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, held in taut rein throughout. From the bombasts of silence to the quiet, hymn-like intonation of Florestan's air, all was admirably controlled and effectively presented. A brilliant performance of the ever-popular Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 closed the program.

Goffredo Petrassi, a guest instructor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, was represented by his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed last December. The concerto lacks any specific concertino but rather asks of each orchestral section the technical brilliance of a soloist. The material of the score is often derivative in character, leaning rather heavily toward Berg and Stravinsky. Nevertheless, Mr. Petrassi's own personality is not found wanting in the work.

An Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, by Howard Hanson, began the Saturday evening concert. A work of broad appeal, it should find a welcome place on symphonic programs.

Rudolf Serkin appeared as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. In paying homage to the composer on the 100th anniversary of his death, Mr. Serkin and Charles Munch formed a sympathetic partnership resulting in a handsome performance. The pianist was persuasive throughout, each note tellingly played while ever remaining subservient to the broader lines of the music.

The second half of the program was devoted to music of the French school with Mr. Munch giving his usual excellent reading of Debussy's La Mer at the close. The Fifth Symphony of the late Arthur Honegger, a personal work of disturbing intensity, preceded it. Large in scope, it is almost diary-like in its betraya of the intimate mind of the composer, especially in the second movement with its brooding "blues" section opposing a more transparent allegretto. Introduced by Mr. Munch in 1951, it was given a powerful rendition in this instance.

TANGLEWOOD—July 39, 1956 by F. A.

Richard Burgin was on the podium for the Sunday concert at Tanglewood directing 19th and 20th century compositions. In the 2nd suite of Romeo and Juliet by Prokofieff, which opened the program, Mr. Burgin was responsive to the variety of moods inherent in the work.

Ruth Posselt appeared as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Although she displayed fine technical abilities, there seemed to be a lack of unity in the ensemble of soloist and orchestra. Not until the final movement did she seem to be fully conversant with the idiom.

The highlight of the afternoon came in Mahler's Symphony No. 1. This is music for which Mr. Burgin seems to have a special affinity. The second and fourth movements received particularly sympathetic attention. A large audience expressed its approval of this moving interpretation.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 1 1956

CATSKILL DAILY MAIL
8/1/56

gland Newsclip Agency, Inc.
, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

AUG 1 1956

THE TOWN IN REVIEW

RECRUITS COME IN — What with the Marine Corps' training procedures on trial down at Parris Island, you'd think Marine recruiting would have fallen to a low ebb, but such is not the case, according to two area recruiting sergeants. "We figured the McKeon trial would gum up our recruiting plans, but instead, we've filled out quotas around here until Oct. 1" the sergeants told this desk. "Maybe the idea of rugged training appeals to young men. We don't know why, but we don't have any trouble getting recruits."

FREE CHOICE — There's been a lot of talk and curiosity about whether or not local stores will close down Saturday afternoon, Aug. 11, during the big Sesqui celebration. Here's the way it is. The Sesqui Committee, not wishing to dictate to merchants, has left the matter open to the option of store owners. As it stands now, some stores are going to close and others plan on remaining open. It's pretty hard to get a clear picture. But the Sesqui Committee will use a "hands-off" policy.

Tanglewood Season To End Aug. 9th

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F. by Gershwin.

In addition to Mr. Sanroma's performance of the Gershwin Concerto, the Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler, popular maestro of the Boston Pops for the past 27 years.

On the first half of the concert, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Resga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V). These are all open to ticket holders, and for purchasers of box seats a dividend will be a special performance of a short opera in the Tanglewood formal gardens, commencing at 4 p. m.

Tickets for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox (Mass.) 600.

Noted Gershwin Stylist Returning to Tanglewood

Jesus Maria Sanroma Will Be One of Featured Artists During 'Tanglewood on Parade' Event, Thursday, the 9th

Lenox, Aug. 1,—The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, the 9th, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the "Piano Concerto in F" by Gershwin.

JESUS MARIA SANROMA

Jesus Maria Sanroma was born in Fajardo, Puerto Rico, in 1903. His name is a common one in Latin countries where the first-born is often called Jesus. In ordinary conversation, however, Sanroma answers to the nickname "Chu-Chu." As a child Sanroma's outstanding gifts were recognized and encouraged by the Puerto Rican government which sent him to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston at the age of 13. At 16 he was graduated with honors, winning the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand piano. Later he studied with Antoinette Szumowska, one of Paderewski's few pupils, in Boston, and with Artur Schnabel in Berlin.

In the course of his career he has played more than 2000 concerts in every part of the globe and with every major orchestra and conductor. For years he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra—among them Honegger's Concertino, Stravinsky's Capriccio, Piston's Capriccio, Ravel's G Major Concerto, and the Hindemith Concerto which was written especially for him.

In 1953 and 1954 Mr. Sanroma was the featured soloist with the Gershwin Concert Orchestra during its transcontinental tours. He has recorded seven major concerti, the Gershwin Concerto among them, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. During the season just concluded he performed one of his great specialties, the Stravinsky "Capriccio," with the Symphony of the Air in New York and with the Boston Symphony Orchestra both at home and on tour. He now serves as Musical Adviser to the Chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico.

In addition to Mr. Sanroma's performance of the Gershwin Concerto, the Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler, popular maestro of the Boston Pops for the past 27 years.

On the first half of the concert Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V). These are all open to ticket holders, and for purchasers of box seats a dividend will be a special performance of a short opera in the Tanglewood formal gardens, commencing at 4.00 p. m.

Tickets for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

The Oracle

SUMMER HAILSTORM

Hard on the sudden cleavage of the light,
The frozen daisies stippled on the lawn
Honor the thing they blight.
Cold and contained, impassioned spheres of white
Loosen their windlash fury and are gone—
All but the desolate sting they leave upon
Petals of flowers folded for the night.

The splendor of the momen lingers long
And longer than the wound that never heals.
And who can say which love is weak, which strong:
The storm that strikes, the calm that yet reveals
The rifled flower where the tear congeals.

—(Sister) Mary Gilbert in the N. Y. Times.

☼ ☼

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Quirk of Laurel St. are home from a three weeks vacation at Camp Otter, Pittsburg, New Hampsire and they report a wonderful time. Mr. Quirk waited until the final day to set a record for the biggest lake trout caught on First Connecticut Lake this season — a 12½ pound battler that kept him busy for half an hour. The Quirks report a considerable amount of rainfall, early morning temperatures generally in the 40 degree vicinity and lots of high winds in the middle of the day. Sounds like early spring fishing there instead of the usual July variety.

☼ ☼

There aren't as many gentlemen with accents in our symphony orchestras as there used to be. America grows her own musicians pretty fruitfully now. Nevertheless our symphonic music still owes much to the foreign born. It's interesting to learn that when the Boston Symphony goes on its much-advertised tour this summer, it will be taking 25 of its 105 mmbers back to visit their native lands. First on the list, of course, are the conductor, Charles Munch, and the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, both French, and each planning to conduct a concert in Paris. There will be 16 other musicians playing for their countrymen in France. There will be two Czechoslovakians playing when the orchestra performs in Prague, two Austrians for the Vienna appearance, one Dane for Copenhagen, and one German for the Stuttgart and Munich concerts. The greatest interest, however, is in the presence of three Russian violinists in the orchestra, who will go with the group to Leningrad and Moscow in September. Eleven other foreign-born musicians don't find their homelands on the orchestra's itinerary.

[210]

CATSKILL

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD—July 2 and 28
by A. C. S.

Drama was in the air at Tanglewood Friday evening. Dramatic readings of three dissimilar but equally dramatic scores were given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The opener was Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, held in taut rein throughout. From the bombasts of silence to the quiet, hymn-like intonation of Florestan's air, all was admirably controlled and effectively presented. A brilliant performance of the ever-popular Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 closed the program.

Goffredo Petrassi, a guest instructor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, was represented by his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed last December. The concerto lacks any specific concertino but rather asks of each orchestral section the technical brilliance of a soloist. The material of the score is often derivative in character, leaning rather heavily toward Berg and Stravinsky. Nevertheless, Mr. Petrassi's own personality is not found wanting in the work.

An Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, by Howard Hanson, began the Saturday evening concert. A work of broad appeal, it should find a welcome place on symphonic programs.

Rudolf Serkin appeared as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. In paying homage to the composer on the 100th anniversary of his death, Mr. Serkin and Charles Munch formed a sympathetic partnership resulting in a handsome performance. The pianist was persuasive throughout, each note tellingly played while ever remaining subservient to the broader lines of the music.

The second half of the program was devoted to music of the French school with Mr. Munch giving his usual excellent reading of Debussy's La Mer at the close. The Fifth Symphony of the late Arthur Honegger, a personal work of disturbing intensity, preceded it. Large in scope, it is almost diary-like in its betraya of the intimate mind of the composer, especially in the second movement with its brooding "blues" section opposing a more transparent allegretto. Introduced by Mr. Munch in 1951, it was given a powerful rendition in this instance.

TANGLEWOOD—July 39, 1956
by F. A.

Richard Burgin was on the podium for the Sunday concert at Tanglewood directing 19th and 20th century compositions. In the 2nd suite of Romeo and Juliet by Prokofieff, which opened the program, Mr. Burgin was responsive to the variety of moods inherent in the work.

Ruth Posselt appeared as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Although she displayed fine technical abilities, there seemed to be a lack of unity in the ensemble of soloist and orchestra. Not until the final movement did she seem to be fully conversant with the idiom.

The highlight of the afternoon came in Mahler's Symphony No. 1. This is music for which Mr. Burgin seems to have a special affinity. The second and fourth movements received particularly sympathetic attention. A large audience expressed its approval of this moving interpretation.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 1 1956

The Oracle

SUMMER HAILSTORM

Hard on the sudden cleavage of the light,
The frozen daisies stippled on the lawn
Honor the thing they blight.
Cold and contained, impassioned spheres of white
Loosen their windlash fury and are gone—
All but the desolate sting they leave upon
Petals of flowers folded for the night.

The splendor of the momen lingers long
And longer than the wound that never heals.
And who can say which love is weak, which strong:
The storm that strikes, the calm that yet reveals
The rifled flower where the tear congeals.

—(Sister) Mary Gilbert in the N. Y. Times.

☼ ☼

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Quirk of Laurel St. are home from a three weeks vacation at Camp Otter, Pittsburg, New Hampsire and they report a wonderful time. Mr. Quirk waited until the final day to set a record for the biggest lake trout caught on First Connecticut Lake this season — a 12½ pound battler that kept him busy for half an hour. The Quirks report a considerable amount of rainfall, early morning temperatures generally in the 40 degree vicinity and lots of high winds in the middle of the day. Sounds like early spring fishing there instead of the usual July variety.

☼ ☼

There aren't as many gentlemen with accents in our symphony orchestras as there used to be. America grows her own musicians pretty fruitfully now. Nevertheless our symphonic music still owes much to the foreign born. It's interesting to learn that when the Boston Symphony goes on its much advertised tour this summer, it will be taking 25 of its 105 mmbers back to visit their native lands. First on the list, of course, are the conductor, Charles Munch, and the guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, both French, and each planning to conduct a concert in Paris. There will be 16 other musicians playing for their countrymen in France. There will be two Czechoslovakians playing when the orchestra performs in Prague, two Austrians for the Vienna appearance, one Dane for Copenhagen, and one German for the Stuttgart and Munich concerts. The greatest interest, however, is in the presence of three Russian violinists in the orchestra, who will go with the group to Leningrad and Moscow in September. Eleven other foreign-born musicians don't find their homelands on the orchestra's itinerary.

☼ ☼

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

AUG 1 1956

Noted Gershwin Stylist Returning to Tanglewood

Jesus Maria Sanroma Will Be One of Featured Artists During 'Tanglewood on Parade' Event, Thursday, the 9th

Lenox, Aug. 1,—The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, the 9th, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the "Piano Concerto in F" by Gershwin.

JESUS MARIA SANROMA

Jesus Maria Sanroma was born in Fajardo, Puerto Rico, in 1903. His name is a common one in Latin countries where the first-born is often called Jesus. In ordinary conversation, however, Sanroma answers to the nickname "Chu-Chu." As a child Sanroma's outstanding gifts were recognized and encouraged by the Puerto Rican government which sent him to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston at the age of 13. At 16 he was graduated with honors, winning the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand piano. Later he studied with Antoinette Szumowska, one of Paderewski's few pupils, in Boston, and with Artur Schnabel in Berlin.

In the course of his career he has played more than 2000 concerts in every part of the globe and with every major orchestra and conductor. For years he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra—among them Honegger's Concertino, Stravinsky's Capriccio, Piston's Capriccio, Ravel's G Major Concerto, and the Hindemith Concerto which was written especially for him.

In 1953 and 1954 Mr. Sanroma was the featured soloist with the Gershwin Concert Orchestra during its transcontinental tours. He has recorded seven major concerti, the Gershwin Concerto among them, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. During the season just concluded he performed one of his great specialties, the Stravinsky "Capriccio," with the Symphony of the Air in New York and with the Boston Symphony Orchestra both at home and on tour. He now serves as Musical Adviser to the Chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico.

In addition to Mr. Sanroma's performance of the Gershwin Concerto, the Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler, popular maestro of the Boston Pops for the past 27 years.

On the first half of the concert Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V). These are all open to ticket holders, and for purchasers of box seats a dividend will be a special performance of a short opera in the Tanglewood formal gardens, commencing at 4.00 p. m.

Tickets for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

THE TOWN IN REVIEW

RECRUITS COME IN — What with the Marine Corps' training procedures on trial down at Parris Island, you'd think Marine recruiting would have fallen to a low ebb, but such is not the case, according to two area recruiting sergeants. "We figured the McKeon trial would gum up our recruiting plans, but instead, we've filled out quotas around here until Oct. 1" the sergeants told this desk. "Maybe the idea of rugged training appeals to young men. We don't know why, but we don't have any trouble getting recruits."

FREE CHOICE — There's been a lot of talk and curiosity about whether or not local stores will close down Saturday afternoon, Aug. 11, during the big Sesqui celebration. Here's the way it is. The Sesqui Committee, not wishing to dictate to merchants, has left the matter open to the option of store owners As it stands now, some stores are going to close and others plan on remaining open. It's pretty hard to get a clear picture. But the Sesqui Committee will use a "hands-off" policy.

Tanglewood Season To End Aug. 9th

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F. by Gershwin.

In addition to Mr. Sanroma's performance of the Gershwin Concerto, the Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler, popular maestro of the Boston Pops for the past 27 years.

On the first half of the concert, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Resga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V). These are all open to ticket holders, and for purchasers of box seats a dividend will be a special performance of a short opera in the Tanglewood formal gardens, commencing at 4 p. m.

Tickets for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox (Mass.) 600.

[210]

Violinist Performs In Sunday Concert At Tanglewood

The gracefully competent conducting of Richard Burgin, Concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the top flight musical craftsmanship of violin soloist Ruth Posselt were features of Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

In weather that can only be termed "New England at its best", a large crowd turned out to hear the afternoon presentation.

Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, second suite, Op. 64, was the first work on the program. The first number of the four played from the suite drew a clear sound-picture of the pompous nobleman striding about in his clanking suit of armor.

The second, carefree and gay number pictured the maiden Juliet and her awakening to mature emotions; the exotic dance number was followed by the last picturing Romeo at Juliet's grave, in a musical portrayal of powerful emotion all drawn out and displayed to perfection by the musicianship of the great orchestra.

The highlight of the afternoon was the excellent performance by Ruth Posselt of the Hindemith Concerto for violin and orchestra. Miss Posselt drew from her instrument the delicate intonation and emotional sensitivity demanded in the second movement of the work with sure-fingered skill. In the third "vivace" movement, and particularly the Cadenza, the soloist demonstrated deft bowing and fingering in her execution of the lively section. Mr. Burgin piloted the orchestra through the work giving expert close support to the violinist. A loud ovation greeted Miss Posselt as she completed the work, and the audience called her back to the podium four times to acknowledge the applause.

Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major was the afternoon's final work, with its extended development of the old children's tune "Frere Jacques." The symphony with is pastoral quality in the first movement fitted precisely into the atmosphere of the lovely wooded hills of the area.

Outrageous audience manners were displayed by a number of spectators who rose from their seats and departed before Mr. Burgin and the orchestra had even finished the final movement of the Mahler work. Their departure provided a considerable interference with the mood of the work and the enjoyment of many of the spectators of the work. We hope they arrived safely wherever they were going with such haste.

A similar lapse in courteousness, we think, occured last Friday evening during the performance of a work especially composed for the 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As Mr. Munch was conducting the orchestra in a performance of Petrassi's Fifth Concerto the audible audience comment during the pause between the second and third movements must have been disconcerting to the players, conductor and composer, who was present.

We think they received what they deserved (the audience) when Mr. Munch half-turned on the Podium and looked-daggers at the loudmouths, refusing to continue the work until they quieted down. They eventually did so, and the performance continued. It is admittedly an extremely modern piece of orchestral music, and difficult to understand, but they might have tried, at least. There were many here who appreciated the skill of the composer, fortunately, and Goffredo Petrassi was roundly applauded as he stepped to the podium.

The audience mood was, perhaps, indicated by the fact that they broke in with applause between the first and second movements of Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 36, which followed the Petrassi work. We feel that a great symphony orchestra would be lax in its duty, however, if it only programmed traditional works in the romantic idiom, and did not attempt to deliver samplings of contemporary composition to its audiences. May their policy continue.

Friday night's first work was the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 2, Op. 72.

L.F.M.

This week's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C. Minor, K., 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Coplands Symphonic Ode, Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zina Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, CONN.), AUG. 2, 1956 — PAGE 13

Fairfield County Fair
Thurs. Aug 2.

Tanglewood In Parade

The program details have been announced for Tanglewood On Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, August 9th. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

News
STRATFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,575

AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood In Parade

The program details have been announced for Tanglewood On Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, August 9th. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 2 1956

Music Festival Nearly Finished

LENOX (Special) — An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5 which promises to close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p.m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart, and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

5th Chamber Music Concert At Tanglewood Draws 2,236

The fifth in the weekly series of chamber music concerts was held at Tanglewood last night, with pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind quartet performing for an audience of 2,236. It was the largest crowd of the season at the Wednesday evening programs.

Schumann Anniversary

Continuing the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, Mr. Serkin played the Schumann "Symphonic Etudes" and "Carnaval." With the Boston Symphony group he played Mozart's Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds.

Members of the Quartet were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The Berkshire Music festival now moves into its semi final week-end, with shed concerts scheduled tomorrow and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Brazilian Conductor

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, will make a guest appearance on the podium tomorrow evening, and his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, pianist, will make her North American debut playing Ravel's Piano concerto. The program will also include "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Barraud, three dances from De Falla's "El Sombrero de Tres Picos," and the complete suite of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

The Saturday evening concert will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, while Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will return on Sunday afternoon.

[213]

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

AUG 2 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — Adolph Teichert, harpsichordist, will open this season's series of the Andover Organ Institute tonight at the Memorial Organ hall, Methuen. The program will start at 8:15 o'clock.

This marks the first appearance of this talented artist at the famous organ center. It also marks the initial program on any other musical instrument in this series.

It is certain that this evening's program will embrace the classic music of that period in which the harpsichord flourished. The selections in comparison to piano composition are less flexible in style and interpretive color.

It is quite interesting to hear compositions appropriate to both instruments. When one has such an opportunity, there comes a more appreciative understanding of both.

Tomorrow evening, the famous organist, Andre Marchal will provide a debut organ recital. This will mark the first of three appearances in the series for this season by the talented artist. The other two concerts are listed for Friday evenings, Aug. 10 and 17.

Kismet

Next week at the Arundel Opera theater at Kennebunkport, Me., a production of the smash hit "Kismet" will be presented. This will be a repeat performance. As in the initial presentation, Wesley Boynton and Morse Haithwaite have planned an elaborate production with a cast of talented young artists.

An outstanding choral program is listed for Tuesday evening, Sept. 18, at St. Joseph's hall when the Little Singers of the French Riviera appear here. This concert, which will aid the renovation fund of St. Jean Baptiste school is being sponsored by the AEFA.

Chairman of the program will be Miss Marguerite Lyons who si wiedly known in local music circles.

Serving as honorary chairman will be Mrs. Florence R. Wallace, president of the AEFA.

The young choral singers are known world-wide. They have been acclaimed both on the continent and in other parts of the world.

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Boston Pops orchestra, which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the "Piano Concerto in F" by Gershwin.

Jesus Maria Sanroma was born in Fajardo, Puerto Rico in 1903. His name is a common one in Latin countries where the first-born is often called Jesus. In ordinary conversation, however, Sanroma answers to the nickname "Chu-Chu." As a child Sanroma's outstanding gfits were recognized and encouraged by the Puerto Rican government which sent him to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston at the age of 13. At 16 he was graduated with honors, winning the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand piano. Later he studied with Antoinette Szumowska, one of Paderewski's few pupils, in Boston, and with Artur Schnabel in Berlin.

In the course of his career he has played more than 2000 concerts in every part of the globe and with every major orchestra and conductor. For years he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra—among them Honegger's "Concertino", Stravinsky's "Capriccio", Piston's "Capriccio', Ravel's "G Major Concerto", and the "Hindemith Concerto' which was written especially for him.

In 1953 and 1954 Mr. Sanroma was the featured soloist with the Gershwin Concert orchestra during its transcontinental tours. He has recorded seven major concerti, the Gershwin Concerto among them, with the Boston Symphony orchestra, and the Boston Pops. During the season just concluded, he performed one of his great specialties, the Stravinsky "Capriccio," with the Symphony of the Air in New York and with the Boston Symphony orchestra both at home and on tour. He now serves as musical adviser to the chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico.

In additon to Mr. Sanroma's performance of the Gershwin Concerto, the Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini, orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler, popular maestro of the Boston Pops for the past 27 years.

Record
WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,163

AUG 2 1956

Violinist Performs In Sunday Concert At Tanglewood

The gracefully competent conducting of Richard Burgin, Concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the top flight musical craftsmanship of violin soloist Ruth Posselt were features of Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

In weather that can only be termed "New England at its best", a large crowd turned out to hear the afternoon presentation.

Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, second suite, Op. 64, was the first work on the program. The first number of the four played from the suite drew a clear sound-picture of the pompous nobleman striding about in his clanking suit of armor.

The second, carefree and gay number pictured the maiden Juliet and her awakening to mature emotions; the exotic dance number was followed by the last picturing Romeo at Juliet's grave, in a musical portrayal of powerful emotion all drawn out and displayed to perfection by the musiciansip of the great orchestra.

The highlight of the afternoon was the excellent performance by Ruth Posselt of the Hindemith Concerto for violin and orchestra. Miss Posselt drew from her instrument the delicate intonation and emotional sensitivity demanded in the second movement of the work with sure-fingered skill. In the third "vivace" movement, and particularly the Cadenza, the soloist demonstrated deft bowing and fingering in her execution of the lively section. Mr. Burgin piloted the orchestra through the work giving expert close support to the violinist. A loud ovation greeted Miss Posselt as she completed the work, and the audience called her back to the podium four times to acknowledge the applause.

Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major was the afternoon's final work, with its extended development of the old children's tune "Frere Jacques." The symphony with is pastoral quality in the first movement fitted precisely into the atmosphere of the lovely wooded hills of the area.

Outrageous audience manners were displayed by a number of spectators who rose from their seats and departed before Mr. Burgin and the orchestra had even finished the final movement of the Mahler work. Their departure provided a considerable interference with the mood of the work and the enjoyment of many of the spectators of the work. We hope they arrived safely wherever they were going with such haste.

A similar lapse in courteousness, we think, occured last Friday evening during the performance of a work especially composed for the 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As Mr. Munch was conducting the orchestra in a performance of Petrassi's Fifth Concerto the audible audience comment during the pause between the second and third movements must have been disconcerting to the players, conductor and composer, who was present.

We think they received what they deserved (the audience) when Mr. Munch half-turned on the Podium and looked-daggers at the loudmouths, refusing to continue the work until they quieted down. They eventually did so, and the performance continued. It is admittedly an extremely modern piece of orchestral music, and difficult to understand, but they might have tried, at least. There were many here who appreciated the skill of the composer, fortunately, and Goffredo Petrassi was roundly applauded as he stepped to the podium.

The audience mood was, perhaps, indicated by the fact that they broke in with applause between the first and second movements of Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 36, which followed the Petrassi work. We feel that a great symphony orchestra would be lax in its duty, however, if it only programmed traditional works in the romantic idiom, and did not attempt to deliver samplings of contemporary composition to its audiences. May their policy continue.

Friday night's first work was the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 2, Op. 22.

L.F.M.

This week's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C. Minor, K., 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Coplands Symphonic Ode, Tchiakosvky's Violin Concerto with Zina Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, CONN.), AUG. 2, 1956 — PAGE 15

Fairfield County Fair
Thurs. Aug 2.

Tanglewood In Parade

The program details have been announced for Tanglewood On Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, August 9th. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

News
STRATFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,575

AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood In Parade

The program details have been announced for Tanglewood On Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, August 9th. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 2 1956

5th Chamber Music Concert At Tanglewood Draws 2,236

The fifth in the weekly series of chamber music concerts was held at Tanglewood last night, with pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind quartet performing for an audience of 2,236. It was the largest crowd of the season at the Wednesday evening programs.

Schumann Anniversary

Continuing the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, Mr. Serkin played the Schumann "Symphonic Etudes" and "Carnaval." With the Boston Symphony group he played Mozart's Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds.

Members of the Quartet were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The Berkshire Music festival now moves into its semi final week-end, with shed concerts scheduled tomorrow and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Brazilian Conductor

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, will make a guest appearance on the podium tomorrow evening, and his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, pianist, will make her North American debut playing Ravel's Piano concerto. The program will also include "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Barraud, three dances from De-Falla's "El Sombrero de Tres Picos," and the complete suite of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

The Saturday evening concert will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, while Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will return on Sunday afternoon.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

AUG 2 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — Adolph Teichert, harpsichordist, will open this season's series of the Andover Organ Institute tonight at the Memorial Organ hall, Methuen. The program will start at 8:15 o'clock.

This marks the first appearance of this talented artist at the famous organ center. It also marks the initial program on any other musical instrument in this series.

It is certain that this evening's program will embrace the classic music of that period in which the harpsichord flourished. The selections in comparison to piano composition are less flexible in style and interpretive color.

It is quite interesting to hear compositions appropriate to both instruments. When one has such an opportunity, there comes a more appreciative understanding of both.

Tomorrow evening, the famous organist, Andre Marchal will provide a debut organ recital. This will mark the first of three appearances in the series for this season by the talented artist. The other two concerts are listed for Friday evenings, Aug. 10 and 17.

Kismet

Next week at the Arundel Opera theater at Kennebunkport, Me., a production of the smash hit "Kismet" will be presented. This will be a repeat performance. As in the initial presentation, Wesley Boynton and Morse Haithwaite have planned an elaborate production with a cast of talented young artists.

An outstanding choral program is listed for Tuesday evening, Sept. 18, at St. Joseph's hall when the Little Singers of the French Riviera appear here. This concert, which will aid the renovation fund of St. Jean Baptiste school is being sponsored by the AEFA.

Chairman of the program will be Miss Marguerite Lyons who is wiedly known in local music circles.

Serving as honorary chairman will be Mrs. Florence R. Wallace, president of the AEFA.

The young choral singers are known world-wide. They have been acclaimed both on the continent and in other parts of the world.

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Boston Pops orchestra, which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, will serve to bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the "Piano Concerto in F" by Gershwin.

Jesus Maria Sanroma was born in Fajardo, Puerto Rico in 1903. His name is a common one in Latin countries where the first-born is often called Jesus. In ordinary conversation, however, Sanroma answers to the nickname "Chu-Chu." As a child Sanroma's outstanding gfits were recognized and encouraged by the Puerto Rican government which sent him to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston at the age of 13. At 16 he was graduated with honors, winning the Mason and Hamlin prize of a grand piano. Later he studied with Antoinette Szumowska, one of Paderewski's few pupils, in Boston, and with Artur Schnabel in Berlin.

In the course of his career he has played more than 2000 concerts in every part of the globe and with every major orchestra and conductor. For years he was official pianist of the Boston Symphony orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra—among them Honegger's "Concertino", Stravinsky's "Capriccio", Piston's "Capriccio", Ravel's "G Major Concerto", and the "Hindemith Concerto' which was written especially for him.

In 1953 and 1954 Mr. Sanroma was the featured soloist with the Gershwin Concert orchestra during its transcontinental tours. He has recorded seven major concerti, the Gershwin Concerto among them, with the Boston Symphony orchestra, and the Boston Pops. During the season just concluded, he performed one of his great specialties, the Stravinsky "Capriccio," with the Symphony of the Air in New York and with the Boston Symphony orchestra both at home and on tour. He now serves as musical adviser to the chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico.

In additon to Mr. Sanroma's performance of the Gershwin Concerto, the Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini, orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler, popular maestro of the Boston Pops for the past 27 years.

Record
WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,163

AUG 2 1956

Music Festival Nearly Finished

LENOX (Special) — An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5 which brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p.m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart, and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064
AUG 2 1956

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD—July 2 and 28
by A. C. S.

Drama was in the air at Tanglewood Friday evening. Dramatic readings of three dissimilar but equally dramatic scores were given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The opener was Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, held in taut rein throughout. From the bombasts of silence to the quiet, hymn-like intonation of Florestan's air, all was admirably controlled and effectively presented. A brilliant performance of the ever-popular Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 closed the program.

Goffredo Petrassi, a guest instructor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, was represented by his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed last December. The concerto lacks any specific concertino but rather asks of each orchestral section the technical brilliance of a soloist. The material of the score is often derivative in character, leaning rather heavily toward Berg and Stravinsky. Nevertheless, Mr. Petrassi's own personality is not found wanting in the work.

An Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, by Howard Hanson, began the Saturday evening concert. A work of broad appeal, it should find a welcome place on symphonic programs.

Rudolf Serkin appeared as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. In paying homage to the composer on the 100th anniversary of his death, Mr. Serkin and Charles Munch formed a sympathetic partnership resulting in a handsome performance. The pianist was persuasive throughout, each note tellingly played while ever remaining subservient to the broader lines of the music.

The second half of the program was devoted to music of the French school with Mr. Munch giving his usual excellent reading of Debussy's La Mer at the close. The Fifth Symphony of the late Arthur Honegger, a personal work of disturbing intensity, preceded it. Large in scope, it is almost diary-like in its betraya of the intimate mind of the composer, especially in the second movement with its brooding "blues" section opposing a more transparent allegretto. Introduced by Mr. Munch in 1951, it was given a powerful rendition in this instance.

TANGLEWOOD—July 39, 1956
by F. A.

Richard Burgin was on the podium for the Sunday concert at Tanglewood directing 19th and 20th century compositions. In the 2nd suite of Romeo and Juliet by Prokofieff, which opened the program, Mr. Burgin was responsive to the variety of moods inherent in the work.

Ruth Posselt appeared as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Although she displayed fine technical abilities, there seemed to be a lack of unity in the ensemble of soloist and orchestra. Not until the final movement did she seem to be fully conversant with the idiom.

The highlight of the afternoon came in Mahler's Symphony No. 1. This is music for which Mr. Burgin seems to have a special affinity. The second and fourth movements received particularly sympathetic attention. A large audience expressed its approval of this moving interpretation.

Connecticut Western News
NORTH CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,565
AUG 2 1956

ENCHANTING WEEKEND TO BE HELD AT TANGLEWOOD

An "enchanting weekend" is waiting all who visit the Berkshire Music festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4, and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine seperate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Chronicle
STOUGHTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,527
AUG 2 1956

Places To Go This Week End

LENOX, MASS—An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m. perfromance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofielff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood Music Fete To End Season

Local vacationers have their last chance the weekend of August 10 to 12, to enjoy the enchantment of the Berkshire Music Festival at romantic Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 10th weekend performance will bring to a close the 14th successful season of the famous Berkshire Music Festival now known throughout the world.

The enchanting combination of fine music and breathless rolling vistas of the Berkshire Hills has caused the Festival to be described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Make it a point to enjoy one or all three of the final programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, at 8:30 p.m., the Boston Symphony will present a program of Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Saturday, at 8:30 p.m., compositions by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Strauss will be featured. Sunday's program begins at 2:30 p.m. and will feature selections by Wagner.

Beautiful Tangewood is located in Lenox on Route 7, in the heart of the Berkshire Hills. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, all connect with Route 7.

[214]

Millbrook Round Table - Aug. 2, 1956

Berkshire Festival's Final Week to Feature "Tanglewood on Parade"

Four concerts next week — a recital on Wednesday (August 8) in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed — will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Arthur Fiedler

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Chorus No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

This week-end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Copland's Symphonic Ode, Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

AUG 2 1956

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD—July 2 and 28
by A. C. S.

Drama was in the air at Tanglewood Friday evening. Dramatic readings of three dissimilar but equally dramatic scores were given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The opener was Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 2, held in taut rein throughout. From the bombasts of silence to the quiet, hymn-like intonation of Florestan's air, all was admirably controlled and effectively presented. A brilliant performance of the ever-popular Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 closed the program.

Goffredo Petrassi, a guest instructor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, was represented by his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed last December. The concerto lacks any specific concertino but rather asks of each orchestral section the technical brilliance of a soloist. The material of the score is often derivative in character, leaning rather heavily toward Berg and Stravinsky. Nevertheless, Mr. Petrassi's own personality is not found wanting in the work.

An Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, by Howard Hanson, began the Saturday evening concert. A work of broad appeal, it should find a welcome place on symphonic programs.

Rudolf Serkin appeared as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. In paying homage to the composer on the 100th anniversary of his death, Mr. Serkin and Charles Munch formed a sympathetic partnership resulting in a handsome performance. The pianist was persuasive throughout, each note tellingly played while ever remaining subservient to the broader lines of the music.

The second half of the program was devoted to music of the French school with Mr. Munch giving his usual excellent reading of Debussy's La Mer at the close. The Fifth Symphony of the late Arthur Honegger, a personal work of disturbing intensity, preceded it. Large in scope, it is almost diary-like in its betraya of the intimate mind of the composer, especially in the second movement with its brooding "blues" section opposing a more transparent allegretto. Introduced by Mr. Munch in 1951, it was given a powerful rendition in this instance.

TANGLEWOOD—July 39, 1956
by F. A.

Richard Burgin was on the podium for the Sunday concert at Tanglewood directing 19th and 20th century compositions. In the 2nd suite of Romeo and Juliet by Prokofieff, which opened the program, Mr. Burgin was responsive to the variety of moods inherent in the work.

Ruth Posselt appeared as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Although she displayed fine technical abilities, there seemed to be a lack of unity in the ensemble of soloist and orchestra. Not until the final movement did she seem to be fully conversant with the idiom.

The highlight of the afternoon came in Mahler's Symphony No. 1. This is music for which Mr. Burgin seems to have a special affinity. The second and fourth movements received particularly sympathetic attention. A large audience expressed its approval of this moving interpretation.

Connecticut Western News
NORTH CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,565
AUG 2 1956

ENCHANTING WEEKEND TO BE HELD AT TANGLEWOOD

An "enchanting weekend" is waiting all who visit the Berkshire Music festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4, and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine seperate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Chronicle
STOUGHTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,527
AUG 2 1956

Places To Go This Week End

LENOX, MASS—An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m. perfromance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofielff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood Music Fete To End Season

Local vacationers have their last chance the weekend of August 10 to 12, to enjoy the enchantment of the Berkshire Music Festival at romantic Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 10th weekend performance will bring to a close the 14th successful season of the famous Berkshire Music Festival now known throughout the world.

The enchanting combination of fine music and breathless rolling vistas of the Berkshire Hills has caused the Festival to be described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time".

Make it a point to enjoy one or all three of the final programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, at 8:30 p.m., the Boston Symphony will present a program of Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Saturday, at 8:30 p.m., compositions by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Strauss will be featured. Sunday's program begins at 2:30 p.m. and will feature selections by Wagner.

Beautiful Tangewood is located in Lenox on Route 7, in the heart of the Berkshire Hills. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, all connect with Route 7.

Millbrook Round Table - Aug. 2, 1956

Berkshire Festival's Final Week to Feature "Tanglewood on Parade"

Four concerts next week — a recital on Wednesday (August 8) in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed — will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Arthur Fiedler

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Chorus No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

This week-end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Copland's Symphonic Ode, Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Immediately thereafter, she traveled out to the University of Michigan Drama Festival to appear with Miss Anderson in "Black Chiffon," repeating the role she originated in the Stockbridge presentation of that play during the summer of 1952. In the past six weeks TV viewers have seen her on Star Tonight, Robert Montgomery Presents and Studio One.

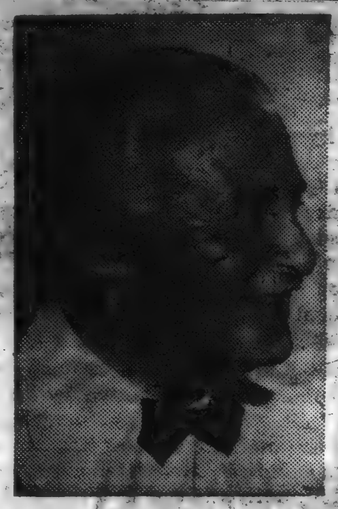
In "The Good Fairy," Molnar's delightfully charming satire on human nature, Miss Owens will be seen as Lu, an attractive young girl whose enthusiasm for doing little favors for people gets her entangled in all sorts of fantastic situations.

Maurice Wells, John Straub, Don Doherty, Bruce Hall, Patricia Lamson, and Jerry Vermilye will also be seen in the comedy which has been directed by William Miles. The settings are by Gary Smith and the lighting by Tom Pincu.

There will be performances nightly through Saturday at 8:45 p.m. with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

LAST TWO WEEKS AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Copland's Symphonic Ode, Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.



ARTHUR FIEDLER . . . conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra who will return to Tanglewood for his third consecutive year with the Pops at Tanglewood on Parade on August 9 at 8:15 p. He will direct works by Gershwin, Rossini-Respighi and Ravel.

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsom will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard S[illegible] on Saturday e[illegible]

Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Spmphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease and Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersniger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fieldler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

Chronicle
READING, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,385
AUG 2 1956

—Mrs. Donald Douglass, of 432 South st., has just returned from several days visit with relatives in Lenox. While there, she attended the opening concert in the Tanglewood summer series.

AMUSEMENTS CALENDAR

July 30 - Aug. 4—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, The Happy Time 8:45 p. m., Sat. Mat., 2:30 p. m. Next week, The Good Fairy.
July 31 - Aug. 4—Sharon Playhouse, Harvey, 8:40 p. m. Wed. Mat. 2:30 p. m. Next week, The Importance of Being Earnest.
Aug. 1—Norfolk Music School, 3:30 p.m. Ensemble Program.
Aug. 1—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, 4 p.m. Scoville Library
Aug. 1—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Rudolf Serkin and woodwind quartet playing Schumann and Mozart.
Aug. 2 - Aug. 4—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, San Francisco Ballet. Thursday, 4 p. m. Friday and Saturday, 4 p. m. and 9 p. m.
Aug. 3 - Aug. 5—Tanglewood Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p. m., Eleazar de Carvalho conducting Hindemith, Ravel, Stravinsky. Joey de Oliveira, soloist.
Saturday, 8:30 p. m., Leonard Berstein conducting concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Moevs, Mozart, Prokofieff.
Sunday, 2:30 p. m., Charles Munch conducting Copland, Tchaikovsky, Schumann. Zino Francescati, soloist.
Aug. 5—Music Mountain, 4 p. m. Berkshire Quartet. Virginia M. Robinson, harpist
Aug 7 - 9—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, San Fraicisco Ballet. Tuesday and Wednesday, 9 p. m. Thursday, 4 p. m.
Aug. 8—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, Scoville Library, 4 p. m.
Aug. 8—Tanglewood, Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p. m. Zino Francescatti and Arthur Balsam, soloists.

Chronicle
READING, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,385
AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood Festival Has Weekend Program

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of Aug. 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Aug. 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m. with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p.m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2 - 9 - 20, connect with Route 7.

Bulletin
EASTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,542
AUG 2 1956

Places To Go This Week End

CAPE ANN, MASS.—Remember the fun you had at the old village fairs—you can recapture those dreams by visiting the Lanesville Barnacle Bazaar on Saturday, August 4.

The old village fair, featuring auctions, children's parade, music and other colorful attractions, is only part of the fun planned for Cape Ann on that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

On Friday and Saturday, shutterbugs will find a wealth of subject material at the Eastern Point Yacht Club which has been chosen as a finishing point for a New York to Gloucester race.

Saturday evening at 8:00 visitors can take advantage of the Festival of the Arts featuring Costume Folk Dances and Music by the Cape Ann Ethnic Groups. This gala event will take place at Gloucester High School.

Stay for the entire weekend, or better still the whole week. You will find plenty to see, do, and enjoy on the Bay State's North Shore. Cape Ann, one of Massachusetts' nine separate vacationlands, abounds with facilities for swimming, fishing, boating, picnicking and numerous outdoor and indoor activities.

Picturesque Cape Ann is easily reached. From Boston, Routes 1 and 1A connect with 128, which terminates on Cape Ann.

CAPE COD,MASS.—Art, Summer Theatre, and healthy outdoor fun are yours for the asking simply by visiting the Cape on the coming August 3rd weekend.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, two top water events will take place on that weekend when the Falmouth Yacht Club holds its annual Regatta on Friday and Saturday. August 4th is also the day for the Marcus Hall Cup Regatta at Harwichport, and Sunday will find the Barnstable Yacht Club host to the New England Beetlecat Women's Championship Yacht Racing event.

On August 4th, the Cape Playhouse at Dennis will present the exciting story of "Anastasia" with Dolores Del Rio. You have your choice of four other separate Summer Theatres each week at the Cape.

Art lovers visiting the Cape that weekend also have a treat in store for them when the Provincetown Art Association opens its second show of the season.

Plan a week or weekend on enchanting Cape Cod and enjoy the wonderful facilities for boating, swimming, fishing and pleasant relaxation.

From Boston Routes 3 and picturesque Route 58, lead to Route, 6 main route to the Cape.

LENOX, MASS—An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m. with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m. perfromance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofielff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 2 1956

Sanroma Returns To Tanglewood

Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra climaxing this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the Tanglewood Music Shed, will bring back to Tanglewood piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942.

With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

* * *

FOR YEARS Sanroma was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra including the Hindemith Concerto written especially for him. He now serves as musical adviser to the chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico.

The Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert also will feature a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

* * *

DURING THE afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center — student symphony and chamber music, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group. All are open to ticket holders, and for purchasers of box seats a dividend will be a performance of a short opera in the Tanglewood formal gardens at 4 p. m.

[215]

Immediately thereafter, she traveled out to the University of Michigan Drama Festival to appear with Miss Anderson in "Black Chiffon," repeating the role she originated in the Stockbridge presentation of that play during the summer of 1952. In the past six weeks, TV viewers have seen her on Star Tonight, Robert Montgomery Presents and Studio One.

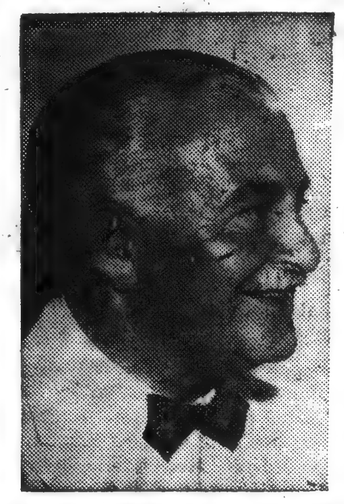
In "The Good Fairy," Molnar's delightfully charming satire on human nature, Miss Owens will be seen as Lu, an attractive young girl whose enthusiasm for doing little favors for people gets her entangled in all sorts of fantastic situations.

Maurice Wells, John Straub, Don Doherty, Bruce Hall, Patricia Lamson, and Jerry Vermilye will also be seen in the comedy which has been directed by William Miles. The settings are by Gary Smith and the lighting by Tom Pincu.

There will be performances nightly through Saturday at 8:45 p.m. with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

LAST TWO WEEKS AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Copland's



ARTHUR FIEDLER . . . conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra who wil return to Tanglewood for his third consecutive year with the Pops at Tanglewood on Parade on August 9 at 8:15 p.. He will direct works by Gershwin, Rossini-Respighi and Ravel.

Symphonic Ode, Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theatre - Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsom will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard S[illegible] on Saturday e[illegible]

Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Spmphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease and Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersniger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky - Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fieldler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

Chronicle
READING, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,885
AUG 2 1956

—Mrs. Donald Douglass, of 432 South st., has just returned from several days visit with relatives in Lenox. While there, she attended the opening concert in the Tanglewood summer series

AMUSEMENTS CALENDAR

July 30 - Aug. 4—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, The Happy Time 8:45 p. m., Sat. Mat., 2:30 p. m. Next week, The Good Fairy.
July 31 - Aug. 4—Sharon Playhouse, Harvey, 8:40 p. m. Wed. Mat. 2:30 p. m. Next week, The Importance of Being Earnest.
Aug. 1—Norfolk Music School, 3:30 p.m. Ensemble Program.
Aug. 1—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, 4 p.m. Scoville Library
Aug. 1—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Rudolf Serkin and woodwind quartet playing Schumann and Mozart.
Aug. 2 - Aug. 4—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, San Francisco Ballet. Thursday, 4 p. m. Friday and Saturday, 4 p. m. and 9 p. m.
Aug. 3 - Aug. 5—Tanglewood Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p. m., Eleazar de Carvalho conducting Hindemith, Ravel, Stravinsky Jocy de Oliveira, soloist.
Saturday, 8:30 p. m., Leonard Berstein conducting concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Moevs, Mozart, Prokofieff.
Sunday, 2:30 p. m., Charles Munch conducting Copland, Tchaikovsky, Schumann. Zino Francescatti, soloist.
Aug. 5—Music Mountain, 4 p. m. Berkshire Quartet. Virginia M. Robinson, harpist
Aug 7 - 9—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, San Fraicisco Ballet. Tuesday and Wednesday, 9 p. m. Thursday, 4 p. m.
Aug. 8—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, Scoville Library 4 p. m.
Aug. 8—Tanglewood, Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p. m. Zino Francescatti and Arthur Balsam, soloists.

Chronicle
READING, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,385
AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood Festival Has Weekend Program

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of Aug. 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Aug. 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p.m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2 - 9 - 20, connect with Route 7.

Bulletin
EASTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,542
AUG 2 1956

Places To Go This Week End

CAPE ANN, MASS.—Remember the fun you had at the old village fairs—you can recapture those dreams by visiting the Lanesville Barnacle Bazaar on Saturday, August 4.

The old village fair, featuring auctions, children's parade, music and other colorful attractions, is only part of the fun planned for Cape Ann on that weekend, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

On Friday and Saturday, shutterbugs will find a wealth of subject material at the Eastern Point Yacht Club which has been chosen as a finishing point for a New York to Gloucester race.

Saturday evening at 8:00 visitors can take advantage of the Festival of the Arts featuring Costume Folk Dances and Music by the Cape Ann Ethnic Groups. This gala event will take place at Gloucester High School.

Stay for the entire weekend, or better still the whole week. You will find plenty to see, do, and enjoy on the Bay State's North Shore. Cape Ann, one of Massachusetts' nine separate vacationlands, abounds with facilities for swimming, fishing, boating, picnicking and numerous outdoor and indoor activities.

Picturesque Cape Ann is easily reached. From Boston, Routes 1 and 1A connect with 128, which terminates on Cape Ann.

CAPE COD,MASS.—Art, Summer Theatre, and healthy outdoor fun are yours for the asking simply by visiting the Cape on the coming August 3rd weekend.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, two top water events will take place on that weekend when the Falmouth Yacht Club holds its annual Regatta on Friday and Saturday. August 4th is also the day for the Marcus Hall Cup Regatta at Harwichport, and Sunday will find the Barnstable Yacht Club host to the New England Beetlecat Women's Championship Yacht Racing event.

On August 4th, the Cape Playhouse at Dennis will present the exciting story of "Anastasia" with Dolores Del Rio. You have your choice of four other separate Summer Theatres each week at the Cape.

Art lovers visiting the Cape that weekend also have a treat in store for them when the Provincetown Art Association opens its second show of the season.

Plan a week or weekend on enchanting Cape Cod and enjoy the wonderful facilities for boating, swimming, fishing and pleasant relaxation.

From Boston Routes 3 and picturesque Route 58, lead to Route, 6 main route to the Cape.

LENOX, MASS—An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit the Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood, the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3rd weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p.m., with the Boston Symphony presenting, Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka". Saturday's 8:30 p.m. perfromance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofielff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p.m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Make your stay a complete one by spending a whole week relaxing in the scenic Berkshire Hills, one of the Bay State's nine separate and distinct vacation wonderlands.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located in the heart of the Berkshires on Route 7. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, connect with Route 7.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 2 1956

Sanroma Returns To Tanglewood

Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra climaxing this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the Tanglewood Music Shed, will bring back to Tanglewood piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since August, 1942.

With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

* * *

FOR YEARS Sanroma was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra including the Hindemith Concerto written especially for him. He now serves as musical adviser to the chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico.

The Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert also will feature a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

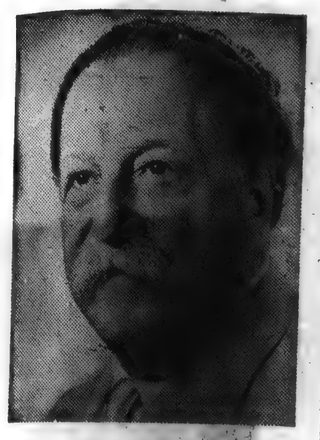
Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

* * *

DURING THE afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center — student symphony and chamber music, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division of Tanglewood Study Group. All are open to ticket holders, and for purchasers of box seats a dividend will be a performance of a short opera in the Tanglewood formal gardens at 4 p. m.

[215]

Journal
AMHERST, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,574
AUG 2-1956



Pierre Monteux, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1913-1924, is returning to the orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood for the fifth consecutive summer. On Saturday, August 11 at 8:30 p.m., Mr. Monteux will lead a program of works by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss.

SOLOIST AND CONDUCTOR. Leonard Bernstein, right, distinguished American conductor, who had first experience on the podium in "Tanglewood" will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Saturday night, Aug. 4, at a concert in the Music Shed in memory of Koussevitzky. The program will include Mozart's Mass in C Minor excerpts with Soprano Phyllis Curtin, left, among soloists.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

Music under the moon, Friday and Saturday evenings, and in the sun on Sunday afternoons by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, during the annual six-week Berkshire Festival which extends until August 12 in 1956—attracts thousands of music lovers. 108,336 persons attended 12 Shed concerts during the 1955 Festival, an average of 9,028 persons (capacity 6,000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns. Concerts of chamber music are also given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday evenings by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

AUG 2 1956

-:- THREE CONDUCTORS AT TANGLEWOOD -:-

Shown are three celebrated conductors who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its remaining concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. Left to right, they are: Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra; Pierre Monteux, guest conductor on Saturday, August 11; and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor for the Koussevitzky memorial concert on Saturday, August 4.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443
AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood Parade Is Set for Aug. 9

Eleazar de Carvalho Shares Conducting Honors

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Will Be Heard After Intermission.—Jesus Maria Sanroma to Play Gershwin Piano Concerto.—Weekend Program Announced.

Program details have been announced for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox on Thursday evening, August 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected—and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4:00 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively.

At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p.m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Tanglewood Turn to fourth page

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 2 1956

CONDUCTOR Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony takes an intermission during rehearsals with the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center. He will lead the students tonight in Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique." Works by Prokofieff and Petrassi also are on tonight's Music Shed program. Petrovec

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670
AUG 2-1956

Berkshire Music Festival Weekend At Tanglewood

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit at Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3 weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p. m. with the Boston Symphony presenting Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p. m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p. m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435
AUG 3 1956

Marlboro Women Attend Ceremoy At Shadowbrook

Marlboro—A group of local women were among those attending the ground breaking ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon of St. Stanislaus Novitiate to replace the one destroyed by fire at Shadowbrook in Lenox.

They were: Mrs. Ernest Bourgois, Mrs. Mary McDonald, Mrs. Jennie Charon and Mrs. Frank Beaudin.

The ceremonies were held at Tanglewood, the facilities having been provided the Jesuits of New England through the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival.

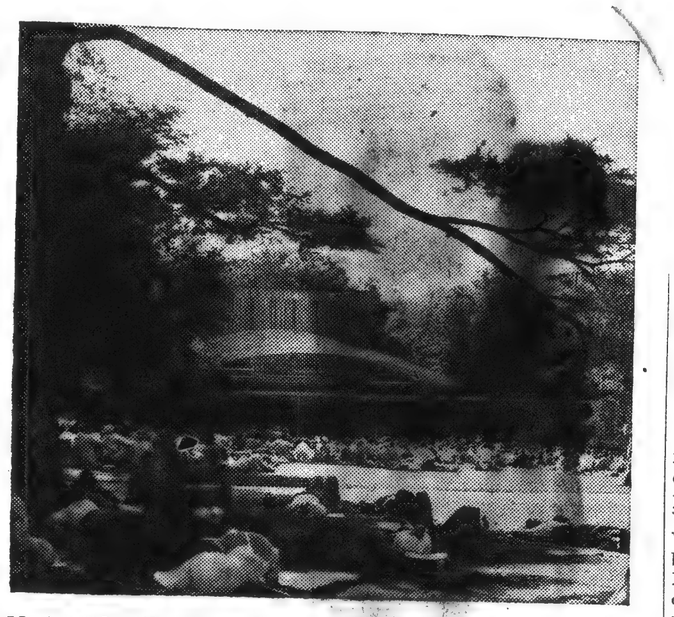
The principal address was given by the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, DD, Archbishop of Boston and the opening prayer and ground breaking was by Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, DD, Bishop of Springfield.

[216]

Journal
AMHERST, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,574
AUG 2-1956

Pierre Monteux, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919-1924, is returning to the orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood for the fifth consecutive summer. On Saturday, August 11 at 8:30 p.m., Mr. Monteux will lead a program of works by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss.

SOLOIST AND CONDUCTOR. Leonard Bernstein, right, distinguished American conductor, who had first experience on the podium in "Tanglewood" will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Saturday night, Aug. 4, at a concert in the Music Shed in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program will include Mozart's Mass in C Minor excerpts with Soprano Phyllis Curtin, left, among soloists.

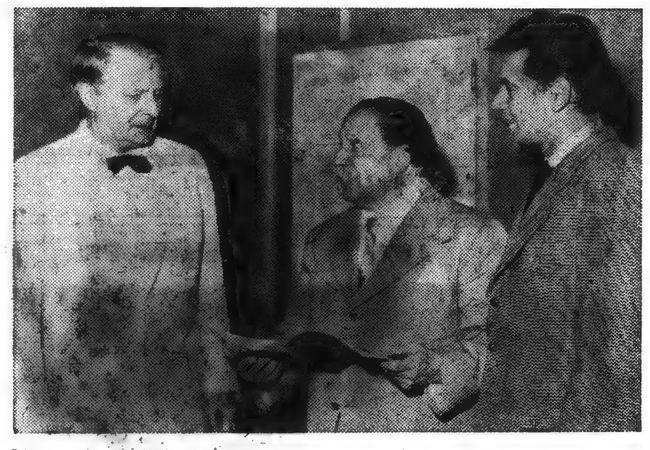


Music under the moon, Friday and Saturday evenings, and in the sun on Sunday afternoons by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, during the annual six-week Berkshire Festival which extends until August 12 in 1956—attracts thousands of music lovers. 108,336 persons attended 12 Shed concerts during the 1955 Festival, an average of 9,028 persons (capacity 6,000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns. Concerts of chamber music are also given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday evenings by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

AUG 9 1956

-:- THREE CONDUCTORS AT TANGLEWOOD -:-



Shown are three celebrated conductors who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its remaining concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. Left to right they are: Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra; Pierre Monteaux, guest conductor on Saturday, August 11; and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor for the Koussevitzky memorial concert on Saturday, August 4.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 2 1956

Sanroma Return To Tanglewood

Special to the Hartford Ti

Lenox, Mass.—The gala ert by the Boston Symph Orchestra and the Boston Orchestra climaxing this son's "Tanglewood on Par festivities on Thursday even Aug. 9, in the Tanglewood M Shed, will bring back to T glewood piano virtuoso, J Maria Sanroma, who will at the Berkshire Festival the first time since Aug 194

With Arthur Fiedler condu ing the Boston Pops Orches Sanroma will introduce the Berkshire Festival repert the Piano Concerto in F Gershwin.

* * *

FOR YEARS Sanroma official pianist of the Bo Symphony Orchestra and Serge Koussevitzky conduc he played the American mieres of many outstan contemporary works for p and orchestra including Hindemith Concerto wri especially for him. He serves as musical adviser to chancellor of the Universit Puerto Rico.

The Boston Pops portio the "Tanglewood on Par concert also will feature a S from the ballet "La Bou Fantasque," music by Ro orchestrated by Respighi, Ravel's "Bolero," all condu by Arthur Fiedler.

Eleazar de Carvalho will duct the Boston Symphony chestra in Rimsky-Korsak "Russian Easter Overture" Villa-Lobos' Choros No. called "Rasga o Coracao," the Festival Chorus of Berk Music Center students tr by Hugh Ross.

* * *

DURING THE afternoo multaneous demonstration be given of the work of a departments of the Berk Music Center — student phony and chamber chorus, original compos opera and the amateur di of Tanglewood Study G All are open to ticket ho and for purchasers of box a dividend will be a per ance of a short opera i Tanglewood formal garde 4 p. m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 2 1956

Petrovec

CONDUCTOR Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony takes an intermission during rehearsals with the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center. He will lead the students tonight in Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique." Works by Prokofieff and Petrassi also are on tonight's Music Shed program.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670
AUG 2-1956

Berkshire Music Festival Weekend At Tanglewood

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit at Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3 weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p. m. with the Boston Symphony presenting Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p. m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p. m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435
AUG 3 1956

Marlboro Women Attend Ceremoy At Shadowbrook

Marlboro—A group of local women were among those attending the ground breaking ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon of St. Stanislaus Novitiate to replace the one destroyed by fire at Shadowbrook in Lenox.

They were: Mrs. Ernest Bourgois, Mrs. Mary McDonald, Mrs. Jennie Charon and Mrs. Frank Beaudin.

The ceremonies were held at Tanglewood, the facilities having been provided the Jesuits of New England through the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival.

The principal address was given by the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, DD, Archbishop of Boston and the opening prayer and ground breaking was by Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, DD, Bishop of Springfield.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443
AUG 2 1956

Tanglewood Parade Is Set for Aug. 9

Eleazar de Carvalho Shares Conducting Honors

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Will Be Heard After Intermission.—Jesus Maria Sanroma to Play Gershwin Piano Concerto.—Week-end Program Announced.

Program details have been announced for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox on Thursday evening, August 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected—and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4:00 p. m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively.

At 5:45 p. m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the great Music Shed, and at 6:00 p. m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and

Tanglewood Turn to fourth page

[216]

Journal
AMHERST, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,574
AUG 2 - 1956

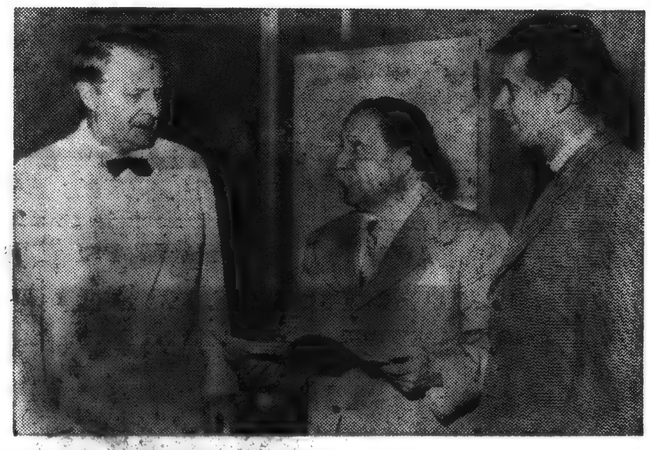
Pierre Monteux, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919-1924, is returning to the orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood for the fifth consecutive summer. On Saturday, August 11 at 8:30 p.m., Mr. Monteux will lead a program of works by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss.

SOLOIST AND CONDUCTOR. Leonard Bernstein, right, distingnished American conductor, who had first experience on the podium in "Tanglewood" will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Saturday night, Aug. 4, at a concert in the Music Shed in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. The program will include Mozart's Mass in C Minor excerpts with Soprano Phyllis Curtin, left, among soloists.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

AUG 9 1956

-:- THREE CONDUCTORS AT TANGLEWOOD -:-



Shown are three celebrated conductors who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its remaining concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox. Left to right they are: Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra; Pierre Monteaux, guest conductor on Saturday, August 11; and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor for the Koussevitzky memorial concert on Saturday, August 4.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 2 1956

Sanroma Returns To Tanglewood

Special to the Hartford Ti

Lenox, Mass.—The gala c cert by the Boston Symph
Orchestra and the Boston P
Orchestra climaxing this son's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday even
Aug. 9, in the Tanglewood M
Shed, will bring back to T
glewood piano virtuoso, J
Maria Sanroma, who will at the Berkshire Festival
the first time since Aug 1948.

With Arthur Fiedler condu
ing the Boston Pops Orches Sanroma will introduce the Berkshire Festival repert the Piano Concerto in F
Gershwin.

* * *

FOR YEARS Sanroma official pianist of the Bo
Symphony Orchestra and Serge Koussevitzky conduc
he played the American mieres of many outstan contemporary works for p and orchestra including Hindemith Concerto wri especially for him. He serves as musical adviser to Chancellor of the Universit
Puerto Rico.

The Boston Pops portio
the "Tanglewood on Par concert also will feature a from the ballet "La Bou Fantasque," music by Ro
orchestrated by Respighi,
Ravel's "Bolero," all condu
by Arthur Fiedler.

Eleazar de Carvalho will duct the Boston Symphony
chestra in Rimsky-Korsa
"Russian Easter Overture"
Villa-Lobos' Choros No.
called "Rasga o Coracao," the Festival Chorus of Berk
Music Center students tr
by Hugh Ross.

* * *

DURING THE afternoo multaneous demonstration be given of the work of al departments of the Berk
Music Center — student phony and chamber chorus, original composi opera and the amateur di of Tanglewood Study C
All are open to ticket ho and for purchasers of box
A dividend will be a per ance of a short opera i
Tanglewood formal garde
4 p. m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 2 1956

Petrovec

CONDUCTOR Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony takes an intermission during rehearsals with the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center. He will lead the students tonight in Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique." Works by Prokofieff and Petrassi also are on tonight's Music Shed program.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670
AUG 2 - 1956

Berkshire Music Festival Weekend At Tanglewood

An "enchanting weekend" is awaiting all who visit at Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood the weekend of August 3, 4 and 5.

Each year, music lovers by the thousands gather at the exotic natural wonderland of Tanglewood in the rolling Berkshires to enjoy music at its best presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 3 weekend brings to a close the second last week of the Festival, described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Friday's performance begins at 8:30 p. m. with the Boston Symphony presenting Barraud's "La Kermesse"; de Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat"; Ravel's Piano Concerto and Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." Saturday's 8:30 p. m. performance will include works of Moevs, Mozart and Prokofieff. Sunday, the program begins at 2:30 p. m. with music by Copeland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435
AUG 3 1956

Marlboro Women Attend Ceremoy At Shadowbrook

Marlboro—A group of local women were among those attending the ground breaking ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon of St. Stanislaus Novitiate to replace the one destroyed by fire at Shadowbrook in Lenox.

They were: Mrs. Ernest Bourgois, Mrs. Mary McDonald, Mrs. Jennie Charon and Mrs. Frank Beaudin.

The ceremonies were held at Tanglewood, the facilities having been provided the Jesuits of New England through the courtesies of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival.

The principal address was given by the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, DD, Archbishop of Boston and the opening prayer and ground breaking was by Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, DD, Bishop of Springfield.

H. S. Andrews'
Insurance Agency
321 Main Street Phone 35
Great Barrington

LOOK AROUND

Don't let your insurance problems care for themselves . . . perhaps lose your home, business, car or other property.

Call on us. Let us give your insurance affairs expert attention . . . and provide you with dependable protection!

Music under th
the sun on Sun
chestra in the hu six-week Berkshir
1956—attracts tho
ed 12 Shed concer
9,028 persons (capa spacious lawns. Con intimate Theatre-Cou chamber orchestra of t

, and in ony Ornual in attend-of 12 ever Poor does get a laugh out of it.
then we have Uncle Sap. But the against us and perhaps destroy us years, the build up further destined to turn it with more millions of ave cooperation
—do
we still have air for possible Yugo-
Therein now had we been
The picture might have been very ance has paid off, and we hold an ne of his arrogance. That e communist gang, and has lost
Tito is now a full-fledged and the United States.
lavia) might well be channel through ady taken—he admits that economic o sweeten the heavy ing for OTHER lands (such as Yugo-

(Continued from first page)

Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments.

At 7:00 p. m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p. m., and at its conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p. m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will see Mr. deCarvalho conducting the Boston Symphony in a program of works by Barraud, Falla, Ravel, Stravinsky, with his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, as soloist in the Ravel Piano Concerto on Friday evening. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in a memorial to its former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening. The program consists of Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5 which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States; and Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor. Charles Munch takes the concert Sunday afternoon with works scheduled by Aaron Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann, with Zino Francescatti soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

[216]

Petrovec

REVIEWING the score of the opera, "Griffelkin," to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera students at Tanglewood Monday and Tuesday evenings, are Boris Goldovsky, left, who will stage the production, and Lukas Foss, the composer, who will conduct at both performances.

Music

Munch Conducts Students

TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch made his annual appearance with the Tanglewood student orchestra in the Shed last night. He chose his own personal warhorse, Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Dr. Munch led the willing students a splendid chase. They produced almost all the color and contrast he can draw from this work. From the opening expansive reveries to the concluding truly fantastic Witches Sabbath, the orchestra played with a vigor and warmth that matched Dr. Munch's own.

The audience of 2,500 loved it. They recalled Dr. Munch six times an dtalked so excitedly between the third and fourth movements he was forced to turn and stare them into silence before continuing.

* * *

BEFORE intermission, and the Berlioz, Hugh Ross directed 35 men's voices, five basses, three pianos, brass and percussion in Coro Di Morti (Chorus of Death) by Tanglewood's composition teacher, Goffredo Petrassi of Rome. The performance was a Tanglewood first.

The work is one of tensions. Monteverdi-style voice lines and modern-type orchestration are heard in moods alternately strident and lyrical. The chorus sings as the dead reflecting upon life, and death. The result is a solid and effective piece of music.

Mr. Ross, whose preparation of the group and command of the score was apparent, called the composer to the stage to share the audience's warm appreciation.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opened with a reading of Prokofieff's classical symphony by student conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn. Lack of rehearsal time and numb fingers were probably responsible in part for the fuzzy beginning. Otherwise, Mr. Schermerhorn's energetic and scoreless finger-pointing did not fully bring out the orchestra's talent for phrase-making and variety of tone and dynamics.

The final student orchestra concert will be Saturday, Aug. 11.

—S.S.R.

BSO Timpanist, Retiring, Spends Summers Here

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will retire at the end of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra, lives in Pittsfield during the Festival season. Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife at 28 Clinton Ave. in this city during the summer. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. His two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras, now operate a gasoline service station in Long Island.

Mr. Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland. He commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony, succeeding the timpanist Ritter. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Five Men in Section

Mr. Firth, his successor, was born in Winchster and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Mr. Szulc, and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

The Boston Symphony's timpani and percussion section, now headed by Mr. Firth, comprises five men. Harold Farberman is the other timpanist. Charles Smith and Harold Thompson in the percussion trio have been joined this season by Arthur Charles Press, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, and a student of Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman. Mr. Press has played with Thomas Sherman's Little Orchestra Society and was solo percussionist with the Radio City Music Hall orchestra.

In Saturday's Eagle

Music Everywhere

Music festivals in the Catskills and the Berkshires were subjects last week for photographer Bill (Eagle Eye) Tague. His two pages of pictures show a performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the new Ellenville (N.Y.) Festival and daydreaming listeners on the Tanglewood lawns.

BERKSHIRE WEEK

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 3 1956

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 3 1956

De Carvalho Is To Conduct at Lenox Today

Lenox, Aug. 2—Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Friday night's Berkshire Festival concert in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, at 8:30.

Mr. De Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer after a five-year absence as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. de Carvalho has scheduled a suite from the ballet "La Kermesse" by Henri Barraud in its first Tanglewood performance, and also three dances from the ballet "The Three-Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla and the complete score for Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." In addition, the young Brazilian pianist, Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. Eleazar de Carvalho) will make her North American debut as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G Major by Ravel.

A bonus for Festival visitors Saturday morning will be the third of this season's four Saturday morning open rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for which a nominal admission charge of $1 is made with the proceeds benefitting the Pension Fund of the Orchestra.

BSO Violinist To Play Sunday at Church-on-the-Hill

LENOX—A violin sonata by Andrea Zani, believed to have been unplayed since 1700 and never played in this country, will be one of two musical selections to be played Sunday at the Church-on-the-Hill by Boston Symphony Violinist Jesse Ceci.

The other piece will be Vivaldi's Sonata for Violin and Piano, Opus 2, No. 3. Though both works are scored for violin and piano, Mr. Ceci will be accompanied on the church organ by Mrs. Harriet P. Levinson.

Mr. Ceci is a graduate of both the Curtis Institute of Philadelphia and Juilliard School of New York. He has also studied at the Paris Conservatory under a Fulbright grant.

After the BSO tour of Russia, Mr. Ceci is scheduled to give a recital in Paris.

Church-on-the-Hill services Sunday will be at 11 a.m. The Rev. Dr. Henry Trust, pastor, will speak on "Is the Sacrificial Life Desirable?"

Vandals Damage

Social Briefs

Phyllis Curtin, who will appear as a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow evening at Tanglewood, and her husband, Gene Cook, entertainment editor of Collier's magazine, are weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Morgan in Stockbridge.

Bernstein Profile

Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night, has as his guest at Elm Court in Lenox, Robert Rice, son of the playwright, Elmer Rice, who is writing a profile on Bernstein for the New Yorker magazine.

, Aug. 3, 1956

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.
8:40—"Up From Everest." Williamstown Summer Theater.
8:45—"Tea and Sympathy." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
8:45—"The Happy Time." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
9:00—San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Benefit orchestra pension fund. Music Shed, Tanglewood.
1:00 to 6:00 p.m.—Shaker Museum Festival. Old Chatham, N.Y.
2:30 p.m.—"The Happy Time." Berkshire Playhouse.
2:40 p.m.—"Up From Everest." Williamstown Summer Theater.
3:30 p.m.—Beaux Arts Trio. South Mountain.
4:00 p.m.—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.
4:00 p.m.—San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow.

[217]

Petrovec

REVIEWING the score of the opera, "Griffelkin," to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera students at Tanglewood Monday and Tuesday evenings, are Boris Goldovsky, left, who will stage the production, and Lukas Foss, the composer, who will conduct at both performances.

Music

Munch Conducts Students

TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch made his annual appearance with the Tanglewood student orchestra in the Shed last night. He chose his own personal warhorse, Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Dr. Munch led the willing students a splendid chase. They produced almost all the color and contrast he can draw from this work. From the opening expansive reveries to the concluding truly fantastic Witches Sabbath, the orchestra played with a vigor and warmth that matched Dr. Munch's own.

The audience of 2,500 loved it. They recalled Dr. Munch six times an dtalked so excitedly between the third and fourth movements he was forced to turn and stare them into silence before continuing.

* * *

BEFORE intermission, and the Berlioz, Hugh Ross directed 35 men's voices, five basses, three pianos, brass and percussion in Coro Di Morti (Chorus of Death) by Tanglewood's composition teacher, Goffredo Petrassi of Rome. The performance was a Tanglewood first.

The work is one of tensions. Monteverdi-style voice lines and modern-type orchestration are heard in moods alternately strident and lyrical. The chorus sings as the dead reflecting upon life, and death. The result is a solid and effective piece of music.

Mr. Ross, whose preparation of the group and command of the score was apparent, called the composer to the stage to share the audience's warm appreciation.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opened with a reading of Prokofieff's classical symphony by student conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn. Lack of rehearsal time and numb fingers were probably responsible in part for the fuzzy beginning. Otherwise, Mr. Schermerhorn's energetic and scoreless finger-pointing did not fully bring out the orchestra's talent for phrase-making and variety of tone and dynamics.

The final student orchestra concert will be Saturday, Aug. 11.

—S.S.R.

BSO Timpanist, Retiring, Spends Summers Here

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will retire at the end of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra, lives in Pittsfield during the Festival season. Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife at 28 Clinton Ave. in this city during the summer. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. His two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras, now operate a gasoline service station in Long Island.

Mr. Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland. He commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony, succeeding the timpanist Ritter. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Five Men in Section

Mr. Firth, his successor, was born in Winchster and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Mr. Szulc, and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

The Boston Symphony's timpani and percussion section, now headed by Mr. Firth, comprises five men. Harold Farberman is the other timpanist. Charles Smith and Harold Thompson in the percussion trio have been joined this season by Arthur Charles Press, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, and a student of Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman. Mr. Press has played with Thomas Sherman's Little Orchestra Society and was solo percussionist with the Radio City Music Hall orchestra.

In Saturday's Eagle

Music Everywhere

Music festivals in the Catskills and the Berkshires were subjects last week for photographer Bill (Eagle Eye) Tague. His two pages of pictures show a performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the new Ellenville (N.Y.) Festival and daydreaming listeners on the Tanglewood lawns.

BERKSHIRE WEEK

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 3 1956

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 3 1956

De Carvalho Is To Conduct at Lenox Today

Lenox, Aug. 2—Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Friday night's Berkshire Festival concert in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, at 8:30.

Mr. De Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer after a five-year absence as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. de Carvalho has scheduled a suite from the ballet "La Kermesse" by Henri Barraud in its first Tanglewood performance, and also three dances from the ballet "The Three-Cornered Hat" by Manuel de Falla and the complete score for Stravinsky's ballet "Petrouchka." In addition, the young Brazilian pianist Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. Eleazar de Carvalho) will make her North American debut as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G Major by Ravel.

A bonus for Festival visitors Saturday morning will be the third of this season's four Saturday morning open rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for which a nominal admission charge of $1 is made with the proceeds benefiting the Pension Fund of the Orchestra.

BSO Violinist To Play Sunday at Church-on-the-Hill

LENOX—A violin sonata by Andrea Zani, believed to have been unplayed since 1700 and never played in this country, will be one of two musical selections to be played Sunday at the Church-on-the-Hill by Boston Symphony Violinist Jesse Ceci.

The other piece will be Vivaldi's Sonata for Violin and Piano, Opus 2, No. 1. Though both works are scored for violin and piano, Mr. Ceci will be accompanied on the church organ by Mrs. Harriet P. Levinson.

Mr. Ceci is a graduate of both the Curtis Institute of Philadelphia and Juilliard School of New York. He has also studied at the Paris Conservatory under a Fulbright grant.

After the BSO tour of Russia, Mr. Ceci is scheduled to give a recital in Paris.

Church-on-the-Hill services Sunday will be at 11 a.m. The Rev. Dr. Harry Trust, pastor, will speak on "Is the Sacrificial Life Desirable?"

Vandals Damage

Social Briefs

Phyllis Curtin, who will appear as a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow evening at Tanglewood, and her husband, Gene Cook, entertainment editor of Collier's magazine, are weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Morgan in Stockbridge.

Bernstein Profile

Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night, has as his guest at Elm Court in Lenox, Robert Rice, son of the playwright, Elmer Rice, who is writing a profile on Bernstein for the New Yorker magazine.

, Aug. 3, 1956

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.
8:40—"Up From Everest." Williamstown Summer Theater.
8:45—"Tea and Sympathy." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
8:45—"The Happy Time." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
9:00—San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Benefit orchestra pension fund. Music Shed, Tanglewood.
1:00 to 6:00 p.m.—Shaker Museum Festival. Old Chatham, N.Y.
2:30 p.m.—"The Happy Time." Berkshire Playhouse.
2:40 p.m.—"Up From Everest." Williamstown Summer Theater.
3:30 p.m.—Beaux Arts Trio. South Mountain.
4:00 p.m.—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.
4:00 p.m.—San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow.

217

The Summer Circuit

Drama, Music, Dance

By ORMONDE PLATER

SAY, for instance, that you've got a vacation next week, with nothing better to do with yourself than to scorch your skin. Say, also, that you've got a wife, a son and two tape recorders. If you don't, buy them.

If these ingredients are present — and they're quite necessary in this case — an opportunity exists to improve your mind and lose some sleep. Take heart and embark on the following schedule:

Tomorrow—Rise before church and putt-putt over to Tanglewood. At the same hour—10 a. m.—the Boston Symphony Orchestra will rehearse and students will play chamber music. Borrow a dollar from the wife, send her with one tape recorder to the chamber concert and attend the rehearsal yourself. Then stash the wife and recorder on a bus for Woodstock, where she will attend a Maverick concert at 4 p. m. Meanwhile, you may relax in the sun while the Boston Symphony fiddles and toots. After dark, slip up the road to the Berkshire Music Barn, where Sarah Vaughan will sob and sigh.

Monday—Away with the wife to the Berkshire Festival, where she will be touched and not a little tickled by Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin." It will be a good moral lesson for her, as in the opera an earthward-sent imp decides to forsake Hell. Don't forget the tape recorder. While she's away, the mouse will play, and so you're off to the Berkshire Playhouse, for Ferenc Molnar's "The Good Fairy." Deirdre Owens as the fairy will involve herself in all sorts of fantastic situations.

Tuesday—Skeedaddle to Williamstown for the opening of John P. Marquand's "Point of No Return." But if you're a bank vicepresident, stay away, because the executive in this play doesn't like his exalted position. Ship the wife to Woodstock where she will record the Turnau Opera Players in Mascagni's "Zanetto" and Mozart's "The Impresario."

Wednesday—A busy day indeed, for you stagger out of bed before sundown and traipsy up to Sacandaga. Tallulah Bankhead, all smiles and drawl, will matinee in her new revue, "Welcome Darlings." Rushing from the exit at the final curtain, you hustle to New Scotland, keeping a sharp eye out for the highway patrol, to attend the Shelley Players' performance of "The Moon Is Blue," in which a girl catches her man by devious means. It is to be trusted that the wife will have found her way over to Tanglewood. Zino Francescatti and his violin should transfer to tape without a squeak.

Thursday—Now it's high time to set the son in action. Armed with the second tape recorder, gassed up in his 1928 Ford, he chugs off to Manchester, Vt., where, at the Southern Vermont Art Center, Claude Jean Chiasson will sing and pluck the harpsichord. The wife and her recorder have a full schedule at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony and Boston Pops will celebrate "Tanglewood on Parade." No rest for you, but down to the Woodstock Playhouse for "The Solid Gold Cadillac."

Friday—It's a long, twisting pull to Lee, Mass., but you arrive to witness a matinee of the San Francisco Ballet dancers, who will be on their toes in three classical numbers. It's also a bitter road to Poultney, Vt. (and watch out for the cops), where the Green Mountain Playhouse should be shattering vases with Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie." Just slip to your seat in time to find our shy heroine bracing up to finding a mate. The son, meanwhile, gives the Turnau company a whirl and fixes on tape Menotti's humorous opera, "The Telephone," and Ashley Vernon's new work, "Cupid and Psyche." Set an alarm for 7 p. m., so that the wife may get away from her housework and record Dr. Munch tossing the Boston Symphony and his hair at Tanglewood.

SARAH VAUGHN—The blues singer and her trio make an appearance tomorrow night at the Berkshire Music Barn.

Saturday—The most hectic day of the week. Zip up to a matinee at Saratoga, where Robert Q. Lewis will rush about in "What's the Rush?" Zip over to Malden Bridge, where our hero will itch in "The Seven Year Itch." Pack the wife and tape recorder off to Tanglewood, where Pierre Monteux will flutter his mustache at the Boston Symphony. Only get her there in the morning, or she'll miss a public rehearsal and a student symphony concert. Before you zip to Saratoga, order the son and tape recorder to Pittsfield, Mass., for a chamber concert at the South Mountain Temple.

One conflict, however, mars Saturday. There's no one left to hear—or to record—Richard Dyer-Bennett, a folk singer, at the Berkshire Music Barn. On the other hand, a schedule change may be called for. Send the son and tape recorder to Saratoga on Monday night. This will leave you free for the Music Barn. All that's lost is the visual pleasure of Robert Q. Lewis.

The following day—Sunday a week from [illegible]u may lie under a tree, smell the dinner preparations emanating from the kitchen window, watch the son mow the lawn, and listen to the score or so of recordings accumulated during the preceding week.

Summer Playbill in the Week Ahead

BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, Stockbridge, Mass., "The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens, 8:45 p. m. Monday through Saturday, 2:30 p. m. Wednesday and Saturday.

GREEN MOUNTAIN PLAYHOUSE, Poultney, Vt., "The Glass Menagerie," 8:30 p. m. Tuesday through Saturday.

MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, "The Seven Year Itch," 8:45 p. m. Tuesday through Saturday, 7 p. m. Sunday.

SACANDAGA THEATER, "Welcome Darlings" (new revue) with Tallulah Bankhead, 8:30 p. m. Monday through Saturday, 2:30 p.m. Wednesday and Saturday.

SHELLEY PLAYERS, New Scotland, "The Moon Is Blue" 8:30 p. m. Wednesday through Sunday.

SPA THEATER, Saratoga Springs, "What's the Rush" (new revue) with Robert Q. Lewis, 8:30 p. m. Monday through Saturday, 2:30 p. m. Wednesday and Saturday.

WILLIAMSTOWN THEATER, "Point of No Return," 8:40 p. m. Tuesday through Saturday, 2:40 p. m. Saturday.

WOODSTOCK PLAYHOUSE, "The Solid Gold Cadillac," 8:30 p. m. Tuesday through Saturday.

AARON COPLAND — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will honor him tomorrow at Tanglewood with a performance of his Symphonic Ode, commissioned for the orchestra's 75th anniversary.

2 Concerts To Be Led By Munch

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed tonight and Saturday evening. The orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Tonight's program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this Summer at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

SATURDAY CONCERT

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman Schol of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past Winter in Boston.

SERKIN SOLOIST

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, tomorrow night.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Reservations are available at box office, Lenox 600.

TANGLEWOOD

Symphony To Play 3 Concerts

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony tonight, tomorrow night, and Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed will be led tonight by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro; by Leonard Bernstein tomorrow night; by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch, Sunday afternoon.

The Brazilian conductor's program will be symphonic works by Henri Barraud, Manuel de Falla, Igor Stravinsky with his wife, pianist Joey de Oliveria, as soloist.

Bernstein's concert will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony and Mozart's Mass in C minor, Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann with a performance of his second symphony, followed by Aaron Coplan's Symphonic Ode.

"Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, will have its world premiere next week. Two performances will be given, Monday and Tuesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 P. M.

Seats for both performances are reserved, and are available to those who support the music school through membership in its Friends' organization. Reservations may be made through the Friends' office at Tanglewood, telephone Lenox, Mass. 600.

Pops Concert to Climax Tanglewood on Parade

The annual musical "sampler" of the many activities taking place daily and nearly every evening, titled: Tanglewood on Parade, highlight of the closing week of the festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be held Thursday from 6 to 11 P. M. Proceeds are for the summer school of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts. He will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos—the "Chorus No. 10". Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center of Berkshire Music Center students.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood On Parade appearance, assisted by the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will introduce the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Pops concert, encores may be expected.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4:00 P. M. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively.

[218]

OVERFLOW AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD

This is part of an overflow crowd which couldn't get into the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood for concerts. Sponsors would be happy if tonight's concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra produces similar results.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

AUG 3 1956

Tanglewood Concerts Move to Shed Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30 o'clock. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, The Roman Carnival, Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe", and Brahms' Second Symphony.

As in the last two seasons there will be twelve concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

TANGLEWOOD PREMIER

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, Amatterdam, N. Y., tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last Summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made a sensational debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert August 12.

FORMER STUDENT

Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for this year's Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, 81-year-old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this Summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

AUG 3 1956

Music Fesitval Ends Next Week At Lenox

"Tanglewood On Parade" Winds Up Season

Four concerts during the coming week - a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed - will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symhony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late George Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

Tanglewood On Parade

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m. (August 11), which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge of $1.00 is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale the day of the performance.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 4 1956

U.S. Tours Overseas

Music artists set to tour the world this year and early in 1957, under ANTA's International Exchange Program, include Marian Anderson, Richard Tucker, Eleanor Steber, William Warfield, Gregor Piatigorsky, Eugene List and Carol Glenn, the New York Woodwind Quintet, the Ballet Theater, the New York City Ballet, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Announcement of the list was made by Robert W. Dowling, chairman of the board of ANTA, which acts as the professional agency for the State Department in handling tours of American artists who serve as this country's cultural ambassadors abroad.

August will see the New York Woodwind Quintet touring South and Central America, the New York City Ballet dancing in Europe, Eugene List and Carol Glenn giving concerts in Indonesia, William Warfield singing in the Near East and Africa, and the Boston Symphony playing in Europe and Russia.

The Ballet Theater tours Europe and the Near East in September, while Piatigorsky plays in the Far East. Miss Steber tours free Asia and the Near East early in 1957, while Miss Anderson heads for the Far East a little later on.

ANTA has sponsored the tours of more than 60 artists and musical organizations since the program was initiated late in 1954 by President Eisenhower. Robert C. Schnitzer acts as general manager.

AROUND THE TOWN:

Tanglewood Began As a Civic Enterprise

By EDGAR S. VanOLINDA

A recent telephone request concerning the genesis of the music festival each summer, at Tanglewood from some newcomers to Albany led us to believe that, perhaps, there were many others to whom Tanglewood is just a spot in Massachusetts, although virtually in our back yard.

The great music festival grew from a local project for outdoor concerts in Lenox, Mass. It was first undertaken in 1934 by the citizens of Berkshire County. At first an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society was engaged under the direction of Henry Hadley. The slogan was: "Music Under the Stars". Two years later the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky was brought from Boston, with a shell for the musicians and a tent for the audience. We still remember the concert under that tent and the terrible storm of rain and thunder which drowned out the orchestra, being broadcast over a coast-to-coast network during a program of Wagner music. Even the Russian maestro threw up his hands in defeat. This was "Wagner with Sound Effects," the heading which appeared over our review of that famous occasion. Dr. Koussevitzky then said he would never play under a tent again.

GIFT OF ESTATE BIG HELP

The next step was brought about by the gift to the Boston orchestra of the 200-acre estate, known as "Tanglewood," from the family of William Tappen, a Boston banker and merchant where Nathaniel Hawthorne lived from 1851 to 1853. It was here that the author planned "Tanglewood Tales," wrote the "Wonder Book" and assembled material for "The Hous of Sven Gables". The house where he lived burned down in 1890. A replica on the original site was built in 1948 and presented to the orchestra by the National Federation of Music Clubs, for use as studios for the Berkshire Music Center.

Following the death of Dr. Koussevitzky, in 1951, Charles Munch became the director of the Festival and the Berkshire Music Center, with its over 400 students from most of the countries about the globe.

PERFORMANCES ALMOST EVERY DAY

The performances of the school, given not only in the large Shed (6,000 capacity) but in the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall and the still smaller Chamber Music Hall, make it possible for visitors to attend opera, chamber, orchestral and choral concerts almost daily throughout the Festival.

It is amazing to us how many Albany Area music lovers have never attended any of the concerts at Tanglewood but will drive much farther for a good dinner or to attend one of the many summer theatres. Not to have taken advantage of the greatest musical festival in the world, requiring a little over an hour's motor trip through the magnificent New England landscape, surrounded by the beautiful Berkshire Hills, is about the same as going to Buffalo without a trip to see Nigara Falls. The big shed opens this weekend, and it is not unusual to find 8,000 people on the lawns, unable to get seats inside the 6,000-seat Shed. 14,000 music lovers can't be wrong on a pleasant Sunday afternoon.

Bernstein Will Conduct Koussevitzky Memorial

One of Berkshire Music Festival's Most Famous Pupils Will Be on Podium for Special Concert Tomorrow Evening

Lenox, Aug. 3—Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's summer music school at

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, and this summer is on leave of absence.

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtain, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

Favorite Combination

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951; and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

Also TV Star

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added another phase to his many and varied activities, that of televison personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death (July 29, 1856).

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in nearby Monterey, can trace a direct line of violin tradition from the legendary Paganini: His first teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, who in turn had been the only direct pupil of Paganini. At five Francescatti made his first public appearance. At 10 he created a profound impression in the Beethoven Concerto. At 20 he made his formal debut with an orchestra in Paris. Before coming to the United States in 1939, he was already famous throughout Europe and South America. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violinmaker's art.

Remaining tickets for these two concerts, as well as for those of next week—the final week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival—are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506

AUG 3 1956

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival Enters Final Week Of Activities

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

The Berkshire Music Festival enters its final week of activities this season which will conclude with next Sunday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood. As in the past, the closing week promises to be of unusual interest to visitors, both as regards student events and Festival concerts. The annual "Tanglewood on Parade," highlighting an appearance of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra, comes on Thursday.

As the name suggests, "Tanglewood on Parade" will give Thursday's Festival patrons an insight into the work done by students at the Berkshire Music Center, the school which for some years has been an important phase of these annual music festivals. From 6-7 p. m. simultaneous programs will be given in all five departments of the school. A gala concert in which both the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestra will appear is to follow at 8:15, with the interval giving visitors time for a picnic supper on the festival grounds. After the concert, there will be waltzing on the lawn and the awarding of door prizes.

The Boston Symphony, conducted by Eleazar Carvalho, will open Thursday's concert. The young Brazilian conductor, who like Leonard Bernstein is another gifted protege of the late Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct "The Russian Easter" Overture of Rimsky-Korsakoff and Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos, the latter featuring the Berkshire Festival Chorus. In the second half of the concert, Fiedler will present a typical Boston Pops program with pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist. The celebrated Puerto Rican pianist, who appeared in a Bowl concert here a few years ago, will be heard with the orchestra in the Gershwin Piano Concerto. The program also includes Ravel's Bolero and La Boutique Fantasque by Rossini-Respighi.

What is labeled a "world premiere" of "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss, will be given by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center tomorrow evening with a repeat performance on Tuesday evening. Actually this will be the first complete stage performance of the opera though it was presented in November of last year by the television Opera Theater of the National Broadcasting Company which commissioned the work. The Tanglewood performances are being staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Center's opera department, and the composer, a member of the school's composition faculty, will conduct both of this week's presentations. Seats for the performances are available only to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a group open to all contributors towards the support of the school.

Here is a listing of the four regular festival concerts for the last week:

Wednesday, 8:30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music: Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano
- Faure: Violin Sonata No. 1
- Ravel: Violin Sonata
- Franck: Violin Sonata in A

Friday, 8:30 p. m. — Music Shed — Boston Symphony Orchestra:
- Haydn: Symphony No. 102 in B-Flat
- Piston: Symphony No. 6
- Strauss: Don Juan

Conductor, Charles Munch
- Dukas: L'Apprenti Sorcier

Saturday, 8:30 p. m. — Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
- Freed: Festival Overture
- Brahms: Symphony No. 3 in F
- Enesco: Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9
- Strauss: Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"

Conductor, Pierre Monteux

Sunday, 2:30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
- Beethoven; Symphony No. 3 in E-Flat, "Eroica"
- Wagner: Opening and final scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger".
- Soloists: James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp; Robert Nagy; John McCurdy.
- Berkshire Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 3 1956

Full Week At Tanglewood To Wind Up Berkshire Festival

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Arthur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) by the full Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck.

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony orchestra and the Boston Pops orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m., which Pierre Monteux will conduct.

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity. Student concerts, open to the public through a voluntary contribution to the school's support, are as follows:

Sunday, 10:00 a.m., Chamber Music Hall: Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. 1.

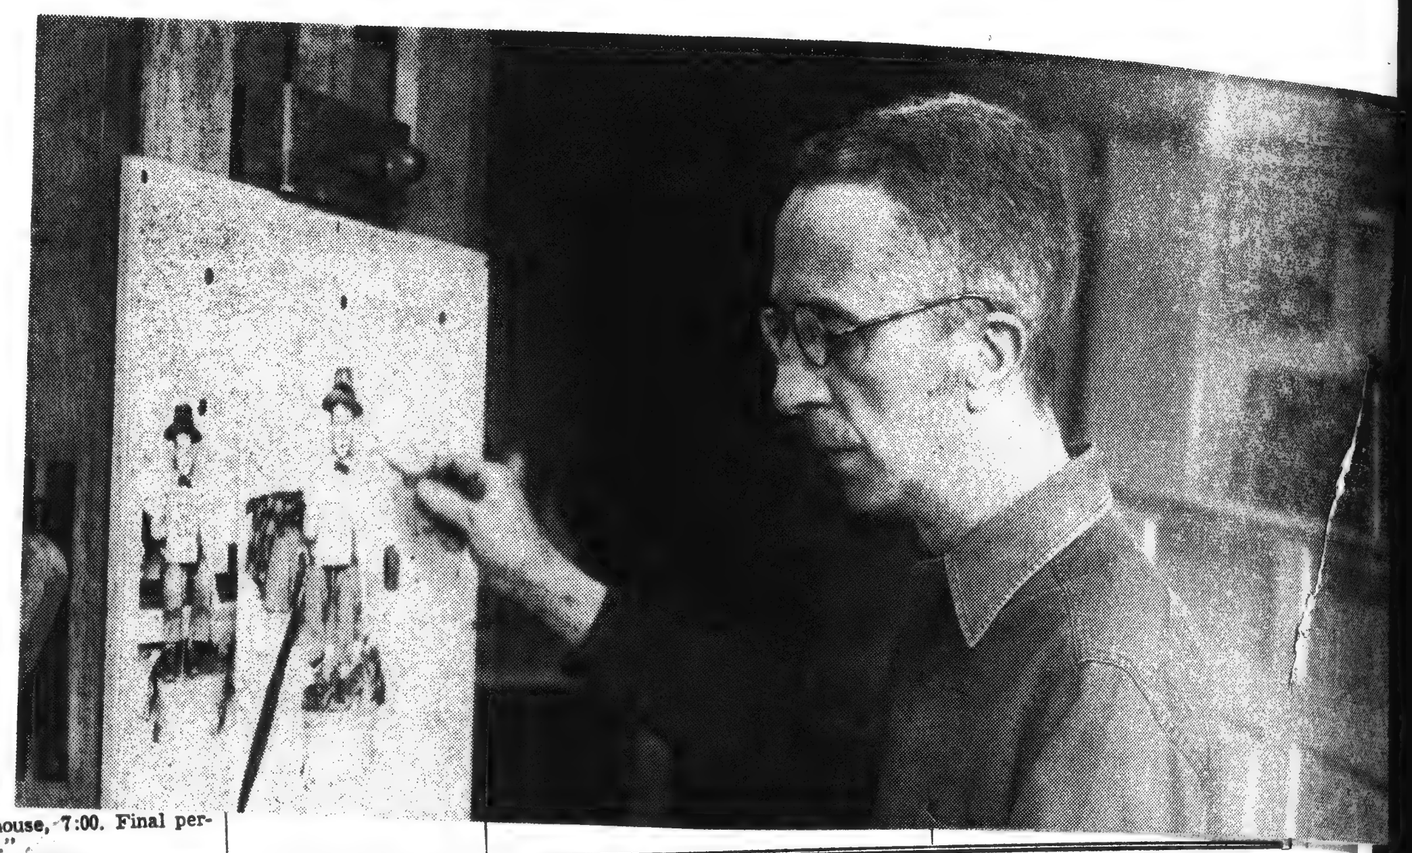
Monday and Tuesday, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall: (Students of Dept. IV). "Griffelkin," opera in three acts, by Lukas Foss.

Saturday, 3:00 p.m. - Music Shed: Symphony orchestra concert by students of Dept. I (Season's scholarships and prizes to be announced during concert).

Sunday, 10:00 a.m. - Theatre-Concert Hall: Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I.

[220]

Bigwigs



Tanglewood
10:00—Chamber M
(Friends)
2:30—Boston Sym
Munch, Music S
Symphonic Ode
Violin Concerto
Se
Symphony No.

Music Mou
4:00—Berkshire
harpist, assisti
Quartet in A
Variations Pa
Danses Sacre
Quartet in C

Berkshire
8:40—Sarah Va

Avaloch
8:30—Steffen Z
"This Prope Lover."

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Final performance, "Tea and Sympathy."

August 12

Tanglewood

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven
"Die Meistersinger," Act 3 (opening and final scene) Chorus — Wagner
and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music
(At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Avaloch

8:30—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent."

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Dorothy Eustis, pianist, assisting artist.

Quartet in D major (K. 575) — Mozart
Piano Quintet No. 2 — Dohnanyi
Quartet No. 1, Op. 7 — Bartok

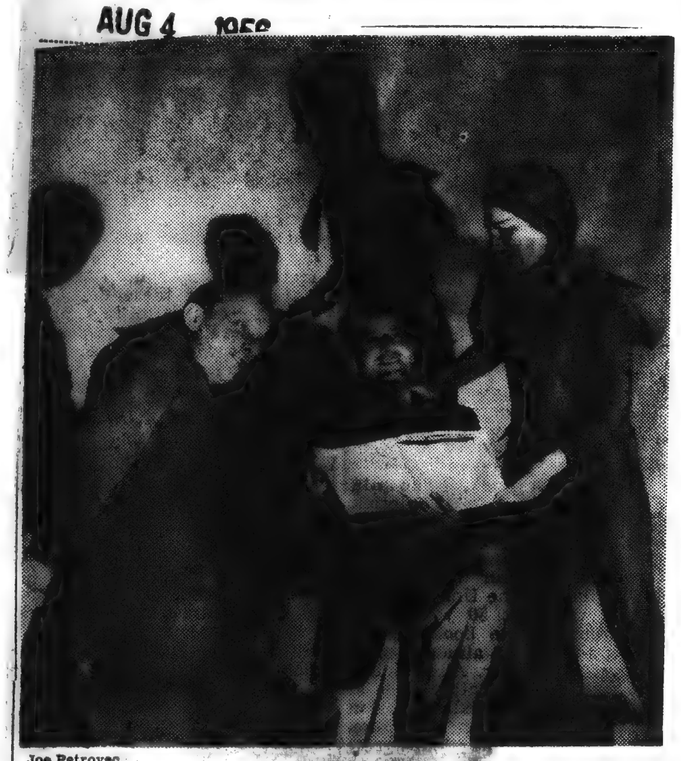
Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 4 1956



Joe Petrovec

"Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss (center), will be directed by Boris Goldovsky (left), with Mildred Allen (right) in the title role on Monday and Tuesday evenings at Tanglewood.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

AUG 4 1956

Final Concerts Aug. 8-10-11-12

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on Aug. 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Fredd, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Oveture; the late Georges Enesco's Suuite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstratoins at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera.

LEGAL NOTICES

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 4 1956

Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), with the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 4 1956

Concert Today In Memory of Koussevitzky

Lenox, Aug. 3—Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist.

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

The first vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Beethoven Concerto in the [illegible]

[22]

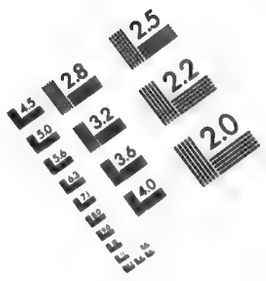
REDUCTION

RATIO

17x

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890



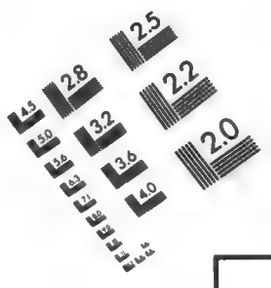
2.0 mm

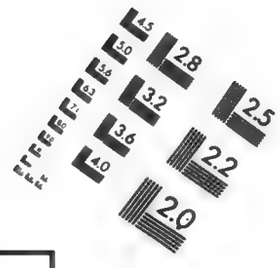
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

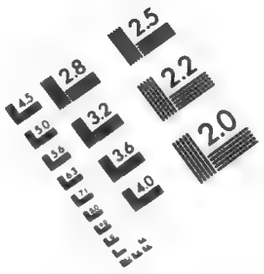


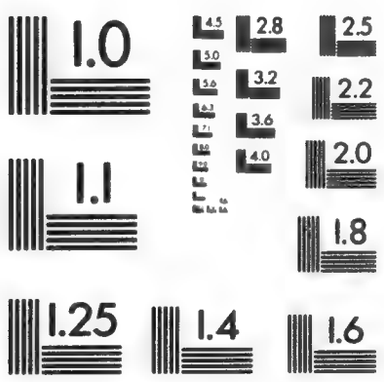


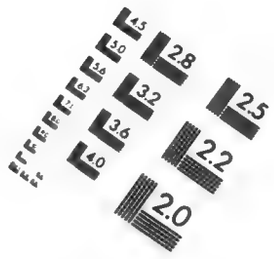
200 mm

150 mm

100 mm







ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

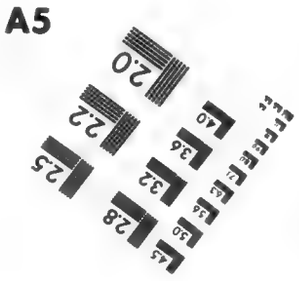
1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

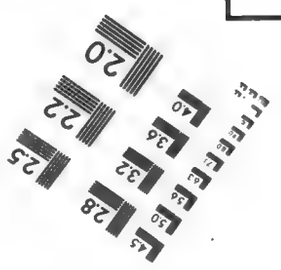
2.5 mm

A5



A4

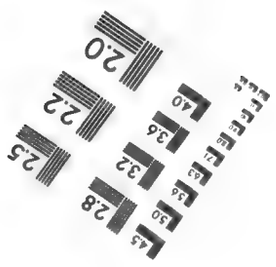
A3



PRECISION[SM] RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Sunday

August 5

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphonic Ode — Copland
Violin Concerto — Tchaikovsky
Soloist: Zino Francescatti
Symphony No. 2 in C major — Schumann

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Virginia Morgan Robinson, harpist, assisting artist.

Quartet in A major (K. 464) — Mozart
Variations Pastorales — Samuel-Rousseau
Danses Sacree et Profane — Debussy
Quartet in C major, Op. 61 — Dvorak

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Sarah Vaughan and Trio

Avaloch

8:30—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "Aria da Capo," "This Property Is Condemned" and "The Constant Lover."

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Final performance, "Tea and Sympathy."

Monday

August 6

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. First stage performance. (Friends — special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens

Continuing: Avaloch, 8:30

Tuesday

August 7

Tanglewood

8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Point of No Return"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd."

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

Wednesday

August 8

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall.

Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure
Violin Sonata — Ravel
Violin Sonata — Franck

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

Thursday

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

8:00—Student Orchestra, Opera Scenes, Chorus, Chamber Music.

8:45—Shed Concert.

Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho.

Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa-Lobos

Boston Pops Orchestra. Conductor, Arthur Fiedler.

La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

Friday

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major — Haydn
Symphony No. 6 — Piston
"Don Juan" — Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier" — Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

Saturday

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.

Festival Overture — Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major — Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9 — Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" — Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet

Sonata for Violin and Piano — Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello — Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 26 — Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 12

Tanglewood

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven
"Die Meistersinger," Act 3 (opening and final scene) Chorus — Wagner
and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music
(At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Avaloch

8:30—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent."

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Dorothy Eustis, pianist, assisting artist.

Quartet in D major (K. 575) — Mozart
Piano Quintet No. 2 — Dohnanyi
Quartet No. 1, Op. 7 — Bartok

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
AUG 4 1956

Final Concerts Aug. 8-10-11-12

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on Aug. 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," a children's opera, which will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center (August 6 and 7); Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 90,746
AUG 4 1956

Concert Today In Memory of Koussevitzky

Lenox, Aug. 3—Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist.

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 4 1956

Joe Petrovec

"Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss (center), will be directed by Boris Goldovsky (left), with Mildred Allen (right) in the title role on Monday and Tuesday evenings at Tanglewood.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
AUG 4 1956

Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), with the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

LEGAL NOTICES

[221]

REDUCTION RATIO 14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

1.0

1.1

1.25

1.4

1.6

1.8

2.0

2.2

2.5

2.8

3.2

3.6

4.0

4.5

5.0

5.6

6.3

7.1

8.0

9.0

10.0

11.2

12.5

14.0

16.0

18.0

20.0

22.4

25.0

28.0

32.0

36.0

40.0

45.0

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday

August 5

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphonic Ode — Copland
Violin Concerto — Tchaikovsky
Soloist: Zino Francescatti
Symphony No. 2 in C major — Schumann

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Virginia Morgan Robinson, harpist, assisting artist.

Quartet in A major (K. 464) — Mozart
Variations Pastorales — Samuel-Rousseau
Danses Sacree et Profane — Debussy
Quartet in C major, Op. 61 — Dvorak

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Sarah Vaughan and Trio

Avaloch

8:30—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "Aria da Capo," "This Property Is Condemned" and "The Constant Lover."

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Final performance, "Tea and Sympathy."

August 12

Tanglewood

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven
"Die Meistersinger," Act 3 (opening and final scene) Chorus and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer — Wagner

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music
(At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Avaloch

8:30—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent."

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Dorothy Eustis, pianist, assisting artist.

Quartet in D major (K. 575) — Mozart
Piano Quintet No. 2 — Dohnanyi
Quartet No. 1, Op. 7 — Bartok

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

Monday

August 6

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. First stage performance. (Friends — special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens

Continuing: Avaloch, 8:30

Tuesday

August 7

Tanglewood

8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Point of No Return"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd."

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

Wednesday

August 8

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall.

Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure
Violin Sonata — Ravel
Violin Sonata — Franck

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

Thursday

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.
:00—Student Orchestra, Ope
Chorus, Chamber Music.
:15—Shed Concert.
Boston Symphony Orches
ductor, Eleazar de Carval Overture: "The Russian — Rimsky
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o

Boston Pops Orchestra.
Arthur Fiedler.
La Boutique Fantasque — Ross
Piano Concerto in F
Soloist: Jesus Maria S
Bolero

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow shire Playhouse, 8:45; W
Summer Theater, 8:
Bridge Playhouse, 8:45;
house, 8:40

NOTE: For an event li
"Continuing," follow t schedule back to the ne plete program, which wil
a head printed in Thi

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 4 1956

Joe Petrovec

"Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss (center), will be directed by Boris Goldovsky (left), with Mildred Allen (right) in the title role on Monday and Tuesday evenings at Tanglewood.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly — Democrat
Circ. 7,100

AUG 4 1956

Final Concerts Aug. 8-10-11-12

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Arthur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on Aug. 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Oveture; the late Georges Enesco's Suuite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstratoins at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera.

LEGAL NOTICES

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 4 1956

Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), with the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 30,746

AUG 4 1956

Concert Today In Memory of Koussevitzky

Lenox, Aug. 3—Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist.

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will [illegible] with the [illegible] Aaron Copland [illegible] cycle, commemorating the [illegible] orchestra.

[illegible] No. [illegible] include [illegible] in C Minor [illegible]

[221]

Summer Calendar

o Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

nday

August 6

ewood

pt. 4 Opera. elkin," by Lukas First stage per- nce. (Friends — l tickets re-) shire ouse

e Good Fairy," eirdre Owens

g: Avaloch,

Tuesday

August 7

Tanglewood

8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Point of No Return"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd."

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

Wednesday

August 8

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall.

Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure
Violin Sonata — Ravel
Violin Sonata — Franck

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

Thursday

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

6:00—Student Orchestra, Opera Scenes, Chorus, Chamber Music.

8:15—Shed Concert.

Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho.

Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa-Lobos

Boston Pops Orchestra. Conductor, Arthur Fiedler.

La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

Friday

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major — Haydn
Symphony No. 6 — Piston
"Don Juan" — Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier" — Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

Saturday

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.

Festival Overture — Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major — Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9 — Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" — Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet

Sonata for Violin and Piano — Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello — Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 26 — Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

Free Press
NGFIELD, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 7,100

4 1956

l Concerts ug. 8-10-11-12

ncerts during the coming ecital on Wednesday eve- gust 8) in the intimate oncert Hall by violinist cescatti and pianist Ar- n, and three week-end n Friday and Saturday August 10 and 11) and ternoon (August 12) by 05-piece Boston Sym- estra in the giant Mu- ill conclude the 1956 Festival at Tanglewood lass.

ion, "Tanglewood on e annual gala for the the Berkshire Music summer school of mu- d by the orchestra in with its Berkshire certs, will be held on ugust 9), with simul- nstrations by all five and a gala evening ring the Boston Sym- stra conducted by rvalho and the Bos- by Arthur Fiedler, Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on Aug. 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Oveture; the late Georges Enesco's Suuite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstratoins at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera.

L NOTICES

ng Globe
N, Mass.
pendent
154,300

AU 1956

Berk s Tonight

Leonard tein conducts the Boston S y Orchestra tonight in th c Shed at Tanglewood, Len concert in memory of Ser ssevitzky.

As one most illustrious pupils of t er conductor of the Boston hony, Bernstein has distingu himself in three fields since came to Tanglewood in 19 composer, conductor and Regularly he heads the de nt of orchestra and conduct the orchestra's Summer mu pol at Tanglewood, the Be Music Center. Bernstein heduled two works singul propriate for the occasion: ie and Gloria rom Mozart in C minor (K. 427), with stival chorus of Berkshire M enter students trained by Hu s and Lorna Cooke de Var ting. Soloists are Phyllis Cu rano; Eunice Alberts, contr d John McCollum, tenor. emainder of the program Fifth Symphony, Opus 10 rokofieff.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 90,746

AUG 4 1956

Concert Today In Memory o Koussevitz

Lenox, Aug. 3—Leonard stein conducts the Boston phony Orchestra Saturda the great Music Shed at T wood. The Berkshire Festiva cert is in memory of Serge sevitzky.

As one of the most illus pupils of the late conductor Boston Symphony, Mr. stein has distinguished hims three fields since he first ca Tanglewood in 1940, as com conductor and pianist.

Mr. Bernstein has sche two works singularly appro the occasion: the Kyri ia from Mozart's Mas inor, K. 427, with the F Chorus of Berkshire Musi ter students trained by Ross and Lorna Cooke de assisting. Soloists are Curtin, soprano; Eunice A contralto; and John McC tenor. The remainder of t gram is the Fifth. Sym Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

The three vocal soloists portion of Mozart's 'Mass will be sung are all form dents at the Berkshire Center who have since s to distinguished careers concert and operatic field

Sunday afternoon, Dr. returns to the podium in cert which will bring the violinist Zino Francescatti stage of the Shed as so the Tchaikovsky Concert Munch will begin the with the Tanglewood pr of Aaron Copland's Sym Ode, composed for the 75 versary of the Boston Sy Orchestra, and the conc conclude with the Symph 2 in C Major by Schuma formed in commemoratio 100th anniversary of the er's death.

[221]

Music

De Carvalho Triumphs at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE RETURN of Eleazar de Carvalho to the podium of the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night in the Shed at Tanglewood had been anticipated with great eagerness by all who had last heard him conduct there five years ago.

As one of the late Serge Koussevitzky's most favored proteges, Tanglewood audiences had cometo know him as a conductor of talent and personal charm. The growth in his general musical grasp and conducting technique during his short absence from Tanglewood has been enormous.

Carvalho's program, except for the Ravel piano concerto in which his handsome young wife, Jocy de Oliveiro, was the soloist, was entirely ballet music. While this was both exciting and entertaining, so far as an appraisal of Carvalho was concerned, it showed but one side of him, but that was of a now mature and able conductor.

Jocy de Oliveira

* * *

THE MAIN WORK of the evening was Stravinsky's burlesque "Petrouchka." He had started with a short scene from the ballet "La Kermesse" of a contemporary French composer new to Tanglewood, Henri Barraud, and then proceeded to three dances from De Falla's "Three Cornered Hat." This latter work, as "Petrouchka," was an inspiration of the now fabulous Diaghilev days in Paris when the famous Russian impresario and entrepreneur was scattering commissions around like embryo stars which were later to expand into musical planets.

* * *

BARRAUD'S SCENE was vivid and colorful, but without relief in orchestration, rhythm, or dynamics. Some of its sounded like the music we are accustomed to hearing with movies of pageantry. The De Falla was welcomed in its own right and, in addition, as a contrast in every aspect from the preceding agile bulkiness. "El Sombrero" was gay and witty, light and vivacious.

Carvalho played the entire "Petrouchka" in the revised version, done by the composer in 1947. The conductor was in easy command at all times and it was a joy to see the manner in which his indications to the orchestra conveyed the spirit of the music to the audience without excessive histrionic gyrations. Gone are the indications of the obvious details which, to an orchestra of the virtuosity and experience of the Boston Symphony are redundant, to say the least. Once settled temporarily but securely in a recurring pattern, Carvalho let the orchestra play and he seemed to enjoy those moments as much as those who came to listen. For he has now become a music maker and is no longer concerned only with elementary precision.

* * *

STRAVINSKY'S story got a dramatic and graphic performance. The orchestra played with exceptional bravura and the conductor pointed out several individuals whose assignments had been so ably discharged, notably pianist Bernard Zighera, whose depiction of the puppet's dance was bright and virile. Carvalho got a well-deserved ovation and was recalled and "bravoed" in old-time Tanglewood style.

Eleazar de Carvalho

Ravel's concerto has a dance flavor, too. Except for the floating mood of the central slow movement, it is decidedly of American jazz influence. The petite Miss de Oliveira caught the impulse of the music very well but her physical resources limited her from giving the muscular effort by which the concerto comes to complete fruition.

The soloist was a pupil of Marguerite Long to whom the concerto is dedicated and who was its first performer, in Paris in January of 1932. If our memory serves us well, Carvalho was a more sensitive conductor of the accompaniment last night than was the composer himself on that historic occasion.

Berkshire Week in Review

Cold Weather Blues

BERKSHIRE COUNTY'S multi-million-dollar vacation industry has been growing every year since the war, but it is still dependent to a considerable extent upon the weather. That fact was underscored this week in a survey of the tourist trade at season's midpoint, which indicated that an unusually cool July had cut attendance at Tanglewood and put crimps in several other resort businesses around the county.

Tanglewood spokesmen cited the weather as the primary factor in the attendance slump, and pointed out that sales of reserved seats for individual concerts were unusually low as early as last June, when summer was still trying to make its belated appearance. Much the same story was told by tourist information booths up and down the Berkshires, which are quick to sense any change in the volume of transient traffic.

Outside Tanglewood's sphere of influence, however, the cool weather appeared to have less impact. In fact, activity is greater this year than last at all the county's other major cultural attractions: Jacob's Pillow, the Berkshire Playhouse, Williamstown Summer Theater and the Music Barn. And sports centers such as Eastover in Lenox and Jug End Barn in Egremont have been jam-packed since the Fourth of July.

Altogether, the summer tourist season to date was disheartening only to those who expected that it would advance automatically each year regardless of weather and other outside factors. To others, the record so far seemed proof that the county could make a go of it on its own merits, with very little help from the elements.

Miss Robinson Smith Plans Party for Munch, Francescatti

Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist, who will be the soloist at tomorrow afternoon's Tanglewood concert, will be guests of honor tomorrow at a party to be given by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith at the Residence, her Stockbridge summer home, following the concert.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in Monterey, will play the Tchaikovsky Concerto for Violin with Dr. Munch conducting tomorrow in the Music Shed.

He will give another performance in the Theater Concert Hall Wednesday evening in a chamber music recital of works by Fauvre, Ravel and Franck. He is donating his services for the concert to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Scholarships To Be Awarded In Name of Festival Founder

Board Members Pay Tribute to Miss Robinson Smith in Final Action Before Dissolving Organization

The scholarships established by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. for the Pittsfield Community Music School and the Berkshire Music Center will be known as the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarships, Laurence R. Connor, chairman of the finance committee of the organization, announced today.

This action was taken by the board members, following a recent meeting at Miss Robinson Smith's home, when the trustees voted to dissolve and granted $5,000 for scholarships to the Music Center and about $20,000 to the Community Music School.

The $5,000 grant to the Berkshire Music Center Revolving Scholarship Fund will be placed in an account to be known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund, the income of which will be used for scholarships to be awarded to students of conducting. These scholarships will be known as the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarships.

Hope for Matching Funds

In making the grant to the Music Center, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival trustees expressed the hope that this amount will be matched by the Rockefeller Foundation grant and that this matching fund will become an integral part of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Fund.

"This is proposed in order that the name of this great Festival, founded in our Berkshires, shall remain alive and be an inspiration for all students receiving scholarships," the trustees said.

The balance of the financial assets of the corporation, which may approximate $20,000, will be held in trust for the Pittsfield Community Music School at the Agricultural National Bank, with the bank president, along with two or more members of the board of the Community Music School, serving as trustees.

For Instrumental Students

In announcing the ways in which the board voted to distribute the funds today, the trustees expressed "the wish" connected with the $20,000 grant "that the board of the Pittsfield Community Music School be free to give one or more scholarships each year to those scholars they deem sufficiently talented and that they may decide quite freely when and how these students are to benefit. It would also be the wish that the board of the Pittsfield Community Music School award these scholarships to instrumental students and that these scholarships be known as the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarships.

"The board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival wish this gift to be free of 'all strings' in order that with changing conditions in the years to come, the persons then in charge of the Community Music School may act and decide in accordance with then existing conditions. It is to be hoped that the total sum donated may be considered as capital and that only the income will be used for scholarships. Should any person or persons in the future care to make a financial addition to this fund, it may be accepted, provided the name of the scholarship fund is in no way changed.

